The film builds to a raging crescendo as Malcolm is assassinated in a tragic blaze of gunfire. But this is not the true climax. It comes earlier in a hotel room where, in a destined to be overanalyzed shot in which the camera spins 360 degrees, Malcolm realizes that his death is imminent. Everything after, excluding the epilogue, is near exhaustive dread and sadness.

However distinctive the separate sections are, the true feat is how seamless Lee designs them, each is interdependent on the other, all build toward an unflinching common goal: to present a complex individual without idealization or condemnation.

None of this could be accomplished without the untouchable performance by Denzel Washington. This is the kind of role that either defines a career or destroys it. Washington perfectly accomplishes the former. He's a shoo-in for a nomination and almost guaranteed the well-earned statuette.

Washington is supported by a wide range of astounding performances. Most notable is Al Freeman, Jr., whose portrayal of Elijah Muhammed is uncanny to say the least. Also excellent is Angela Basset as Malcolm's wife. Lee also peppers the cast with intriguing cameos, including the Reverend Al Sharpton as a street preacher, as well as Karen Allen, Christopher Plummer and director John Sayles.

Malcolm X is passionate, potent filmmaking. It is an exquisite American biography that's easily on the grand level and scope of Ghandi and The Last Emperor.

There's more than one powerful lesson in Malcolm X — yet the most basic thing this film accomplishes is that it gets you thinking. Lee's unflinching vision has produced an outstanding motion picture that will no doubt stand the test of time and enthrall for generations to come.

Grade: A

ACRONYMBLE

THE COLLEGIAN CONTEST

THIS WEEK'S LETTERS: C-U-T-E-R

Remember boys and girls, men and women — the deadline for this week's Acronymble Contest is tomorrow!

The letters are C, U, T, E and R.

Drop off your submissions at the Collegian newsroom or send it c/o the Arts Desk, Collegian via campus mail.

Check out Thursday's This Weekend section to see if you won fame for life and glamorous prizes.

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"
$2.00 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
MSG
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00 pm
Friday - Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
FREE Delivery Service • BYOB
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)
Every Day 11:30-3:30
Sample our New Vegetarian Menu
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst,MA • 253-4280/4281

SKI
3RD ANNUAL
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging
(Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsored by Labatt's, Mt. Sutton and Molson
Group Leader Discounts
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 & Springbreak '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

Do you know where Santa Claus was born...? where Mount Ararat is...?, where the Virgin Mary died?
To find out more come to the audio-visual journey of the Republic of Turkey.
Campus Center 904-8 • Thursday, Nov. 19th • 7 p.m.

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

WATCH-O-RAMA
THE AMAZING WATCH GIVEAWAY
It's Simple...
COME see our amazing collection of over 98 styles of SWATCH and FOSSIL watches just in time for the holidays.
1. Guess what time our mystery watch is set at.
2. Tell us which J•Rich watch you would like to win.
1. I think the time is _____ A.M. P.M.
2. The J•Rich Watch I would like to win is _____
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-2013 • 22 Masonic St., Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton
— 4 watches will be given away
— Bring your entry in person to either J•Rich location by 5 p.m. Sunday, November 22nd — Winners will be announced on Tuesday, Nov. 24
— Limit 1 entry per person

Friday November 20, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 51

Cold and windy today. Possible high to reach 40.

Arts: What's all the zzzz' about? Check out Mark K. Anderson's Views from the Outside as he tries to find out exactly who is last in the phone book? Page 7.

Sports: The University of Massachusetts field hockey has made it to the NCAA Final Four and will take on Iowa Saturday in Richmond. Page 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Racism analyzed at Hamden forum

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Calls for fundamental change in every part of the university were made upon students, faculty, and administrators by participants in an all-campus forum on racism last night.

Associate Professor of Education Sonya Nieto claimed that the university is plagued with a monocultural curriculum that does not reflect reality and perpetuates racist behavior and thought. She said faculty need to develop new ideas and methods, and that administrators and students need to be open to and encourage this pursuit.

"We're presenting the world through a European and European-American perspective that ignores large parts of reality," she said. "If we don't work together to change this, we're not going to put an end to racism and violence."

The forum was conducted in the Hampden Student Center by a six-member panel of professors, students, and administrators who voiced their opinions on various aspects of racism at the university. Among the approximately 100 people in attendance were Chancellor O'Brien, Provost Glen Gordon, and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson.

Jonathan Gladding, from Allied Students Against Prejudice, called upon White males to recognize that they are the privileged products of a racist and sexist society, and therefore have a responsibility to use their privilege to fight racism.

"We're in the best position to affect change. We need to make achieving equality a priority in our lives," he said.

Sponsored by Faculty and Staff for Human Rights and a Responsible University and Allied Students Against Prejudice, the forum was intended to go beyond recent individual acts of racial violence on campus and address problems

Turn to FORUM, page 4

JACOB ADELMAN / COLLEGIAN

Students, faculty, and administrators participate in an all-campus forum on racism Thursday night. The forum was sponsored by Faculty and Staff for Human Rights and a Responsible University and Allied Students Against Prejudice.

Corps of Engineers to bring Mass. jobs

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Massachusetts would gain some 260 military and civilian jobs under a reorganization plan unveiled Thursday by the Army Corps of Engineers.

The plan would be put in place over the next three to five years, subject to congressional approval, and would make Massachusetts the only state to gain an Army Corps division headquarters. Nationwide, the plan would close division offices in five cities and cut 2,600 jobs by 1995.

"We want to reduce our management costs. We want to reduce some project costs. We want to reduce the time it takes to do things," said Lt. Gen. Arthur E. Williams, commander of the Army Corps. "Our intent is not to decrease any of the services."

By reducing the Corps' 11 regional divisions down to six, the New England region would be expanded to include most of New York State and Pennsylvania, all of New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware and parts of Virginia and West Virginia. New York City would no longer serve as division headquarters and much of the 470 jobs lost there would translate into jobs gained in the Boston area.

Williams said the Army Corps has

Turn to ENGINEERS, page 4

Diversifying our campus

Outreach Program hosts 100 youths

By DAVID RIVERA
and GARY DEANE
Collegian Staff

With university officials looking to increase minority enrollment, the Bilingual Collegiate Program did its part by hosting 100 Hispanic ninth-graders yesterday as part of their Outreach Program.

Over 100 students, along with parents and teachers from Central High Academy in Springfield, participated in the second year of a pilot program that encourages young Hispanic students to continue their education after high school.

Luis Garcia and his son Luis Jr. took part in yesterday's events, which included several campus-wide tours, lunch in the Franklin Dining Commons and information on applications and financial aid.

"We as parents must get involved," Garcia said. "We need to push our kids."

Garcia said his son was excited and optimistic about the Outreach program and added that he was going to do everything he could to assure his son would get further education after high school.

"I don't care what it takes — I'm going to help him get to college," Garcia said.

Luis Jr., 13, said he now feels college is a reality for him and not just a dream.

"Before, I didn't have high hopes of going to college," Luis Jr. said. "But after I talked to my dad we decided to sign the contract."

All participants in the program are required to sign a contract that binds them to study and achieve a minimum grade level. If they meet the requirements

Turn to OUTREACH, page 4

Yeltsin may stop building subs

Moscow attempts to improve Far East relations

By PAUL SHIN
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — President Boris Yeltsin said Thursday that Russia would probably stop building submarines in the next two or three years and had withdrawn all strategic nuclear weapons from the Far East.

His comments in South Korea's parliament stunned some aides back in Moscow. The announcement on submarines "sounds totally new and came as a surprise," said Yuri Andreyev, an adviser on converting military factories to civilian production.

"Halting production will cause serious problems for enterprises producing subs, but we shall try to accelerate their conversion and to cope with this problem," he told The Associated Press.

The International Institute for Strategic Studies estimated that Russia had a total of 86 submarines of various types stationed with its Far East Fleet, including 25 Yankee and Delta class submarines at the Pavlovskoye base, just north of the Korean Peninsula on the Sea of Japan.

During a visit focused on winning economic aid and investment, Yeltsin also said he had settled disagreements over Russia's debt with South Korea and cleared the way for a $15 billion natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Seoul.

Yeltsin indicated he would abrogate a 1961 defense agreement with Communist North Korea, and he handed over the "black box" containing the flight recorder of Korean Airlines Flight 007, which was shot down by Soviet jets in 1983 after violating Soviet air space.

The flight recordings, transcripts of which were released by the Yeltsin govenment earlier this year, contained conclusive evidence the South Korean pilots were on a standard civilian flight and did not know they had entered Soviet air space.

"The blank wall of distrust and estrangement that divided the two countries collapsed," Yeltsin said after his talks with South Korean President Roh Tae Woo.

Yeltsin told reporters that Korean and Russian experts had discussed projects "totalling $20-30 billion" to develop the Russian Far East and convert military plants to civilian use, the daily Izvestia newspaper reported.

Yeltsin gave few details on the removal of nuclear weapons, but it appeared to be part of the short and medium range nuclear arms cuts agreed to by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in fall 1991.

Russia has an estimated 60 SS-11 nuclear-tipped missiles at Svovodny and 45 Bear stategic bombers at Ukraina, just north of the Chinese border within range of Korea, according to the Military Balance handbook published by the International Institute of Strategic Studies.

Yeltsin also told reporters that he saw no major obstacles in improving Russo-Japanese relations, including solution of the dispute over a handful of islands that prompted him to cancel a planned visit to Tokyo in September, ITAR-Tass said.

Japan has refused to formally adopt a treaty ending World War II hostilities with the Soviet Union until Moscow agrees to settle the issue.

Yeltsin sent a clear signal that he was withdrawing support from North Korea's isolationist Communist regime and would stop supplying it with offensive weapons and nuclear technology, Izvestia reported.

Clinton urged to reopen JFK investigation

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press

BOSTON — Conspiracy theorists on the assassination of John F. Kennedy urged President-elect Clinton on Thursday to appoint a special prosecutor and reopen the federal investigation.

Author Jim Marrs, whose book "Crossfire: The Plot that Killed Kennedy" helped inspire director Oliver Stone's movie "JFK," said President Bush should not be trusted to oversee the review of secret documents.

Marrs, at Emerson college's Kennedy Assassination Conference, said that while Bush was not involved in any plot to kill the president in 1963, he was "mixed up with people" form the CIA, FBI and other intelligence agencies who were involved. Marrs did not elaborate on his allegation.

Last month Bush signed a law requiring the FBI to make public most of its voluminous files on the assassination. The material ranges from top-secret intelligence reports to news clippings and tax returns.

The president is to appoint a five-member citizens commission to review documents officials want to keep secret. The commission would have the power to make the disputed materials public.

FBI officials have testified before Congress that the confidential material contains no big surprises.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

It REALLY works!

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
545-3500

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Friday, November 20

Shabbat Dinner — A Shabbat Dinner will be held at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St. Admssion will be $3 with Shabbat services to follow.

Meeting — The Muslim students are holding a meeting to discuss the year's agenda. Meet at 5 p.m. in the Campus Center, check the information desk for the room number.

Special Event — The Muslim Students Association will be holding a Jumaa Sulat at 12:30 pm in the Campus Center. Check the information desk for the room number.

Saturday, November 21

Fair — A Cranberry Fair will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the First Congretional Church, 165 Main St., Amherst. Gift items from The Gallery, international table, New England products, used clothing, books, lunch, afternoon tea, jams and baked goods will all be offered.

Multicultural Night — An evening of multicultural cuisine will be held from 7-11 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event, sponsored by the International Students Assocation, will be $6 at the door and $5 pre-paid. Free entertainment will be offered.

Sunday, November 22

Learning Group — The Chabad House hosts a weekly Jewish women's learning at 8 p.m. All women are welcome to discuss the Jewish prayer book.

Autograph Session — Author Jane Brett will be autographing copies of her latest book, The Trouble With Trolls at 1 pm at Jeffrey Amherst Bookshop, 55 So. Pleasant St.

Meeting — Celebrate Rosh Chodesh, the Jewish Women's celebration of the new moon at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St.

Search for MIAs continues

By GRANT PECK
Associated Press

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam — Laos will let American investigators visit the site where a surveillance photo showed what may have been a U.S. military rescue code dug into the ground, a U.S. Senator said on Thursday.

American teams will also see previously closed areas where there have been reported sightings of people who could be MIAs., said Sen. John Kerry, the chairman of the Senate committee on missing U.S. servicemen.

He announced the agreement after returning from a day trip to Vientiane, the capital of Laos.

The U.S. satellite photo, taken in January 1988, shows the 12-foot-high letters "USA" with something underneath that could be the letter "K" The letter "K" was used as a secret emergency code by American aviators during the Vietnam War.

Some people say the letters might have been a signal from an American held prisoner since the Vietnam War. Experts agree the "USA" was man made, but they are not sure whether the other marking was a "K," or whether it was intentionally stamped out in the rice paddy.

Kerry, D-Mass., is visiting the Southeast Asia with Sens. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Hank Brown, R-Colo., to seek more information on the 2,265 Americans unaccounted for since the war. That includes 519 servicemen missing in action in Laos.

Kerry and Daschle met with the prime minister of Laos, Khamtain Sihphdone, and Foreign Minister Phoun Sipaseut to seek assistance for the MIA search.

Laos agreed to give U.S. experts access to film archives and will allow Lao speaking Asian Americans to serve as members of the search teams, Kerry said.

Searches in Indochina are conducted jointly by the host governments and a Pentagon task force.

The senators flew to Vietiane after a three-day visit to Vietnam's capital, Hanoi, where they said they received full cooperation from Vietnamese officials.

Vietnam, which is seeking international help to rebuild its economy, hopes to improve relations with the United States.

The United States has imposed a trade embargo and diplomatic freeze on Vietnam since the Communist north took over the south in 1975. The official American policy is that relations will be normalized only when Vietnam has helped to make a full accounting of the missing.

Kerry said Wednesday he would recommend that President Bush make a reciprocal gesture for Vietnamese cooperation on the MIA issue.

Discrimination results in Sudan musical chairs

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan's Muslim fundamentalist government has issued new decrees that ban women from working in markets and other public places after 5 p.m., an official newspaper reported Thursday.

The decrees also require all shops to close down two hours for Friday noon prayers, the army daily al-Kuwat al-Musalaha said.

Sudan's Muslim fundamentalist government has taken a number of steps affecting women, such as requiring female ministry employees to cover their hair, as Islam demands. It also has banned men from working in hair salons for women.

In another development related to Sudan's separation of the sexes, the newspaper reported confusion over who should sit where in public buses. The government had restricted women to the back of the bus, but after women's organizations protested, it moved the women's section to the front.

No one is quite sure where to sit, the newspaper reported.

COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

"Our True Nationality is Man Kind" H.G. Wells

MULTICULTURAL NIGHT
NOVEMBER 21ST 7-11PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
UMASS AMHERST
DINNER $6 AT DOOR, $5 PRE-PAID
FREE ENTERTAINMENT
SPONSORED BY INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

The following PHYSICS COURSES were inadvertantly omitted from the preregistration guidebook. These courses will be offered in Spring 93.

Course Name	Course #	Time	Location
Physics 117 (PS)	555199	MWF 9:05	Has. 228
Physics 556	562249	TuTh 9:30	LGRT 1033
Physics 390A	560092	By Arrangement
Physics 715	563333	MWF 1:25	LGRT 1334

Campus Design & Copy
1992
403 Student Union
(413) 545 - 2271
Students Working for Students
RÉSUMÉS
RÉSUMÉS
RÉSUMÉS
$15
All Inclusive
Layout, typesetting, 10 copies, 10 matching envelopes and one year storage

ATTENTION!

The Collegian is now accepting applications for editorships for Spring 1993 semester.

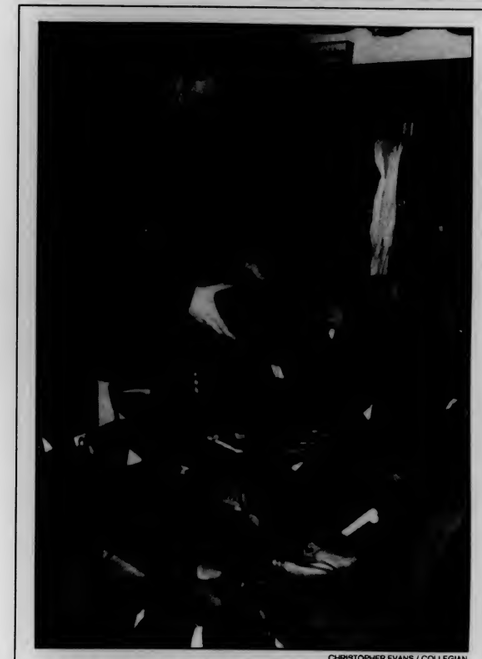
Applications will be accepted until Friday, December 4, 3 p.m.

Candidates Night for those running for positions of Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, and Editorial Editor will be held Sunday, December 6, 7 p.m.

Elections will be held Monday, December 7, 9 a.m. untill 5 p.m.

113 Campus Center 545-3500

Local News



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
THESE BOOTS ARE MADE FOR WALKING – Hans Schellhas, class of 1994, rummages through combat boots for his size yesterday at the Army Supply Market in the Student Union Ballroom.

Concerns heard over lease of store

By MICHAEL B. PIERCE
Collegian Correspondent

Members of the University of Massachusetts community attended the Board of Governors meeting last night to discuss concerns about the possible privatization of the University Store.

Auxiliary Services, which oversees the Campus Center, is facing a deficit of $866,000, and Kevin Newnan, student trustee, said it could not continue to run in that manner.

Changes have to be made," he said. "Leasing the University Store is one possibility, and looking into the way Auxiliary Services runs within is another."

Scott Cashman, an employee of the Textbook Annex, said a task force has been appointed by Ashoke Ganguli, director of Auxiliary Services, with the intent of stabilizing the financial condition, and to find out what is losing and making money.

Miles Seaver, operations manager, University Store, said a task force was vital in pinpointing where money is being lost. But he also said he thought privatizing the University Store was foolish.

"I get upset at the idea of taking one unit and getting rid of it to offset a loss in another area," he said. "We're penalizing people for being successful. We would lose money, and it would be a great loss to the students."

Newnan, however, said the possibility of privatizing the store still wasn't formal.

Jennifer Wood, Student Government Association president, said if a decision is made, students should be involved.

"This decision shouldn't only be based on what the administration thinks," she said. "And the long-term implications of doing this should be looked at, not just the short-term ones."

During the meeting, some concerns were raised about whether a request for proposals would go out or if Barnes and Noble would automatically be selected.

Newnan said a request for proposals was needed, and that he would make sure that the proposals would include price lists in order to compare them with current prices.

"I am absolutely opposed to leasing the University Store."

Linda Smith
Annex employee

Bill Harris, director of Campus Center, said Barnes and Noble met with Ganguli about two weeks ago at a conference in Atlanta, and that was when the initial meeting occurred.

Linda Smith, Textbook Annex, said she thought bringing in Barnes and Noble would mean less service and more cost.

"Why are we trying to fix something that works wonderfully well?" she said. "I am absolutely opposed to leasing the University Store."

Seaver said the University Store was a bargaining chip to get money from outside.

"The University Store is a money-maker," he said. "The only thing Auxiliary Services has to offer an outside contractor is a going operation that does offer money."

If the University did lease out the store, it would receive the money from the inventory and fixtures that the contractor would sell.

This would also make it more difficult for the University to get back control of the store if it was unhappy with the contractor because a large sum of money would be needed to buy back the inventory.

"If you're unhappy with the company you're leasing with, it's hard to buy the inventory back," Harris said.

Walk-a-Thon benefits Caldwell

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

On Saturday, Nov. 21, 1992, a Walk-a-Thon to benefit Kathie Caldwell will be held at the University of Massachusetts. The benefit will start at noon at Baker Hall in the Central residential area.

The three-mile route runs through the UMass campus and the center of Amherst. All proceeds will be donated directly to the Kathie Caldwell Equipment Fund, which will go to purchasing equipment essential to her rehabilitation.

Caldwell attended UMass last September as a freshman. A psychology major, she made the Dean's list her first semester. She suffered a debilitating stroke during her second semester, leaving her unable to eat or speak.

Kathy McNaughton, a sophomore nursing major, said she believes all students can relate to Caldwell's condition.

"One day she's healthy and the next day she is completely disabled," McNaughton said. "It makes you think about what we as students take for granted. We need to change our perspective."

McNaughton said she has put her energy and time into publicizing the Walk-a-Thon, seeking sponsors and promoting a series of advertisements along with radio and news releases.

"I hope that a lot of students come out and walk with us," said McNaughton.

Brian Caldwell, Kathie's brother, a senior English major at UMass, said he's optimistic but reserved about Kathie's situation.

"It's hard for the family, what my sister is going through. Kathie is very strong and a fighter. She's a role model for us," Brian said. He said he is overwhelmed with the support and network of friends who have pulled together.

"It's amazing the support Kathie's getting from friends and students at UMass. . . It's a wonderful thing to see," he said.

Brian will also be participating in the Walk-a-Thon this Saturday at Baker Hall.

Pamela Alsop, a junior history major, said she's very enthusiastic about the Walk-a-thon.

"I really want her to know that we are are here to support her," said Alsop.

Alsop, who is a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, said she has been getting sponsors primarily from area gov-

Turn to WALK-A-THON, page 4

Local booksellers create Literacy Day

By RACHEL MILLER
Collegian Correspondent

Literacy Action, a collaboration between booksellers, writers and authors, will designate this Saturday as "Share the Magic - Buy a Book for Literacy" Day. Over 30 bookstores throughout the Pioneer Valley will donate 10 percent of their sales tomorrow to three area adult literacy programs.

"Last year the proceeds were over $7,500 and hopefully it will be even more this year," says Mitch Gaslin of Food For Thought Books in Amherst. "There is definitely a need for |literacy| programs, for adults especially."

David Sharken, who serves on the Board of Directors of the Literacy Project, which is one of the programs that will benefit from this fundraiser, says that there are two purposes for this third annual event.

"The first reason is to garner financial support for literacy programs in the midst of budget cuts and the second is to publicize that there is action being taken to address the literacy problems in society and our community," he said.

One out of every five adults in the U.S. has difficulty reading a newspaper, filling out a form or reading to their children, according to Literacy Action.

In Massachusetts, 1.3 million adults do not have a high school diploma and approximately 600,000 adults have literacy skills below the fifth grade level.

Larry Pruner, owner of Valley Books, says his store decided to participate to help out "a worthy cause and one that doesn't get enough funding from public sources."

Some of the participating bookstores in Amherst include Atticus/Albion Bookshop, Book Marks, Wootton's Books and Valley Books.

Gaslin believes it's important that local bookstores get involved in this fundraiser. "It's a way that we, as merchants, can be involved with issues that effect our community."

The three adult literacy programs which will receive the proceeds are the Care Center in the Holyoke area, the Literacy Project serving the Amherst-Northhampton-Greenfield area and the Read/Write/Now Adult Learning Center at the Springfield Library.

Turn to BOOKSELLERs, page 4

Students launch own foot patrols in self-defense

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

A multicultural group of students is setting up its own foot patrols at the University of Massachusetts to stem hate crimes at this racially tense campus, organizers said Thursday.

The students said they felt a need for the "rainbow patrols" despite an administration pledge to boost security forces by 21 over the next three years.

Administrators announced their plan last month in the wake of weeks of alleged racial attacks on blacks, racist graffiti and a dormitory rampage by minority students who left anti-white slurs.

"We feel that we cannot depend on the administration to defend the rights and lives of our sisters and brothers," said Greg Maney, a graduate student helping to marshal the patrols.

Organizers said the first patrol of about a dozen students was to be launched Thursday evening.

Maney said the group hoped to attract enough volunteers to staff three five-member evening patrols Thursday through Saturday at dormitories, the library, the student center and other potential trouble spots.

Organizers said the student patrols will try to deter violence and harassment against minority students, gays and lesbians, and women.

However, Maney said the patrols will not carry weapons. Instead, he said they would be prepared to intervene with the power of persuasion and, if necessary, self-defense techniques. The patrols will also hand out literature on racism and sexism while they make their rounds, he said.

"It's. . . peer on peer kind of safety," said Stephanie Carnahan, a university staffer who runs a 22-story dormitory on campus.

She is acting as advisor to Allied Students Against Prejudice, which is organizing the student patrols. The group grew out of this semester's campus tensions. Carnahan said it has about 80 members, but was not clear how many would join.

forum

continued from page 1

ingrained in the university's structure, said moderator Bailey Jackson, dean of the School of Education.

Associate Professor of Anthropology Helan Page claimed that fears about job security were the greatest obstacle to change being affected. She said that faculty who teach radical ideas put their jobs at risk, as do administrators who support faculty in this pursuit.

"We have to find a way to overcome fear. The administrators refuse to take a stand because they're afraid of losing community support. As for me, every time I teach about White supremacy and domination of the planet, I have to fear for my job," she said.

Page asserted that a self-perpetuating ritual of subordination and repression on a planetary scale was paralleled in the microcosm of the university. She said the university does not prepare students to put an end to this process because it needs to reproduce racism to sustain itself.

Ron Welburn, an associate professor in the English department, began his comments by blasting the Collegian, accusing its writers of being "ignorant, narrow-minded, and bigoted," and among the most conservative he had seen on any campus. He claimed the paper was controlled by a "power-base of right-wing reactionaries that needs to be broken down."

Associate Director of Housing Anne Miller claimed that many of the racial problems on campus could be attributed to a lack of consistent leadership from the administration.

Referring to top positions at Whitmore having been filled only with interim candidates, Miller said she hoped new, permanent leadership would unite the many independent groups on campus and allow them to move forward as a university.

engineers

continued from page 1

not yet decided on a site for the Boston area division headquarters but said it would most likely be in Waltham where the corps already maintains its New England regional offices.

The Boston area headquarters would include a technical center whose work would encompass military as well as civilian projects, Williams said.

With about 39,000 civilian and 900 military jobs nationwide, the Corps' primary mission is military construction for the Army.

outreach

continued from page 1

of the contract, they are assured acceptance into UMass.

Associate Principal Lydia Blazquez gave the program high praise and said she was honored her school was asked to participate.

"Most of these kids feel that a college future isn't possible because they are poor," Blazquez said.

Carlos Marrero, 13, said he wanted to be an engineer and said he was positively influenced from previous trips he had made through the BCP.

He also said he was working on getting "all A's," since he was introduced to the Outreach Project.

Ken Burnham, interim dean of students, says the impact of the program will be felt in 3 years when these students are ready to enter college, but added that "visually and emotionally" it gives them something to look forward to.

"It's going to be a few years before UMass sees the benefits," Burnham said. "But the immediate impact will be the effect on keeping these kids in high school."

According to statistics from La Raza, a national Hispanic organization, 60 percent of all young Hispanics drop out before they finish high school.

Alberto Morales, coordinator of the BCP Hispanic Outreach program, said he sees the program as beneficial to both the Hispanic communities and the UMass community, which is currently grappling with racial unrest due to the low enrollment of minority students.

"It builds their sense of self-worth," Morales said. "It really means a great deal to them and their teachers."

Morales stressed the need for the program and hoped other communities would use the BCP project as a model to help increase enrollment numbers for all minority communities.

Morales said he has scheduled other similar events that target even older students.

"We like to get eighth-graders, because by the time they get into high school it's almost too late," Morales said.

Morales said he hopes to include more schools into the program, specifically from North Springfield because of its large Hispanic community.

Walk-a-Thon

continued from page 3

ernments and has worked closely with the fundraising committee in planning this event.

Aileen Weimberg, a senior education major and a member of the Mortar Board Honor Society, said she appreciates being a part of this event.

"It's something I wanted to do when I heard about Kathie, and I am pleased to know that I can contribute my effort and time," Weimberg said.

Weimberg said she was very happy to hear from Caldwell's parents thanking her for her efforts, and acknowledged that the support has had a tremendous impact on Caldwell and the family as a whole.

In addition, those who cannot make the Walk-a-Thon can send donations and letters of support to Eileen Stewart, assistant dean of students, 227 Whitmore Building care of the Kathie Caldwell Equipment Fund.

The Kathy Caldwell Fundraising Committee will have a table set up today in the C. C. concourse that will provide information on the Walk-a-Thon and sponsor forms. Forms can also be picked up at the Dean of Student's Office in Whitmore or at any of the residence area offices.

For more information contact Eileen Stewart, 545-2684, or Kathy McNaughton, 256-3585.

Donations may also be made to the Kathie Caldwell Equipment Fund, c/o Family Bank, Topsfield, Mass. 01983.

booksellers

continued from page 3

"There is a vast majority of the population that don't have the necessary skills needed in the job market of today," says Sharken.

The literacy problem effects not only those adults without a high school diploma. In Massachusetts, there are 400,000 high school graduates who are unable to qualify for some skilled jobs due to reading difficulties.

"You can't get by without reading and writing skills," says Sharken. He says many people feel powerless in the battle against illiteracy, but, "They can do something as simple as buy a book on Saturday."

The Literacy Project's magazine, which publishes the work of the adults who have gone through the program, is "very inspiring" according to Pruner, and reason enough to buy a book on Saturday.

ATTENTION:
UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741
FOUR (4) Bedroom Apartments!
$899 (utilities included! wow!)
RENT FREE !
Move in now- no rent until January 1,1993 !
Move in January 93' and receive it FREE!
*Promotion & prices subject to change without notice
TOP TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD LIVE HERE:
1. Your PARENTS don't!
2. YOU pick your roommates!
3. PRIVACY- Spacious Four (4) Bedrooms!
4. TWO (2) Bathrooms- no waiting in the shower line!
5. UTILITIES included $$$!
6. Directly on BUSLINE- minutes from campus & downtown Amherst!
7. It's FREE public transportation!
8. INCLUDES major appliances & w/w carpeting!
9. QUIET forest setting - for your peace of mind.
Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!
Don't wait another day, call today!
CUT THIS AD & USE IT TO LIVE "RENT FREE!" AT ALPINE COMMONS!
256-0741

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

BIGGEST SALE OF THE YEAR
THIS WEEK ONLY • SAVE UP TO $175
ARTCARVED
MAKES IT LAST
UNIVERSITY STORE
10 AM to 4 PM
November 16 - 25

Do you have a comment on an article you read in the Arts & Living section? Think Cutter and Art are intuitive t.v. critics or just losers with lots of time on their hands? Let us know. Send your comments to the Arts Desk c/o the Collegian.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Erasing the line between 'rape' and 'acquaintance rape'

A few years ago my friend "Julie" was raped.

She wasn't grabbed off the street by some lurking stranger, nor was she pulled in the shadows and beaten. She was raped right in her own home, in her own bed, a few afternoons before our senior prom. Although she was raped in her own home, it wasn't done by some psycho burglar/rapist. It was her boyfriend of ten months, who decided that at that point in their relationship, they should be having sex. Julie didn't agree but in the end, she had no choice.

After, Julie related the whole story to me. She said she was slightly upset with how the whole thing happened but, since her boyfriend really loved her, it must be okay. She thought it was as much his right as hers to decide when she was ready to have sex.

When asked about her first time now, some years later, Julie will kind of look down and admit that it didn't happen exactly the way she had planned. To this day, she cannot bring herself to say the word rape. Julie was raped. She was date raped.

Date rape is rapidly becoming all too frequent. If it can happen in a friendly, well-to-do community like mine then it can happen anywhere. Jericho, Long Island is not exactly a crime-filled metropolis. However on that "fated" day — and others, I'm sure — a violent yet silent crime took place.

All too often, date rape is swept under the rug and viewed as a nonentity. Most people differentiate between rape and date rape, and feel date rape is somehow a lesser crime. They feel date rape is simply a date that might have gone a little too far. Well, hate to "burst that bubble" but the time has come to enlighten this topic.

Rape is a horrid, despicable crime, to which there is no suitable punishment. Date rape is exactly the same thing, however the act itself is performed by a friend, lover or acquaintance, rather than by that lurking stranger in the shadows. Perhaps it should be called "acquaintance rape," hence moving away from all the confusion that the word date generates.

Stephanie
EISENBERG

Date rape draws a very fine line between pleasure and pain, fun and a federal offense. Basically, there shouldn't be any confusion because whether a woman says "NO!" or "no," the meaning is still the same. At no time when a woman says no to sex is she saying yes to rape, pain and humiliation. A woman has the right to say "no" no matter how "far along in the game you are." By not respecting her wishes in this matter you are violating her, and committing a federal crime.

Often I have heard men claim that they thought she wanted to have sex with them, and it was over so quickly she really didn't have time to protest. Well, there's a solution to this, and you have me and language to thank for it. ASK HER! Ask her if she wants to have sex with you. Don't just assume because you are the stud of the century she wants sleep with you. Maybe it's kind of corny, even a little embarrassing, but it's much better than facing rape charges the next week. By asking her, you are showing respect for her. In addition, you are possibly preventing a crime. And if she says no, respect her wishes; after all a stud like you will definitely have other opportunities.

The further tragedy of date rape is that it is connected with the word date, which leads many women to feel the rape was somehow their fault or wasn't rape at all. Because of this feeling, many date rapes go unreported and women often brush them off with a feeling like, "Oh, I knew him so it wasn't really rape." No! It's rape and as a woman you were violated.

As for my friend Julie, she still has a hard time saying the word rape, I don't think she really wants to admit it happened to her. In my heart, I know she knows, and I know she's devastated and scared. Whether or not she admits it, it has had its effects on her.

During our freshman year (at different universities) I watched helplessly as my intelligent, vivacious and funny friend changed into a completely different person. I miss the old Julie a lot; we're no longer as close as we used to be, because she has a hard time trusting people now. Every time I see her, my heart goes out to her because her life was destroyed by an over anxious high school guido.

I'll bet he doesn't even realize he raped her.

Stephanie Eisenberg is a Collegian staff member.

The military can't be PC

Okay, okay, I didn't write a column last Friday because I was tied up in Washington, D.C., helping Slick Willie with his transition team.

Yeah, right.

Speaking of Slick Willie, don't you think it's kind of funny that after all this talk of how poor the country is, how screwed up we are economically, the first thing Bubba wants to do is bring gays and lesbians into the armed forces.

I didn't really see any reasons against it, so I figured I'd throw my two cents in.

Michael
MORRISSEY

I can think of about three great reasons why gays and lesbians should not be allowed in the armed forces.

First of all, they already have their own army, and on its best day, it can give many nations a run for their money. Maybe you've heard of this army; it's called Queer Nation.

If you haven't heard about Queer Nation, I'll tell you a little bit about them. They are the group which pulls out condoms in the middle of church services in New York City, disrupting Mass; they're the group that has spilled red paint (symbolizing blood) all over the most treasured landmarks in Washington, especially the hallowed steps of Congress.

Why would anyone want to join the armed forces when they can conduct guerrilla warfare on the open streets? Why would they want to shoot an enemy when they can "educate" the public by plastering "Men love men" posters everywhere?

They can have their Queer Nation army, but they should not try to disrupt the real army.

Maybe I'm being too harsh. Now I know many gays and lesbians are fine upstanding citizens who want nothing more than to protect our country. These patriotic people should be honored, not vilified, but the fact of the matter is that they are not compatible with the armed services.

Here's my line of reasoning: Colin Powell and Norman Schwartzkopf have both spoken out against the social experimentation of the armed forces, and I agree with them. The vast majority of Americans, never mind Marines, are unaccepting of a homosexual life style, and you don't have time to teach these soldiers political correctness. The army is the watchdog of our country, and there is no way you can waste time telling people to get along. They simply must be similar, because there is no time or room for diversity.

This leads me to my biggest objection of having homosexuals in the military: it destroys morale. Most people don't get their names in the press, so for a person to be publicly homosexual and for his platoon to know about it, she or he must have been public about it. I don't know about you, but I don't go on "20/20" saying I'm straight, so when someone gay does this, I can see how it is unnerving for the people serving with that individual.

Listen, war is hell. In the tight quarters of the military, we do not need our soldiers constantly wondering if their bunk mate as the hots for him or her. That is just too much to ask.

The morale of a platoon in which a member is openly gay naturally will fall, no matter how qualified the gay person is. It is a disruption that is not needed, or wanted, in the military, so any gay who constantly fights for his or her rights is destroying the cause they want to promote.

Guns aren't the biggest factor in the strength of a country's military; morale is. The United States' morale has always been among the highest in the world. Morale is the reason we have won so many wars — look it up. People will become wary of sleeping, showering and fighting with people who may have a sexual interest in them, and when this happens, goodbye military.

I realize that keeping any group from doing anything violates the natural rights of mankind, but the military is a matter of life and death, far different than a job. Gays should never be discriminated against in finding work, but the security of the country is a totally different matter.

My point is that it's self-defeating to be an openly homosexual person in the military. I'm sure there are thousands in the military who are privately gay, and there always will be.

Hey, If I was running things, I wouldn't even want women to serve in combat, not because they can't do a good job, but because I'm old-fashioned. Having a social experiment on the frontline makes even less sense. I'm so glad Bubba was elected.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

The meaning of 'people of color'

What does "people of color" really mean? What groups are included in this term? Does this term adequately express the interests (social, economic, cultural) of the groups included? Some of the definitions I have heard mentioned are people of non-European origin; other than White; Asian, African, Latino, Native American; oppressed groups. I don't feel any of these definitions are complete and often lead to confusion of the issues.

Should our global society make this oversimplistic distinction? From what point of view are cultural and social boundaries determined? Does "White" mean the absence of color? Are these distinctions also made from a "class" awareness? Face to face, would we make the differences between us a matter of social terminology? These terms seem to come from group interests. If one group seems to be pressured by another (socially or economically), those too broad terms are applied. Tensions between groups seeming to have the same interests are aggravated.

Has White come to mean in our society "oppressor?" Could, in fact, White people of comparative economic positions have the same interests as what we commonly now call "oppressed groups?" Has black, yellow or red now come to be understood as "oppressed?" The reality of our existence on this planet is global. Violence of any type based on color is not in the interest of accommodating ourselves to a new world beyond nationalism.

I would be interested in seeing this particular term "people of color" set aside and replaced with "human beings."

Wenping Jin
Southwest

UMass conservatism oppressed

I would like to commend and thank Evelyn A. De Jesus on her recognition of the severe oppression conservatives on this campus are forced to deal with [Collegian, Nov. 18]. Students need to realize there are two sides to every story. While members of the Republican Club may not share the same views or concerns as the LBGA members, it should not be implied that these views are wrong simply because they are conservative. Both organizations are based on common consensus among their members that particular beliefs are important enough to form a club in support of them. Who is to say one opinion is more correct than another? Apparently, the administration and the majority of the student body have taken the liberty of making that decision.

Conservatism on this campus is viewed as deviant and blatantly wrong. Organizations such as the Republican Club, are thought to be bordering the line of too controversial and offensive for this campus. I'd like to say to the administration: wake up!

You don't think these conservative organizations are oppressed? Let's go back to the beginning of the semester when the members of the LBGA had a "Coming out Day" on the Student Union steps. This was fine according to the Student Activities Office who approved this function. While conservatives on campus may have found this event morally offensive, there was little they could do about it. It was the right of the LBGA to express themselves as they pleased. Strangely enough, when the Republican Club in conjunction with the University Democrats asked to hold a presidential debate on the Student Union steps the next week, they were denied access. Why?

Similarly, SAO denied the Young Americans for Freedom the Student Union steps for a "Straight Pride" rally and a "Pro-life" rally. Why? They simply wanted to express their views where they could be heard. What gave SAO the authority to decide which opinions are acceptable and which are not? They are not the moral crusaders they would like to be. The purpose of SAO is to oversee student programming and to assist registered student organizations in meeting the financial commitments. There should be no picking and choosing. Each RSO should be treated with equal respect regardless of the views on which their organization is based.

Let's also take a look at the loan to Phi Beta Sigma fraternity to bring Leonard Jeffries, the nationally reknowned anti-Semite, anti-White racist and anti-Catholic professor, claiming his speech would be for the purpose of unifying the campus. The Undergraduate Student Senate, in an act of political correctness, condoned bringing Jeffries to this campus. Would they condone bringing David Duke for the purpose of "unification?" Both men are racist yet it seems to depend on who they are racist against. Young Americans for Freedom would get laughed out of the Senate for making such a request.

When you hear people whining that this campus is oppressive, don't laugh; they are absolutely right. Conservatives are oppressed for daring to stand true to their values and morals in a liberal society and for refusing to conform to the "p.c." values of the liberal administration.

Jennifer Fazzi
Vice President, Republican Club
Southwest

Correction

On yesterday's Editorial/Opinion page, the author of the letter titled, "University should end worship of evil," was misidentified. The Collegian regrets the error.

RESCHEDULING OF FINAL EXAMS ON OFFICIAL SNOW DAYS

In order to reschedule final examinations in case of snow, 2 alternate exam periods have been devised. They are 6:30pm and 8:45pm each exam day. The use of these alternate periods in the event of closings is outlined below. In addition, the academic calendar includes Wednesday, December 23 as an official snow day in the event that the University is closed Dec. 22. This policy goes into effect ONLY if the University is officially closed. The snow day "hot-line" is 545-3630. If the University is open, all exams are expected to take place as scheduled. Each faculty member should inform his or her class of the planned time and location of the rescheduled final exam in the event of a snow day. All rescheduled exams will be held in the same location as published in the final exam schedule.

If the University is closed until 11:00am:

8:00am ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm same day
10:30am ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm same day
1:30pm ..... held as originally scheduled
4:00pm ..... held as originally scheduled

If the University is closed all day but open in the evening

8:00am ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm same day
10:30am ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm same day
1:30pm ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm next exam day
4:00pm ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm next exam day
except:
1:30pm Dec. 16 ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm Dec. 16
4:00pm Dec. 16 ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm Dec. 16

If the University is closed all afternoon and all evening

8:00am ..... held as originally scheduled
10:30am ..... held as originally scheduled
1:30pm ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm next exam day
4:00pm ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm next exam day

If the University is closed all day and all evening

8:00am ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm next exam day
10:30am ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm next exam day
1:30pm ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm exam day after next
4:00pm ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm exam day after next
except:
1:30pm Dec. 16 ..... rescheduled to 6:30pm Dec. 17
4:00pm Dec. 16 ..... rescheduled to 8:45pm Dec. 17
1:30pm Dec. 21 ..... rescheduled to 8:00am Dec. 23
4:00pm Dec. 21 ..... rescheduled to 10:30am Dec. 23
8:00am Dec. 22 ..... rescheduled to 8:00am Dec. 23
10:30 am Dec. 22 ..... rescheduled to 10:30am Dec. 23
1:30pm Dec. 22 ..... rescheduled to 1:30pm Dec. 23
4:00pm Dec. 22 ..... rescheduled to 4:00pm Dec. 23

AMHERST CAMPUS EMERGENCY CLOSING POLICY

Closing Options*	Delayed Opening Until 11:00 am	Closed All Day	Closed During Day	Cancellation Of Evening Activities
Listen or Listen	Amherst (WFCR, WMUA, WRNX, WTTT) • Brattleboro (WTSA) • Greenfield (WHAI, WRSI, WGAM) • Hartford (WTIC) • Northampton (WHMP) • Orange (WCAT) • Springfield (WSPR, WHYN, WACE, WAQY, WMAS, WGGB-TV) • Ware (WARE) • Worcester (WTAG) • Campus Dorms (HSCN)
When	Starting at 6:00 am	Starting at 6:00 am	when decided	Starting at 2:00 pm
	STAY TUNED TO YOUR RADIO FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION
What Will Be Affected	Classes • Day Care • Offices • Activities • Textbook Annex • TOC Restaurant Meetings • University Store • Munchy Store • Continuing Education • Bluewall
What Won't Be Affected (Designated Essential Personnel will report to work)	Dining Commons • Health Services • Hotel • Police/Security • Hatch Physical Plant • Conference Services • Hampden Snack Bar Other areas as pre designated (consult your Department Head)
Athletics, Fine Arts, and Mullins Center	Athletic, Fine Arts & Mullins Center events will take place as scheduled unless a separate announcement is made on local radio stations. Athletics Information: Sports Information Hot Line 545-2439 Fine Arts Information: 545-2511 or 545-0190 or 545-0480 Mullins Center Information: call the Mullins Center
Bus Service	Buses will run unless separate announcement on local radio stations. Call 545-1633 for recorded message
Library -Academic Calendar	Opens at 11:00 a.m.	The Library is open from 8:00 am to 5:00 pm
-Exam period	Library will make every effort to open. Call Library Hours Hot Line: 545-0414
-Intersession	Same as University
-Sat/Sun/holiday	Listen to Radio or call Library Hours Hot Line: 545-0414
Information	Call Emergency Closing Hot Line 545-3630 or watch Housing Service Cable Network (HSCN)

If there is no vertical line, the information applies for each option.

Parking Snow Policy for 12/1 to 4/1 on reverse.

AMHERST CAMPUS PARKING SNOW POLICY IN EFFECT FROM 12/1/92 TO 4/1/93

The Amherst Campus Parking Snow Policy affects OVERNIGHT parking (1:00 A.M. to 7:00 A.M.) and parking during a SNOW EMERGENCY CLOSING period

OVERNIGHT PARKING:

PARKING ALLOWED

Lot 22, Lot 23, Lot 24, Lot 27, Lot 28, Lot 30, Lot 41, Lot 42, Lot 44, Lot 49, E Lots, Lot 25 (north of roadway to E lot only), Lot 32 (west of Lincoln Ave. only), Lot 43 including Thatcher Way (except at meters), Lot 46 (except at meters)

PARKING ALLOWED ONLY WITH APPROPRIATE PERMIT

Lot 21, Lot 29, Lot 47, Lot 50, Lot 54, North Village, Lincoln Apartments, Any posted reserved space, University Apartments

PARKING ALLOWED ONLY WHEN AMBER LIGHTS NOT FLASHING

Lot 62, Lot 63, Lot 65

PARKING NOT ALLOWED

Lot 31, Lot 33, Lot 34, Lot 40, Lot 45, Lot 64, Lot 66, Lot 71, Lot 25 (south of the roadway to E lot), Lot 26 (except by special permit only), Lot 32 (east of Lincoln Ave. only), Any campus roadway (including Southwest horseshoe), Any parking meter

SNOW EMERGENCY PARKING:

ESSENTIAL PERSONNEL

During a snow emergency closing period, essential personnel who report to work may only park in the following areas:
Lot 21 (west of Boltwood)
Lot 25 (west of Physical Plant and north of roadway to E lot only)
Lot 31 (WFCR, Computing and Lederle Graduate Research Center)
Lot 33 and 34 (south of Thompson and SOM)
Lot 62 (south of Morrill Science)

SUGGESTIONS/IDEAS FOR PARKING "SMART" ON A SNOW DAY:

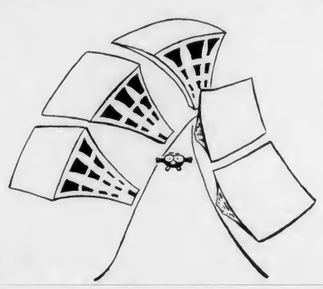
1. Use the UMASS bus service.
2. Car pool rides whenever possible.
3. Walk if possible.
4. Have someone "drop you off."
5. If space is not available in your assigned lot, go to either lot 25 or E lot (both west of Physical Plant). During snow conditions, it is not possible to guarantee normal lot capacity will be available.
6. If you receive a parking ticket and believe it was improperly issued, you may appeal it at the Ticket Processing Office within 21 days from the date issued.

D.P. Dough delivers calzones
call 256-1616
Now Open at 11:30 A.M.

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
EXPIRES 8/30/93
Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 calzones.

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
EXPIRES 8/30/93
Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 calzones.

Information Data Bank



We can help make a large and seemingly complex university a little easier to find your way around in.

545-1555
2nd Floor Lobby-Whitmore

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Busch Suitcase of cans ..... $9.99 (+dep)
Golden Anniversary Case 12 oz cans ... $7.99 (+dep)
Miller Genuine Draft, GD Light 12 pk btls. $6.99 (+dep)
Kronenbourg 6 pk btls ..... $4.69 (+dep)
Commonwealth Brewery Burton Ale 6 pk ..... $5.70 (+dep)
M.D. 20/20 750 ml $1.99
Seagrams Gin 1.75 L $13.99
Poland Spring Vodka 80 proof 1.75 L ... $9.99
Frangelica Liquer 750 ml $14.99
Crown Royal 750 ml $14.49
Absolut Citron Vodka 1.75 L $14.99

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes

Open 9 am - 11 pm
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

Arts & Living

Acoustic Panic: not just a band, a project

By SHAWN MCDONNELL
Collegian Staff

Acoustic Panic is not your average college band.

A musical trio with electronic sound, the group has inspired comparisons to everything from Genesis to The Cure. Their music has been described as "eclectic electric," and reflects influences from the classical to late-seventies progressive rock.

Acoustic Panic is the brainchild of composer/musician Bradford Potter, who prefers to think of Panic as a "musical project," rather than a "band." Although he is far from alone onstage (vocalists Samantha Smith and Willow Cohen lend sterling support), he points out that much of the idiosyncratic sound is provided electronically.

"In the future," explains Potter, "these songs will be performed completely with live musicians." But while he is still experimenting with styles and arrangements, he finds it easier to work with electronic sequencing. "In my experience," adds Potter, "there is a lack of musicians in this area who play this type of music."

But fear not: the technological wizardry involved in producing a Panic show is far removed from the chintzy computer sounds of dance music, or "sampling." The electronic sequencing used by Potter gives Acoustic Panic a distinctive production sound, with slow, melodic backdrops to its faster rock core. Simplifying the arrangements to fit the confines of a standard college rock group would only undermine the music's effect.

The sound of Acoustic Panic is gentle and evocative, smooth and aurally scintillating. In addition, Potter's lyrics have a richness which transcends the limits of Top 40 banality. They spur the imagination, with hints of the mystical.

Although his songs are inspired by very common, terrestrial concerns — from a breakup with a lover, to the recent presidential race — the quirkiness of his lyrics suggest a wealth of unexplored images.

About trust and betrayal, he writes, "I cannot see/ I am simply blinded by the light/ And I live by dreams/ She sells sea shells by the pale moonlight."

About the lofty promises of politicians, he writes, "They're living in a dream/ And we hear the madmen scream/ And we're changing/ Yes, we're changing so it seems."

The world of Acoustic Panic is a world of sly optimism, lyrical fantasy, and melodic richness. Anyone with an interest in the unique or exciting should make tracks for Hampden Theatre.

Acoustic Panic will perform a free show on Saturday, Nov. 21, as part of the Student Valley Productions Fall Arts Festival. The show will take place in Hampden Theatre, Southwest, at 8:00 PM.

Viewzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzz from zzzzzzee Outside

By MARK K. ANDERSON
Collegian Correspondent

This story is part one of a series.

The quest for notoriety is a peculiar thing. Some fame seekers attempt to make their presence known by athletic prowess. Others host fluffy talk shows or make exercise videos and drop in on fluffy talk shows.

Fortunately, there are also those who distinguish themselves in more creative ways: the woman who married a hammerhead shark or the guy who blows up deceased house pets with surplus World War II hand grenades. And thanks to the Weekly World News you can read about these everyday folks four times a month.

One personal favorite (though not to my knowledge chronicled in the News) is that type of individual who through a string of Z's prefixed on their family or business name immediately becomes the last entry in their local phone book. I first discovered such telephonic one-upsmanship during my salad days as a South Minneapolis kid where hitting puberty with all its implied desires for wasting time can cause a young mind to seek diversions like a vulture seeks roadkill.

Recently defunct, the 612 area code's Zzzzyzzerrific Funline provided seemingly endless oddball conversation topics and time-squandering opportunities. The Funline was financed and operated by a guy who called himself Highrise Joe.

Blind since birth, Highrise grew to love telephones and the host of opportunities afforded anyone with the patience and curiosity to explore the inner workings of a nationwide communications network which most people take for granted. To this day, he utilizes his expertise in troubleshooting networks for phone companies across the country.

While the Zzzzyzzerrific Funline was in existence Highrise Joe would record a set of offbeat observations and miscellaneous commentary to be played at length on his answering machine. Fans of the weird from all around would then call in and listen. I remember one essay of his which rambled for some 20 minutes about the uber-Abba vocal group/halftime entertainment experience Up With People. No homework got done that week.

These days, Highrise Joe is formally known and listed in Minneapolis directories as Joybubbles — mostly spending his time either on the phone or doing what he calls "re-childing." (His efforts to become a professional five year-old have made him a welcome visitor to kindergarten classes and playgrounds across the city as well as an occasional feature story in the local media. Seriously.)

Zeke Zzzzzzzyzuss has not only remained in the Montreal directory's closing berth, but has sweated out some close calls during his tenure too.

Although he doesn't do the Funline anymore, Joybubbles (who is cross-referenced in the Minneapolis phone book as Bubbles, Joy) does cherish his daily phone calls from children, re-childers and fans from (212) to (213).

"I speak with a lot of people like me who have given up with this inner-child stuff and just work on enjoying the life of an outer-child and inner-adult," he confesses.

At times, Joybubbles also gets flak from the immature (ironically) and the self-righteous who both apparently feel uncomfortable with his unique perspective. "We call these kind of people 'Punworgs' which is 'Growup' spelled backwards."

Certainly, Minneapolis is not the only city with 180 Proof weirdness within its phone book covers. Zzzzyzzophiles from other cities had equally curious tales to spin.

Just over the border in Montreal, a displaced New Yorker who seven years ago tried to outdo the Guinness Book of World Records, continues to hold the blue ribbon. Zeke Zzzzzzzyzuss has not only remained in the Montreal directory's closing berth, but has sweated out some close calls during his tenure too.

I spoke with Mr. Zzzzzzzyzuss recently on the origin of his sobriquet. "Besides

Turn to VIEWS, page 8

Light Sleeper: flawed but interesting drama

By IAN CANADINE
Collegian Correspondent

Paul Schrader is perhaps most well known for having written Martin Scorsese's classic masterpiece Taxi Driver, but he has also directed a number of minor but interesting films of his own over the past decade (including Patty Hearst and Mishima), and Light Sleeper is the latest of these.

In it, Willem Dafoe plays John LaTour, a middle-aged insomniac cocaine dealer who spends his nights drifting from one yuppie customer to the next, meeting the connections set up by his glamorous but tough boss, Ann (Susan Sarandon).

Ann is planning to pull out of the drug world altogether and clean up her business, leaving LaTour with the dilemma of what direction his life should now take. This is further complicated when he meets his old lover Mary Ann, who wants nothing to do with him for fear of plunging back into the world of addiction and excess which their past life had consisted of.

La Tour's struggles to establish a reconciliation with Mary Ann and to determine some sort of future for his apparently empty life provide the narrative direction for the film, as the endless rounds of meetings and deals drifts toward the final eruption of violence which tends to characterize Schrader's work.

Not much really happens in this film, until the last 15 minutes at least, but this is because it is essentially about LaTour's own inner crisis rather than any external drama, and thus tends to drift rather aimlessly in the same way as its central character.

As a portrayal of LaTour's existential crisis, Light Sleeper is most interesting, and Schrader cleverly parallels the inner and the outer by setting the film against the background of a sanitation strike, so that the mounting piles of trash on the sidewalk suggest the detritus of La Tour's own disintegrating life.

Schrader also compensates for the general lack of visual action by employing a voice over (La Tour's diary), which brings to mind a whole tradition of hard-bitten urban drama, and is also strongly reminiscent of the classic monologues he wrote for Robert De Niro's Travis Bickle in Taxi Driver.

Light Sleeper cannot escape comparison with Scorsese's earlier film, and Schrader obviously sets it up as some kind of reprise, sharing as it does the central figure of the insomniac as philosopher, and echoing its violent climax.

Unfortunately the film suffers by comparison, as Schrader is not as compelling a director as Scorsese and does not seem to have quite the same unflinching eye. However, he does know how to make interesting use of lighting

Turn to LIGHT, page 8

Networking.

There are a lot of influential people on this campus. People with connections. People who can get things done. In order to get to know them, you could get involved with a lot of different RSO's — the Republican Club, Democrats, Cannabis Reform Coalition, the Radical Student Union — or you could be more efficient and join the Collegian.

Rub shoulders with the rich and famous, or at least with the self-important.

The Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

ALLEY OOPS
&
Miller Lite Live Concert Series
present
Lickety Split
Fri. Nov 20 & Sat. Nov 21
525 PLEASANT STREET
NORTHAMPTON
Alley Oops
584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563

ZANNA

THE PERFECT PARTY MIX.

Acronymble winners

The Acronymble Winners which unbelievably escaped mention in yesterday's THIS WEEKEND section, are no less stellar than those winners who have gone before them. Without further ado, FIRST PRIZE, the ACRONYMBLE game, goes to Heather Worden for her pc noodle, Can't Umass Tame Erupting Racism? SECOND PRIZE goes to Shannon Donellan from Brooks whose noodle goes like this, Claus Unionizes Team Except Rudolph. Ms. Donellan is the recipient of an Acronymble t-shirt. Finally, THIRD PRIZE, the Acronymble poster, goes to Jenn Hall of Webster dorm, who wrote to us, Crusty Underwear Tickles Everyone's Rump.

We were absolutely swamped with entries this week! Thanks for your responses. Come to 113 Campus Center to claim your prizes and to drop off your entries for this week's real letters: J-E-F-F-I.

■ views

continued from page 7

taking inspiration from the Guinness Book, I thought it'd be cool to never have to scribble down my phone number again — I could just say, `I'm the last one in the book' and be done with it.

"So I began in 1983 by facing off against Michael Zytynski with my original name Zeke Zzyzus. In `85 I moved to another apartment and in the process of re-registering upped it to Zzzyzus out of paranoia. I lucked out in `87 when I re-re-registered as Zzzzyzuss at the last minute and beat out a Zzzzap Distribution business who had their eye on my spot. By `88, thanks to inroads at the phone company, I knew that Zzzzz Better Fashions, Inc. would be my next opponent and so pushed the name to six Z's. The seventh Z came in `89 as consolation for a failed attempt to jump ship and become A A."

Since 1989, his hunger for top billing has not abated. "Right now the first entry in the Montreal phone book is a company who named themselves `A.' I've entertained the notion of getting a business line under `.'[one period], but that may have to wait."

As the subject of several radio and television interviews as well as a Ripley's Believe It Or Not comic strip, Zeke definitely sees a down side to his notoriety. "I get a lot of juvenile crank calls, but most of them are from 12 year-old kids who have a strong french accent and consequently have a hard time pronouncing my last name. So that combined with the giggling in the background usually makes it easy to screen out the silly from the serious."

■ light

continued from page 7

and cinematography, and inventive composition of shot, although this occasionally appears a little contrived.

The film's dialogue quite nicely observes the nuances of the everyday, particularly in the scenes between Dafoe and Sarandon, whose relationship seems uncertain throughout the film. Sarandon plays the role of the brassy, self-possessed Ann to the full, and dominates the camera when she is on it.

Dafoe's performance is understated, as the role requires, but perhaps a little too disengaged to capture the audience's full involvement.

Overall, Light Sleeper is maybe a bit too slow moving and taciturn to make any major impression, but it is not a bad film by any means. Like Schrader's previous directorial efforts it is interesting but flawed, and you can take it or leave it, but I would suggest that it is probably worth taking.

PIZZERIA

Paradiso

TRADITIONAL WOOD-FIRED BRICK OVEN PIZZA

12 CRAFTS AVENUE NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS

586-1468

SKI

3RD ANNUAL INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS

MT. SUTTON, CANADA

(Just across the Vermont border)

ONLY $209

Party in the Snow!

Includes:

5 Day Lift Ticket

5 Nights Lodging

(Mountainside Condo)

5 Days Intercollegiate Activities

Sponsored by Lobdell's, Mt. Sutton and Molson

Legal Age for Alcohol is 18

Group Leader Discounts

Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 & Springbreak '93

CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED

1-800-999-SKI-9

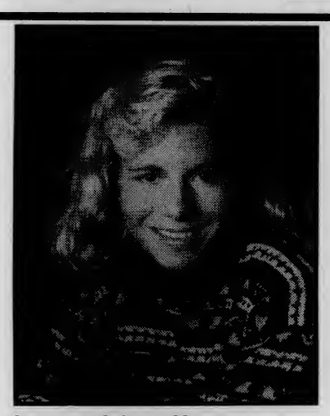
SPOLETO

Fine Italian Cuisine

Treat your sweetheart to a delicious evening

50 Main Street

Northampton, MA (413) 586-6313



Kathie Caldwell – 18 years old

Stroke Victim

Last spring semester Kathie Caldwell, a UMass freshman, suffered a debilitating stroke which left her totally disabled (quadriplegic and unable to speak).

Mortar Board, Alpha Lambda Delta & Golden Key Honor Societies are sponsoring a 3 mile Walk-a-thon to raise funds for the very expensive rehabilitation equipment Kathie needs.

Please Walk for Kathie

November 21, 1992

12 Noon - Start at Baker Residence Hall in Central

Sponsor forms available at: Dean of Students Office/227 Whitmore/UMass • Student Activities Office/Student Unoin Building Orchard Hill/Central Area Office/B30 Baker • Table on CC Concourse

Breakfast Special (8am-10am)

Scrambled Eggs – Home Fries – Toast

$1.49

SUNDAY-FRIDAY SPECIALS

(4:00pm • 9:00pm)

Meatball Grinder $2.65

Italian Dinner Specials

(4:00pm • 11:00pm)

Pizza Slice (Large Cut) 99¢

Large Plain or Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda or a pitcher of beer $8.75

Now Through November 24th at

the hatch

GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

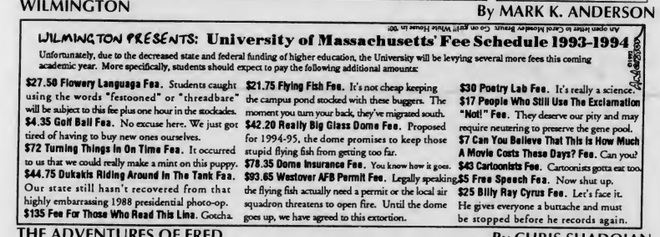
THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Killer bees are generally described as starting out as larvae delinquents.

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

WILMINGTON By MARK K. ANDERSON



WILMINGTON PRESENTS: University of Massachusetts' Fee Schedule 1993-1994

Unfortunately, due to the decreased state and federal funding of higher education, the University will be levying several more fees this coming academic year. More specifically, students should expect to pay the following additional amounts:

$27.50 Flowery Language Fee. Students caught using the words "festooned" or "threadbare" will be subject to this fee plus one hour in the stockades.

$4.35 Golf Ball Fee. No excuse here. We just got tired of having to buy new ones ourselves.

$72 Turning Things In On Time Fee. It occurred to us that we could really make a mint on this puppy.

$44.75 Dukakis Riding Around In The Tank Fee. Our state still hasn't recovered from that highly embarrassing 1988 presidential photo-op.

$135 Fee For Those Who Read This Line. Gotcha.

$21.75 Flying Fish Fee. It's not cheap keeping the campus pond stocked with these buggers. The moment you turn your back, they've migrated south.

$42.20 Really Big Glass Dome Fee. Proposed for 1994-95, the dome promises to keep those stupid flying fish from getting too far.

$78.35 Dome Insurance Fee. You know how it goes.

$93.65 Westover AFB Permit Fee. Legally speaking, the flying fish actually need a permit or the local air squadron threatens to open fire. Until the dome goes up, we have agreed to this extortion.

$30 Poetry Lab Fee. It's really a science.

$17 People Who Still Use The Exclamation "Not!" Fee. They deserve our pity and may require neutering to preserve the gene pool.

$7 Can You Believe That This Is How Much A Movie Costs These Days? Fee. Can you?

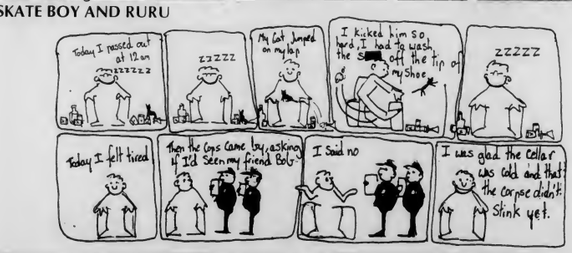
$43 Cartoonists Fee. Cartoonists gotta eat too.

$5 Free Speech Fee. Now shut up.

$25 Billy Ray Cyrus Fee. Let's face it. He gives everyone a buttache and must be stopped before he records again.

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Chris Cuddy
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Curtis
PhotoTechnician ..... Jacob Adelman
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Brad Hutchison
Todd Elliott

Menu

LUNCH
Clam Roll
Reuben Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Red Beans
Clam Roll

DINNER
Cajun Style Scrod
Rotini
BASICS DINNER
Cajun Style Scrod
Rotini

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Quote of the Day

"He couldn't bust a grape in a fruit fight."
– Riddick Bowe
RE: Lennox Lewis

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Reaching a confidential agreement with a person of high rank or status will prove very beneficial. It could pave the way to lasting financial security.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A mission assigned you by fate must be undertaken today. A secret strategy gives you the edge over a competitor. An investment you make now will pay big dividends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You see things much more clearly now. Power and wealth often go hand-in-hand. Family members should be able to disagree and still maintain loving ties. Show respect for other people's views.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Behind-the-scenes maneuvers could enable you to extract substantial gains as long as you leave nothing to chance. A last-minute invitation holds strong potential for romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Those who occupy high position must always be prepared to fight to hold them. Make sure that no one has reason to reprimand you. Move to end a relationship that is going nowhere.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The appearance of a friend gives you new hope. Live up to your highest ideals. An intelligent compromise will help you overcome domestic difficulties.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be playing not only for immediate advantage but for the future as well. Refuse to let anyone change your mind. Negative thoughts and influences hover nearby.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Long-range planning is essential if your dreams are ever to come true. Conferences with loved ones can be productive if you are totally honest with everyone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Permit no one to goad into losing self-control. Everything should settle down nicely by mid-afternoon. Seek the advice of experts about complicated financial or legal matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take the reins and drive until you and your partner reach a mutual destination. Fiscal responsibility is essential for permanent security. Get busy making new contacts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be prepared to change plans the moment you notice that they may misfire. Avoid travel, lawsuits and wishful thinking. A domestic project may have to be put on hold.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your financial interests are what count most in the long run. What someone says and does could be two entirely different things. Rely on your own efforts to get ahead.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Sign of hearing
5 Hornet
9 Ancient Persian
13 Yarn
14 Affirms
16 Keats products
17 French donkeys
18 Boundary
19 Harvest
20 Very steeply
23 Odious
24 Euro. atomic energy org.
25 Law school grad
26 Vandalized
30 Polio vaccine discoverer
33 Broadway long-run musical
34 Altar constellation
35 Sleight of hand expert
40 Numero —
41 Buddhist sacred mountain
42 Peril
43 Sends out again
45 Jack-in-the-pulpit, e.g.
48 Ibs. in Aries
49 Author Gay and editor Nan
53 Skilled talker
57 Region
58 French beings
59 Actress Chase
60 Distress
61 Singer Della
62 With, in Avignon
63 A Fitzgerald
64 Specks
65 Stool pigeon

DOWN
1 Certain bacteria, for short
2 Capital of Crete
3 Wide awake
4 Foreshadows
5 Wood used for furniture
6 With enthusiasm
7 Kind of truck
8 Retail store attachment
9 Swamp
10 Large German dam
11 Distributa
12 Descry
15 Singer Enzo
21 Salamander
22 Part of LCD
27 Egyptian immortal heart
28 Piccadilly Circus figure
29 Deep in shade
30 Goad
31 "Rule Britannia" composer
32 Composer Janáček
33 102, to Cato
36 Sheer cotton fabric
37 More adulterated
38 Stopped
39 Ervan native
44 Type of cigar
45 Demonstrate 46 Lifts
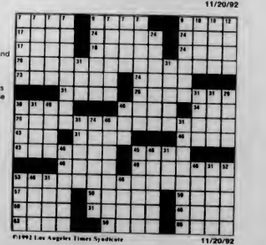
47 Indian shall currency
50 Forest trees of a region
51 Glacial deposit
52 Pile
53 Ann or Fear
54 Spokan
55 Simon or Diamond
56 Of Mars: comb. form

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

D	R	I	P		P	R	O	O	F		P	L	A	N
R	E	N	E		L	E	D	R	A		L	A	L	O
U	N	F	I		S	H	E	D	A		G	A	L	E
M	I	D			D	A	T	S			D	I	C	E
			S	O	N	S		C	A	M	E	O
S	A	D	I	S	T		G	O	E	S		C	A	S
W	R	O	T	E		R	I	P	E	N		D	S	E
I	D	N	E		F	A	Z	E	S		A	N	I	L
N	A	P	H	T	A	L	I	N	E		M	A	N	S
G	R	I	M	A	L	D	I		R	O	M	A	N	S
	Z	I	N	C		A	S		S	E	A	S
C	R	A	N	E			D	P	A	L		C	A	B
P	I	R	O	U	E	T		C	A	V	I	L	L	A
A	E	R	O		O	R	A	N	T		L	A	D	D
S	N	O	W		P	A	L	I	S	T		S	M	E

11/20/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

11/20/92

Art

continued from page 12

Rams play the Niners tough, usually falling short at the end. Not this time. LA in an upset? Los Angeles 21, San Francisco 20.

Finally, the Saints host the Redskins on Monday night, a week after both dropped heart felt losses. Bobby Hebert is trying to reestablish himself as a good quarterback. His counterpart, Mark Rypien, must be expressing his displeasure on his luck: having to play the two strongest pass rushes in the world, back to back.

New Orleans needs this win, but so does Washington. Al Michaels, Dan Dier*dork*, and Frank Gifford are in luck. This game should be as entertaining as last week's thriller. New Orleans 23, Washington 20.

Collegian columnist Arthur Stapleton is back writing for sports.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Freshman phenom Rene Ingoglia may return to action this Saturday when the Minutemen travel to the University of New Hampshire at 12:30 p.m. in a game that could mean a playoff spot.

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READER'S POLL 1992 1st Place

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202 on Route 9, Hadley
Free Parking 北京

Tomorrow is the 10th Annual Battle of the Bands
Come listen to five fantastic bands competing for the coveted title of "Winner of the Southwest Battle of the Bands!" Be a part of the studio audience that helps judge the winner!
From 1 - 5 PM - Saturday 11/21/92
In Hampden in Southwest
SWAG '92-'93! 'Cuz that's where it's at!

La Cucina di
Pinocchio
PIZZA, SUBS, & CALZONES
FREE DELIVERY ~ 256-4110
30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
Hours:
Mon-Thurs. 11:30am to 2:00am
Fri.-Sat. 11:30am to 3:00am
Sun. 11:30am to 1:00am
LASAGNA SALADS
Coupons valid for delivery or pick-up only.
$1.50 OFF any Large Pizza with 2 toppings
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
$1.00 OFF any Large Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
Any 2 Calzones for $7.00
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only
3 Calzones for $9.95
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only
TWIN SPECIAL
2 Large Cheese Pizzas
$12.50
Any Topping $1.25 more
Pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
$1.00 OFF any Medium Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

field hockey

continued from page 12

Carolina because they're like a non-issue. I just don't think that they have a chance to beat Old Dominion."

Number 3: Is Iowa better than Old Dominion or worse than Massachusetts?

True, the Hawkeyes are 19-0, and yes, they won the Big 10 Tournament. But, they haven't faced either Old Dominion or Massachusetts, and questions abound as to how well they will do this weekend.

They have the leading scorer in the country, Christy Gleason, who has 37 goals and is the corner hitter for the Hawkeyes. The Hawkeyes have a solid nucleus of five great players: Gleason, defenseman Amy Fowler, forward Tiffany Bybel, Kris Fillat and goaltender Andrea Wieland.

Wieland has started every game for Iowa, notching eight shutouts and a .861 save percentage.

Hixon has respect for Iowa, but at the same time expects UMass to keep up with Iowa.

"They have good goaltending. Fillat and Gleason are outstanding players," she said. "We'll have to be aware at what they do."

Penn State coach Char Morett, who has lost to Iowa twice and UMass once, predicts a good game.

"They're both good teams. UMass is going to have to play on turf now, so the question will be whether they can adjust," Morett said.

"We are exactly where they thought we should be," said Hixon. "In this particular game, yeah we are the underdogs."

Number 4: How far can the Minutewomen really go?

Answer: as far as they think they can. Right now, UMass has run off an 11-game winning streak since their 3-0 loss to Old Dominion, their only loss of the year. They have beaten North Carolina as well as other quality teams, and when they are on, they look unstoppable.

The addition of Ainslee Press has made a once pathetic UMass penalty corner potent, not on Iowa or Old Dominion's level, but enough to grind out a goal or two per game. Press and sweeper Natalie Hart are the key newcomers from last year's squad.

The strength in the team lies in the defense. Philippa Scott has notched 14 shutouts this year, more than most goalies in the country.

Hart, Kathy Phelan and Tracy Barclay make up the back three, while midfielders Joy Blenis, Holly Hockenbrock, Colleen Duffy and Press usually control play in the neutral zone.

The key for UMass is to take it one game at a time, just like they have done all year. Iowa must be defeated before UMass can get a crack at the national championship.

Assistant coach Amy Robertson, who was an assistant at Iowa for the last three years, knows the Hawkeyes inside and out.

"I've been at Iowa and I know how they play," she said. "I think we have a chance at them. I think we're on an even par with them. That's our focus."

UMass is 2-13 lifetime against Old Dominion, and it would take a miraculous effort for the Minutewomen to defeat them. If any UMass team could accomplish the feat, this would be the one.

"We played ODU early in the season at ODU," Robertson said. "I'm not saying we'll be playing them, but comparing ourselves to the number one team in the country, we can go far."

"The way we are playing right now, when everyone plays their best and plays as a team, we can beat anyone in the country, except Old Dominion, which would be a good struggle," Blenis said.

Provided UMass gets by Iowa, which is far from certain, the championship game would be memorable for the five seniors on the team. Goalies Scott and backup Tina Rusiecki, Press, Blenis and Phelan. In order to win UMass' first field hockey national championship, they have to make sure that their last game is their best.

COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN

AIR FORCE ROTC UNITS FILLED TO CAPACITY NOT!
Don't believe everything you hear. The Air Force continues to seek outstanding students to fill future officer requirements. See yourself becoming a leader, graduating from college as an Air Force officer with fully developed qualities of character and managerial ability. Notice, too, the opportunities. Like eligibility for scholarship programs that can pay tuition, textbooks, fees...even $100 in tax-free income each academic month.
Visualize a crisp uniform that reflects pride in yourself and your ability to accept challenge. Get the picture? Now make a call!
545-2451/2437
AIM HIGH--AIR FORCE

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA
If you are over 18, and would like to earn Full Time Income Working Part Time Be a Bartender
•Day/Evening 1 Week
•Local/National Placement
•Limited Openings Remain For September, October, and November Classes
•Make Your Move Today and Receive Additional Savings on Tuition Fees
Call Today! 747-9888 • 1655 Main St., Suite 202 • Springfield MC/VISA/AE

Pearl Street Nightclub
Tues, Nov. 24-8:00pm/18+/
HOUSE OF PAIN
Rise Robots Rise
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office, For the Record in Amherst, Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080
10 Pearl Street, Northampton • 584-7771

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
- 20¢ per word per day for students
- Cash in advance
- Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. - Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

AIRLINE TICKETS

Fly home for Thanksgiving cheaper then ever before up to $100 off. Any fare going anywhere domestic or international. For more info call 516-767-7646

ACTIVITIES

Multicultural Night
Come experience cultures from all over the world. Internecional buffet $5 prepaid, $6 at the door. Free entertainment. Saturday, Nov. 21 7 pm-11 pm Tickets available Fridey on concourse.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Appearing at the Hatch
Today 3 -6
Boston Musicien
Michael T.
Dillon, Neil Young, CSN, Beatles, John Lennon, Peul Simon, and more! A must-see for Jemes Teylor fans! Come down todey between 3 and 6 at the Hatch.

Spanish Speekers
Earn $$$
Need fluent Spanish speakers (Native or Non-native) for psychology reading study. Cell Meria 545-0693

Subletting over intersession? Place your edvertisement free of cherge at off campus housing, room 428 Student Union. You may elso list over the phone. Cell 545-0865

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Nissen Sentra 5 speed AM/FM cessette. Good condition. $1695 253-0725

1985 Renault Encore 76K mi newtires, new sticker & tune up $1650/bo Julie at 549-7466

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functionel motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

FOR RENT

Amherst 2 bedroom apt
1 room for rent
2 full baths w/heet included
On bus route
available immedietely
Cell Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Amherst 3 bedroom condo aveil Feb. 1st. A room end one bedroom epartment aveil Jen. 1st.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasent St. 253-7879

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bed room homes on bus route cell 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom epi on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Furnished 3 bedroom house, Januery or Februery to June 1. $700+ 253-7178

Live in Northampton Looking for tenents to teke over lease of e spacious 3 rm Haven located in lovely downtown Northempton. Rent includes heet only. 650 a month. Lease this house while you can it's hot. 586-3206

One room in 3 bedroom Pufton Apartment Rent 226/mo Plus
Avelaible Jenuery 1 1993 to June 30 1993 Cell Anne 549-7718 in evening before 11pm

Puffton room avelible M/F
1/1/93 - 6/30/93
$224.50/mo
FREE bed, rug, dresser
Desk/$15
Cell 549-1611

FOR SALE

Albinar telephoto lens 135mm Like new condition Beyonet mount $60 BO 545-1028 or 253 2018

Electric bass, black, explorer, body, plays fine. $85 6 4103

For sale Ski Boots
Senmerko CS 155
Stiffness, flex and cant adjustments
Great Condition
Size 11 $60 or BO
Cell Allen at 256-8751

Guitar Amp
PV Bellstage 30
$100 Cell John 549-0836

Nintendo with Cartridges
4 Sport games
$250 or BO
Cell Mark 6-3502

Ski Boots
Raichle size 10
Like new $80/BO
Greg 6-3968

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pecs + case and manuels
Call Mitch 546-9761 $450 O.B.O

Tandy 1000 with modum $300 or BO
Call Ahmed 256-1064

HELP WANTED

Free trips and money!! Individuels end student organizations wented to promote the hottest Spring Break desitnetions, call the nation's leader. Inter-campus programs 1-800-327-6013

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT
Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Jepen end Teiwen. Many provide room & boerd & other benefits! Financielly & culturally rewarding! For program
Cell: (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Need tutor 4 stats psych will pey/hour $10 ASAP call 546-6256

Typist is needed part time to work on Macintosh computer. Cell Reze for en eppointment 549-3840

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring breek. Estebished company with many yeers experience. Earn money on spere time end free trip to Cancun.
Cell 1-800-3SIESTA esk for Bonnie

LOST

Lost glasses in a blue flowered case Sat. Nov. 14 between Boyden end JQA call Colleen 546-2017

Lost Keys
Between Herter end Thete Chi bus stop
Lost on Tues 11/16 efter 4 pm
REWARD!! offered
Call 6 4442

Lost 11/16 Tiger-neil necklace. Help! Reward - very sentimental 549-0518

Silver Metal Frames - square shaped sunglasses - big reward
Devid 549-0627

PERSONALS

Aaron I can't forget thet night. You reelly hurt me! We have totalk. The test came back positive.
- H

Happy 21st Gammie Boy!
Get ready for e great night - Yerrr!
Love, Amy, Sharon, Tere, Devre end Erice

Happy Birthday, M.D.
21, at last!
We'll celebrate tonight
Love, J.L.

Hey Buttstick!!
Kri, Heppy 21st Birthday! Get ready for legel drinks and lots of 'em!
Love, Kri

Long Island
Have a great weekend and forme!
You'll look Mahvelous!!
Seattle

Look there's Tony B.
Thought that would get your attension HEATHER!
HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Love, Mo end Tami

Meg -- "The Sloth"
You big nut!!
- W.C.B. You know me!

Pat D.
"Emily" - Dreams ...
Pest, present end future
I loved you then end I love now
Forever,
Kim

Sigma Kappa: Everyone have a wonderful time at formal tonight! Heve as much fun as we did last weekend - especielly PATCHES!

To My Feir Lady,
You ere the dreem, the song end the summer's dey
I have sought for so long megic end mysery absolute elweys remember, the best is yet to come.
- the men in black

To the Old Man!
It's about time you turned legit.
Heppy 21st birthdey John
Love,
Paul, Amy end Willie

Hey BUB!
Guess whet?
Chicken Butt!
Guess Why?
Chicken Thigh!
Happy 21st Birthday
Love, Marries

ROOMATES WANTED

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

Great Apartment 5 min. Walk to campus or "downtown"/good equipped end furnished eveil. mid-December/rent start Jen. 549-8024

Nice room in cool house
Jen 1 (NEG) to May 31
Orchard Velley eree 230+
Lv. msg for Mike 549-1606

Puffton
161.50 EA!
Big room, for 2
Bethroom
Walkthrough closet
549-8390

2 fun girls needed to share 1 large bedroom in 3 bedroom puffton apartment Great location new rug 549-0939

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The legel services center offers free legel essistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnent? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst eree for free testing and confidenciel, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Ski Tuning
Sherpening, Waxing
Base Repair
Only $8
Cell Allen or Mike at 256 6751

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93
Cencun, Jamaica, Bahames, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800 426-7710

SKI -- Intercollegiate ski weeks only $209. Includes: 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging. (Mountainside condo)/5 days intercollegiate activities (Drinking age - 18), sponsored by Lobetts, Molson and Mt. Sutton, Canada (Just across the Vermont border) group leader discounts! Jen. 3-8, Jen. 10-15 end Springbreak '93. Cell Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800 999-SKI-9

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed -- Free cover page, spell check. $1.25/page. Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Cell Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

Need cash for Holidays - I will buy your sports cards. Complete set or single cards. Call Dave 546-9690

Sports

Field hockey looks for southern comfort

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

It seems amazing that the University of Massachusetts field hockey team has won 21 of its 22 games, yet is only the third team in the country going into Final Four weekend at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Virginia.

The team intends to change that.

Right now, both Old Dominion (23-0) and Iowa (19-0) are the number one and two teams, respectively, but Massachusetts has a chance to move up a notch Saturday when they face Iowa at 2:45 p.m. Old Dominion faces No. 4 North Carolina (14-6-1) at 12 noon, and the winners of the semifinal games will square off on Sunday at 1 for the national championship.

Since this is the Final Four, this preview will attempt to answer the four most important questions of the weekend.

Number 1: Can Old Dominion three-peat?

The obvious answer is yes, because the Lady Monarchs have reigned over collegiate field hockey for the past two years and they have no intentions of relinquishing their stranglehold on the crown.

In that time, they have had forty goal scorers come and go, but they have run off 59 consecutive wins. Seniors Kelli James and Maike Hilbrand lead the team with 35 goals each. James has 55 assists while Hilbrand has 10. In case you missed it, James' likeness was on page 41 of the November 9 Sports Illustrated in the "Faces in the Crowd."

Hilbrand has a shot that UMass head coach Pam Hixon once described as "unstoppable on turf." She missed 1990 because she played on the National team of Holland. Hilbrand is one of the corner hitters in the potent Old Dominion penalty corner, which any team must stop in order to win the title. But that's only half the story.

The Old Dominion defense is also the stingiest in the country, allowing only four goals on the season. Goaltender Kim Decker has allowed three goals in the season, and has a .906 save percentage. The reason her save percentage is not closer to 1.000 is that Decker has only had to make 29 saves on the year.

In the quarterfinals, Old Dominion picked up where they left off from the regular season, crushing a good Maryland team by a 6-0 score, which is the equivalent of losing 42-0 in football. The smart money is that Old Dominion is a lock against North Carolina on Saturday and the survivor of UMass-Iowa on Sunday. But if the Lady Monarchs are cocky, they could suffer a monumental upset, which leads us to the next question:

Number 2: Which North Carolina team will show up, the old Tar Heels or the new Tar Heels?

As you see by their record, UNC has 6 losses, which is almost unspeakable for a Final Four team. But, you must take into account that Carolina had a number of key players missing at the begining of the year because those players were playing on National teams.

After starting the season 1-3 with losses to the top three teams in the country, the Tar Heels have gone 13-3-1. They have senior Mary Hartzell (18 goals) and junior Jennifer Blizzard (10 goals) on offense, and junior Peggy Storrar in goal. Storrar has notched eight shutouts while allowing only ten goals.

If North Carolina had won the ACC tournament two weeks ago, you might make a case for them being an upset pick. But the fact that they lost to Maryland (the same Maryland that got killed by ODU) and the fact that they have only two seniors is evidence enough that next year is the year for North Carolina. In the words of Hixon:

"The ODU-UNC game is going to be no contest. I don't even worry about North

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 11

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Tara Jelley and the University of Massachusetts' field hockey team travel to the Final Four this weekend in Richmond, Virginia. The Minutewomen play Iowa at 2:45 p.m. on Saturday.

Pigskin picks: Art's choices

NFL Week twelve

Recognition and luck. Two themes for this week's column. Now that Stapleton's pigskin picks is getting the recognition that it rightfully deserves on this page, I want you to know my life is complete (enter sarcasm here). Yes, the Kirby Puckett goatee disappeared shortly before last weekend, but the memory will last forever.

Arthur
STAPLETON

Studs of the Week: Charlie Baumann and Scott Zolak of the Patriots proved that some skill along with a lot of heart (luck) can win out once in a while in the NFL. I was a little off on the score, but New England came through. Congrats on the first of many wins (yeah, right!).

Honorable mention goes to my friend Joe Danker and his Houston Oilers, who went undefeated and won the first ever Patterson 2 South-Tecmo Super Bowl. I'll get you next season with the new and improved Miami Dolphins (it doesn't matter whether it's real or Nintendo, because it is still football).

Enough with the awards, because it is time for the games. Many people don't realize that the season is almost over. It seems like just yesterday that I was picking the Cowboys and the Bills for the Super Bowl. Boy, what a difference twelve weeks make!

After falling just short last Monday against the Bills, Don Shula's team will try to regroup against the banged up Oilers this week. Marco Coleman and Bryan Cox are a formidable one-two sack machine, and with Warren Moon out three-to-six weeks, Cody Carlson is in trouble.

The Dolphins have one of the most potent attacks in the league when they use it correctly. If the man Morrissey tabbed "the prostitute", Keith Jackson, could have held on to the rocket that led to an interception, Dan Marino and company would still be driving in for the score. Watch out Pardee, because guess who's coming to dinner. Miami 31, Houston 17.

This prognosticator heard this sentiment all last weekend: "Randall Cunningham is back, he's back scrambling". Well, let me tell you something: 85 of his total yards passing was a screen dump-off to Heath Sherman. He is not back until they win, and that may not be for a while.

Mysterious things happen when the Eagles play the Giants. Flashback: Randall's 90 yd. punt, the blocked FG by NY only to be brought in for a TD by Philly. . .the circumstances are endless, but if Rodney Hampton can't run the ball, the Giants can't win. Philadelphia 17, New York 16.

The Rams. Yes, L.A. defeated the Cowboys last week, and in convincing style. Dallas fell victim to the Sports Illustrated cover jinx, similar to the Maroon and White cover jinx (see UMass men's soccer's Shawn Bleau and football's Rene Ingoglia).

This week the luckiest team in football, the 49ers, take on Jim Everett and his rejuvenated passing attack in a key game in the NFC West. Yes, I know the Hams, I mean Rams, only have four wins, but they could gain more confidence by beating San Francisco. At Anaheim, the

Turn to ART, page 10

Must-win game for UMass

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

The 7-2 University of Massachusetts football squad will travel to Cowell Stadium in Durham, New Hampshire tomorrow to face the Wildcats in a 12:30 must-win game.

The Minutemen have to beat UNH and hope that a few teams on the bubble lose and that the four-man selection committee wants to see coach Mike Hodges and his boys in the Division 1-AA playoffs.

"It's totally up to them [selection committee] if we make the playoffs or not," said Hodges. "We've got a good chance- all we have to do is concentrate on beating UNH and then scoreboard watch."

Hodges thinks that no matter what happens though, his team has had a great season.

"We have a chance to tie the school record for wins [eight] tomorrow," he said. "Nobody ever thought that we'd be in a position to make the playoffs at the end of this season."

UNH (4-5-1, 2-5 in YanCon), on the other hand, has no chance to make the playoffs but would love to end UMass' playoff hopes with a win tomorrow.

The Wildcats will bring out all their guns against UMass, including Mr. All-Everything from Weymouth, MA, tailback Barry Bourassa. Bourassa is fifth in the YanCon in rushing with 90 yds a game and also boasts seven TDs and 814 yds total rushing. But it's not the numbers that impress most people, rather Bourassa's speed and moves.

"He's a great player," said Hodges. "Every time he touches the ball, you hold your breath."

On defense for the Wildcats, linebacker Dwayne Gordon has 74 tackles and 5.5 QB sacks. Quarterback Bob Jordan has 55 tackles and seven interceptions, and teammates Joe Fleming has 37 tackles and a team-high six QB sacks.

The "regulars" will be out in full force again this week for UMass. Freshman phenom tailback Rene Ingoglia seriously twisted his ankle two weeks ago and just this week began to suit up again. He is doubtful for tomorrow's game but may see some action if the doctors give him the green light. Fullback Mike George will be counted on to provide some hard-nosed, in-your-face running.

There's a little more incentive for junior tight end Steve Dembowski tomorrow because his brother, Dave, a sophomore linebacker for UNH will be on the other side of the ball. Dembowski, the Minutemen's leading receiver (12.8 yds/reception), will be QB Andrew McNeilly's main target but Dembowski will have to contend with his brother every time he catches a pass.

Defensively, Mario Perry has 15 sacks on the season and cornerback Don Caparotti is one interception away form equaling the UMass single season record for interceptions (eight). Inside linebacker Phil Lartigue leads the Minutemen with 109 tackles and will have to come up big (as he has all season) tomorrow against UNH.

Sports Notice

The Student Activity Card for the Men's Basketball season does not gain the holder admittance into the game itself. You must get a ticket by showing the Student Activity Card on the allotted days for ticket pick-up. Students must have a ticket for the game in order to be allowed in.

Those who have not picked up a Student Activity Card can not get a ticket for Sunday's game against Latvia. Students that do have their Student Activity Card may pick up remaining tickets today in 255 Boyden.

Monday November 23, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 52

Rain, rain won't go away today. Temps 51 to 56.

Local News:
University Housing Services gives qualifying Learning Disabled students waivers for their single dorm room fees. Students will get refunds for this semester. Page 3.

Sports:
The men's basketball team trounced the Latvian National team, but head coach John Calipari still isn't satisfied. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Tornadoes kill 19, lay waste to South

By GINA HOLLAND
Associated Press

Tornadoes ripped through parts of the South during the night, killing at least 19 people, leveling houses and uprooting trees and utility poles.

"It's unbelievable. We're lucky we didn't lose more lives than we did," said W.L. Whittington, mayor of Brandon, Miss. Ten people were killed in and around the town.

Tornadoes killed 15 people and injured at least 150 in Mississippi late Saturday and one person was killed early Sunday in Tennessee. At least two people were killed and scores of others were injured as tornadoes moved aqcross Georgia on Sunday. At least one person was killed and at least nine injured in northern Kentucky Sunday afternoon.

A tornado touched down in the western Ohio village of Arcanum Sunday night. There was no immediate word of serious injury.

Thunderstorms and tornadoes also caused damage in Alabama, Indiana and Georgia, where a steeple was ripped from a church during Sunday's service. Thousans in Indianapolis were without power.

Texas and Louisiana were hit by tornadoes Saturday, with heavy damages and numerous injuries, but no deaths.

In Brandon, Miss., a tornado smashed through a mobile home park and then skipped across town to an upscale neighborhood, where it killed three Cub Scout buddies enjoying a weekend sleep over and the father of one of the boys.

Rescue workers and residents searched through the rubble after daylight, and Gov. Kirk Fordice toured the damaged area.

At the mobile home park, rescue workers used doors from smashed houses as makeshift stretchers, said Charlie Wilkinson, civil defense director for Rankin Country.

At least six people were killed there, Whittington said.

The tornado roared through Brandon, 15 miles east of Jackson, about midnight. It leveled houses, uprooted trees and downed hundreds of power and telephone poles. At least 86 of the injuries were in Brandon, Wilkinson said.

"It just whished through here like slicing hot butter," Constable Martin Mann said of the Rankin County town. "We've got two-story homes not bigger than a bag of firewood. They're wiped out."

"It was like a state fair — there were people all over the place," said James L. Callahan, sheriff of nearby Leake County, where one person was killed.

Wilkinson said about 60 homes in Brandon were damaged, along with dozens of mobile homes.

Mississippi Power & Light Co. spokesman Edd Jussely said power may not be restored to some Rankin County homes for two days.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

COLUMBUS ME — Freshmen H. Johann Hertell (left) and Javier Ruiz (right) are two University of Massachusetts students that are actually happy Columbus came to the New World.

Students given refunds after Housing error

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts students who were placed in a dorm arrangement that they did not agree to in their housing contract are receiving rebates from Housing Services in an effort to patch-up the situation.

"Housing services really screwed up," said freshman Patricia Caffrey, a Russian major who was placed unwillingly on a 24-hour quiet floor of Brooks residence hall.

Mid-semester she and about 16 others in the same predicament moved out of Brooks and into other dorms so the 24-hour quiet floor could be restored.

Caffrey said she and the other students who moved are waiting to receive a $250 rebate that housing services agreed in a contract to give them for their inconvenience. Students remaining on the fourth floor who signed a contract to obey the 24 hour corridor rules are to receive $100. Also as part of the agreement, the students shall receive priority housing next semester.

"Housing came and told us either we're quiet or move," said Caffrey. "It's so unfair. They looked to the needs of a few people instead of the majority. It was a bribe in a way."

Caffrey said it has been difficult to move mid-semester and be the new kid on the block. "It's hard being a freshmen and then finding out you're stuck on a strictly quiet floor," said Caffrey. "Just when we got to know everyone and become friends they told us we had to leave. It was really hard."

Caffrey said the resident assistant of the floor, Alan Davies, had a difficult time handling the confrontations. "He had to put up with a potential civil war," Caffrey said.

"It's a very emotionally disturbing situation for

Turn to HOUSING ERROR, page 2

Club living in the Middle Ages

Magic spells, swords and cloaks abound in the SUB

By SAMUEL KENNEDY
Collegian Correspondent

Men and women armed with magic spells, swords and other outdated weapons battled for survival yesterday at The Tournament of Chiron in the Student Union Ballroom.

The University's Pioneer Valley Combat Club hosted the event which intermingles sport and fantasy. The participants play characters as well as compete in light weapons combat, a sport otherwise known as "boffers"

Combat Club members usually dress for tournaments in elaborate costumes reminiscent of medieval fashion.

Swords, the most common weapon, are made from plastic pipes covered with foam pipe tubing. Safety regulations guide the structure of all "weapons" including daggers, short swords and shields.

Rules enforced by marshals prohibit any violent contact. Tapping opponents' limbs disables them and tapping their head or body clinches victory. The Combat Club's emphasis on safety has enabled men and women of all sizes and abilities to participate.

TOM HALLER / COLLEGIAN

Engineering department employee John Meripan (left) battles senior COINS major Alan Nelson in Sunday's Battle of Chiron in the Student Union Ballroom.

"We create characters that we play, hence the names and costumes, and interact with each other as these characters. It's sort of like live, interactive, theatre-without-an-audience," a Combat Club flyer said.

Jennifer Arzola, a sophomore majoring in Social Thought on Political Economy, goes by her character's name, Jana Sword-Dancer, when at club events.

Arzola, now a UMass student joined the Combat Club last year while attending Mt. Holyoke College. Her character was recruited by the Amazons, a band of female warriors. Jana has proven her skill as a fighter and a leader. Jana's leader yesterday appointed her to take over command. Jana said she is excited about her new position but must guard against possible attacks.

The Pioneer Valley Combat Club gained status as a registered student organization in July 1988. But according to Jason Goodman, a senior English major, students had been playing buffers for many years before 1988.

Goodman said buffers is a physically demanding sport. "Once after a three-hour practice, I could not even walk up the stairs I was in so much pain," Goodman said.

The Combat Club hopes to increase membership and convince the University to initiate gym classes teaching boffers, Goodman said.

The Duke of Glenndale is the Combat Club's largest annual tournament. Shannon Slate, a co-founder of the club and a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, sponsors this event at the Slate Farm in Warren. Slate, also known as Prince Bob built a castle and a dungeon from plywood. The object of the event is to escape from these structures, which are equipped with fog machines, without being "killed" by enemies or traps.

Members of the Combat Club said they encourage diversity among the characters. There are Asian ninjas, Native American warriors, European royalty and even a cross dresser called the Queen of Buggery.

Students from high school, students from other New England colleges, and graduates from the University of Massachusetts also competed in yesterday's tournament.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, November 23, 1992

Blood Drive — The American Red Cross Blood Services is sponsoring a blood drive in the Campus Center, Room 101 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Meeting — There will be a meeting for students interested in changing their major to Exercise Science at 7 p.m. in Boyden Gym, Room 251.

Meeting — The University Democrats will hold a general interest meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 917. For more information contact the UDems office, 423 Students Union, at 545-0199. All are welcome.

Concert — The Union Program Council is sponsoring a concert, "Mongo Santa Maria," in the Student Union Ballroom at 8 p.m. Admission is $13 for students, and $15 for the general public, on the day of the show.

Lecture — The Distinguished Visitor's Program is sponsoring a lecture by Andrew Weil in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Tuesday, November 24, 1992

Notice — Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 325, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places on Monday, Nov. 30. Please be there!

Announcement — The Early Childhood Education Program is now accepting applications for admission to it's N-3 certification program. Applications are now available in the hallway outside of Room 109, Furcolo Hall. Please call Nancy Burnett at 545-0534 to arrange for an interview. Successful applicants must have an overall academic average of 2.75 and positive recommendations.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

ARRESTS

• Police arrested an 18-year-old UMass student on Thursday and charged him with receiving stolen goods. The man was arrested at Morrill Science Center at approximately 1 p.m., according to police.

THEFTS

• University police discovered a car with a smashed window in Lot 12 on Friday. The owner was brought to the lot and, after checking the contents of his car, informed police that six cassettes worth approximately $60 had been stolen.

• A man reported the theft of his bicycle from the Engineering Lab on Thursday evening, police said. The bicycle is valued at $200.

DISTURBANCES

• Staff Members from the Engineering Building reported receiving calls of a sexual nature from a man on Thursday morning, according to police. The calls were reported to police at 11:15 a.m.

• A fire alarm was falsely activated by an individual on the 16th floor of Washington Residence Hall on Friday, police said. Police are investigating the incident, which occurred at 1:45 a.m.

■ Housing error

continued from page 1

all said Davies. "I felt in the middle and couldn't help both groups. It really put quiet and loud groups at odds with each other.

Davies said the stress took a lot of study time away from himself as well as for students. He said he came home one night and found he had a meeting to attend with housing services. "It was really asinine that they'd give us an hour notice," Davies said. "They expected us to heed to their whims immediately."

"It was really ridiculous," said Merav Yarkoni, a senior Zoology major who now lives on the the quiet corridor. "A lot of people got hurt. People hate each other and there is a cold atmosphere. The hall is deserted."

"We had such a large number of students returning so we scurried in the last minute to make assignments to those who hadn't indicated they wanted the 24-hour quiet floor," said Housing Director Joseph Zannini. "We found ourselves in the horns of dilemma. Our mistake has been their good fortune."

In addition to the Brooks dilemma, Zannini said students living in Kennedy Residence Hall are to receive a rebate because the tower is in the process of closing and will not be open next semester. Those living in temporary housing on campus are also to receive rebates and have the highest priority when choosing a room next semester.

"All I wanted was my floor to be a community," said Davies. "They really screwed up in Whitmore," said Davies.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Collegian Elections for Spring 1993

APPLICATIONS ARE CURRENTLY BEING ACCEPTED FOR PAID POSITIONS

Editor-in-Chief • Managing Editor • Editorial Editor • News Editor • Arts & Living Editor • Sports Editor • Photo Editor • Women's Issues Editor • Black Affairs Editor • Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor • Third World Affairs Editor • Multicultural Affairs Editor • Night Editors • Copy Editors • Typists

Application deadline: Friday, Dec. 4 at 3 p.m.
Candidates Night: Sunday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m.
Elections will be held Monday, Dec. 7 from 9-5

- All eligible staff can vote in the elections for Editor-In-Chief, Managing Editor, and Editorial Editor.
- All other desk editors will be voted for by their current staff.
- Staff status = 6 articles, with at least 3 for a particular desk to be counted as staff of that desk.
- Staff lists will be checked at the voting box.
- Please see Managing Editor Brooke C. Wheeler for an application.
- This information is accurate as of Monday, November 23, 1992.

The Collegian is an E.O.E.

WINTER INTERSESSION • 1993
JANUARY 4 — JANUARY 16

Don't put your education on ice this winter break — enroll in UMass Lowell's Winter Intersession. This highly concentrated, two-week session is perfect if you want to earn college credit to get ahead in your educational program. And if you're enrolled in another university, it's a great way to earn transfer credits.

Credit Courses (3 credits) available in:
- Liberal Arts
- Sciences
- Mathematics
- Computers
- Social Sciences
- Management
- Music

Cost: $95/credit

Day classes: Mon-Sat, 9am-12:30pm
Evening classes: Mon-Fri, 6-9:30pm and Sat, 1-4:30pm

Make your winter break really count! For a Winter Intersession bulletin, call the Division of Continuing Education at (508) 934-2480. Or just fill out the coupon below and mail it to: University of Massachusetts Lowell, Division of Continuing Education, One University Avenue, Lowell, MA 01854.

UMass Lowell
Continuing Education

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Phone: ( ) _____
College _____

The University of Massachusetts Lowell is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Title IX Employer

AP

CAFE DICARLO

5-College Student Dinner Special

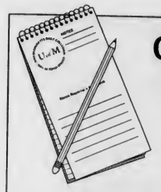
Choice of:
- Lasagna al Forno
- Chicken Parmigiana
- Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
- Pasta Primavera

Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.

Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992

71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

Local News



CAMPUS SHORTS

compiled by David Massey

Pinball people

Students say they are "fed up," "exasperated," and "tired" of mechanically-deficient video games and pinball games in the arcade next to the Hatch.

A flyer posted in the arcade, which has over 20 games, urges students to "COMPLAIN!! COMPLAIN!!" to the University Store about machines that are "rarely, if ever, fixed properly or promptly."

Most of the games appeared in proper working order last week but many students are nagging the University about pinball problems, joystick jiggling and the hardships of having to pay 50 cents for a game they say costs only a quarter elsewhere.

"Grand Lizard is probably offensive to reptiles not to mention being a really awful pinball game," scrawled one environmentally-conscious pinball player on a sheet of notebook paper affixed above the change machine in the arcade.

"Pinball machine that might be fun to play if it wasn't so sadly underpowered: T-2," said another arcade connoisseur. Students also believe the University's vendor is sluggish in bringing the latest arcade technology to UMass.

But broken-down machines appear to irk students the most. "The whole control panel on 'Street Fighter' was falling off," said Eric Marhafer, a sophomore exercise science major. "You could play for free for a day. They only fix them when it's taking money out of their pocket."

John Kuusisto, store manager of the University Store, blames arcade problems on the students. "There is some vandalism that happens. The machines don't break by themselves."

Miles Seaver, operations manager of the campus store, overlooks the Northamptom vendor who runs and repairs the campus arcade and brings weekly damage reports to Seaver. "Obviously, something has to be done to keep these machines going," he says, adding that the installation of video monitors to deter vandals is a possibility.

"To put it into perspective, it's really a very minor problem," he said.

Briefly speaking

Described as a "tribute to tomfoolery, a paean to prankery," a new book detailing the rich lore behind campus pranks and hijinks has a quick mention of an infamous incident involving the University of Massachusetts.

If at All Possible Involve a Cow: The Book of College Pranks, by Neil Steinberg (St. Martin's Press; 1992), documents the history of college pranks from the innocent days of kidnapping and rioting to the cutting-edge "techno-pranks" of today.

"The idea of locking somebody in a car trunk with a quart of grain alcohol and a cat in a bag does not resonate with humor," according to Steinberg. "A prank must have some sort of wit, some sort of sense of hubris punctuated or justice restored."

Page 207 of Steinberg's book discusses the "panty raid madness" of the early 1950s. It all began when 2,000 boys at the University of Missouri raided the girls' dorms on their own campus as well as at neighboring Stephens College. But the panty raid fad didn't pass UMass by.

Steinberg reports that at the University of Massachusetts, "the boys, not content to removing panties from dresser drawers, took to stripping them from their owners' bottoms, and the police had to step in."

In addition, rampages at Ohio and Berkeley forced campus officials to call in riot police. But the raids weren't just males ransacking the residences of females. At the University of Toledo, the women stole boxer shorts from a men's dorm.

If at All Possible Involve a Cow also details the more elaborate pranks staged at elite institutions. During the height of the Red Scare, Harvard students hoisted the Soviet flag over the U.S. Supreme Court, which caused one Congressman to fear the Bolsheviks had taken over. Overnight, MIT students transformed the dome over their library into a gigantic pumpkin.

If you have ideas for Campus Shorts, bring them down to David Massey in the Daily Collegian, located in the basement of the Campus Center.

Housing relents on room policy

Learning disabled students now eligible for fee waiver

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The administration implemented a new policy last week so learning disabled students can be granted a single room without extra charge as long as the Learning Disabled Services director says the students qualify.

Housing Services Director Joseph Zannini said, "Not all learning disabled students require single room accommodations. The decision will be based on the students need for organization and quiet."

"If a learning disabled student feels they need a single, they must go through Patrice Silver for a single room to be granted," Zannini said. He said only about 10 percent of the learning disabled students on campus would need a single.

The University's previous policy granted single rooms to learning disabled students who requested them, but charged them the additional $150 single room fee.

Kevin White, a junior environmental design major, said he believed the previous policy was discriminatory because physically disabled students were granted singles and didn't have to pay the additional $150 fee.

"Housing Services was not complying with the civil rights laws which protect the rights of all learning and physically disabled people," White said.

White said he and Silver discussed the issue with Housing Services for three semesters before it reached the higher-level administration.

"I am pleased with the new policy, but find it unfortunate that it took three semesters to change the policy. I guess that is just UMass politics," White said.

Zannini said Housing Services didn't charge physically disabled students the additional fee because the extra material and equipment they need in the room didn't leave enough space to accommodate another student.

Zannini said the decision to create a new policy was made after reviewing the materials produced by Silver. "The new evidence she presented to the administration prompted us to the change the previous policy," he said.

White said the new policy is a big step for learning and physically disabled students. "Now these students who qualify for a single room will definitely get the space they need to be successful at UMass," he said.

White said the next step is to get reimbursement for those learning disabled students who questioned the previous policy before the new policy was implemented.

Zannini said qualifying learning disabled students will be refunded the additional $150 they paid for their single rooms for this semester only.

Holistic healer looks for 'high'

Author to seek 'altered state of consciousness' at UM

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Dr. Andrew Weil, an expert on altered states of consciousness, medicinal plants and alternative and holistic medicine, will speak tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Winner of the American Health Book Award and the Medical Self Care Award for his book Health and Healing, Weil has written over five books on holistic healing. Weil's lecture tonight is sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Cancer is a preventable disease because we play an active role in healing ourselves, according to Weil.

"Meditation-visualization seems to be one way of suppressing or stimulation the immune system. You visualize healthy cells destroying cancer cells," Weil said.

Jim Spencer said in the Chicago Tribune that Weil frequently recommends visualization in addition to other controversial cures.

"Weil is so sure the mind can play an active role in healing that he frequently recommends 'visualization' as an adjunct to everything else," Spencer said.

Weil, a 1968 Havard Medical School graduate, said he believes that drugs are neither good nor bad. He has tried a wide range of mind-altering drugs and experiences from mangos, coca plants and mushrooms to solar eclipses, sweat lodges and magic. One does not need to take drugs to get a high, instead just by watching a solar eclipse a person can get a nonchemical high, Weil said.

"I'm willing to try anything once — if I'm fairly sure it won't kill me," Weil said to the Washington Post.

We should spend more time keeping people from becoming drug abusers through education, says Weil.

"Instead of wasting so much time, money and energy fighting the hopeless battle against existing drug abuse, society must begin to help people avoid becoming abusers in the first place," Weil wrote in his third book, Chocolate to Morphine.

COURTESY HOUGHTON MIFFLIN

Dr. Andrew Weil, co-author of "From Chocolate to Morphine," will be speaking tonight at Bowker Auditorium.

James Lardner of the Washington Post said Weil's focus is "the study of how and why human beings the world over are forever trying to change what's happening inside their brains."

"[Weil's] objective is the 'high' — a state of altered consciousness to be valued because it promotes a 'fuller use of the nervous system' and 'the emergence of unconscious forces long denied by our culture,'" said Richard Lingeman while reviewing Weil's book The Marriage of the Sun and Sky in the New York Times Book Review.

Police seize two after explosion of library doors

University police have arrested two students in connection with the Sunday morning explosion of a plate glass window near the entrance of the Tower Library.

Police patrolling the Student Union reportedly heard a "loud explosion" from the library at approximately 4 a.m., according to University spokesperson Karin Sherbin.

When they arrived at the scene, "some type of explosive device" had blown out the plate glass doors at the south main entrance to the library, causing about $500 in damage.

Two UMass students were arrested by police at the scene. David J. Paczkowski and Andy J. Yahner have been charged with attempting to set fire to a building by means of an explosive device, malicious damage with an explosive device, placing an explosive next to a building and malicious damage to a building.

They were scheduled to be arraigned today in Northampton District Court. The explosion is under investigation by the Community Disorders Unit of the UMass Public Safety Department.

—DAVID MASSEY

UM, WMECO join to spur business

By AARON-JOHN RICADELA
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts and Western Massachusetts Electric Company announced a partnership last Thursday which will spur regional manufacturing by combining UMass' top-notch polymer research facility with WMECO's experience and large customer base, according to a joint news release.

The partnership will combine the technical and analytical expertise of UMass and WMECO to better assist Western Massachusetts manufacturers in expanding markets and developing products, said Chancellor Richard O'Brien in a news release from Northeast Utilities of Hartford.

UMass and WMECO announced the partnership yesterday morning at Hardigg Industries, a container manufacturer in South Deerfield receiving assistance from both groups

"We want UMass to become an engine for economic growth in the area. We want to share the expertise we've developed on campus with employ

Turn to WMECO, page 6

Glory regiment to be remembered

Group starting Black Civil War re-enactment unit

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A group of residents here wants to make sure that a Black Civil War regiment, which was featured in the 1990 movie Glory, doesn't again fade into obscurity.

The newly formed Massachusetts 54th Regiment re-enactment group will portray a Black military unit from the War Between the States.

There are several 54th re-enactment units in other states, and the largest, from Washington, D.C., will be assisting South Carolina corps, its organizers said.

The original 54th was made up of free Blacks and former slaves, many of whom died in a July 18, 1863, attack on Battery Wagner, now Morris Island.

The commissioned officers for the 54th were White, including its commander, Col. Robert G. Shaw.

"Glory brought it home for me," said Joseph McGill Jr., a U.S. Park Service guide who is helping form the group.

The local re-enactment unit is a vision of McGill and Robert Bohrn, the proprietor of Moultrie Tavern and an avid hunter and collector of Civil War relics.

McGill, who will be a sergeant major in the new 54th, said he realized after seeing the movie that there weren't any local Black re-enactment units. He works at Fort Sumter and Fort Moultrie, where re-enactment groups occasionally take part in events and ceremonies.

History is missing some pieces without some representation of Black troops, McGill said.

Bohrn, who is White, will play Col. Shaw in the re-enactment. His role will mean swapping Confederate gray for Yankee blue. Bohrn has been a member of the Palmetto Brigade, a re-enactment group that portrays forces who fought for Dixie.

But he said he wanted to help with the 54th's re-enactment because it was an important side of history that hadn't been told.

"It's not only Black history, it's American history," Bohrn said.

Until Glory hit the screens, the Black fighting unit was relegated to forgotten pages of history, he said.

Americans must remember that more than 180,000 Blacks fought for "their freedom, their race and their country during the war," he said.

DiGeronimo Brothers
VICTORY Super Markets
10 University Drive - Amherst
WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES. VICTORY SUPER MARKETS ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.
STORE HOURS: Mon. - Sat. 7am-9pm Sundays Noon - 8pm
Prices Effective thru Friday, November 27, 1992.
We will be CLOSED Thursday, Nov. 26 Thanksgiving Day!
And Now Introducing at Our Amherst Victory... BayBank Xpress24 And... Quick Pay® or CHARGE IT
Give a little Christmas to our Community kids! Pick a gift tag from our Victory tree located at the checkouts. Shop for a girl or boy, and return your unwrapped gift and tag to the bin located by our tree. We will collect gifts until Dec. 19. The First Call agency in Amherst will help Santa distribute your gifts directly to the many less fortunate children of our community.
You Are Cordially Invited To... Amherst's Celebration of Lights
PLUS... Don't forget Amherst Greeting Card Day - Sat., Dec. 5.
Friday, Dec. 4, at 4:45pm on the Amherst Town Common •Tree Lighting •Caroling •Horse & Buggy Rides •Holiday Cheer and Featuring...
The UMASS MINUTEMEN MARCHING BAND
Marching from Campus to the Center of Town to meet the AMHERST JR. HIGH SCHOOL CHORUS
Raindate - Dec. 7th
SAVE 20% at over 30 Amherst Stores!
Grade A...Tom PERDUE Fresh Turkeys 16-24 Lb. Average With Pop-Up Timer! 59¢ Lb. LIMIT ONE PER CUSTOMER WITH A MINIMUM $10 PURCHASE EXCLUDING PRICE OF TURKEY
Fresh...WHOLE Chicken Breasts Victory's Own Grade A Family Pack (3 Lbs. or More) 99¢ Lb.
Wampler Longacre Frozen Self-Basting Tom Turkeys 16-24 Lb. Avg. LIMIT ONE PER CUSTOMER WITH A MINIMUM $10 PURCHASE EXCLUDING PRICE OF TURKEY 39¢ Lb.
Nestle Semi-Sweet Chocolate Morsels 12 Oz. Bag 2 For $3
Ocean Spray Cranberry Sauce Jellied CRANBERRY SAUCE 16 Oz. Can •Jellied •Whole 2 For $1
Breyers Ice Cream or Yogurt 1/2 Gallon Assorted Flavors $1.99
Prince Lasagna 16 Oz. Box 69¢
EXTRA LARGE Shell-On Shrimp 26-30 Count Previously Frozen $5.99 Lb.
Sweet...Green Calmeria or Red Emperor Grapes In Our Produce Dept... 79¢ Lb.

White males said victims of stereotype

BOSTON (AP) — Some White men have protested that affirmative action has hurt their wallets. Now others say the amount of attention paid to minorities and women has just plain hurts their feelings.

"The only acceptable super-villain these days is a middle-aged Protestant White banker," said George Santiccioli of Newton, a computer consultant who is writing a cookbook.

"Almost by definition we are jerks," said Asa Baber, who writes the "Men" column in Playboy magazine and describes himself as an "embattled White man."

Several other White men, who declined to be named, told The Boston Sunday Globe that they, too, felt slighted as male Caucasians.

Some felt they had been the victims of sexist and racist humor or their views were discounted because they were White men. The complaints come against a background of battles for greater diversity in college curriculums and in the workplace, the newspaper reported.

Terry West, a 44-year-old historian with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service, said: "All I want is an acknowledgment of our pain, acknowledgment of the price we have paid. Acknowledgment would go a long way to healing the wounds."

Federick Lynch, author of Invisible Victims: White Males and the Crisis of Affirmitive Action, says White men often keep to themselves the belief that they've been wronged, partly because of fear.

"It's like a new kind of McCarthyism," he said. "White men are scared that if they complain they'll be tagged as racist and sexist. To complain is to conform to the stereotype."

Not everybody thinks being a White man is so tough, however.

Civil rights activist Julian Bond said the complaints were the "most egregious example of whining self-pity to come down the path in a long, long time."

"White men have had, and do have, greater opportunity and unparalleled privilege in this country. So to hear complaints from this population just doesn't wash," Bond said.

"White men don't need a support group because they already have one," he said. "It's called the United States of America."

Left and Right riot in Germany

By MARK FRITZ
Associated Press

BERLIN — Swinging baseball bats and setting fires, leftist radicals have suddenly seized a starring role in Germany's running saga of brutal neo-Nazis and beleaguered foreigners.

During the weekend, leftists and rightist gangs dueled with knives, baseball bats, flare guns and rocks in at least five German towns, while rightists assaulted foreigners in several others.

One man was killed, more than a dozen seriously hurt and 25 arrested during melees that included subway knifings, a street rumble, two bar brawls, the siege of a leftist commune and random attacks on unlucky passerby and their cars.

Neo-Nazis attacks on foreigners have risen since 1990, the year Germany reunited. But there has been a recent increase in violent counter-assaults by Germany's veteran leftist groups, who proclaim themselves friends of foreigners.

Leftists disrupted an anti-racism rally that drew 500,000 people in Berlin on Nov. 8 by throwing eggs at Chancellor Helmut Kohl and President Richerd von Weizsaecker.

The leader of Kohl's parliamentary faction, Christian Democrat Juergen Ruttgers, said new evidence indicates leftists and rightists are increasingly mobilizing showdowns with each other.

"The belief that available laws are adequate is a flight from reality," he wrote in Sunday's Frankfurter Allegemeine newspaper.

To fight rightist violence, the government has focused on ways to toughen the liberal asylum law that has allowed a record number of foreigners into the country.

Conservatives blame the influx for igniting right-wing hate attacks; liberals say blaming foreigners just encourages the neo-Nazis.

Reflecting government helplessness, Germany's top justice official suggested a vague "people's initiative" — a sort of nonbinding referendum — asking citizens what lawmakers should do.

"A people's initiative means Parliament must concern itself with the public's ideas and legal recommendations," Justice Minister Sabine Leutheusser-Schnarrenberger told the magazine Bunte on Sunday. She said such a measure would eliminate lawmakers' foot-dragging.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

A writer's toast to Exely

Chris J. PETROPOULOS

One of the minor demons plaguing me right now is actually a leftover from last semester. I took a course called "Comedy in Theory and Practice," but I always referred to it as "Calmeddy calmeddy calmeddie." It's a very good course. I advise everyone to take it, but it did make me realize that all comedy is just a thinly veiled murderous attempt to protect our minds from the empty, freezing, reptilian horror that is modern life.

We had to do a large final paper for the course on a particular work or works. I decided to write on the novels of Fredrick Exely, three very funny semi-autobiographical novels titled A Fan's Notes, Pages from a Cold Island and Last Notes from Home. In them, Exely casts himself as his main character and narrator. He records the slow decay, insanity and hopelessness of his own life and the nation's, idolizes Frank Gifford, Steve Owen and Edmund Burke, goes in and out of mental institutions, constantly drinks Smirnoff Red with tonic water, blunders through two marriages and two divorces, castigates Gloria Steinem, watches his older brother die, and mocks himself and everything with a fierceness that is magnificent to behold.

Anyway, I started writing the paper and it was going well. The professor told us to take our time with these papers, even to work on them over the summer if we wanted. This appealed to me, thinking that working on the paper while working at the liquor store would put me in the right frame of mind. And I could talk to Murph about it. He's an expert on Exely.

The endeavor became a demon when Fredrick Exely died June 17.

Murph called me. He said, "Exely's dead." I said, "Bull." He said, "No, he's really dead." That night we drank vats of Smirnoff Red with tonic water, toasting the great, dead man.

Exely was 63. He had suffered two strokes and was in a lot of pain before he died. He never wrote anything else because he was busy getting drunk with the money his three books made. Editors considered him unemployable because he was mad.

I began to fret. Exely's death completely changed what I wanted to do with the paper. I wanted to drive to Alexandria Bay, get some facts about his life and death and write a tribute piece. But this would not allow me to analyze his books, which I was supposed to do. To attempt both would be a huge undertaking, easily hundreds of pages long. The paper was to be 30 pages, maximum. Then I got back here to UMass. Classes began, my war started up again. I forgot about the paper.

But now I'm thinking about it. Late at night I look at Exely's books on the shelf and say to myself, "You must write the paper. Get up and write the paper." I get up, begin paging through the books, writing things down, and suddenly I am paralyzed with remorse. I cannot begin to represent the deep hurting and high comedy in those pages. I cannot do justice to what this man did with his 63 lousy years. I usually throw the notebook down and read, starting at a random place. Daylight finds me sprawled among the books and no closer to success.

Exely was a great man and he is dead. You should read his books (they are in the Tower library, if you are brave enough to go there) and you should all learn to drink Smirnoff Red with tonic water. Both these things would be good for all of you.

Chris J. Petropoulos is a Collegian columnist.

Labels have deep meaning

Jason McDONALD

It would seem in this era of condemnation of political correctness also comes the condemnation of the use of so-called "labels."

"Labels don't matter!"

"Don't label me!"

"What difference do labels make?"

Many of these arguments are valid as labels have been used to hurt, demean and categorize people against their will.

Very often, however, I hear this argument applied to gay men, lesbians and bisexuals.

"Why do you have to call yourself gay, lesbian or bisexual?"

"Can't we just be people?"

Or my personal favorite: "Can't we just be sexual?"

For many gay men, lesbians and bisexuals, however, this label goes beyond being a simple word of categorization, but instead can often be intrinsic to our identities.

Prior to the Gay/Queer Liberation movement, there was not word other than "homosexual" for GLB people to call themselves. Even then, use of the word "homosexual" was mostly by the medical community to describe deviant sexual behavior.

To know there was a word to describe you, to know that you were not alone in your feelings, to know that there were others like you — when the word "gay" or "lesbian" came into use, it helped to end the isolation felt by many gay men and lesbians.

It is also important to point out that it is incorrect to say, "Why can't we all be sexual?" because many of us are not simply "sexual." I am a gay man; I am sexually attracted to other men only; I am not simply "sexual."

We are raised in a society where from the time we are born we are expected to be heterosexual. We are gender-typed at birth, and assumed to be heterosexual.

Every television show, every magazine ad, every commercial, every aspect of society is geared toward heterosexuals with the unspoken assumption that we are all heterosexual.

When a teenager comes to realize that his or her feelings do not fit this expected societal norm, he or she must make a decision regarding his or her sexuality.

We are not raised in a society where people are free to be whatever they wish to be. We do not live in a society free of hate and prejudice, where people can be proud of their identity or culture without the fear of oppression and violence.

People are expected to be heterosexual. When people meet someone new, they assume he or she is heterosexual.

The words "gay" and "lesbian" have come to mean far more than sexual behavior. "Gays" and "lesbians" have formed whole communities, developed our own heroes, have reclaimed our history, have created our own culture.

Being able to call oneself "gay" or "lesbian" is not demeaning oneself through the use of a label, but often an assertion of pride and identity.

I do not presuppose that I speak for all GLB people. I am sure many GLB people do not wish to label themselves, as many are estranged from what has come to be GLB culture.

I simply ask that people stop condemning those who take pride in their identity, stop condemning those who call themselves "gay," "lesbian" or "bisexual," and stop condemning those to whom it matters whether someone is "gay." "lesbian" or "bisexual."

Jason McDonald is a Collegian staff member.

Porn confuses fantasy and reality

This is in response to Jonathan Linder (Collegian, Nov. 19) — a man who claims "experience" with pornography as a buyer, which makes him understand its effects. Sorry, John, the fact you buy pornographic material shows how little you know.

Violence is used in pornography to add a "kick" to the pictures, so when one gets tired of looking at nude women, he has the option to be turned on by watching women suffer. This behavior becomes normalized and this is the man's new image of women and their purpose. Think about it. It's widely known that TV shows and commercials change people's views about relationships and sex. Again, people will alter their lives to the "normal" image given by TV. The best example of this is the relationship between the images of perfect women on TV and eating disorders. As women (and more recently, men) see models and the typical "norm," they change their life style to create that image for themselves. It's no different for pornography!

When you show women being tied up, enjoying rape and being abused otherwise, buyers of pornography interpret these images as reality. Sorry, John, but you can't tell those who don't know the difference between fantasy and reality to "stay away and keep your mouth shut," because those people are the buyers of pornography.

The writer went on to say he feels "sorry for the people who view sex as a disgusting thing and miss all the beauty of it," and "people should derive joy from viewing it (pornography) and if they don't, they can change the channel or just shut it off."

Pornography doesn't show the beauty of sex. It depicts women as objects to be dominated, overpowered and physically hurt. Maybe some can change the channel, but what can you say to the girlfriend, wife or daughter unable to escape the wrath of pornography on their lives? "Enjoy it; it's only a fantasy?" Unlike other material protected under the First Amendment, pornography can result in the violation of a woman's civil rights. Along with the fact pornography is also filled with racist and homophobic trash, should be enough to discourage buying it.

Allen Hale
Orchard Hill

Name-borrowing isn't very funny

Under normal circumstances, I might have found "Charles A. Hazlett's" letter on the worship of evil to be slightly amusing (Collegian, Nov. 19). Unfortunately, I, the only Charles A. Hazlett at UMass, did not write this letter. It was submitted by another individual under my name and without my knowledge or consent.

I am unable to find the humor in this action. The final phrase in the letter, "I am my friends will be forced to take matters into our own hands," could be construed as a threat of violence, vandalism, etc.

I have enough difficulties without having to worry about some self-appointed comedian writing under my name.

Seriously, grow up. If you want to write satire, fine. But sign your own name to the article, instead of childishly signing someone else's name.

Charles A. Hazlett
Central

Video images create dangerous expectations

Censorship is not the answer. Education is. Pornography has been said to be harmless, fun, safe sex, and the leading cause of sexual violence against women. My first lesson on external female anatomy came in the form of a centerfold so how bad could I think it is?

My ex-girlfriend and my best friend, both of whom I love very much, and three other girls confided in me that they were date raped. This is a big problem. Everyone at this school knows of someone who had this type experience. Most women never fully get over it. Many see psychologists for years for a phenomenal expense of time and money. All because of one horrible incident.

MTV is dangerous. What could be wrong with those Robert Palmer and ZZ Top videos, or any that show a girl in tight clothes, only part of her at a time? Hey, I like it and most American men do. There is a problem when you see a great deal of hot-looking women for short spans of time. Your expectations of how women should look go up and your image of the ultimate woman changes to one who is not completely dressed with a perfect body.

The videos show ideal women, and they all look aroused, like the Billy Idol video with a 13-year-old coming on to a 30-year-old man, like the Robert Palmer videos, the ZZ Top videos... the list of videos with sexy, turned-on girls is never-ending. It seems now that a good video is one with an ideal-looking, hot-to-trot chick who is ready for sex without anyone even asking her. Just walk over, make eye contact and she will do anything for you. This is not a hard concept to grasp; we've all seen the videos. The end result: men want women to be this way. We want her to be wicked hot, aroused and willing. Just a quickie and never call her again — what an ego boost. Yes, many men are looking for relationships but most would have to say they couldn't pass up an opportunity like this.

Why is this important? Because often she is not willing. Because once you get to Friday night with a half-drunk horny guy he is ready to force the situation. He is ready to smile a lot and use all sorts of trickery to get her alone in his room or hers. He is ready to take his ideal drunk girl who (he thinks) definitely wants it too and force her down on the bed. He is ready to ignores her cries, telling himself, "Almost, almost..." He is ready to make the final move she might never get over, the final move that will force her to be scared all the time or deny the whole thing.

Mike Einhorn
Southwest

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

RAKE IN THE '90s – Grounds worker Dashu Pielock cleans up the campus with his mega leaf–blower.

Political fever runs rampant at Harvard U.

CAMBRIDGE (AP) — When Harvard academic Robert Reich appeared on a national news program Sunday and deflected questions on president-elect Bill Clinton's economic plans, he described himself as a "lowly staffer."

Reich, a member of Clinton's transition team, said during his appearance on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" that he was "basically putting things together for the governor."

But there are plenty of professors around Harvard Yard who would like such a "lowly" job and are angling for a post in the coming Clinton administration, observers say.

"There's a lot of networking going on," said Marvin Kalb, a former network correspondent and now director of the Joan Shorenstein Barone Center at the Kennedy School of Government.

"There's a pregnant nature of this moment: Everyone is ready to pop, ideas are precious, everybody's baby is brilliant," Kalb told the Boston Sunday Globe.

"The key is visibility. Anyway you get it, just so your name pops up," Dan Fenn, former director of the Kennedy Library and a staff assistant to President John F. Kennedy during the transition in 1960.

"The bug bites a lot of people at the same time," said Fenn, who now teaches at the Kennedy School.

Fenn also said networking was going on and "academic institutions are intensely political places, so (academics) are super at it."

Harvard long has had a reputation as a place where presidents could draw academic expertise.

George Bush tagged the Kennedy School the "Harvard Boutique" in 1988. But a number of people with Kennedy School ties have served in recent Republican administrations, including budget director Richard Darman, former Attorney General Richard Thronburgh and domestic policy adviser Roger Porter.

Some of those vying for administration jobs might not even really want one, observers say.

COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN

■ WMECO

continued from page 3

ers who are continuously looking for an advancement that will give them a significant technical edge in their industries," said O'Brien.

The partnership will prepare strategic plans for Western Mass. manufacturers; map the region's available infrastructure including water and sewer lines, railroads, highways and airports; and promote the UMass department of polymer science to expand the regional plastics industry.

Other programs identified include conservation and product diversification programs, and use of UMass as a central information center among businesses.

O'Brien said the University and WMECO both have engineering and analytical capabilities available to regional businesses.

WMECO, which expects to commit up to $150,000 to the joint effort through 1993, serves 192,000 customers in 59 Western Mass. towns, including Springfield, Greenfield and Pittsfield.

The company has over a decade of experience in energy conservation and has over 40 representatives who meet regularly with regional employers, and complements UMass well, according to WMECO Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer Robert G. Abair.

He said the new financial commitment joins an expected $9 million annual expenditure for industrial customers.

UMass is the largest publicly funded research university in New England, with $63 million in externally funded research. The Amherst campus ranks 21st among the nation's top 100 research institutions in on-campus Ph.Ds.

The University will house the largest polymer science laboratory in the United States when the Silvio O. Conte National Polymer Center opens in 1994.

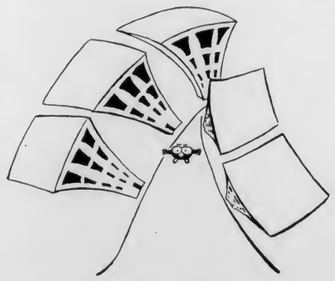
Abair said WMECO and UMass would work with regional chambers of commerce and economic authorities.

"We envision a major, comprehensive effort to attract businesses to the region, and help the competitiveness, technical edge, and profitability of businesses already here," said Abair.

The following Physics course was inadvertantly omitted from the Preregistration Guidebook. This course will be offered in Spring '93

Course # / Name	Sched. #	Time	Location
117 (PS) /Nuclear Energy	555199	MWF 9:05	Has. 228

Information Data Bank



We can help make a large and seemingly complex university a little easier to find your way around in.

545-1555

2nd Floor Lobby-Whitmore

Grand Opening

November 1, 1992

THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon

Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

Arts & Living

Hollywood eyes the kids this holiday season

• An outrageous Robin Williams shines in the charming and clever Aladdin

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Disney has struck gold again. In the new exhilaratingly enjoyable Aladdin, Walt and his pals have created a brilliant concoction of animated splendor and excitement.

Eschewing the timeless quality of its animated forbearers, Aladdin takes glorious risks, including a heap of '90s pop culture references, a outrageous voice performance by Robin Williams and some thrilling computer generated effects that deliver a magnificent magic carpet ride of a movie. This Disney instant-classic also just might impress and entertain the adults more than the kids.

Aladdin takes the ancient tale of the boy, the lamp and the genie and puts a crafty, clever spin on it. By the time Robin Williams breezes in midway through the tale as a wild genie, Aladdin has already won your heart (insert your own groan here if you must).

This is much more of an adventure tale with just the right amount of romance. With toe-tapping songs and delightful, wondrous animation, Aladdin is one-part old-fashioned cartoon fun and one-part '90s smart-aleck freshness.

But Disney doesn't veer too far from its classic formula. There's the traditional line between good and evil. On the good side there's a dandy hero, a 'street rat' named Ali and his sidekick monkey, Abu. He's flanked by a very independent Princess Jasmine, a nifty magic carpet and, of course, the genie.

Disney has cooked up a stellar villain in the evil Jafar, whose angular face and devilish moustache put him in the realm of Cruella De Ville and the nasty queen from Snow White. He's given a naughty parrot-in-crime (an inspired Gilbert Godfried) and enough dastardly motives to make him one of Disney's most potent villains.

Aladdin hits its manic high the second Robin Williams' blue genie pops out of his lamp confines. Spiraling into new improvisational and imprisonable heights, Williams proves that even a cartoon can't contain his boisterous sense of humor. He's all over the place, bursting in and out of hilarious impressions (Arsenio Hall, Robert DeNiro, Jack Nicholson, among others) and wild abandon — he's a small opera of comic wonder.

With smart, contemporary references that more than once show the cutting vein of say, The Simpsons, Aladdin even pokes fun at Disney untouchables like Pinocchio and Sebastian the crab from The Little Mermaid. This Aladdin is hipper than ever.

Disney also takes advantage of new techniques in computer animation, especially in a marvelous magic carpet ride through a self-destructing cave. This rivals a similar sequence in last year's Feivel Goes West and even live action fare such as Raiders of the Lost Ark.

While it doesn't approach the romantic scope of Beauty and the Beast, Aladdin is a worthy follow-up. High marks go to Disney, who instead of repeating the successful formula of Beauty, opted to take animated risks.

Turn to ALADDIN, page 8

• Home Alone 2 gets lost in a sea of predictable gags and major deja vu

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

Prior to the holiday release of Home Alone 2: Lost in New York, it seemed that this sequel had every intention of being a hysterical comedy like its predecessor, Home Alone, which grossed an astonishing $285 million domestically. Instead, John Hughes, king of youth comedies, has made Home Alone 2 a brainless comedy which at times is so stupid that I felt like an idiot for watching a film that caters to a kindergarten mentality.

Home Alone 2 reunites audiences with Macaulay Culkin's Kevin McCallister. Kevin may be a few inches taller this time around, but puberty hasn't quite kicked in yet. However, with his little backpack strapped on, Kevin still dons the "Grinch Who Stole Christmas" grimace.

This time around the McCallister family loses their son while they are rushing to catch a flight to Miami for their Christmas vacation. At the airport, Kevin mistakes the wrong man for his father as he jets through the O'hare terminal to catch up with the family. Instead, little Kevin winds up on a flight to New York City.

Of course, the McCallister's seats on the Miami flight were not next to each other, so that was their excuse for not knowing that they lost a child at America's busiest airport.

Once in the Manhattan, the little Chicago native decides that he'll take a bite out of the Big Apple by setting up his base at the opulent Plaza Hotel, where he gets a suite using his father's Visa card.

At the Plaza, Kevin encounters an ever-so-New York concierge played remarkably by Tim Curry (The Rocky Horror Picture Show). Curry's performance is similar to Pretty Woman's Regent Beverly Wilshire concierge.

Both were curious about their guests, i.e. little kid with daddy's Visa and a drop-dead gorgeous Sunset Strip hooker with her "uncle's" cash and plastic.

Dominating the elevators of the Plaza Hotel is Saturday Night Live's Rob Schneider. This slick, tip-desiring bellboy is quick to carry Kevin's "heavy" backpack in hope of a tip. How typical of a New Yorker, let alone a bellboy.

Kevin is so sly that with the aid of a small tape recorder he is able to fool the lady at the reservations desk and other Plaza workers into thinking that he is with his father.

Home Alone 2 makes the mistake of duplicating the first film by having Kevin take over another home, only this time it's the Manhattan town house of his aunt and uncle.

Once again the little prince tries to defend his new found castle by resurrecting smart-aleck booby traps for Marv and Harry. Hey, did the producers of The Goonies consult with Kevin to make those smart and sly booby traps for their mid-'80s flick?

Coincidentally, the "Wet Bandits" reprise their roles, both Oscar winner Joe Pesci (Goodfellas) and Daniel Stern (City Slickers) return. It seems Harry and Marv have escaped from prison and have landed themselves in the same city that Kevin is in. How Hollywood!

Turn to HOME ALONE 2, page 8

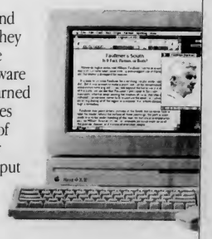
Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:
The holiday gift you can really use.

Tell your folks that more college students choose Macintosh than any other computer. They'd want you to be in good company.

Ask for an Apple® Macintosh® computer this holiday season and join all of the students who've discovered that no matter what they do, Macintosh helps them do it better and faster. That's because Macintosh is so easy to use. And the thousands of available software applications work in a single, consistent way. So once you've learned one, you're well on your way to learning them all. The advantages of Macintosh don't end when school does. In fact, the majority of Fortune 1000 companies use Macintosh computers.* So ask your Apple Campus Reseller to help you choose which Macintosh to put at the top of your holiday gift list.

Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.



UNIVERSITY STORE

CAMPUS CENTER
545-2619

MONDAY - FRIDAY 9AM-5 PM
SATURDAY 11AM-3PM

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. MS-DOS is a registered trademark, and Windows a trademark, of Microsoft Corporation. *Based on a survey conducted by Computer Intelligence, 1991

Young Turk rocks corners of N.E. 2ND AVE.

By CALEB COCHRAN
Collegian Staff

N.E. 2ND AVE.
Young Turk
Virgin Records

Young who? From the people who brought you Young M.C., Neil Young, and Fine Young Cannibals, it's Young Turk, a brash new band from Miami that has a word or two for the rock 'n' roll community.

"We just want to make the music that we want to make, and as long as we like it, we're happy," says lead singer Rhett O'Neil. With N.E. 2ND AVE., Young Turk is bound to make many music fans happy as well.

The first track on the album, mockingly titled "The Saddest Song," is an upbeat tune which jump-starts the album with O'Neil's raw vocals and the guitars of Mike Alexander and 17-year-old Eddie Oliva. The song reeks of happiness, with vocals definitely influenced by Mick Jagger and the Red Hot Chili Peppers' Anthony Kiedis, among others. The band's inexperience makes for a rather unpolished sound, but this only adds to the song's appeal.

"Wine," the album's second offering, is another guitar-heavy piece. Again, O'Neil's vocals rage, and the band's free-flowing mood creates the impression that they are having a lot of fun.

The best song on N.E. 2ND AVE. is "I'll Be Around," a pleasant track which captures the band's philosophy of creating self-satisfying, fun-filled, happy music. O'Neil again shows the versatility of his voice, and Alexander, Oliva, and bassist Billy McKelvy are all impressive in providing O'Neil's instrumental accompaniment.

Another fantastic song is "Of All Times To Leave," an instrumental by Oliva and Alexander which runs only about a minute and a half but perfectly captures the spirit of its title. The music here is so good that it's a shame the band didn't try to develop it into a full length song. The feeling of sadness created here is very tangible, and Oliva, the band's newest member, shows tremendous maturity for such a young guitarist.

Although N.E. 2ND AVE. includes plenty of great rock 'n' roll, it is also hampered at times by songs that don't mesh well with the style of the band, as well as a few songs that no band should attempt to record.

"Blue Monday" is one tune that definitely should have been left off this album. It begins with psychedelic, distorted vocals, then moves into a strange tempo which sounds something like a cassette tape as it begins to go into a frenzy just before the tape deck eats it. It's a very weird song, but not in a good way, not in a Nirvana or Red Hot Chili Peppers kind of way. It's weird, it's awful, and whatever the band was trying to accomplish with this piece doesn't work.

Another tune which fails miserably is "What About You." The song begins with a by-the-book, gratuitous guitar solo which leads into a loud, brash, terrible song. One gets the feeling that O'Neil is trying to sound like an inexperienced, unpolished vocalist. In the process, he ends up sounding like garbage.

In "Another Man's Dream," the basic feeling the listener gets is that O'Neil is still trying to find his own niche with his voice. He sounds here like an impersonator of Robert Plant and Jagger all rolled up in one. In short, this tune

Turn to TURK, page 10

■ Home Alone 2

continued from page 7

While roaming New York's Central Park, Kevin stumbles upon a pigeon-loving bag-lady played by Brenda Ficker, who won an Oscar for My Left Foot. She helps out Kevin in his plight against the "Wet Bandits" just before he teaches her the spirit of Christmas. Remember the old man-next door neighbor from the first Home Alone? Apparently so have the writers.

The elementary laughs Kevin gets from sabotaging Marv and Harry only reinforce that Home Alone 2 is a carbon copy of Home Alone. Only this time around he's in a different house, in a different city, and uses more complicated pranks like staple guns, kerosene, paint cans, tool chests, bricks and green goop.

The violence used this time around is crueler, and on the surface it may seem funny, but if I was a parent, I'd be wary of letting my kids see much of the violence used in a film that is intended to make audiences laugh.

For all those little kids that want Macaulay Culkin as a playmate, they'll love this epic piece of comic trash. As for some adults, the film's absurd stupidity may you feel almost obligated to laugh (at least for the kid's sake). But if I had a choice, I'd rather stay home alone.

■ Aladdin

continued from page 7

The songs, some by Alan Mencken and the late Howard Ashman (both won Oscars for Mermaid and Beauty), and others by Mencken and lyricist Tim Rice (Evita), aren't as memorable as those in Beauty, yet they're far from forgettable. The songs are fun and sappy, but who cares?

Aladdin is far less cartoonish than something like the Home Alone films, and it's mature enough to appeal to just about any audience. If you think "cartoons" are beneath you, let it be known that this is no Tom and Jerry. Aladdin is both adept comedy and stylized animation — besides, it's the most fun you'll have at a G-rated movie without doing anything illegal.

Grade: B+

SKI
3RD ANNUAL
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging
(Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsored By Lobdell's, Mt. Sutton and Molson
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Group Leader Discounts
Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 & Springbreak '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton /Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Mongo Santamaria and Charlie SePulveda
Nov 23rd 1992
Student Union Ballroom UMASS 8pm
Tix $12 UMASS $14 Other
Day Of Show: $13 UMASS $15 Other
Tix Available at: Tix Unlimited, For The Record, & Main St. Records
UPC Productions AND AHORA

Winter Session 1993
Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!
Register for Winter Session classes.
Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.
So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.
WINTER SESSION:
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.
Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.
January 4-25

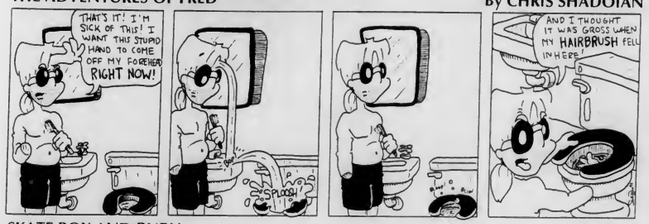
CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

URBAN SHOCKER By DEG

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN



SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"One good thing about living in this age — all the caves are brand new."

Quote of the Day

"If you do not raise your eyes, you will think you are the highest point."
– Antonio Porchia

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Review your life, your accomplishments and anything else that could provide a guidepost to the future. Take your time when making up your mind about a romantic relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Electrifying but pleasant news could put a bounce in your step this morning. Think positive if trying to find a solution to a ticklish problem. There is a way to get what you need.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could feel uncomfortable about someone's interest in you. Trust your instincts. Don't commit until you find out more about a business proposal.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Careful handling of financial transactions is essential. Leave nothing to chance. Your associates must be kept happy to ensure continued cooperation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romance heats up. Hopeful or returns on investments could fall short of the mark. Perhaps you are expecting too much too soon. Wait a little while before deciding whether to cut your losses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A profitable turn of events should make this a wonderful day. Avoid sarcasm in your conversations with co-workers. Your quirky sense of humor could be misunderstood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent period for launching new financial projects. You perform more efficiently, thanks to an older person's helpful hint. Keep detailed records of expenses.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be careful not to let success go to your head. Think twice before pulling up stakes. It's probably wiser to stay put for the next few months. Pursue an artistic hobby.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not overlook the interests of your allies when it comes to financial manipulations. Ignoring their priorities could cause a serious rift.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those in science, journalism or the arts should have an especially rewarding week. Make certain you have a contingency plan in case of an emergency.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A good day's work should add up to higher financial returns. A difference of opinion could initiate passions. Reason wins the day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You have an opportunity to view your life from a totally different perspective. Impending changes could be a source of concern. Eventually they will bring you greater happiness.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Reverberate
5 Sandal feature
10 Equips
14 Pro —
15 Not here
16 Exploit
17 Give too great a work load
19 Teens' problem
20 Tolerate
21 Extol
23 Cyprinoid fish
24 Beatle song
25 Indeed!
29 Type of exam
31 Little one
34 Transgressed
35 Endowment
36 Manipulate
37 Finesse
38 Worry from the IRS
39 Stole
40 Ember
41 Broadcast
42 Feudal lord
43 Biblical name
44 Obscure
45 Paul Hogan role
46 Joyce Carol Oates novel
48 Study
49 Generous one
52 Threadbare
56 Per person
57 Of an emperor
60 Former theater org.
61 Treasura —
62 Tree trunk
63 Lad's friend
64 Passover meal
65 Wight, for one

DOWN
1 Con's opposite
2 Roof edge
3 " — o'clock scholar"
4 Fat
5 Substantial
6 Triad
7 Scarlet
8 Region
9 Inclination
10 Heading for —
11 Taken again
12 Fest or fold lead-in 13 Part of a flower
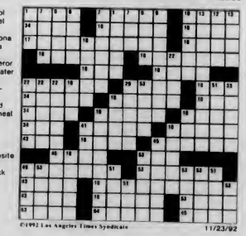
18 Construct
22 Ancient Briton
25 Do the driveway over
26 Obliterate
27 I.M. Pei et al
28 Allow
29 Directive
30 Foray
32 Type of orange
33 Plains Indian dwelling
35 Teacher, of a sort
38 Maladies
39 Triumph
41 Foster
42 Pounce
45 Middleman
47 Sunken fences
48 Went by car
49 Colorful duck
50 Frog genus
51 Unusual
53 Mongolian desert
54 Son of Seth
55 Aromatic herb
58 Cluster of seals
59 So-so grade

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

H	A	G	S			D	A	M	A		A	B	E	D
I	C	O	M		S	A	B	I	N		M	O	R	E
S	H	O	E	S	T	R	I	N	G		B	O	N	E
S	H	E	E	A		E	X	I	S	T		O	T	O
		Z	A	C				L	O	L	L			L
E	S	S	E	N	E		A	S	T	A	I	N	S
A	T	E		T	O	L	L		O	N	C	E
A	R	O	M	A	S		M	O	O	T		T	K	T	S
L	O	D	G	E		A	S	T	R	O		E	E	S
	L	O	A	N			S	A	G		A	U	R	A
L	I	S		M	A	K	E		E	R	A	S	E	D
T	A	R	I	F		D	I	D		C	I	T	E	D
D	R	E	I		T	E	A	R	Y		D	A	R	E
S	P	E	C		S	E	N	S			A	R	O	W

11/23/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/23/92

Today's Staff
Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Sarah LeVèsque
PhotoTechnician ..... Tom Haller
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Jason George, Challis Meehan

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Phishburger	Chicken Stir Fry
Hot Beef Sandwich	Spaghetti w/Sausage
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Ghotiburger	Chicken Stir Fry
Bean Corn Tomato	Spaghetti w/Tofu Balls

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Turk

continued from page 8

doesn't work either.

"Farewell To Friends" is a slow ballad which sounds like an imitation of any of the ballads from the Rolling Stones' Tattoo You. Although O'Neil's resemblance to Jagger is uncanny at times, this tune is basically a flop as well.

While it is certainly not without its faults, N.E. 2ND AVE. is still a success. Young Turk is a very young band, and this album shows both the good and bad results of the band's youth. At times, the enthusiasm and vigor that Young Turk play with are intoxicating. At other times, experiments in both vocal and instrumental style don't quite work.

N.E. 2ND AVE. is a rock 'n' roll extravaganza, complete with tremendous successes as well as a few flops. With their first album under their belt, Young Turk should have the confidence to make great strides in the music world in the future.

field hockey

continued from page 12

Borges said. "It could have been a goal."

With the Minutewomen's spirits broken, Iowa put things away with less than a minute left. Heather Bryant, wide open on the left side, blasted a shot into the top of the cage to give Iowa the 3-1 final.

"We didn't overlook UMass today. Absolutely not," said Beglin. "I knew UMass was a good team. You don't get to be 21-1 if you're not. They have a very good team, and we had a good game plan that I knew would eventually work."

The game could have swung to either extreme: Iowa could have easily won 7-1 and UMass, with a few breaks, could have held on. Scott's performance in net kept the Hawkeyes at bay, and while the scoreboard may not show it, the senior played one of her most outstanding games of the season.

In addition to stopping a Iowa penalty corner, which tabulated 53 goals this season, she stopped two breakaways, one a true breakaway, and kept UMass in the game.

As for the upset, it almost happened. Instead, Iowa went one to meet two-time defending national champion Old Dominion (24-0) who crushed North Carolina 5-0 on Saturday while UMass watched from the stands.

The Minutewomen finished where they were supposed to: in third place. Hixon said this year's squad, her first Final Four team since 1987, was special.

"They are competitors, without a doubt," she said. "what separates them from my other teams is that they make good decisions and stay with the game plan. They're fighters, they fought to the end.

"Everyone enjoys each other's company," she said. "They're all quality people, they've accepted each other's differences and have been able to deal with the everyday distractions. They've handled themselves extremely well."

Often the difference between a victory and defeat is small. That was certainly the case Saturday. Massachusetts almost played as well as Iowa, but almost just wasn't good enough.

SPACE FOR RENT. Collegian Advertising. 545-3500.

What is a Textbook Buyback?

Three times during each semester the Textbook Annex brings in a wholesaler to buy textbooks from students. Wholesalers are in the business of selling used books to colleges and universities across the country. Therefore, in determining how much they will pay a student for a book they must consider the demand for that book as well as the shipping and handling costs involved in processing and reselling the book. This is why prices vary and indeed change frequently. Generally only current editions have value.

The best time to sell books is at the end of the semester. At that time the Annex will pay 50% of the new price for a book if we have an order for that book for the following semester and we need to purchase copies. If we do not, the wholesaler may make you an offer.

If you have questions please ask the people doing the buyback or the Annex staff. They will be more than happy to answer your questions and give you any tips that may be applicable to your situation.

*A Picture ID is Required for all Buyback Transactions.

When is the next Textbook Buyback?

The mid-semester Textbook Buyback is:

at the Textbook Annex:

Monday, November 23
9:00 am-4:00 pm

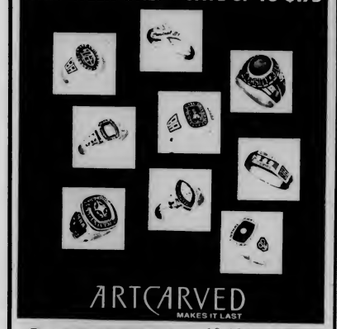
Tuesday, November 24
9:00 am-4:00 pm

Wednesday, November 25
9:00 am-1:00 pm

The end of the semester Textbook Buyback is:
DECEMBER 14 - DECEMBER 29

WRITE FOR ARTS & LIVING
See Jon L. or Ms. Curtis

BIGGEST SALE OF THE YEAR
THIS WEEK ONLY • SAVE UP TO $175



ARTCARVED
MAKES IT LAST

UNIVERSITY STORE
10 AM to 4 PM
November 16 - 25

The Collegian tells you what the D.C. is serving for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Try not to hold it against us.
19,000 copies every gosh-darned day.

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

football

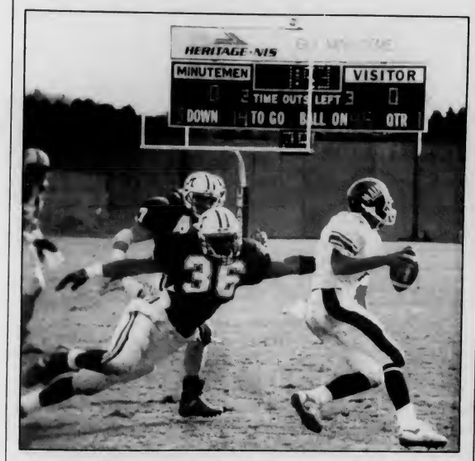
continued from page 12

UNH rounded out the scoring with 8:59 left, when Stayer lofted a perfect pass over the defense to All-American senior tailback Barry Bourassa. The touchdown was the 50th of Bourassa's career, breaking the UNH school record. The UMass defense held Bourassa (ave 90 yds/game) to two yds rushing.

"We have fifteen seniors on this team and it means a lot to us to win this game," said UNH head coach Bill Bowes. "There wasn't any one person who stood out today for us - we had a good effort from all of our kids."

UMass didn't give up though. With 4:38 left, senior QB Tom Fasano (in for McNeilly, who injured his thumb) hit flanker Eric Thimas for a 16 yd gain. The Minutemen were on the move when four plays later he passed to split end Matt Read for nine yds. But the biggest play of the drive came on fourth and two when Fasano threw a bullet over the middle to Thimas, who made a sensational diving catch to keep the UMass drive alive. On the next play from scrimmage, Ingoglia took a pitch right, ran six yards and dove for the endzone, coming up two yards short. On fourth down, Fasano bootlegged left and threw incomplete - both the team and the UMass fans knew that the season was over.

"It hurts to lose a game like this," said free safety Matt Rajotte (six tackles, one int). "I feel bad for our seniors; this was the last chance they had to go to the postseason. I'll tell you something though: they (seniors) busted their butts all year and led us to what we are today."



CHRIS HUGHES / COLLEGIAN
"Super" Mario Perry closes in on one of his fifteen sack victims in a game earlier this season.

UM women's basketball defeated by the Latvians

By JEFF CROFTS
and JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts women basketball coach Joanie O'Brien knew going into yesterdays exhibition game against the Latvian National Team that there were a lot of things her team still had to work on but felt that her squad still had a good chance of winning.

While her team fell 59-47 to the much bigger and experienced Latvians, O'Brien had to be pleased with the way the Minutewomen played, especially the freshmen.

"Overall we played pretty good," said O'Brien. "This game was a good test for us - we were aggressive and when we boxed out, we ran well. The first half was what I was looking for and we played them close."

Indeed they did as the Latvians went in at the half with a slim 24-23 lead. With 5:59 left in the first half, UMass found themselves leading 20-12, thanks to a 6-0 run fueled by freshman center Melissa Gurile's two free throws and a jumper.

"I was pleased with the freshmen," she said. "Melissa played well and (power forward) Octavia (Thomas) ran the floor well. They (all the freshmen) played well considering that it was their first collegiate game."

Midway through the second half the Latvians could do no wrong as they went on a 16-0 run which put the Minutewomen down 49-34 with 6:07 to play. Twin towers Olga Tarasenk (23 pts) and Anita Eglite (13) combined for 11 of the 16 Latvian team, canning everything from layups to three-pointers.

Instead of folding, UMass held tough and wouldn't let the Latvians pull away completely. Freshman guard Kim Gregory had five points down the stretch for the Minutwomen, and Gurile played well, but the Minutewomen could not get any closer than 12 the rest of the way.

As for specifics, O'Brien said there were a couple of things her team could improve on.

"Defensive communication is one area that we could work on," she said. "Another thing we need to work at is offensive execution.

RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

Networking.

There are a lot of influential people on this campus. People with connections. People who can get things done. In order to get to know them, you could get involved with a lot of different RSO's – the Republican Club, University Democrats, Cannibis Reform Coalition, the Radical Student Union – or you could be more efficient and join the Collegian.

Rub shoulders with the rich and famous, or at least with the self-important.

COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center
545-3500

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
STA TRAVEL
79 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

OneEarth Acupuncture
(413) 549-6856
healthcare for the 90's.
245 Lincoln Avenue, in Amherst
Frederick E. Steinway,
licensed acupuncturist, N.C.C.A. Diplomate

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Armenian Club meeting Tues. Nov. 24 at 6:00. Pizza served. New members welcome Rm. 178 CC

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Subletting over intersession? Place your advertisement free of charge at off campus housing, room 428 Student Union. You may also list over the phone. Call 545-0865

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Renault Encore 78K mi new tires, new sticker & tune up $1650/bo Julie at 549-7466

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

FOR RENT

Amherst 2 bedroom apt
1 room for rent
2 full baths w/heat included
On bus route
available immediately
Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Furnished 3 bedroom house, January or February to June 1. $700+ 253-7178

Pufffton room avaiible M/F
1/1/93 - 6/30/93
$224.50/mo
FREE bed, rug, dresser
Desk/$15
Call 549-1811

FOR SALE

For sale Ski Boots
Sanmarko CS 155
Stiffness, flex and cant adjustments
Great Condition
Size 11 $80 or BO
Call Allen at 256-8751

Ski Boots
Raichle size 10
Like new $80/BO
Greg 6-3988

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

Holiday jobs for the environment. Work with MASSpirg to pass the toughest environmental laws in the country.
* Learn campaign skills
* Stop Pollution
* Make a difference!
Call Carmen 256-6434

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT

Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room & board & other benefits! Financially & culturally rewarding! For program
Call: (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Need tutor 4 stats psych will pay/hour $10 ASAP call 546-6256

Typist is needed part time to work on Macintosh computer. Call Reza for an appointment 549-3840

Went to travel free, earn cash and resume experience? Students and organizations call College Tours to join our team! We have 25 years experience, great prices, hotels and destinations.
Call 1 (800) 999-4SUN

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.
Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost gold wetch of personal value in/near Newman Center. Please call 546-1394 if found.

Lost 11/16 Tiger-neil necklace. Help! Reward - very sentimental 549-0518

PERSONALS

Amy Happy 21st Birthday!
Wish we could be with you today to help you celebrate. Go out and have a strawberry daiquiri on us. You are a very special part of our family, we love you!
Mum, Dad, Matt and Amanda

Doll –
Happy 21st!
I think you are great and you smell good too!
Buy you a drink AL?
Love Bifur

Hamlin House Council Wishes a Happy Birthday to Jason Montville
Andrew Ziegler
Carl Carlson and Chris Stevens for the next two weeks!!

Tentelizing Prince
Two months and still spinning . . .
for me!
Love your princess

ROOMATES WANTED

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

2 fun girls needed to share 1 large bedroom in 3 bedroom pad for apartment Great location new rug 549-0939

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The legal services center offers free legal assistance to fee paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnent? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Ski Tuning
Sharpening, Waxing
Base Repair
Only $8
Call Allan or Mike at 256-8751

Terot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

SKI -- Intercollegiate ski weeks only $269. Includes: 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (Mountainside condo)/5 days intercollegiate activities (Drinking age 18), sponsored by Labatts, Molson and Mt. Sutton, Canada (Just across the Vermont border) group leader discounts Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9.

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $$$ Before Jan. 1
Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations.
Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

WANTED

Need cash for Holidays - I will buy your sports cards. Complete set or single cards. Call Dave 546-5690

Sports

Minutewomen fall to UNH Hawkeyes 3-1

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

RICHMOND, Va. — So close, but yet so far.

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team allowed its championship dreams to slip away Saturday by blowing a 1-0 lead over Iowa and allowing three goals in the last 21 minutes of the match in the 3-1 defeat in the NCAA semifinals at Virginia Commonwealth University.

The Minutemen (21-2) almost played well enough to win by dominating Iowa in the first half and allowing the potent Hawkeye offense only eight penalty corners in the game. But midfielder Kristy Gleason single-handedly destroyed the Minutewomen with two goals and an assist in the second half, and Iowa turned what was almost an upset into a victory for the Hawkeyes (20-0).

"It was a very competitive contest, I will say that," UMass head coach Pam Hixon said. "In the first half we executed our game plan and minimized their opportunities by stopping (Gleason) and Kris Fillat. On offense, we created dangerous scoring opportunities.

"In the second half, we turned the ball over more than we normally do. Iowa stayed back and once they gained control of midfield, they took over the game."

UMass almost had the game in hand by scoring early on and looking unbeatable at midfield through the first 35 minutes. On offense, Jenn Salisbury and Danielle Borges collaborated on a nonchalant goal which put UMass up 1-0 at 20:51 of the first half. Salisbury barely saved the ball from going over the end line, and while Iowa was caught standing around, she fed the ball to Borges. Borges pushed the ball past the dive of Iowa goalie Andrea Wieland, and UMass had a 1-0 lead that would almost hold up.

In truth, Wieland kept the Hawkeyes in the game with her diving stops of Massachusetts' scoring chances. The rest of the Iowa squad was severely limited outplayed by UMass in the first hal, and Iowa head coach Beth Beglin said she couldn't believe what she saw.

"Our first half was horrendous," Beglin said. "It was the worst half we've had all year. I have never seen our team so tight. It was a good thing we scored when we did."

Up by one at the half, UMass continued to pressure the Iowa defense, initially in the second half. But when the Minutewomen stuck out on three consecutive penalty corners with 22 minutes left, the tide had turned . . . for good.

"After Andrea came up with three great saves on those corners, we said to ourselves 'hey, let's help her out here'," said Gleason. "That's when we went on the attack. Her performance definitely uplifted us."

Forward Kris Fillat led Iowa down the field with 21 minutes left, slicing through the UMass defense. The Hawkeyes peppered UMass goalie Philippa Scott with a barrage of shots. Gleason, the Minutewomen's executioner, hit the ball in off the pad of the sprawled out Scott at 20:45 to tie things up, 1-1.

By then, it seemed as if it was a matter of time before Iowa took the lead, and four minutes later, they did. On a penalty corner at 16:45, Gleason struck again, with the assist going to Tiffany Bybel.

After Scott saved UMass from further harm by making three incredible saves, the Minutewomen stormed the Iowa net with less than five minutes to go. Their best hcance, with two and half minutes left, came when Borges centered the ball in front of the open right side of the Iowa net. Unfortunately, no Minutewomen was there to collect and dump it in.

"I passed the ball a second too late,"

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 10

UMass deports Latvia

Minutemen unimpressive in 92-49 win

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts basketball team had a victory in last night's exhibition game wrapped up before the Latvian national anthem was done echoing throughout the Curry Hicks Cage, but head coach John Calipari was not happy with his team's performance.

Massachusetts, ranked No. 23 in the country, overwhelmed a weak Latvian National Team 92-49, but played long stretches of uninspired basketball.

"How can I be upset with a 43-point win?" Calipari said. "I don't know, but I am. We aren't playing with much intensity. We turned the ball over too much, against not a very good club.

"I told them after the game that we've got to get better, we've got to play harder or we're not going to win."

Forward Tony Barbee, who scored 15 points, agreed that UMass had not played to its potential.

"Offensively we were shaky," Barbee said. "But that comes with playing together more often. We could have played harder. We need to sustain our intensity, we've got a lot of work to do. I think a lot of guys just didn't keep working because they knew we had the game wrapped up."

UMass jumped all over the Latvians from the start, streaking to a 12-0 lead before the game was two minutes old. By half time, on the strength of Lou Roe's 15 first-half points (he finished with 17), the Minutemen lead 54-27.

Calipari started Harper Williams, Roe and Barbee up front and went with Jerome Malloy and Derek Kellogg in the back court. Mike Williams came off the bench and filled in as a shooting guard and at the point.

"Unless something unusual happens, that line-up will stand," Calipari said. "I thought Mike was terrific off the bench."

Freshman forward Dana Dingle (10 points) was impressive in his first appearance as a Minuteman, Calipari said.

"Dana Dingle was a pleasant surprise," Calipari said. "It was terrific for a freshman to come in a play like that, going after loose balls and rebounding like he did."

Calipari was not as pleased with the play of returning Atlantic 10 Player of the Year Harper Williams.

"Harper is not in total shape, he could only play 10 minutes in the first half," Calipari said. "As soon as Harper accepts the fact that he's got a ways to go, well do all right."

Calipari said he was concerned with UMass season opening game against ninth-ranked Florida State.

"Our goal in that game is to not get embarrassed on national television," Calipari said. "They've got five NBA players on that team. Tonight's game is a good indication of what's going to happen against Florida State."

Football loses finale

Playoff hopes are dashed for UMass

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H.— The University of Massachusetts football team knew what they had to do to insure any chance of making the Division 1-AA playoffs: beat the University of New Hampshire last Saturday.

Unfortunatly for the Minutemen, fate was not on their side as the Wildcats scored 14 unanswered points in the fourth quarter in front of 5,398 fans to pull out a 20-13 victory at Cowell Stadium. The loss effectively ends any hopes for UMass of gaining a post season berth.

UMass head coach Mike Hodges refused to be bitter after the loss, saying that overall it was a great season because no one ever thought his team would be in a position to make the playoffs at the end of the year.

"I'm really proud of these guys," said Hodges. "They didn't quit all year long and just refused to give up. There wasn't anyone who expected us to be 7-3 this year."

"It was a heckuva football game today, though."

It looked as though it would be UMass' day when New Hampshire quarterback Jim Stayer took the snap at his own five yard line with 6:39 remaining in the first quarter and fumbled the handoff to fullback Mike Gallagher. UMass recovered the ball and on the next play from scrimmage, tailback Rene Ingoglia busted up the middle untouched for a 7-0 Minuteman lead.

With 0:39 seconds remaining in the first, UNH struck back as Stayer (20-37,308 yds, 3 TD's) dropped back on third and eighteen and hit wide open tight end Mike Canney in the left corner of the endzone. The kick was no good and UMass still had the lead.

The Minutemen capitalized on good field position (which they had all day long) in the second quarter when Ingoglia, who was playing his first game in two weeks, took a handoff from quarterback Andrew McNeilly and struggled six yards for a UMass TD and a 13-6 halftime lead (PAT no good). Unfortunatly for Coach Hodges and company, these would be the last points his troops would score on the day.

The UMass defense held tough in the third quarter, thwarting a UNH drive deep in Massachusetts territory. On third and five, UMass middle linebacker Bobby Burke (nine tackles) rushed in from the left side and sacked Stayer for a four yard loss. A UNH illegal procedure penalty pushed the Wildcats back to fourth and 14 and they had to settle for a 37 yard field goal, which was wide left.

UMass was not so lucky on UNH's next possession, however. On the Massachusetts 34 yd line, Stayer dropped back and hit split end David Gamble over the middle. Gamble did the rest, as he outran cornerback Don Caparotti (eight tackles) to tie the game with 11:23 left in the game.

"My eyes lit up on those crossing patterns," said Stayer, who was the winner of the Bill Knight award, given to the MVP of the UM-UNH game. "Every time they blitzed, that would leave a receiver open over the middle."

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

Despite defeat, Minutemen showed toughness to the end

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H.— The clock struck midnight for the Cinderella 1992 University of Massachusetts football team Saturday, as the Minutemen came up a yard-and-a-half short in their quest for the 1992 Division 1-AA playoffs with a 20-13 loss to the University of New Hampshire.

UMass had a chance to pull within one with less than a minute left on Saturday, but quarterback Tom Fasano's pass to his tight end fell incomplete, sending the Minutemen, and their playoff hopes home for the season.

"We didn't quit all year, and we didn't quit today," said UMass head coach Mike Hodges, of his team's valiant effort.

The loss dropped the Minutemen to 7-3 (5-3 in the Yankee Conference) for the season, and when the Division 1-AA's 16 team playoff field was announced at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, UMass was not included.

Hodges and company finished the 1992 season with a third place finish in the Yankee Conference, and unlike last season, the selection committee chose to take only two teams from the YanCon.

Delaware and Villanova will carry the flag for the YanCon this year, while the Minutemen will stay in Amherst and think what could have been.

"I'm really proud of what our kids did," said Hodges. "Nobody expected us to be 7-3. No matter what happened these last two games, we still had a good season."

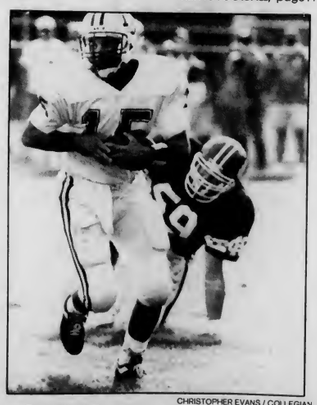
Picked to finish seventh in the nine team YanCon in preseason polls, the Minutemen surprised everyone by reeling off seven straight wins after a season opening 33-13 loss to Delaware.

UMass climbed to as high as 16th in the Division 1-AA national poll, and never quite got the respect they deserved from college football's so-called "experts".

Off-season controversy had UMass pegged as a team on the rebound, while the Minutemen just closed their ears and let their actions speak for themselves.

Fielding only nine seniors, and sporting an offense that featured freshmen at tailback and quarterback, the Minutemen clawed their way to a 7-3 mark on sheer will and a ton of heart giving Minutemen fans a reason to look forward to 1993, and hopefully the NCAA playoffs.

Game Notes: Tight end Steve Dembowski on playing against his brother, UNH linebacker Dave: "I got into a few tussels with Dave on special teams - me and a couple of the other guys were trash-talking a little and got a few good shots in on him." . . . Rajotte intercepted his eighth pass of the season . . . Outside linebacker Mario Perry ended the season with 15 sacks.



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Quarterback Tom Fasano and the rest of the Minutemen came up just short of a playoff berth Saturday, losing to UNH, 20-13.

Tuesday November 24, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 53

Partly sunny, with highs in the 50s. Same for Wednesday.

Local:
AHORA, an organization for Spanish speaking students at the University, has made progress in its mission over the past few years. Page 3.

Sports:
The UMass swimming teams came up with mixed results this weekend. The women lost, while the men won. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

MATT ALLAIN / COLLEGIAN

WINDBOARDING — Andy Putnam, a junior business major, practices a new trend in skateboarding near the Mullins Center.

Guerrillas hinder search for MIAs

By SHEILA MCNULTY
Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Khmer Rouge guerrillas are hindering attempts to account for 81 American servicemen who disappeared in Cambodia during the Vietnam War, American officials said Monday.

About half of the 48 sites where U.S. servicemen were believed to have been killed, captured or lost are either under Khmer Rouge control or in contested areas, said Ed Underwood of Honolulu, one of four Americans assigned by the U.S. military to search for MIAs in Cambodia.

"If we had free access without the Khmer Rouge threat and could go anywhere we wanted in the country, we could probably do all the investigations and recoveries in a year," said Underwood, a Vietnam War veteran and retired Army major.

The Khmer Rouge and Cambodia's three other factions signed a peace accord last year to end 13 years of war and authorize a U.N. peacekeeping mission to stabilize the country. But the guerrilla group has refused to disarm or allow access to the 10 percent to 20 percent of the country it controls.

The other factions, fearing a takeover by the Khmer Rouge, also have refused to disarm, and skirmishes continue in the countryside. U.N. peacekeepers are trying to end the bloodshed, but civil war threatens to erupt again.

Stable governments in Vietnam and Laos have made it easier to search for the more than 2,200 servicemen unaccounted for in those countries.

Last week, members of a special U.S. Senate committee headed by Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., praised efforts by Vietnam and Laos to account for missing Americans.

Turn to MIA, page 10

Students saved from fire

Two dragged from smoke-filled room

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Two unconscious UMass students were dragged safely from a smoke-filled dorm room by their next-door neighbor Saturday morning, according to a UMass fire official.

Calvin Coolidge Tower residents Steven Mollineaux and Greg Silveira were rescued by sophomore School of Management major Jason Alie, who was woken by the smoke alarm next door, according to Senior Fire Prevention Officer Keith Hoyle.

Mollineaux and Silveira were treated for minor smoke inhalation at Health Services and released.

According to Hoyle, the smoke was produced by smoldering sofa cushions ignited by a cigarette. The sofa was not Housing Services furniture, which is fire-resistant.

Alie said he and his roommate mistook the sound for an alarm clock at first, and only became concerned when they pounded on their neighbor's door and got no answer.

Mollineaux and Silveira had been out socializing, and didn't get back to their room until about 4 a.m., said Hoyle, who said he suspects this is why the 90-decibel smoke alarm failed to wake them.

Alie awoke the floor's Resident Assistant, who got the master key from the cluster office and opened the room.

"When we opened the door the room

Turn to FIRE, page 10

Weil describes mind-body link

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

There is a significant correlation between the mind and body which is unrecognized by the medical and scientific communities, according to an expert holistic healer, who spoke last night to a large audience in Bowker Auditorium.

The Distinguished Visitors Program sponsored the event.

"There is no limit to what the mind can do in preventing diseases. Science has changed and most doctors are unaware of that change," said Dr. Andrew Weil, who is an expert on altered states of consciousness, medicinal plants and alternative and holistic medicine.

Weil said paramedics are now being trained to be careful with what they say around unconscious patients.

Unconscious patients comprehend what is going around them and this can have serious implications on their healing, according to Weil.

"Suggestions play a big role," Weil said.

Yet Weil said there has been little scientific study in how the mind works. And, the American medical society deals little with the body and drugs as a whole.

While he was visiting China and Japan he noticed the people in those countries used medicines which treated the entire body, not just the afflicted area.

The Chinese prescribed different types of mushrooms and other natural remedies.

This is in contrast to the American medical system, which only focuses on a special part of the body with a synthetic drug.

"We like magic bullets that work for a specific reason," Weil said. "If you go into any German pharmacy the displays are all natural products. German pharmacist think it is crazy that Americans have separate pharmacy and health stores."

But Americans are afraid of natural remedies because of false scares by the media, according to Weil.

Weil, who is a doctor in Arizona, said in the 10 years he has prescribed natural remedies, he has not gotten any bad reactions.

One of the main problems with synthetic drugs is it can cause an increase of toxicity in blood.

Weil said many healthy plants, such as the coca plant are not allowed into the country, because a drug can be derived from it.

The coca plant, which is chewed by Indians in Peru as part of a religious ritual, cures stomach pains and is high in calcium and vitamins, according to Weil.

But because one of the 14 ingredients in the coca plant is cocaine, the United States government spends millions of dollars in making the Indians refrain from harvesting the plant, Weil said.

Yet some drugs, such as cigarettes and alcohol, are extremely addictive, but are legal according to Weil.

"A heroin user only has to fix themselves three or four times a day, nicotine addicts have to do it every twenty minutes," Weil said.

Weil said we must not fight drugs, because no society is truly drug free, instead we work to end drug abuse.

Correction

The Collegian misrepresented two members of the UMass Puerto Rican community in yesterday's front page feature photo.

They were representing their community on the campus center concourse at one of a series of tables educating the community about Latin American countries. The table was sponsored by AHORA.

The Collegian regrets the error.

UM officials set plan for land usage

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Aiming to revamp the University of Massachusetts campus, officials are developing a 10 year master plan for how to use land and other campus resources, the first since the late sixties.

In an effort to determine how well supported the university system is, the plan will look at land use of UMass' 1,300 acres in Amherst and Hadley, road systems, parking systems, recreation, economic development and community planning.

"We're certainly overdue to look at our land resources and long range development," said Berverly Nuckles, associate vice chancellor for physical planning.

The University tower library, fine arts center and campus center were constructed through the last master plan created for the university in the late 1960s.

The department of landscape architecture and regional planning are acting as the consultant for the plan. Several workshops have been help to seek input from the campus community and neighboring towns about the plan.

The physical planning committee is also considering land which is set aside for recreation as they aim to come up with a balanced community plan.

"I'm very pleased the campus chose to do it at this time," said Nuckles. "This is a great change

Turn to PLAN, page 2

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andred Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

■ plan

continued from page 2

and a great time to do long range planning as we are heading for economic recovery."

Nuckles said the physical planning committee encourages people to attend the open meetings scheduled for December to offer ideas and comments.

The Dec. 1 meeting will look beyond campus boundaries to see how communities are developing. The Dec. 15 meeting will be a stategic planning exercise discussing priorites to determine critical needs for development. Meetings are from 3:30 to 5:30 in Hills.

Next semester the department of landscape architecture and regional planning will make proposals to recommend solutions to meet critical needs and will offer proposals to allocate land resources for future development, according to Nuckles. The plan is expected to include recommendations written in a report by May.

"This plan will help be a framework for making decisions about physical development of campus as we head into an economic recovery period," said Nuckles, who said input from previous workshops has indicated that a master plan can have a role in increasing recruitment and retention of students.

"It's an exciting proposition," said Mark Lindult, a teacher in the department of landscape and regional planning. "We're looking at the campus physically and not just educationally. The environment has a great deal to do with the quality of life."

"The environment does really impact how we interact with others," said Lindult. "All the right elements need to be fine tuned so there's less of a setting of hogpog that currently exists."

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

VANDALISM

• Racial and homophobic graffiti was discovered in a stall of the men's bathroom on the fourth floor of the University Library on Friday morning, according to police.

• A woman reported to police the slashing of all four of her car's tires in Lot 71 on Saturday. A State vehicle in the vicinity also had one of its tires slashed. Police estimate there to be more than $500 in damages.

• University police are investigating the discovery of homophobic graffiti discovered in Dwight Residence Hall on Saturday afternoon. The graffiti, discovered at approximately 12:15 p.m., was apparently in response to the protest of a "round-robin" party that was scheduled to occur in the dorm that night, according to police.

• A sink was ripped from the wall in the men's room on the first floor of Dwight Residence Hall on Saturday evening, causing extensive flooding, police said. Police estimate the damages to be in excess of $300.

• University police discovered graffiti written on a memo board on the second floor in Dwight Residence Hall on Sunday. The graffiti was derogatory and directed at the officers.

• Extensive damage was done to the School of Management on Saturday evening, and was discovered at 9 a.m. on Sunday, according to police. Windows were broken, eggs were thrown in the classrooms, and extensive vandalism general trashing of the place in the halls and classes, causing damages in excess of $2000.

• Anti-Semitic graffiti was written on a bathroom door in Dwight Residence Hall and was discovered at 1 p.m. on Sunday, police said.

• Racial graffiti was written on a third floor bulletin board in Melville Residence Hall on Sunday evening, according to police.

ASSAULT

• Two men were allegedly assaulted outside of Coolidge Residence Hall near a bike rack on Saturday, according to police. The alleged assailant was later identified, but the individuals did not wish to pursue charges, police said.

• A man was assaulted by several individuals on Sunday morning and will seek complaints through the Court, according to police. After police investigation it was determined that the attack, which occurred at 1:45 a.m., was racially motivated.

• Three women were allegedly chased from Patterson Residence Hall and were assaulted by a woman a short time after on Sunday morning at 2:30 a.m. Following that incident, one of the three women was again assaulted by the same woman in the lobby of John Q. Adams Residence Hall. The assailant then went to the victims' room and again assaulted them. Police are currently investigating the incidents.

MISCELLANEOUS ACTIVITIES

• A Northampton woman received minor injuries to her right leg after she was struck by a car driven by a Cushman woman on Friday, according to police. Anna Krusper, 24, was walking across University Drive at 6:30 p.m. when she was struck by Florence Morrow. After investigation by the police, no citations were issued to Morrow.

• A woman reportedly received a telephone call of a derogatory sexual nature on Friday afternoon. Police are currently investigating the incident.

• A vendor reported two coin machines in the Campus Center were broken into and a total of $800 was stolen on Saturday, police said.

Ex-Harvard pres. named trustee

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Derek Bok, former president of Harvard University, was appointed to the Board of Trustees of the University of Massachusetts last week.

Bok was sworn in on Nov. 18 by Gov. William Weld in a State House ceremony attended by Board Chair Gordon N. Oakes, Jr. and University President Michael K. Hooker.

Bok, who retired in 1991 after 20 years as President of Harvard University, is widely regarded as a leading expert on higher education issues.

"The selection of Derek Bok for the UMass Board of Trustees is an important step in moving UMass toward the goal of becoming a world-class university," said UMass President Michael Hooker. "Derek's insight and experience will be invaluable to the University of Massachusetts in the coming years."

Bok is the author of numerous publication, including Beyond the Ivory Tower: Social Responsibility of the Modern University. Bok was a professor of law at Harvard before becoming dean of the Law School in 1986. He served as dean for three years before becoming President of Harvard from 1971 to 1991.

In addition, Bok boasts academic degrees from several top universities. He received a bachelor's degree from Stanford in 1951, a law degree from Harvard in 1954 and a master's degree from George Washington in 1955.

After he left Harvard, Bok joined several national organizations. In fact, he currently holds the position of 300th Anniversary University Professor at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard.

In 1991, Governor William F. Weld signed legislation creating a new five-campus University of Massachusetts with a single president and Board of Trustees.

Board policy is administered by the president and the five campus chancellors.

Racism erupts at Westfield State

Police investigate incidents of graffiti, harassment

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

WESTFIELD, Mass. — The latest racist graffiti in an outbreak at Wesfield State College warned a black woman not to socialize with white men, an administrator said Monday.

School officials voiced frustration and embarrassment over the series of racial incidents that began last month.

"We're trying as an institution to promote cultural understanding, and as the episodes occur, it's very frustrating," said Peter Mazza, vice president of student affairs.

Anti-black graffiti has been found outside the rooms of four black women in Scanlon Hall, a women's dormitory. A poster was also defaced, and a harassing phone call was made, school officials say.

In the most recent incident, someone left racist graffiti on a piece of paper found Friday outside the door of one of the black students.

"I believe it had to be a white person," said Mazza. "The implication was, "You shouldn't be dating or socializing with white guys."

Mazza said school officials suspect that several suspects may be responsible for the incidents. He said the Campus Public Safety Department has "either a lead or two, or a suspect or two," but no arrests had been made.

George Sicaras, Public Safety Director, did not immediately return phone calls seeking comment.

The incidents at Westfield State are similar to several at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, where racist graffiti and alleged racial attacks prompted an outpouring of demands for change by minority students this fall.

However, Westfield State Officials said they do not see any connection between the tensions at the two western Massachusetts campuses about 25 miles apart.

Instead, Jeanne Julian, a spokeswoman for Westfield State, speculated that the poor economy may contribute to the problem.

"When people are feeling less certain of their ability to make their way in the world, they seem to find scapegoats," she said.

She also suggested that some conservative political rhetoric may have spurred on some bigots.

There are about 3,000 undergraduates at Westfield State College. Seven percent are minority members, or about 210. Of those, about 120 are black.

TONIGHT
A Pre-Holiday Party
with
D.J. Pete Free
- DANCING -
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00 ▪ 9:30-10:30
THE 24 HEURS PUB
CELEBRATES 1968-1992 IN AMHERST
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET

PIZZERIA
Paradiso
TRADITIONAL WOOD-FIRED BRICK OVEN PIZZA
12 CRAFTS AVENUE
NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS
586-1468

Recycle this Collegian.
It's the right thing to do.
Trust me.

Local News

AHORA making gains

Club unites Spanish speaking students

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

Jalil Mendoza, President of AHORA

The University of Massachusetts Spanish speaking latin organization (AHORA) has made great gains to bring the Spanish speaking community together by sponsoring various activities and events throughout the semester.

Jalil Mendoza, President of the Latin organization says that members have given 100 percent in order to make the organization's statement of mission which reads as follows into a reality on this campus.

"AHORA was born out of the desire of the members of the Spanish Speaking community, including students, faculty and the community in general, to have an organized and united voice in speaking to those issues which affect their lives," reads the AHORA Constitution. "AHORA is composed of various cultural groups tied together by a common language. With this knowledge in mind, we openly strive to create a flexibility of structure, a respect for diversity of opinion, and an atmosphere of freedom to express one's views in a democratic and open environment within the framework of our organizational goals."

Mendoza states that the organization started this year with a zero balance, and with a jump start of $1,500 from SGA and another $500 from Commuter Area Government, activities were set into motion to sponsor and promote educational and social activities.

"We are concerned with the lack of awareness on this campus, by promoting cultural activities, we are in essence educating the UMass population," Mendoza said.

Javier Ruiz, an Engineering Major and member of AHORA says he believes that the oragnization is very inclusive of all Spanish Speaking students.

"I became involved by participating in club meetings and by attending the activities," Ruiz said.

Ruiz says he feels that the AHORA organization has a great deal to offer the Campus Community, because it premise is to bring the Spanish Speaking community together.

"I really like the organization, they are very open and creative," Javier said.

Mendoza says that in order for Spanish Speaking students to know AHORA exists, they must know what AHORA is all about and that is why membership is not exclusive.

"We want to educate Spanish Speaking students as well as the community, that way we all can have a better understanding of who we are." said Mendoza.

Turn to AHORA, page 10

Clinton faces problems fixing US economy

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

President-elect Bill Clinton will face serious problems in attempting to solve the nation's economic problems regardless of the strategy he chooses, according to a high-ranking government official.

Robert Reischauer, director of the Congressional Budget Office, spoke on the "Economic and Budget Issues Facing the Clinton Administration," at Smith College yesterday.

The two major economic problems Clinton faces are the prolonged period of slow economic growth in the United States and the nation's ever-increasing budget deficit.

Clinton's dilemma is that any attempt he makes to decrease the deficit through tax increases or federal spending cuts may act as obstacles to renewed economic growth, Reischauer said.

Clinton, however, promised during the presidential campaign to revive growth in the economy and curb unemployment — efforts which involve increasing federal spending and risk raising the nation's deficit even further.

Reischauer said the country has not been able to undergo a period of sustained economic growth following the recession which began in July 1990 due to a number of structural problems in the economy.

Among the structural impediments to growth, according to Reischauer, are cutbacks in public sector spending, weakness among banks and saving and loan institutions, excess capacity in sectors such as retailing and commercial real estate, corporate cutbacks in employees and economic dislocation caused by the end of the Cold War.

Clinton's major option for restoring economic growth is "good old-fashioned fiscal stimulus," which involves government investment in the public sector to provide more jobs, Reischauer said.

While some experts argue that increased federal spending might "overheat" the economy, primarily through causing rising inflation, Reischauer said the nation's low rate of growth makes high inflation unlikely.

Reischauer said Clinton faces fewer political risks by acting boldly to stimulate economic recovery than by "staying the course," and letting the national economy adjust on its own.

Reischauer said Clinton needs to move quickly with his economic initiatives because his "window of opportunity" for action is limited to about a year.

After that time, Clinton will no longer be able to blame the state of the economy on his predecessor and members of Congress may be hesitant to approve measures such as tax increases or spending cuts which could hurt their chances for re-election.

Ironically, whatever course Clinton chooses, luck is the biggest factor affecting the direction the economy takes, Reischauer said. The high inflation and slow economic growth of the late 1970s was only "minimally related" to President Carter's economic policies, just as the last recession had little to do with President Bush's economic policies.

Patrols try to deter hate crimes

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Twelve students policed the south end of campus Thursday night in the first of a series of "Rainbow Patrols" intended to put an end to hate crimes at UMass.

Organized by Allied Students Against Prejudice (ASAP), the group patrolled the Southwest residential area and adjacent parking lots from nine to 11:30 p.m., distributing literature about themselves and determined to stop any incidents of violence or harassment they might encounter.

The idea of the Rainbow Patrols, named because of the diversity of the membership, arose out of frustration with the administration's response to the recent spate of violence and graffiti against minorities and homosexuals, organizer Greg Maney said.

Although there were no physical confrontations, the group did suffer one verbal attack, a shout of "[expletive] you" from a low-rise dorm adjacent to Washington tower in Southwest. But Maney saw this as an encouraging sign.

"This means that the people our message is intended for have been getting it. We're out to make our presence felt, and this shows it's working," he said.

Feeling threatened by the recent attacks on minority communities and tired of holding forums and workshops while waiting for something to be done, students from ASAP decided it was time to take more direct action, he said.

"I couldn't stand the thought of myself and my friends having to live each day in fear because of who we are. I'm not depending on anyone but myself to make sure I don't have to," said ASAP spokesperson Stephanie Carnahan.

Maney said the group hopes to expand the patrols dramatically by allying itself with other campus organizations such as the Black fraternities and the Everywoman's Center. He said this would allow patrolling of the entire campus late into the night.

ASAP also plans to establish a walking escort service in response to dissatisfaction with the current escort service, which has only two vans.

Organizers of the patrols, armed "only with conviction," say they don't expect to be regularly involved in physical confrontations. Instead, they hope their presence will prevent crimes from happening in the first place.

"There hopefully won't be any need to intervene," said Maney. "We think our presence will serve as a deterrent."

Christian club helps homeless

Upside Down holds benefit aiding Amherst shelter

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts, Upside Down Christian club sponsored a Coffee House Friday to benefit the Amherst Survival Center, which helps the homeless.

The preparation and planning was extensive and well over 100 students participated in this event.

Jeff Chartrand, a senior and music major lead the event by opening up with several songs.

"It was a worthy cause, and a well organized event," Chartrand said.

Bob Arsenault, a UMass campus minister and UMass Alumnus was key in bringing together, along with the Chartrand, the host of musicians and acts that made the evening a worthwhile activity.

Admission to the activity consisted of donations that included; canned goods, powdered milk, soups, pasta and rice.

Arsenault says he believes that students need to be conscious of others who are economically disadvantaged.

"We collected canned goods for the Homeless Shelter, we are aware of the needs within our community and we want to serve our community . . . People is our business," Arsenault stated.

Marissa Matrone, a UMass student studying Theater Arts, also a member of the Upside Down Club says the event brought out many students who transcended across racial and cultural lines.

"There was a lot of diversity represented, despite the racial tensions at the University, students came out and supported a worthy cause," Matrone said.

Among the list of musicians who volunteered their time and resources, most notably were the UMass Madrigals a traditional English vocal team and the Acafellas an acappella jazz group.

Jean Pao, a graduate student and clinical psychology

Turn to CLUB, page 10

Group raises concerns over privatization

By MICHAEL B. PIERCE
Collegian Correspondent

Concerned students and professionals of the University of Massachusetts attended a meeting yesterday to "save our store."

Auxiliary Services is facing a deficit of nearly $900,000, and to combat this problem, it is discussing the possibility of leasing out the University Store.

Scott Cashman, Textbook Annex, said the deficit comes from Food Services losing about $1 million and from other costs that the state and University put on the trust fund.

Ferd Wulkan, field representative, SEIU Local 509, said the purpose of the meeting was to discuss the impact this could have on students and to save jobs.

The Textbook Annex currently discounts its books by 5 percent, and is concerned that an outside contractor could eliminate this discount and raise the prices of books by 5-10 percent.

Jobs could also be lost if the Store is leased to an outside contractor.

During busy weeks, the University Store temporarily hires students to help out. An outside company would probably send people from a different office, and wouldn't use students.

Union jobs could also be lost.

"Outside contractors can move people around and make them so miserable that they'll want to quit," said Miles Seaver, operations manager, University Store.

Seaver also said one Barnes and Noble store did not have a positive experience at another college.

"At Central Connecticut College, the prices were so high that students decided to run their own bookstore," he said. "But they weren't allowed to have the same books that were on the faculty booklist."

Judy Gagnon, of the Student Activities Office, said she didn't want to see the Store lose its diversity.

"Our Store is one of the best in the country because it has diversity," she said. "It carries greeting cards in foreign languages. I don't think an outside vendor would be interested in this because they wouldn't make money.

During the meeting, plans were also discussed on how to show opposition toward privatizing the Store. Ideas included organizing letters, starting a petition, creating buttons against privatizing the Store and using the media.

Journalist cites need for women to unite

By EVELYN A. DE JESUS
Collegian Staff

Women have to fight against the images portrayed by the media of them said a well-known journalist last night.

Around 40 people congregated at the Northampton Center for the Arts to listen to the prominent feminist journalist Naomi Wolf, author of The Beauty Myth.

Wolf criticized the way the feminist movement is exposed by the media, which exposes the consequences of it as negative towards women.

Stereotypes of the feminist woman include women who do not wears makeup, do not shave their legs or is fat and with short hair.

The work conditions of women seriously affect women according to Wolf.

On Capitol Hill, in Washington, D.C., women are afraid to talk about sexual harassment because they are afraid it might affect their careers, said Wolf.

They do not dare to talk about their needs, said Wolf, as a daily child care because they know that "out there there are fifty people willing to take their position." Sometimes they don't even address the issue of equal pay, according to Wolf.

"They are afraid of speaking," Wolf said.

The Oxford University doctoral candidate also addressed issues concerning women of color and lesbians.

"Women of color are meant to be patient and they are questioned like they don't perform in good faith," she said. "They are meant to behave like if someday their day will come."

Women have to take places, yell and shout about racism, classism, ableism and homophobia, Wolf said.

"Heterosexual women can't get away by throwing out their gay sisters," she said, "It is a matter of what you believe, not of whom you are sleeping with."

It is not right, Wolf said, to dictate racism, in the same way it is with sexuality.

She expressed her concern on the divisions among women on their basis of race.

One example she gave was on college campuses, where bitter feelings make women of color to tend to work apart from the rest of the other women, when they, for example have a common worst enemy which is the administration.

"Black feminist women feel they [white women] do not address their concerns," she said, "Victimization is really unhelpful."

Wolf, who identified herself as Pro-Choice, saying that abortion should be kept safe and legal, urged women to lead on civil rights, she said democracy should be "invigorated and re-invented" to work for their own benefit.

Food is the flavor of life

Elders lose taste and interest in food

Brighter, bolder, smoother.

It may sound like an ad for cigarettes or detergent. But according to University of Massachusetts food science Professor Fergus Clydesdale, it could be used to describe the food of the future.

"The population of America is gradually aging," Clydesdale said. "And as it does so its culinary habits need to change as well."

At issue, says Clydesdale, is a problem that already affects millions of older Americans — the problem of eating enough to maintain a proper level of nutrition.

"People lose much of their ability to detect flavor as they grow older and so they often lose much of their interest in food," Clydesdale said. "If you want to appeal to them and keep them healthy you've got to take that into account."

Where most grandparents are dismissed as crochety if they claim their food doesn't taste as good as in the old days, Clydesdale advises marketing executives and food retailers to realize they may be right.

"It isn't just their imaginations," Clydesdale said. "We conducted a controlled experiment in which college students and people over 60 were given the same cherry-flavored beverage. What the older subjects were at a significant disadvantage when it came to flavor quality and overall acceptability."

The study — one of many Clydesdale has conducted in the area of color/flavor/sensory interaction during the the past 15 years — was surprising in a number of ways. Not only did it show that seniors do indeed have an impaired threshold for flavor, it also revealed that increasing the flavor may not remedy the problem.

What was it that helped re-awaken the dormant taste buds of the seniors then? Interestingly enough, it was color.

"It seems that as the sense of flavor decreases, the sense of sight is used to compensate," Clydesdale said. "It is similar to the situation you see in people who have to develop a particular talent to compensate for another one that is lost."

While the degree of redness in beverages may not sound very exciting, in the grand scheme of things it is actually quite important. Indeed, as baby boomers grow older, and demographically the country grays, such a study has far-reaching implications — not the least of which is economic.

"In the next four decades the number of older adults is expected to double to almost sixty-five million," Clydesdale said. "With that large a part of the population potentially suffering from reduced flavor acuity, the food and beverage industries have a profit motive and an ethical motive to meet the needs of this vast market."

While Clydesdale makes no claims to knowing what kind of products might appear on the market as a result, he does have some ideas.

"I think you're going to see not just more flavorful food, but more colorful food," Clydesdale say. "I'm not saying the country is going to suddenly be swept up in Sixties day-glo colors again, but I do think color will be of greater significance."

In addition, Clydesdale believes that many manufacturers will begin marketing foods aimed specifically at elders.

"Foods that are easier to chew and digest as well as foods that have enhanced flavors will become increasingly important," Clydesdale said.

— UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

Meditation. 禅

Mental clarity.
Mystical experiences.
Emotional balance.
Spiritual depth.

Learn how.
Now.

It will be with you for the rest of your life.

A special program for people 18 - 22.

Every Wednesday night
UMass Campus Center
Intro: 7:00-8:00
Advanced: 8:15-9:45

11/18 Rm. 911 11/25 Rm. 803
11/30 Rm. 805 12/8 Rm. 803
Event Added!
Dec. 2 in Boston!

Free Music Meditation tapes for you!

FREE

taught by The Boston Meditation Society

Collegian Elections for Spring 1993

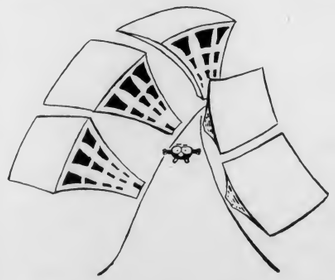
APPLICATIONS ARE CURRENTLY BEING ACCEPTED FOR PAID POSITIONS

Application deadline: Wed., Dec. 9 at 3 p.m.
Candidates Night: Wed., Dec. 9 at 7 p.m.
Elections will be held: Thurs., Dec. 10, 10am - 8pm

- All eligible staff can vote in the elections for Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, and Editorial Editor.
- All other desk editors will be voted for by their current staff.
- Staff status = 6 articles, with at least 3 for a particular desk written this semester to be counted as staff of that desk.
- Staff lists will be checked at the voting box.
- Please see Managing Editor Brooke C. Wheeler for an application.
- This information is accurate as of Tuesday, November 24, 1992.

The Collegian is an E.O.E.

Information Data Bank



We can help make a large and seemingly complex university a little easier to find your way around in.

545-1555
2nd Floor Lobby-Whitmore

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

NOTICE
Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 326, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places on Monday, Nov. 30. Please be there!

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT

ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS

THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN

QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE

253-3834

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Drunken Frankenstein scores low on creativity scale

Why is it that whenever one's life achieves the level of happiness ordinarily reserved for 1970s sitcom endings, a reality dope slap isn't too far in the future?

Last weekend, a friend and I were tired of apathetically dragging ourselves through work and then attaching ourselves like lichen to a bar stool for three hours. We mapped out an itinerary of social pit stops with all the strategy and attention to detail of a hyperactive tourist on a weekend trip to Disneyland. We had a great time, and it seemed like we had finally dived head first into the deep end of life's fun pool.

By 2 a.m., we had done the revelry thing to death, and were thinking about going home. But like good coffee, high spirits have a rattling effect on the nervous system: sleep doesn't come easily. So since it looked like the sandman was on sabbatical, we paid a visit to an all-night eatery. It had been a fine evening, and we were still laughing and joking as we left.

Then blam! On the sidewalk we were approached by a jabbering, bleary-eyed young man in a UMass sweatshirt who was experiencing technical difficulties in the motor skills and coordination department. Looking back, I now realize that he wasn't human; he was a mutant baby Frankenstein monster. He lurched. He groaned. He gurgled. He drooled. He offered oh-so-tempting invitations to join him in a few hours of wickedness and debauchery at his dormitory palatial suite.

Lori
O'CONNOR

Wiser than I, my friend evaded his groping hands and quickly passed him. I wasn't as fortunate. In less than three seconds, he invaded my personal space to such an extent that I could smell the cherry chapstick on his lips. Becoming increasingly frightened and defensive, I chose the latter half of the fight or flight instinct, and bolted. He then launched a volley of insults at us, words I cannot repeat because of their absolute unprintability. If you're curious, they dealt with our anatomy and our sexuality. Just try to place yourself in the mindset of a primitive beer sponge for whom the mental process is a sequence of mostly painful monosyllabic grunts. I'm sure you can figure it out.

The words he used aren't important. It was perfect example of the "Sticks and Stones May Break My Bones" philosophy. Words have no power if one doesn't allow them to. To be honest, he would have had the same emotional impact had he called us a pair of unwashed rutebagas. What enrages me is the fact that in fumbling for phrases in his ghost town of a vocabulary, the babbling barbarian grasped upon two old standbys he assumed would sting. He had the opportunity to turn a threatening situation into one of humor, had he only shown some originality in his name-calling. My friend and I may have gotten into my car admiring his extroversion and creativity, instead of wondering how big a dent he would make in the front fender.

My message is simple. Masking your insecurities under a thin veneer of misogyny and homophobia is one thing. Bully for you. In the end, you'll be rewarded by a horrific isolation and loneliness that only people the likes of the Elephant Man have ever experienced. But at least give your hapless victims the courtesy of using words that aren't found adorning the wall of junior high boys' rooms. If you must take it upon yourself to destroy the entire evening of a perfect stranger, provide them with something to remember you by other than the dizzying stench of your breath. And don't wear your UMass garb. It makes the rest of us look bad. Wear a simple black turtleneck. It's casual, it's elegant, and as an added bonus, it will nicely conceal those unsightly bolts on the side of your neck.

Lori O'Connor is a Collegian columnist.

Images of violence are a crime

I hope you are sitting down, Jonathan Linder [Collegian, Nov. 19], because I have a couple of stories to tell you.

A long time ago there was a 12-year-old girl who was quietly playing with her dolls. Suddenly, her mother's boyfriend approaches her. He throws her to the floor and then he begins to get on top of her. He tickles, probes, kisses and takes off the little girl's clothes. Only understanding that what is going on is scary, the little girl claws and scratches and runs away. But the next time, the 12-year-old child is not as fortunate. It should be noted that this child found several "hard" porn magazines in the closet of this man featuring positive articles on sexually molesting little children.

This is a true story. I know because I was that little girl.

Here's another story: a young mother walks into a pool joint one day in the town of New Bedford, Mass., to buy a pack of cigarettes and is raped on a pool table. She is traumatized and commits suicide. One month before this incident, Hustler magazine printed an article (with pictures) on raping women on pool tables and how they'll enjoy it. One month after this incident, the same magazine printed a naked, waving and smiling woman on a pool table that said, "Greetings from New Bedford, Mass."

I'm an activist. I know about freedoms. But whose freedoms are being violated? Not all porn should be banned. However, tied-up women, women being raped and beaten, women sticking things like snakes and hard objects into their vaginas — all the while being photographed — is not pornography but a crime. It controls the perception that of women in society and that is what has to be banned, changed and essentially eliminated.

Maria Tobin
Central

Boss' lyrics misinterpreted — again

In his review of Bruce Springsteen's concert at the Hartford Civic Center (Collegian, Nov. 17], Adam Scott Roberts recalled when "The Boss" launched into his '80s anthem "Born in the U.S.A." Roberts stated that at that moment, all he could think was how proud he was to be an American. If Roberts knew anything about Bruce Springsteen and what he stands for, he would never have made such erroneous comparisons to that song and his blind nationalism.

The song's lyrics tell the story of a working class man sent to Vietnam because he was victim of the poverty draft. When he comes home from fighting a war he didn't understand, the narrator, after killing for king and country, is nothing more than when he left: unemployed and disenfranchised.

The song paints a grim picture of America, yet even Ronald Reagan quoted this song in the context of American strength and pride. That mistake drew comment from Springsteen, who chastised the president for misuse of his music.

As far as Roberts' references to Springsteen for reviving patriotism felt during the Persian Gulf War, I can only say that this was most likely not Bruce's intention when he played a blatant anti-war song. In the November issue of Musician, Springsteen criticized the Bush administration for the war it waged on Iraq.

Chris Scanlon
Northampton

Barring gays perpetuates hatred

This is in response to Michael Morrissey's editorial [Collegian, Nov. 20]. I believe all people are equal no matter what their religions, beliefs, creeds or preferences are. Isn't there freedom and equal opportunity in this country?

Homosexuals choose to join the armed forces for the same reason that heterosexuals do, not to check out the men in uniforms. Why would they join a militaristic group for such a purpose?

When a person is homosexual, it does not make them any less of a person (e.g. fairy, wimp). Homosexuals can fight just as strong and hard and endure just as much as heterosexuals.

Any heterosexual who does not believe that homosexuals should be allowed into the armed forces because of their sexual preference should rethink their fears. Homosexuals have been in the armed forces since the beginning, but their fears of being dismissed have kept them silent for years. This is evidence that their involvement is purely militaristic and not sexual.

Personally, I wish war and any type of violence could be abolished from the earth, but unfortunately war develops from hatred. When we do not allow a certain "type" of people into the army, we are defeating the purpose of working together, perpetuating the hatred that causes wars. Stop and take a look at yourself and at each other; we are all the same. And with similarity comes the beauty of difference. We are all one.

Willow Cohen
Central

Malcolm X isn't for Blacks only

Mr. Douglas Greer:

This is a response to your editorial [Collegian, Nov. 18], "Malcolm not a fad." I am on your side, so please don't misconstrue anything to be a personal attack. I couldn't have agreed with you more that for a lot of people, in and out of the community, Malcolm X has become a fad. It sickens me, as I know it does to people with an ounce of intelligence, to see people running around here with "X" caps and T-shirts on not knowing a damn thing about what the man stood for. But then again, optimistically thinking, I wonder if the fad will spark interest to seek and find out what this brother was really all about.

Although we agreed with the above point, I did have a problem when you compared the wearing of "X" paraphernalia by European–Americans to African-Americans wearing the KKK symbol. Isn't that a bit extreme? Mr. Greer, are you saying that if one is White they should have no interest in Malcolm X? Your statement reeked of negative sentiment that ultimately fertilizes a lot of ignorance which is overwhelming on this campus.

I have studied Malcolm X and his philosophies. I am aware of his feelings towards White people during the early part of his life and the time spent with the Nation of Islam. More importantly, I know of the advancement of his philosophies (which did not include the hatred of White people) upon returning from Mecca; it is this Malcolm whom I truly respect.

Your statement was very confusing. To be quite frank, it was ignorant. It just seemed very ironic that you would state something like that and then follow it up by saying that those caught up in the fad should grow up intellectually and that they were disrespecting what he stood for.

God knows this society has been strangled by the dominance of European history, and in order for anyone to learn anything about a different culture they must seek it out on their own. I guess that's why it makes me happy to see people of non-African-American descent taking an avid interest in African-American history. If we would take the initiative to learn more about other people's cultures, I feel we would be a much more together society.

Mr. Greer, I did not intend for this to be an attack on your personal views; however, I strongly urge you to educate yourself further on Malcolm X and his entire life's ideologies. Don't be so quick to judge others for their interest in him, for when you do, you are in turn disrespecting the man you so admire.

Skoti Brown
Central

Morrissey is a waste of space

I condemn the Collegian's irresponsibility for printing yet another vapid, inflammatory Michael Morrissey column [Nov. 20]. I encourage dialogue between opposing viewpoints and strongly suggest that Morrissey be supplanted as columnist by someone who can more coherently and respectfully articulate conservative thought.

Morrissey wastes six column inches erroneously claiming connection between the extremist activist group Queer Nation and homosexuals' inclusion in the military. Then he claims that the militar 'e exempted from the democratic ideal of ideological inclusiveness because soldiers might be "constantly wondering if their bunk mate has the hots" for them. I doubt the honorable men and women in the service would appreciate Morrissey's transparent projection of his fears on them..

Morrissey claims he is "old-fashioned" in his belief that social experiments occur in the military. I say he is a hypocrite and a poor columnist to write that the military is exempt from laws it protects.

Timothy Lahey
Northampton

Third World Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Castro: communism's last emperor?

This December will mark Fidel Castro's thirty-third year in power as the dictator of Cuba; which is a mere 90 miles off the coast of Florida.

Since communism deteriorated in Eastern Europe, with the fall of 1989 and the attempted coup d'etat of Gorbachev in August 1991, times have been especially tough economically for Cubans.

In the heyday of communism and the Soviet Empire, Cuba was assured of exporting their sugar harvest, their biggest crop, to the Soviet Union and receive handsome subsidies. The U.S.S.R., in return, supplied Castro and his people with oil. There was no reason for Cuba to go through OPEC or the open market to get oil- not with communism firmly in place in the Soviet Union.

Fortunately, those days are ancient history. The old Soviet Union is no more and Eastern Europe is holding free democratic elections with no fear of Moscow. However, that is not the case in Cuba.

Cuba has lost its biggest producer and consumer in the Soviet Union as well as its most important ideological ally and military support.

When Castro seized power in 1959 he overthrew the government of Juan Battista, who was backed by the United States. Castro's rise to power brought immediate enmity and suspicion from the U.S. and his relations with the Soviet Union pushed Cuba onto the frontline of the Cold War.

For the past 30 years American policy towards Cuba has been very simple. Castro and his communist regime are dangerous and we should attempt to block any move they make which could hurt us and facilitate their demise by blocking all trade with them.

Christopher
ROGERS

The same situation that arose in Eastern Europe is likely to replay itself in Cuba. We all agree that communism is terrible and unproductive and should be opposed, and that, the U.S. government did quite well.

However, opposition is an easy stand to take. The hard part is the next step. What to do once communism does collapse? In Eastern Europe and Russia we had no answer. All the U.S. did was sit and watch what unfolded on the nightly news.

Our government had spent the last forty years trying to combat communism only to have no answer when it finally did fall. The same situation could happen in Cuba.

Most experts agree that Cuba lacks economic strength to survive on its own. An important foreign policy crisis is eventually going to confront the Clinton administration. How are they going to respond? Or are they?

To the events in Eastern Europe and Russia, the Bush administration watched passively and said the hardship that follows is a European problem, therefore Germany and the E.C. should deal with it because the United States has its own worries.

Well, that was easy to do because Eastern Europe and Russia are an ocean and a continent away. Economic refugees from Romania were not coming to the United States, but instead flocking to Germany.

However, when Castro is gone from power Cuban refugees are not going to Berlin, Frankfurt or Milan. They'll be heading to Miami, Tampa, and New Orleans. In which case it becomes our problem.

What's our government going to do? Are they going to open their arms to them? Or are they going to send them back like Bush did to the Haitians?

There are also questions to be answered about the country itself and those Cubans that remain.

Is the U.S. going to insert a puppet government sympathetic to everything we say and do? Are we going to suggest that the Cubans elect their own leaders immediately and reform themselves with minimal help from us? Or maybe we will just watch because we have no policy to deal with the "day after". It is very simple to say Castro is a bad and horrible leader for Cuba and he should be gone, but how does one deal with the new situation after he leaves?

Christopher Rogers is a Collegian Staff member.

Personalities versus politics; Peron's days

One of the most controversial and charismatic leaders since the conclusion of World War II was Juan Peron, President of Argentina from 1946-55 and then again from 1973-74.

During his first tenure as President, Peron exercised virtually dictatorial powers, relying on demagoguery and repression as well as social reform to maintain his enormous hold over Argentina's working class; who were his main base of support.

Peron exemplified the Latin American tradition of caudillos- strong semi-dictatorial populists whose power rested on their captivating personalities rather than on any clear-cut political philosophy or party.

Christopher
ROGERS

Peron's background lied within the Argentinian military apparatus. At fifteen, he entered the Colegio Militar de la Nacion, Argentina's Military Academy, from which he graduated as a sublieutenant and then went to the Sargento Cabral's officers' school with the rank of captain.

In 1930 he played a minor role in the coup that toppled the democratically elected President.

Peron's rapid rise to power began in June 1943, when he played a key role in yet another coup that deposed President Castillo. In the next government he became undersecretary of war and chief of staff of the first army division. More important, however, was his appointment of the moribund National Dept. of Labor which he transformed into the powerful Secretariat of Welfare and Labor.

Ever the keen political observer, Peron was well aware that Argentina was changing from an agricultural to an industrial society, and that the new working classes represented an untapped political force. Therefore, Peron used his position as head of the Secretariat of Labor to win a large and following among the workers who he called the "descamisados," or shirtless ones.

He enacted measures to bring them such benfits as wage increases, bonuses, social and low-cost housing and established control over the labor unions, which he forged into powerful organizations that expressed loyalty to him.

Peron's power struggle for leadership of the country, climaxed in October of 1945, when generals opposed to Peron, forced his resignation and jailed him. They were resentful of his growing popularity and his transformation of the economy of the corporate state.

At the moment of Peron's strategy of courting labor produced its most dramatic result. Hearing of his imprisonment, hundreds of thousands of workers staged a peaceful invasion of Buenos Aires, and as result of this, Peron was released.

In February 1946, Peron was formally elected to become Argentina's next President. In the beginning, Peron was fairly successful. Argentina's coffers were filled with currency earned by exporting food during World War II. Banks railroads and basic utilities were nationalized, and tens of thousands of public works projects were constructed. It was Argentina's new deal.

Through his second wife's government, which financed charity, the Eva Peron Foundation, Evita as she was known, channeled some 10 million a year into social benefits. Until this day, Evita Peron, who died of cancer in 1952 remains a saint-like figure in Argentina; and many continue to faint while visiting her tomb or a statue of her erected on her behalf while she and her husband were in power.

However, the seeds were already sowed that produced the chaos that followed. The outpouring of government spending led to inflation, corruption flourished, the treasury was depleted and nationalized industries stagnated. Invoking national security, Peron stepped up his dictatorial repressions, establishing control over the judiciary, imposing censorship on the press, and smothering opposition in the trade unions, and the universities.

By 1955 opposition to his regime had crystallized and on September 16, 1955 a military revolt erupted. Three days later he resigned the Presidency and fled the country on a Paraguayan gunboat.

He returned to power a remakable eighteen years later only to die shortly thereafter.

How is a man who used dictatorial-like policies to maintain power when his rule was evaporating years later and continued to be held in high esteem today?

Juan Peron possessed all the personality traits that the people of South America and people of Latin origin in general are attracted to, sometimes regardless of politics.

He, like Getulio Vargas of Brazil, Benito Mussolini of Italy, and Francisco Franco of Spain, was a strong-willed captivating personality and orator who captured the imagination of his people; similar to the effect that Abraham Lincoln, and John F. Kennedy had on the American public. Regardless of their policies, men like these hold tremendous control over their people, unless they go too far.

Christopher Rogers is a Collegian staff member.

Third World students need to voice opinions

I find it amazing that this semester is coming to an end, and that the Third World Affairs Page is still short of writers.

Inês
VIEIRA

My name is Ines Vieira, and I'm the editor of this page. I am writing to express my concern that I won't be able to continue running this page successfully due to the fact that I find a serious lack of interest from the Third World community on this campus, regarding this page.

I'm certain this isn't caused by a shortage of members representing this community on the UMass campus, but rather, a lack of an active desire to contribute to what should be a channel to represent voices.

Regardless of what the reason for this blunt inactivity may be, I can only resort to once again appealing to every student on this campus. Graduate or undergraduate students, who are either from a Third World country, or merely find an interest in issues concerning this page, please contribute some time and skill to represent the Third World community in the Collegian.

It is up to the members of the Third World community to become active and participate. Without such participation, I feel like I'm editing a page which is guided toward an imaginary audience, although I know that this is not the case. Everyone is welcome to write for this page and every contribution is welcomed.

Inês Vieira is a Collegian staff member.

Write for the Third World Affairs Page

It's fun! Really!
All Graduates and Undergraduates are welcome.
Contact Inês Vieira
The Collegian, 113 Campus Center

The Collegian is looking for writers from all communities to contribute articles and editorials.

The semester is nearly over, but it isn't too late to make your voice heard! If you have an idea for a story or an editorial come down to the Collegian offices – room 113 in the Campus Center Basement.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
The Largest College Daily in New England

Arts & Living

Acting group proves nothing is Improvable

By SHAWN MCDONNELL
Collegian Staff

There's something uniquely entertaining in watching actors sweat their way through a show in which anything could go wrong at any time, and probably will. Where else but in Improv could an audience member order a half-dozen actors to sing a grand opera about parking in E-Lot? Where else but in Improv would the actors actually do it?

The performance of Mission Improvable at Hampden Theater, Friday night, was a delight from start to finish. In the course of a ninety-minute show, their audience was treated to a feast of spontaneous fun, including a musical quartet with a grudge against Republicans, a smarmy TV star named Jack Colostomy, and — yes — a grand opera about E-Lot.

Having undergone numerous changes since its formation in the fall of 1991, this undergraduate comedy/theatre troupe has finally struck upon the perfect membership to complement its freewheeling style.

Linda Carranza is the pangloss of the group, a "persnickety" professorial type, and Brian Jewell is the sly one with the unsettling smile, the strange kid in the back of every high school science class.

Together, the two serve as unofficial emcees, stringing together the evening's many games in the guise of bumbling art critics. Commenting on improvised "sculptures," the pair prove to be remarkably quick-witted.

Carranza relates an absurd pile of bodies (the sculpture is inexplicably titled "Cheerios") to the drive for advancement in a stratified society, while Jewell mistakes an audience member for a non-realistic extension of the sculpture and marvels at his deliciously "misshapen" features.

Sonal Patel is the anxious bundle of malicious energy, who, in one delightful game, turns a television quiz show into a personal lobby for the appreciation of bodily fluids. Samantha Smith sends the game "He Said/She Said" (in which performers offer two perspectives on a situation suggested by the audience) spinning wildly out of control, when she turns a romantic confrontation into a war — in which even Cool Whip can be brandished as a weapon.

Smith also supplies an inspired one-woman re-enactment of A Midsummer Night's Dream, whose Theatre Guild incarnation was among their competition, Friday night.

Turn to MISSION, page 8

Singer Wheeler & poet Liu shine at GLB cafe

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Erica Wheeler
Timothy Liu
Hampden Theater
Nov. 22, 1992

I'll be completely honest. I walked into the latest GLB cafe, sponsored by the Program for GLB Concerns, with a bad attitude. On the menu Sunday evening was a folk singer and a local poet. That's all I needed, I thought, two hours of pretentious folk preaching and poetry somewhere around those "sky fits heaven" GAP commercials.

But thankfully, I was completely taken by surprise.

UMass graduate student Timothy Liu opened the evening to an intimate and responsive crowd. With tiny tables with candles burning quietly and audience seating, Hampden Theater proved just the right atmosphere for Liu's sometimes shocking, heartfelt poetry.

He began with "Indian Summer," a dreamy diatribe on that time of the year when both the weather and the individual "get warm." Drifting seamless through each poem, only linked by his potent imagery and double entendres, Lui broke and asked for the house lights to be turned up, in order to get closer to audience.

Announcing that his poems are "not for the weak," Lui's works discussed a range of issues, from remembrances of buying Playgirls and hiding them under his mattress in "Pornography" to phone sex and life after getting an HIV test.

After his performance, Lui said what he wants people to get out of his poetry is for their "hearts to be broken" and to make people feel "less alone."

Erica Wheeler then took the stage.

It was one of those rare times in a life where you're just totally floored and joyfully impressed. Erica Wheeler will do that to you. Sent down from some folk heaven high in the sky, Wheeler's honest, emotional and most unprententious lyrics coupled with her honey-blond voice captivated this reviewer, and indeed the entire audience as well.

The devoted crowd knew Wheeler, a graduate of Hampshire College, and knew her well. Opening with a delicate chant and inducing the audience to join in, the talented singer/songwriter captivated the crowd for two 45-minute sets.

Wheeler's songs are pure emotion. The loaded tunes ranged from wrenching love songs to thoughts of life on the road. Singing of her obviously beloved Southwest (the area of the country, not the the dorms) and of her first lesbian love song (though she says she didn't know it then), Wheeler proved an engaging and thoughtful performer.

Turn to CAFE, page 8

FAC exhibit spells out strong social messages

By MARJORIE C. VANCURA
Collegian Correspondent

The University Gallery, located in the Fine Arts Center, is currently exhibiting the work of Mike Glier, an accomplished artist with a strong social message. The art pieces in his one-man exhibition titled The Alphabet of Lili (1991-1992) are large fiberglass and aluminum panels convincingly drawn with charcoal and painted with acrylics. The 45" X 36" panels are 26 in number, one for every letter of the alphabet.

Each panel conveys a personal message to the artist's six year-old daughter Lili. The message is strong, as is the draftsmanship of each work. The images are drawn directly with charcoal onto the fiberglass. The graphic effect of this method is immediate and satisfying.

A recurring image is the rendering of girlish legs that stand stocky and knock-kneed in many of the paintings. They are drawn with a sure and heavy hand, one familiar with the daughter's form. In one painting representing the letter "T," the same legs appear and are painted a disturbing red. They are disembodied at the hip, resembling a pair of dolls legs that have come loose of their sockets. They stand in the foreground amidst a desolate landscape, dwarfing the wasteland of barren terrain they inhabit.

A red hand floats at mid-thigh and grips an uprooted tree held like a child's toy. The tangled roots confront the viewer as they drip bloodily with life's sap. Charcoal circles hover above the scene; the two lines inside them are clock's hands — representing the inevitable passage of time.

The mark-making is vigorous across the landscape. There is a sense of urgency, as if Mr. Glier is presenting an awful premonition of the future while pleading that something be done to alter it. Coral hues and earthen tones pervade the somber scene. The acrylic is applied thickly at the forefront of the land, where the legs stand as if on a shelf that drops off into nothingness. The paint drips down from the shelf illusion to reveal the green tinted fiberglass mesh beneath.

Glier layers his partially drawn figures in an atmosphere that arises out of the haze of acrylic washes. The differenes in scale and perspective provide the viewer with many possibilities of interpretation. With this masterful technique, he achieves the feeling of a narrative as one figure appears superimposed over another.

In the painting denoting the letter "M," a swirling void of black with white streaks virtually dissolve the lower body of a young girl standing amidst the center of the tempest. Her haunting eyes look out from beneath a furrowed brow crowned by a shock of black hair. Her expression is intense and menacing, for in her sinuous, ghost white hands she grips a machete. The blade of the weapon is turned inward, held by knobby fingertips. Above her disheveled, stringy hair floats a simple "M" that is almost lost amidst the vapor of coral pinks and blue-grays swirling about her form. Symbols for feathers and the curved machete flutter about her face and shoulders. With the comparison of the feather to the weapon, Glier makes even the most benevolent objects menacing.

Yet, Mike Glier seems to be sending a message that is as much about hope as it is about despair. Optimism and great expectations for the future are sensed in the panel representing the letter "E." Again, he renders the stocky legs, this time mere shadows drawn with charcoal dust. A single perfect egg hovers in midair, near the area of where the girl's heart and abdomen would be if her upper

Turn to EXHIBIT, page 8

AIDS
AIDS is everyone's problem and everyone must educate themselves now! Donate $5 or more and receive our publications. Send name, address, and enclosed donation: $_____
MAIL TO:
THE RUBBERS BROS.™
AIDS Education Publications
P.O. Box 431 - UMC, Wilbraham, MA 01095-0431
AIDS Information - Tel. 1-800-745-1057

EARN A FREE TRIP!!
Be a Spring Break Rep with Campus Get-Aways
Call Now
800-2-CANCUN

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST
NORTHAMPTON

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TONIGHT
TUESDAY 6:00 PM
WHMP Live Radio Show
with
COACH JOHN CALIPARI
• LIVE Question & Answer Session
• Exclusively at Rafters
• Meet the Coach and Players
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

STUDENT FITNESS MEMBERSHIPS!!!!!
One Easy Payment! No Gimmicks!
$139.00 *SPECIAL RATE! September to May
MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES*:
• Tennis • Racquetball • Massage Therapy
• Nautilis • Aerobics(includes step)
• Free Weights • Fitness testing • Sauna
• Basketball • Cardiovascular (Stairmaster®, LifeCycles®)
*Not all clubs feature all amenities Nominal Fee
Comparable Value $400 if paid monthly! You save nearly 50% by paying for your membership on the day you join! Hurry! Act right now & Save!
ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

It's time to wake up with Rise Robots Rise

COURTESY BRIAN CROSS

Rise Roberts Rise will open up for House of Pain (above) tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton. The show is 18+.

By DENISE HENRY
Collegian Correspondent

The sounds of Rise Robots Rise bring us a bold mixture of funk, hip-hop, soul and rock. It has been said that their music has evoked enthusiastic comparisons to Frank Zappa, Public Enemy, Soul II Soul, and George Clinton. TVT Recording Artists RRR offers us a kind of eccentric theatre in which different characters hold forth contrasting viewpoints on everything from the media tricksters in our government to the jungle that we call our society.

The innovative melody of this group gives you a chance to enjoy the soulful sounds of cuts like "All Sewn Up," and the funky bass lines and wailing vocals of songs like, "Flowers and Birds." The diverse tracks on RRR's self-titled debut album were inspired by issues of concern, such as ecological neglect, "Pressured to move, we act, react, check the facts/ Pull up the slack, sit back and watch the dogs attack/ Jump, to the rhythm of your own mind/ Black out the screen when the time comes to rise" from their song "Buffalo Wack Child."

RRR, according to TVT records has played for packed houses in Washington D.C. and Toronto, Canada. Critics, like the Philly Rock Guide has praised this band as "having songs that leap out at you as a pure hit... this band put on one of the best shows of the year. They're a terrific crossover act: excellent guitar to pull in a rock audience; the dynamite rhythm section for dance, and the rap and soul voices to power it."

The cut "Buffalo Wack Child" even tried to incorporate a sound much like Chuck D's style of rap. But most importantly the formula that RRR has used will move people to question their society and break away from the mold that has conformed us all into a group of robots.

According to TVT, RRR are trying to tell us to break our silence and wake up and become "aware." According to this group, maybe by waking up we can defend ourselves against those people who want to bend us against our will to meet someone else's ends.

The sounds of RRR is a creation of vivid hopefulness, melodic madness and enthusiastic living.

According to Rise Robots Rise, "This is the way we move, Why be so afraid?/ We are the reason that you waited so long/ We can change your mind/ Open your heart and let us come inside/ This is the way we move."

■ mission

continued from page 7

Brad Potter is the unflappable straight guy of the group, who plays the conscience of Electra's father in one of the evening's more risk-taking games (this unusual character was provided, like most of Mission's fodder, by a member of the audience).

But my vote for standout performance goes to Mission's sixth and final member Kevin Nessman, the grandiloquent, clueless hero who is given to erratic movement and operatic excess. Particularly memorable is Nessman's performance as "Squigmondo," a deadpan psychic who uses his extrasensory talents to divine the significance behind a child's wind-up Woodstock doll.

It is difficult to review a show which will never be the same again, but the simple fun of watching actors breeze through a series of ridiculous games, at the whim of an audience devoted to tripping them up, makes any evening with Mission Improvable worthwhile.

■ cafe

continued from page 7

In between songs, Wheeler's sometimes biting but mostly down home wit served to lighten the mood and downplay the whole performance thing. Wheeler's humor ran from stories of getting lost on her way to Boston to going home for Thanksgiving and downright inspired impressions of both Ross Perot and Manuel Noreiga.

Wheeler's true strength is how marvelously she can weave humor and revelation without preachy moral lessons or neat messages.

Needless to say, the evening turned out to be full of exceeded expectations. And now to dispense with the shameless plugs: if Erica Wheeler has you piqued, you too can be amazed at the Iron Horse on December 10. The next GLB cafe will be held December 6 and will feature local author Steven Reil, who will give a reading.

■ exhibit

continued from page 7

body was visible. The egg's delicate form predicts harmony and peace. It foretells Lili's maturation into womanhood and her destiny as mother and nurturer. With this imagery, the appeal to bring positive change to a world shaken by violence and is painfully apparent.

A viewer can never truly know the intent and meaning behind a series of artwork, especially one as deeply embedded in personal imagery and symbolism as that of Mike Glier. Thus, one's initial reaction and later contemplation of the work may only serve to further mystify rather than enlighten. However, it is important to understand the validity of bringing one's own genuine feeling and emotional response into play. In doing so, the viewer can re-interpret an artist's personal expression into their own understanding of art.

Mike Glier's The Alphabet of Lili will be on exhibit at the Fine Arts Center University Gallery until Dec. 18.

La Cucina di
Pinocchio
PIZZA, SUBS, & CALZONES
FREE DELIVERY ~ 256-4110

30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
Hours:
Mon-Thurs. 11:30am to 2:00am
Fri.-Sat. 11:30am to 3:00am
Sun. 11:30am to 1:00am

LASAGNA SALADS

MasterCard VISA AMERICAN EXPRESS

Coupons valid for delivery or pick-up only.

$1.50 OFF any Large Pizza with 2 toppings
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

$1.00 OFF any Large Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

Any 2 Calzones for $7.00
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only

3 Calzones for $9.95
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only

TWIN SPECIAL
2 Large Cheese Pizzas
$12.50
Any Topping $1.25 more
Pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

$1.00 OFF any Medium Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

CALVIN AND HOBBES — By BILL WATTERSON

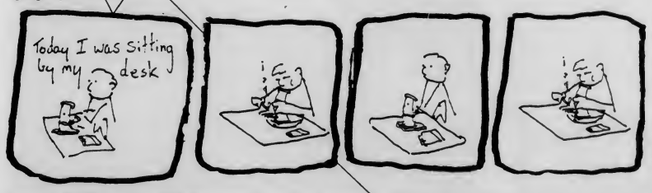
JIM'S JOURNAL — By JIM

DOONESBURY — By GARRY TRUDEAU

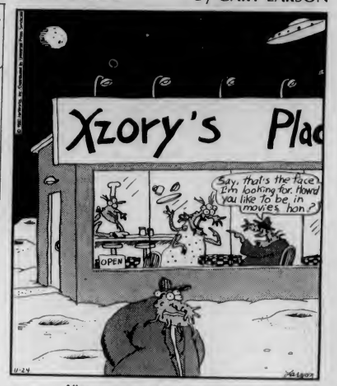
THE ADVENTURES OF FRED — By CHRIS SHADOIAN

WILMINGTON — By M.K. ANDERSON

BOY AND RURU — By PITT



THE FAR SIDE — By GARY LARSON



Alien corner cafes, where sometimes dreams do come true.

Happy Thanksgiving

There will not be a Collegian tomorrow due to the large number of people leaving the Valley for the break.

BLAT!

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Financial assistance could come from an unexpected quarter. You can learn to manage your money better. An old acquaintance could express a romantic interest in you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pay more attention to details when it comes to handling financial transactions. A misunderstanding could prove very expensive. Your high ideals tell you the right path to follow in romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take a more lenient view toward an associate. Ignore the rantings of unCharitable people. Be more conscientious in your dealings with offspring. Avoid playing favorites.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Having a one-track mind could be dangerous now. Stop daydreaming and plan some fun activities with your friends. Widening your intellectual horizons will make you a more interesting companion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The trial balloon you sent aloft concerning romance returns to earth bearing good news. You are more aware than ever of your mate's needs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Several wonderful surprises are in store. A business matter will be handled to your satisfaction. Everything should be coming up roses where your love life is concerned!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Those with children may be feeling the financial pinch. A temporary sacrifice is well worth the inconvenience. An older sibling offers some valuable advice in return for money owed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Airing your feelings can be healthy. Speak your mind rather than harboring a grudge. An upbeat attitude helps you see a change of plans in a positive light.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some unusual opportunities present themselves now. You find new ways to save on entertainment costs. Avoid committing too much time or energy to projects that do not really interest you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Buckle down to business this morning. Lasso in those wayward credit cards. Although sales are tempting, buy only what you can truly afford.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tackle routine chores without complaint this morning. There is new emphasis on living in the moment. Let your spontaneous side develop. Happy Thanksgiving.

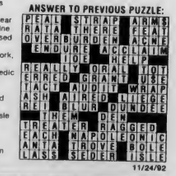
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Show enthusiasm for an opportunity made available through a friend or former coworker. Avoid giving the impression that you are arrogant or snobbish.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

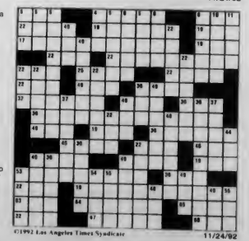
ACROSS
1 Danson or Kennedy
4 "— Is Born"
9 "Charlotte's —"
12 Asian river
14 Debaucher
16 Chopper
17 Playground activity
19 King Cole
20 Half a confection
21 Playground game
23 Arrest
25 Does handiwork
27 Eject
28 Palindromic preposition
29 Printing spaces
30 Flat-bottomed boat
32 Lever supports
34 Take the blue ribbon
35 Penn Station builder
38 Playground game
41 Alt. time zone
42 Corn unit
43 Deter's preference
45 Miss America walkway
47 Utter
48 Gelid
49 Norse god
51 Haydn, familiarly
52 Bee follower
53 Playground game
56 Louis XIV, for one
58 Cry of discovery
59 Playground game
63 Barbie's boyfriend
64 Hot and damp
65 "The King —"
66 Wrath
67 Lass in "The Devil's Disciple"
68 Hollywood's Cruise

DOWN
1 — Mahal
2 Ostrich's kin
3 Exercise gear
4 Schwarzenegger, to friends
5 Spectacles
6 Corrida combatants
7 Over
8 D.C. figures
9 Desires
10 Perfectly clear
11 Alcott heroine
13 London-based orch.
15 Scouting work, for short
18 Learning medic
22 Pass in a marathon
23 Ship-shaped clock
24 Caribbean isle
26 Garland
30 Brooch
31 Release
33 Derived from oranges
34 Conflict
36 Systematic
37 "— in the Crowd": Lee Remick debut
39 Atlas item
40 Former Russian aristocrat
44 Ship's rope
48 Egyptian crosses
47 Deli purchase
49 Second of two
50 Actress Keaton
51 Entreaties
53 Munro's pen name
54 Snack
55 Summer coolers
57 Explorer Johnson
60 Carrie or Louis
61 Conductor de Waart
62 Actress Stanley

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



11/24/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/24/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Dan Wetzel
Copy Editrix ..... Tami Monahan
PhotoTechnician ..... Christopher Evans
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Kelly D'Amato, Dana Dorman, Mike Carvalho

Menu

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese
Duchess Meat Pie
BASICS LUNCH
Earthy Grilled Cheese
Lentil Chili

DINNER
Chicken Hoagie
Beef Fajita
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Hoagie
Greek Style Skillet

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

MIA

continued from page 1

Underwood, 52, and his group work for the Joint Task Force Full Accounting, a U.S. military program based in Honolulu. When the four-member team calls a search, it is backed up by dozens of Cambodians and U.S. soldiers brought in from the Pacific.

Underwood and another Vietnam War veteran, Marine Lt. Col Charles Clayton, 42, of Astoria, Ore., said it was not worth intruding into Khmer Rouge territory, with its booby traps and mines, to account for the missing.

"You've got to weigh your job against what the potential threat is," Underwood said. "Neither one of us is willing to risk the life of a 19-year-old American for 22-year-old bones."

In October, the first month for which the group kept records, eight searches were called off because of fighting or because of the Khmer Rouge's refusal to let in the Americans, Underwood said.

In March, the team recovered four sets of remains. Three have been identified as those of French and Japanese journalists: the fourth has not been identified. Since June, 13 more sets have been recovered and shipped to Hawaii for identification, Clayton said.

Understanding Eating Disorders:

Strategies for Friends and Family

Wednesday - November 18
6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.
University Health Center - Room 304

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

Winter Session 1993

Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!

Register for Winter Session classes.
Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.
So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.

WINTER SESSION:
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.

January 4-25

AHORA

continued from page 3

The AHORA organization has sponsored a host of educational activities as well as "Tremendo Parties" this semester. Among the following were activities; Euphoria Dance Party Oct. 16, El Dia de Los Muertos Nov. 2 and most recently Theater/Politics-Guatemala, "In Search of the Lost Maya" Nov. 10th.

On November 19th, AHORA sponsored a table on the Campus Center concourse, in a effort to bring cultural information of the country of Puerto Rico to students.

On Nov. 23rd, AHORA co-sponsored, Puerto Rican Night, in which famous carribbean dishes were served at the Dining Commons. In addition, traditional folk music was featured along with the evenings activities.

"There is a need for more input from Spanish speaking students, so that we can promote more diverse programs. AHORA does not want to limit the voices solely to a Puerto Rican perspective. We want to represent the Spanish Speaking community as a whole," said Mendoza.

Mendoza makes it clear that the main goal of AHORA is to Unite the Spanish speaking community at UMass.

Mendoza also says he is also concerned with the progress made thus far in relation to the Latin American Cultural Center, which at this time has opened up negotiations with the Administration on the issue of location and future funding.

AHORA has announced it is in the planning stage for an end of the semester Dance Party in association with the Latin American Cultural Center. This event is scheduled for December 5th, to be held in the Student Union Ballroom.

Mendoza says that the organization is open and wants more input from the campus community on ways in which to deal promote and facilitate dialogue among the various diverse groups on campus.

club

continued from page 3

major, played a beautiful classical melody on the piano.

"It was a lot of fun and lot's of variety. I'm excited that we could could do something for the community," said Pao.

Senior Aby Farbor said the evening was filled with incredible and creative talent.

"I think it was great to be a part of this cause. The Madrigals were beautiful and the comedy acts were very original, it made me laugh," Farbor said.

The Coffee House provided a supportive atmosphere in which passerby's stopped in to take a peek and eventually stayed the remainder of the evening. The comedy skits included a television version of the Phil Donahue Show and the Evening News. The crowd enjoyed a comedy skit of the Bus Stop.

Kim Terzich, a UMass student and native of Lake Tahoe, Calif., said she became a member of the group four years ago, and later professed a faith in Jesus Christ.

"It's a great group of people, they're like a family to me," said Terzich.

fire

continued from page 1

was so full of yellow smoke we couldn't see in," said Alie, who then rushed in to get Mollineaux. When Mollineaux came to his senses, he told Alie that Silveira was still inside, prompting Alie to go in a second time.

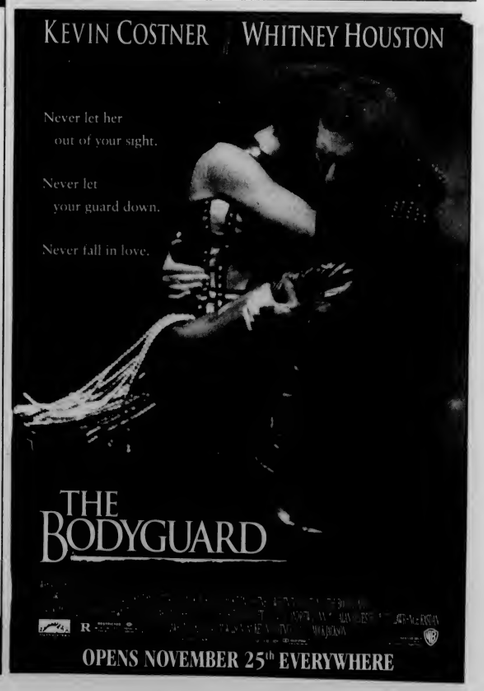
I really didn't think about it that much," said Alie. "It was just like 'uh-oh, I have to get them out.' I think anybody would have done the same thing under the circumstances."

At the same, smoke billowing out of the room set off two hallway smoke detectors, activating the building fire alarm. After Mollineaux and Riveira were out of the room, Alie opened the window in an attempt to clear the smoke. He left the room, shutting the door behind him, said Hoyle.

The supply of fresh air caused the previously smoldering sofa to burst into flames, thereby activating the room's sprinkler system, which doused the fire but caused extensive water damage.

"I feel really bad for them. Everything was totally soaked - their stereo, clothes, everything," said Alie.

Mollineaux and Silveira spent Saturday night in the Campus Center Hotel, and have now been transferred to Kennedy Tower, according to Executive Director of Housing Joe Zannini. Although Housing policy forbids smoking in rooms, no decision has been made as to whether the students will be held responsible for the damage.



Art's picks

continued from page 12

in paradise. New England 24, Atlanta 23.

Philadelphia is in need of an easy opponent. Well, sorry Mikey, because the Colts or the Seahawks don't come up any time soon. The Eagles don't have the type of game to battle it out with the 49ers, this week's opponents. Steve Young just gets it done, while Randall Cunningham is still searching for the magic touch.

The defense of Philly cannot stay on the field for the entire game with Kotite expecting to win. Heath Sherman provides a more potent running attack than Walker, who is making the big bucks.

I know I've said that San Francisco is overrated, but this week's game at Candlestick is a no-brainer. Ricky Watters needs to establish the running game in order to take the pass rush off of the nimble Young. I think he will, sending Philly home with a loss. San Francisco 20, Philadelphia 16.

On Thanksgiving, Mike Utley returns to his first Detroit Lions game since being paralyzed. It may be upsetting for him, though, because the Lions may not be able to stop the visitors, Houston, from crashing the party.

Barry Sanders has been up to his old tricks lately, but even though he ran for 100 yards plus, the Lions only managed one touchdown. Cody Carlson is a formidable replacement for Warren Moon, but the system is more important than who activates it. Remember back to last season when Erik Kramer did so well for Detroit.

It wasn't his incredible passing talent that beat the Cowboys in the playoffs; it was the offensive system, the run and shoot, that caused Dallas the most problems. Same with Houston's offense; Commander Cody's passing talent has nothing to do with scoring. They will score anyway because they are playing in a dome. Houston wins, case closed. Houston 31, Detroit 17.

Dallas won in a defensive battle against Phoenix last week, when both Emmitt Smith and Michael Irvin were held in check. The Cowboys relied on the arm of one Troy Aikman, who proved why he is the best QB in the NFC. Alvin Harper may finally develop into the receiver he was tabbed coming out of Tennessee.

The Giants limp into Texas Stadium Thursday after losing Sean Landeta, Jeff Hostetler, and hopefully, for New York's sake, Ray Handley. Rodney Hampton was nonexistent against the Eagles, and he must run well if the Giants have any chance of winning.

The last time these two met was at Giants Stadium, which saw the Cowboys jump out to a 34-point lead only to hang on to a six point decision. Trust me, this time it won't be that close. When was the last time Dallas swept the Giants? Dallas 63, New York 24.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

Jeff Crofts

continued from page 12

finally did something right. With the way they continue to build with Daugherty in the nucleus, I guess they want to win.

Robinson, the Admiral, of course took two years in the Navy before making his big splash into the NBA. The Spurs are definitely glad they waited. No center has ever run the floor like Robinson and his defensive ability is incredible. When things went wrong with the team, it was goodbye Larry Brown, hello Jerry Tarkanian. Never did the Spurs think about life without the Admiral. I guess they want to win.

Seikaly is a power forward playing the pivot. His consistent improvement over the years has helped the Heat improve on par with his skills. Seikaly is an athlete with great quickness who is a little undersized against most centers but still holds his own. Miami now has some of the best young talent in the NBA, with Seikaly has the centerpiece. I guess they want to win.

Ellison has probably been the most maligned among today's bumper crop of centers. As a No. 1 pick with Sacremento, Ellison was a bust. . . until he found Wes Unseld and the Bullets. Now Ellison is a good center, who like Seikaly, might be a better power forward. With Unseld as his tutor however, it looks as though the Bullets want Ellison to be their mainstay in the post for years to come. I guess they want to win.

Mutumbo is another center who has as a coach a former NBA center, Dan Issel. Mutumbo is a physical specimen with the ability to dominate with force at either end. If Issel can instill Mutumbo with some of the game's subtleties than the Nuggets will go far. By tinkering with the backcourt and giving Mutumbo a power forward next to him in LaPhonso Ellis, the Nuggets have shown faith in the big guy. I guess they want to win.

Next week: I'll look at this year's rookies and the centers of the future.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist

The Collegian prints nineteen thousand copies a day. It would take an awful long time to read that many newspapers. That's why most people around here read 'em nice and slow. One copy at a time.
Collegian Advertising.
545-3500

haircuts always $10!
BUCCI
a hair space
75 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256-0733

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton /Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TUESDAY
SHARK NIGHT
- Singles Pool Tournament -
• $2.00 Entrance Fee •
• Free Pizza Slices •
• Play for Cash •
• Sign up 7:00-7:45 •
Watch All The Sports on Satellite Dish
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 8 - 5 pm
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap/Rinse/Wax
Bubble Brush/Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser
Vacuum Cleaners
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

OneEarth Acupuncture
(413) 549-6856
healthcare for the 90's.
245 Lincoln Avenue, in Amherst
Frederick E. Steinway,
licensed acupuncturist, N.C.C.A. Diplomate

BASHA'S BARGAIN BASEMENT
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
That Includes Elegant Silver Jewellery, Richly Colored Hand Embroidered Ladies Dresses & Exquisite Hand-Crafted Gifts.
241 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 413-586-6030

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Armenian Club meeting Tues. Nov. 24 at 8:00. Pizza served. New members welcome Rm. 178 CC

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Attention Southwest!
It's a winter Snowball Bash and you are invited
Dec. 11 9pm - 1am
Student Union Ballroom
Only $5 for food, dancing, DJ and a great party!
Tickets on sale now at DC's

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Naads some work call 549-3662.

FOR RENT

Amherst 2 bedroom apt
1 room for rent
2 full baths w/heat included
On bus route
available immediately
Call Tom or Stacy 258-0274

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 588-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $895/mo 256-0741

Puffton room avelble M/F
1/1/93 - 6/30/93
$224.50/mo
FREE bed, rug, drassar
Desk/$15
Call 549-1811

Two females for double bedroom Presidential apts 162 Each + 549-4705

FOR SALE

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Powar Pacs - case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

Be on T.V. Many needed for commercials. Now hiring all ages, for casting info. Call (615) 779-7111 Ext. T-458

Holiday jobs for the environment Work with MASSpirg to pass the toughest environmental laws in the country.
* Learn campaign skills
* Stop Pollution
* Make a difference!
Call Carmen 256-6434

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room & board & other benefits! Financially & culturally rewarding! For program Call: (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Typist is needed part time to work on Macintosh computer. Call Reza for an appointment 549-3840

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost gold watch of personal value in/near Newman Center. Please call 546-1394 if found.

Lost silver and torquoise claddaugh ring somewhere on campus 11/19. If found call 253-2733.

MUSICIANS

Band seeking experienced lead singer and keyboard/organ player. Covers and originals. Influences include Cream, the Meters, King Curtis. Serious inquiries only. 549-5862.

PERSONALS

Ben,
Only one month, but I feel that I've been carrying your gentle heart through the ages . . .
Lori

Happy Birthday Damien!
Wish I could be there
Smile! - Jessica

Heppsy Birthday Merin

Meureen --
Our new VP -- Congrats
-- Debbie

Megster Will you be tha ACE in my heart? ????

Pete --
Congratulations!
Love, Debbie

Sixteh!
9 more years until the big thraa zero. Sat ma up with an end-of-collega dara, and I'll set you up with your wine.

Happy 21st

ROOMATES WANTED

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7804

2 fun girls needed to share 1 large bedroom in 3 bedroom puffton apartment Great location new rug 549-0939

Male or female roommate wanted to share a 2 bdr Brandywine Apt. starting January 1. Call Erin or John. 549-2653.

SERVICES

Pregnent? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amharst araa for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amharst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Terot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

SKI – Intercollegiate ski weeks only $209. Includes: 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (Mountainside condo)/5 days intercollegiate activities (Drinking age -- 18), sponsored by Labatts, Molson and Mt. Sutton, Canada (Just across the Vermont border) group leader discount Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Springbraak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9.

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $$$ Before Jan. 1
Jesse 546-6966

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, raports, theses, dissertations.
Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

WANTED

Need cash for Holidays I will buy your sports cards. Complete set or single cards. Call Dave 546-5690

Sports

Women swimmers drop second in a row

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Correspondent

For spectators who find swimming boring, Saturday's battle with Northeastern was their meet to watch. Unfortunately, the UMass women's swimming and diving team slipped to a 2-2 record when they lost to arch-rival Northeastern.

The final score (Northeastern 186, UMass 114) can not describe the closeness of the races. The Minutewomen lost many of their races due to final second touch-outs.

Northeastern kept a steady lead over UMass despite the Minutewomen's attempt to comeback.

"We didn't capitalize on a lot of those close races," said head coach Bob Newcomb. "As the meet went on we swam better and had better races with more confidence."

"Beating us seemed to be their goal for this part of the season," said assistant coach Ed Melanson. "We want to peak for the A-10 meet."

The Minutewomen had to settle for second place in several events due to Northeastern clenching the 1st place finish at the last second. The 100-yard backstroke, 100 and 200-yard breaststroke and the final 400-yard freestyle relay all missed landing the first place spot by fractions of a second.

Junior Julie Veremey had an outstanding day, finishing first in the 200-yard butterfly with a 2:10.21. This was a personal best for her this season and one of the fastest times for this event in New England. She also landed 1st in the 200-yard individual medley with a 2:16.11.

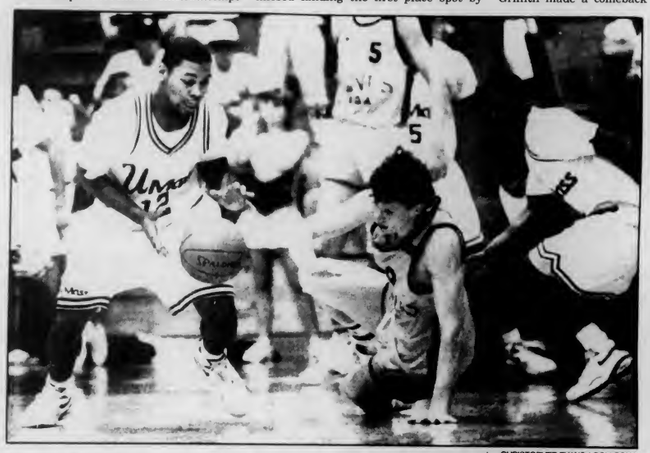
Junior Kim Broad and freshman Sarah Baker stole 1st and 2nd place in the 200-yard freestyle with times of 2:02.67 and 2:05.92 respectively. Both were personal bests for the two.

After being touched out in the 100 and 200-yard breaststroke, freshman Jessica Griffith made a comback to capture a lifetime best in the 200-yard individual medley.

Freshman Heather Suanders landed a 1st in the 200-yard backstroke and sophomores Karen Hodges and Kristen Miles both landed personal bests during the freestyle relays.

Leading diver Allison White faced tough competition from Northeastern diver Jane Delima, but still managed 2nd place on both one and three-meter springboards.

The Minutewomen will journey to Rutgers University in New Brunswick, NJ for a four day Atlantic 10 championship meet starting Dec. 3. This is the first year the A-10 will hold a championship meet.



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Junior guard Chris Robinson picks up a ball during the UMass' 92-49 win over the Latvian National Team Sunday night.

Men's swimming sinks B.C.

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team swam and dove its record to 3-0 Friday night with a convincing 204-94 decision over the Boston College Eagles in what was the team's only home meet of the semester.

UMass is ranked second in New England behind UConn. B.C. dropped to 2-3.

"We didn't take much of a rest before the meet," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth. "We took Thursday morning off, but we swam hard Thursday night. Then we came out Friday and really cranked. I was really psyched. The kids blew B.C. out of the water. They swam really good times for this early in the year."

Sophomore Tim Milbert recorded N.E.'s best time of the young season as he swam a :59.97 in the 100 meter breaststroke. He also won the 200m. breaststroke. Junior Tim Nubar also set recorded the region's fastest time in the 100m. butterfly with a :51.68.

The Minutemen jumped out to a 87-44 mid-meet lead, so B.C. coach Tom Grodin saw no need to swim his team into the ground. From there on in the Eagles basically swam in their off-events. Yarworth wanted his swimmers to be more used to the events they will be in later in the year, so the score became quite lopsided in the second half.

UMass took first place in 14 of the meet's 16 events en route to the team's highest point output of the season. Individual winners included: Scott Reed in the 1000m. freestyle; Chris Barrett in the 200m. freestyle; John Luviano in the 200m. butterfly; Adam Reich in the 50m. freestyle; Jeff Wicklund in the 100m. freestyle; Travis Stevens in the 500m. freestyle; Jay Peluso in the 400m. individual medley; Damian Gunther in one meter diving (twice).

The meet began with the team of Sean Clark, Aaron Osborne, Peluso and Nubar winning the 200m. medley relay with a one-and-a-half second win over the second place team from B.C. The end of the meet was a UMass win in the 200m. freestyle relay. That team's swimmers were Chris Antonetti, Adam Reich, Osborne and Barrett.

MEET NOTES - The Minutemen next swim in the Atlantic 10 Championships at Rutgers in two weeks.

Oilers and Dallas on Turkey Day

Hey, the pigskin prophet is not running on Friday. It is Tuesday, and how about a Thanksgiving edition of Pigskin Picks. For those of you don't know me, tough, because I don't make house calls.

I'll give credit where it is due, and Rich Tettemer deserves a pat on the back for his work at the UMass-Latvia game on Sunday. He filmed the game himself with the TV22 camera, then did interviews after the game, including in the locker room and with Coach Cal. I guess I was given a lesson in what sports journalism is all about. Have a good Turkey day, but now it is off to the games!

Arthur
STAPLETON

Shake up the Patriots: TWO WINS IN A ROW! Scott Zolak has brought new life to the rejuvenated Pats, and Jon "He was here, but now he's gone" Vaughn is finally getting the playing time and is producing. Leonard Russell may lose his starting job at tailback, which could be a blessing in disguise.

Russell is built like a fullback, and has the speed of one. If Vaughn stays hot, Coach Mac should fax a decision to Coach Dante: Move Russell to fullback, stack the line, and have a true running powerhouse. Just a thought on Coach Mac: the guy gets sick, has an operation, and the team wins. Coincidence? Nah, couldn't be.

This week, the juggernauts of Foxboro travel to the Georgia Dome to take on Jerry "He's there now, but will soon be gone" Glanville's Falcons. Newsflash: Deion Sanders ran back another kickoff for a touchdown, and he decided to high step past the diving Steve Christie while taunting him along with the rest of his Bills. Deion, all of this when you were being lambasted 38-0! You are a true winner!

Atlanta's defense is like a sweater left in a moth-filled closet: full of holes. Sanders is a terrible one on one defender and . . .(Deion enters the room and dumps three buckets of ice water consecutively on Stapleton as he types into the terminal) . . . I mean he plays great and seldom gets burned deep, especially by a QB like Zolak. If it is Dante's Inferno in New England, the Patriots are

Turn to ART'S PICKS, page 11

A look at the pivot: Part one

This is the first of a two part column.

Mikan. Russell. Chamberlain. Reed. Cowens. Gilmore Abdul-Jabbar. Unseld. Malone. Parish. The premier centers of basketball past. Ewing. Olajuwon. Daugherty. Robinson. Seikaly. Ellison. Mutumbo. O'Neal. Mourning. The premier centers of basketball present.

If you notice the two lists they are nearly equal in quantity. The difference lies in the fact that the first list spans some 40-50 years while the second list is just a list of centers currently playing simutaneously.

Never before has there been as great a collection of talent playing the center position at one time. Sure, there have been great pivot battles in the past (Russell vs. Chamberlain) but there has never been a time when so many centers created such a bounty of intriguing match-ups.

Jeff
CROFTS

The fact is this treasure chest of pivot men is overlooked in this the age of Air Jordan, three great players = an NBA championship, guards control the game, and awe-inspiring athleticism and quickness.

People look at the Bulls and how they won the championship. Chicago has three great players, Jordan, Scottie Pippen, and Horace Grant, and their starting center is (take your pick) "Invisi", "Terri", or "Horri" Bill Cartwright. If the Bulls can win without a good center than why can't anyone else? That is the train of thought right now in the NBA.

The champions before the Bulls, the Detroit Pistons, won with Bill Laimbeer anchoring the pivot. Laimbeer got by with cheapshots, rebounding, shooting, and absolutely no clue of post play. The Piston's three guard rotation of Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars, and Vinnie Johnson, along with Detroit's unwielding defense won all the accolades. Again, no good center needed to win the NBA crown.

While the center position may never have the effect it did in the past, it will grow in size with the current influx of talented behemoths. Besides, it cannot get any worse than it did in the mid-eighties when centers like Uwe Blab, Bill Wennington, Jon Koncak, and Joe Kleine were fist round picks. Olajuwon started the trend of athletic centers (O.K. Ralph Sampson was great too, but his stock fell quicker than George Bush's) when he was drafted out of Houston and Phi Slamma Jamma. Hakeem is versatile in the paint with the biggest complaints about him being his whining to be traded. The Rockets looked around for a trade, but when no offer hopped out at them, they wisely kept Olajuwon in the fold. I guess the Rockets know the value of a great center. I guess they want to win.

Ewing is the best big game player among the centers. A couple of years ago you could not say that about Patrick, but last year's playoff performance earned him the label. Ewing, interestingly enough, is the best pure scorer in the post among today's centers, while his defensive play has not been as dominating as it looked in college. During this off-season, the Knicks made some major deals, trying to build a great team around Ewing. I guess they want to win.

Daugherty was picked in the draft by the Cleveland Caveliers (who got the pick in a trade) when they were finally coming out of the Ted Stepien doldrums. There is no better overall center than Daugherty. He does it all. When the Cavs traded Roy Hinson to get to pick Daugherty, they

Turn to JEFF CROFTS, page 11

Monday November 30, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 54

Sunny today with increasing clouds, temps 45-50

Arts & Living:
This is it! Superman's pushing up daisies and reviewer Kip Manley wonders if the Man of Steel deserved an ending with a little less "cheeze." Page 7.

Local News:
Area homeless shelters plan an open house to solicit volunteers and increase awarness of how shelters operate. Page 3.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

German refugee center firebombed, toll at 16

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press

BERLIN — A refugee center in western Germany was firebombed Sunday as violence against foreigners continued despite a police crackdown on neo-Nazis and Chancellor Helmut Kohl's call for tolerance.

In Turkey, German flags were burned amid cries of "Down with skinheads!" and "Death to murderers!" at the funeral Sunday for three Turkish victims of the right-wing extremist violence in Germany.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli Cabinet denounced German racist and anti-Semitic attacks and demanded German officials fight right-wing extremism with "the full force of the law."

At least 16 people have died this year in some 1,800 extreme rightists attacks throughout Germany against foreigners and Jews. Neo-Nazis have often found support among those suffering economic hardship, particularly in former East Germany.

The Government has taken measures to curb the violence, including banning a radical-right group, but has been criticized for not doing enough.

In an attack early Sunday in Lingen, near the Dutch border, two firebombs were thrown at buildings housing 20 refugees, but no injuries were reported and damage was minor. Officials offered a $3,100 reward for clues leading to arrests of the attackers.

In Eberswalde, 25 miles northeast of Berlin, a fire at around midnight Saturday destroyed a barracks housing 60 refugees. A watchman suffered smoke inhalation. Police were investigating the cause of the fire.

In an interview broadcast Sunday on Deutschlandfunk radio, Kohl vowed Germany will use the full force of the law against "the radical right mob."

But he said proposed constitutional changes to limit the number of refugees and toughen Germany's liberal asylum policy would not resolve the problems of racism and anti-foreigner violence.

He said Germany's prosperity would have been impossible without help from foreign workers such as the Turks, Germany's largest minority group, many of whom were recruited to work in labor-short Germany in the 1960s.

In Carsamba, Turkey, thousands attended the funeral of an ethnic Turkish woman and two children killed in a firebombing attack on their home in Moelln, Germany, on Nov. 23, Turkey's semi-official Anatolia news agency reported.

"Germany has not reverted to Nazis Germany, and will never do so," German Embassy official Hans Joerg Haber said in a speech in Turkish during the funeral.

CHRISTOPHER HUGHES / COLLEGIAN

FUN AND FOOD — An interestingly dressed man drops by Earthfoods for a bite to eat.

Two students compare U.S. college experience

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

European higher education differs greatly from the American college system, according to two University of Massachusetts students from Central Europe.

"There is an absolute difference in education," said Hungarian Peter Szalay, who is from Gyòr which is located near the Austrian and Slovakian boarder.

Szalay, who is studying political science and economics this year at the University, said European students have year-long courses that have most of their exams at the end of the school year.

"It is much easier than this system. [You] don't have to study all semester, just five to six weeks," said Daniel Tobolka from Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Tobolka, a marketing and management student, said Czechoslovakian colleges have been changing to the American system. Although European students are closer to their classmates than their American counterparts, Szalay said American students know their professors better.

"There is not as much student interaction here. In Hungary you do more with classmates after school," Szalay said. "You know more of your professors here, than in Hungary."

Besides education, both said they noticed Americans are not as politically aware of world situations.

"American students don't know what is going on in the world. Every day we know what is going on in the United States and Africa," Tobolka said.

Szalay said European media focuses more on international news. In Hungary there are usually news programs on television at night, instead of the situation comedies found on American broadcasts, Szalay said. Because American media does not examine foreign issues, Szakay said it is difficult to live in the United States and keep up with the international news.

"You cannot [be politically aware] here," Szalay said. "People are more interested in politics in Hungary."

Tobolka said Czechoslovakians also have more access to world news.

Czechoslovakia was a communist country until three years ago, when the blood-

Turn to EXPERIENCE, page 3

Gunmen raid golf club, kill four in South Africa

By GREG MYRE
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Black gunmen burst into a country club dining room and bar and opened fire with automatic rifles and hand grenades, killing four Whites and wounding 17, officials said Sunday.

The Saturday night slaughter in King William's Town, 625 miles southeast of Johannesburg, was a rare mass attack on Whites. No one claimed responsibility for the assault, which appeared to be racially or politically motivated.

Blood spattered the floor and dining tables at the King William's Town Golf Club. A grenade blew a hole in the floor and shrapnel brought down part of the ceiling.

The assailants escaped, and police announced a massive manhunt and offered a $17,000 reward for information leading to arrests.

The bloody attack was the realization of many Whites' worst fears in this racially divided nation, where violence has taken thousands of Black lives in recent years. Whites — outnumbered 30 million to 5 million — have feared for generations that the Black majority could turn on them.

The attack came at a sensitive time politically. The government and the African national Congress, the leading Black group, are scheduled to meet this week to

Turn to ATTACK, page 2

Deficit stalking Clinton tax cut

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President-elect Clinton' promised middle-classs tax cut next year may fall victim to the government's record budget deficit, just as President Bush's own proposal did earlier this year.

Clinton, whose campaign included a pledge to cut the taxes of middle-income Americans by $60 billion over four years, now adds a condition: "If we can work it out."

He insists there has been no decision to abandon it.

"If there are not adequate revenues to deal with it, they may decided to put aside the tax cut for the short term and concentrate on economic growth incentives," said Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., a senior member of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"We have to take into account what the status of the economy is when we convene in January," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, who supports a tax cut.

"They just don't have the money to pay for it," said Michael Ettlinger, tax policy director of the labor-funded Citizens for Tax Justice.

When Bush sent his budget to Congress in February, he advocated a $500 increase in the personal exemption for each child under 18. But he put the proposal on the back burner after Republican allies in Congress balked at the spending reductions he proposed to pay for it.

Members of Congress, their advisers, lobbyists and others who closely watch tax legislation disagree on the desirability of a general tax cut when the government is taking in about $300 billion a year less than it is spending.

On the other hand, there is general agreement — barring dramatic economic developments — that any tax bill passed by Congress and signed by Clinton early next year will:

• Restore, at least temporarily, the investment tax credit, under which the government in effect would pay 10 percent of the cost of machinery and equipment bought by businesses.

• Raise taxes on the 2 1/2 percent to 3 percent of couples and individuals with the highest incomes. This probably would be restricted to single people with total income above $140,000 and couples over $170,000.

A new, 36 percent tax rate would be created for these people, who now pay a maximum 31 percent on part of their earnings. In addition, a surtax of up to 10 percent would apply to taxable incomes over $1 million.

Christmas sprees up from last year

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Americans shopped enthusiastically during the weekend, showing signs of ending a long Christmas buying drought and giving retailers an encouraging start to the holiday season.

Several big retailers reported Sunday that business was up sharply from the depressed levels of a year ago. But they also noted that sales remained weak in California, which has lagged behind the rest of the country in recovering from the recession.

"We expected strong sales for the post-Thanksgiving weekend and it was strong, with the exception of California," said Kenneth Macke, chairman of Dayton Hudson Corp.

At Sears, Roebuck and Co., "The buying mood was more upbeat than it was the last two years," said Matt Howard, senior vice president for marketing. "We were quite pleased with the business.

Turn to SHOPPING, page 6

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily In New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

■ attack

continued from page 1

try to restart derailed talks on ending White minority rule.

The government, reacting to the country club deaths and other weekend violence, said in a statement that it "cannot successfully deal with violence alone."

It called for the cooperation "of all our communities and of all political leaders. . . There must be a common resolve that our society will no longer tolerate violence."

Ray Radue, a member of parliment, and his wife were attending the dinner and wine-tasting at the club when an undetermined number of Black gunmen attacked the dining room and a bar just before 10 p.m.

"The result was absolute carnage," Radue said. "The attack was totally unprovoked act of terrorism against innocent people."

The attackers rolled grenades into the dining room and the bar, then followed up automatic weapons fire in an assault that lasted less than a minute, witnesses said.

Two White couples were killed and 17 people were injured, several seriously, police said. About 60 people, mostly middle-aged and elderly Whites, which were in the dining room and bar. The club is integrated, and there were Black guests at the bar.

Radue, who was slightly injured by shrapnel, said there were three attackers, while police put the number at five.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, November 30, 1992

Announcement — Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 325, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places today. Please be there!

Seminar — The Social and Demographic Research Institute is presenting a Research in Progress seminar today at 3:50 p.m. in W32 Machmer. The seminar will feature Peter H. Ross discussing "Family Homelessness as an Iatrogenic Chimera."

Announcement — Seniors it's not too late for an intersession internship. Spring semester co-ops are also still available. Contact the Field Experience office of Mather Career Center at 545-6265 for additional information.

Tuesday, December 1

Meeting — There will be a meeting of the Institute for the Healing of Racism at 7 p.m. in Room 917 of the Campus Center. Meetings are held every first and third Tuesday of the month.

Group — Everywoman's Center will be offering a group for women who are questioning their sexual identity. The deadline for registering is Dec. 11. The group will begin Jan. 14. It will meet for 8 weeks on Thursdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m. at the Everywoman's Center, Wilder Hall.

Job Fair — There will be a Job Fair in Cincinnati on Dec. 18. If interested, call the Job Expo Hotline at (513) 579-3119.

EPA targets oil-based paints

By JONATHAN YENKIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — For years, the battle against air pollution has targeted factories and automobile tailpipes. Now government agencies are taking a closer look at another source of problem fumes: the tip of the paint brush.

At issue are oil-based paints that use chemical solvents, long a staple of the paint industry.

The Environmental Protection Agency is working on rules on restrict emissions of volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, from these paints to comply with the Clean Air Act. These particles have been blamed for contributing to the buildup of ozone.

"It's one of the last uncontrolled categories," said Richard Driscoll, an analyst with the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection.

More and more regions have begun restricting paint emissions, particularly areas with smog problems.

"We have such a severe air quality problem in Southern California that oil-based paints will have to be eventually phased out if we are to meet federal air quality standards," said Barry Wallerstein, assistant deputy executive officer for the South Coast Air Quality Management District, the local air pollution control agency in Los Angeles.

"Paints and solvents are No. 2 right behind the cars," Wallerstein said.

But Michael Murphy, general counsel for Rust-Oleum Corp. in Vernon Hills, Ill., which makes mostly oil-based paints, maintained: "Nobody is going to put oil-based coatings out of business."

Solvent-based paints last year accounted for nearly a quarter of the 500 million gallons of paints sold to consumers for home painting, according to industry estimates.

While water-based latex paints are most commonly used for home painting — largely because they clean up easily with soap and water rather than toxic solvents — the harder finish of oil paints is often preferred for painting floors or surfaces that must endure frequent moisture.

Nonetheless, the Glidden Co. has set a goal of eliminating all solvents from its household paints by the year 2000, said Jim Sainsbury, manager of product regulation for the Cleveland-based company.

Even latex paints typically contain a small dose of solvents, but Glidden this year introduced an interior pain that is solvent-free.

While acknowledging that oil-based paints have a tougher surface, Sainsbury said latex paints are being constantly imporved and "are more than adequate" for routine consumer use.

Neighbors ponder Porter case

By PAM SCHMID
Associated Press

OAKDALE, Minn. — Long before sexual abuse allegations against James Porter became public, neighbors thought the man who called himself a retired banker was odd.

He talked quickly and nervously, glossed over his past, stared out his window for long stretches of time, and called neighborhood children names, his neighbors say.

But none suspected that Porter was a former Roman Catholic priest, let alone a former priest accused of molesting dozens of children in Massachusetts, New Mexico and Minnesota.

On Monday, jury selection is to begin in Minneapolis in the 57-year-old Porter's first sex-abuse trial. At issue are charges that Porter molested his children's 15-year-old baby sitter in 1987, long after he left the priesthood and tried to start a new life. He has pleaded innocent to six counts of fourth-degree criminal sexual conduct in the case.

In addition to the criminal trial beginning this week, Porter faces criminal proceedings on 46 sex-abuse charges in Massachusetts. He also faces civil lawsuits filed by people in Minnesota and New Mexico who say Porter abused them.

According to court records, the Minnesota baby sitter who accused Porter of molesting her cared for his children between 1984 and 1987, usually while Porter was also home. At the time, he lived about a half-mile from his current home, where he moved in late 1987.

A Boston native, Porter left the priesthood in 1974 and lives with his wife and four children in Oakdale, a quiet suburb of split-level homes east of St. Paul. He has declined repeated requests for interviews since the allegations against him became public.

Neighbors say they're past the shock of the accusations against Porter. But some are still angry that they were left in the dark about Porter's past. Now, they stay away from him.

"I don't want to hang him, I just don't want anything to do with him," said a neighbor who asked that her name not be used.

"I think he wants so badly to make people think he's a good fellow and this is all over and done with."

INSTITUTE for the HEALING
of
RACISM

An honest and frank dialogue involving all races so that individuals may help heal each other

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 1
7:00 p.m.
Room 917 Campus Center
Meetings every first and third Tuesday of the month.

Sponsored by the Baha'i Club

CAFE DICARLO

5-College Student Dinner Special

Choice of:
- Lasagna al Forno
- Chicken Parmigiana
- Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
- Pasta Primavera

Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.

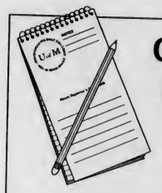
Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992

71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

Kan you ~~spel~~ spel, tipe, right and edditt reel good? Wee kneed yer hellp!

Kome downn two the Kullejun, 113 Kampus Centaur.

Local News



CAMPUS SHORTS

compiled by David Massey

More studies needed

• Who says that scientists waste their time analyzing foregone conclusions?

A new study says an "unacceptably high" number of 15-to-30-year-olds are willing to steal, lie and cheat at work and in school, according to a recent report published in USA Today.

"There is a hole in the moral ozone and it is probably getting bigger," says Michael Josephson, head of the Josephson Institute of Ethics, a non-profit group devoted to character education.

In addition, the study says 32 percent of college students cheated on an exam once; 16 percent of college students have stolen merchandise from a store; 21 percent in college would fake a report to clinch a job.

"We're creating a society where cheaters prosper and you can't honestly tell children that honesty is the best policy," says Ralph Wexler, executive vice president.

• Another recent study says that, hey, if you drink, your grades will actually suffer. Researchers recently reported that college students with low grades consume an average of 11 alcoholic drinks a week, three times the amount members of the honor role drink.

Based on a survey of 56,000 students, the researchers discovered students at larger schools are less likely to drink than their counterparts at small colleges.

From the 78 campuses surveyed, 45 percent of the respondents said they drink on a weekly or more frequent basis. The survey was conducted by Southern Illinois University and the College of William and Mary.

Pinball people: II

The saga continues. A student, apparently emotionally scarred by the "broken-down" arcade machines next to the Hatch, is urging the campus community to boycott the machines, which are run by the Campus Center.

Fix wrestling challenge by Monday, Nov. 30," one student declared on a piece of paper posted in the arcade yesterday.

Students have complained for months that the video games and pinball machines are over-priced and are in a constant state of disrepair.

"Since the University store does not care about their ability to actually provide decent amusement when people put .25 to .50 in a machine, go to the Newman Center!" reads the flyer.

Watch for rallies at the Student Union.

Stop, drop, roll

While the Amherst Fire Department enjoyed a decrease in general fire incidents at UMass last month, malicious false fire alarms are on the upswing.

Last month, there were 25 false alarms — almost double the amount at the same time last year. "Housing Services offers a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of false fire alarm perpertrators," according to Keith Hoyle, senior fire prevention officer.

Countdown begins

Although the semester is not over yet, thousands of students are preparing for that annual trek to beaches and bikinis — Spring Break 1993.

And Daytona Beach, Florida can still boast that it's the number-one destination for students. From mid-February to April, thousands of students make the annual pilgrimage to the mecca of spring madness.

Spring Break at Daytona draws huge crowds of students, ranging from 200,000 to 400,000, according to the Daytona Vistor's Bureau.

Finally. . .

If you have story ideas for Campus Shorts, bring them down to David Massey at the Daily Collegian located in the basement of the Campus Center.

Shelters organize for holidays

Open House encourages Happy Valley to volunteer

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

As the holidays near, people have the opportunity to help area shelters organize the region's first Winter Open House to raise money for the homeless as well as increase their understanding of how the shelters work.

"There is a good chance for people to see how the shelter's run and provide support at the same time," said Michaelann Bewsee, a volunteer coordinator for the Fund for the Hungry and Homeless.

The open house is sponsored by the Fund for the Hungry and Homeless. Nine area shelters in Holyoke and Springfield will open their doors Dec. 2 to the homeless and volunteers interested in lending a helping hand.

"I think people are more aware of homelessness around the holiday season so we want to include homeless people at the holidays," Bewsee said. "The way to do it is by volunteering at the shelters."

Dec. 2, from 1 to 4 p.m. citizens are urged to stop in at any of the following participating shelters: Main Street, Loreto House and Broderick House in Holyoke, Prospect, Greenwich and Jefferson shelters in Springfield.

Dec. 3, from 1 to 4 p.m., Horizons shelter and the Springfield Rescue Mission will be opening their doors. The Warming Place, an emergency overflow shelter which rotates its location is also participating, but those interested in volunteering need to call the Open Pantry at 737-5354 for the location.

In addition to helping shelters that are "barely hanging on," Bewsee said there is a need to build financial support to obtain a permanent shelter.

"I hope a lot of people go," Bewsee said. "It's the first time we've done anything like this."

More information may be obtained by contacting area shelters directly or calling the Fund office at 732-0997.

UM Library cashes in wrappers

COURTESY UMASS OFFICE OF PUBLIC INFORMATION

Friends of the Tower Library Michael Weinberg (standing), special assistant to the dean of the graduate school, and library volunteers Siegfried Feller, Marty Martin and Barbra Krawczyk pose with candy wrappers to be cashed in for book money.

To the UMass Friends of the Library, candy wrappers aren't just trash. They're part of an effort to raise money for the library.

Recently, UMass Friends of the Library collected, sorted and bundled more that 600 candy wrappers which the Library expects to redeem for cash from the M&M/Mars and Hershey candy companies.

Michael Weinberg, special assistant to the Dean of the Graduate School and self described "chocoholic," said most of the candy "detritus" was donated by graduate students taking candy bar breaks from thesis and dissertation preparation.

Donors for the program included fraternities, sororities, and the campus bookstore. Fund-raising efforts such as this have raised over $6,000 to benefit the library this year.

"It was a lot of work," said Siegfried Feller, secretary of the Friends of the Library, who helped create posters and bundle the wrappers.

—MICHELLE BAYLISS

Profs to breed a better chicken using DNA info

Two University of Massachusetts veterinary and animal science professors and a broiler breeder company have embarked on a seven-year program to create DNA libraries of specific chicken chromosomes and identification of genetic markers to speed up genetic improvement.

Professors F. Abel Ponce de Leon and J. Robert Smyth will locate genes and DNA markers that influence poultry growth rates, especially as they relate to sex differences in growth and body size.

Their work is funded by Avian Farms International Inc., of Waterville, Maine. Ponce de Leon and Smyth are receiving $90,000 for the first three years, which will fund one Ph.D. student and cover supplies for experiments.

In addition, Avian Farms is responsible for selecting and breeding birds with the desired characteristics to test the accuracy of the findings.

Developed DNA markers will allow Avian Farms to respond to specific segments of the broiler market by breeding birds with the characteristics desired by individual buyers. Superior breeders will be easier to identify, making genetic improvement much faster.

Ponce de Leon received a bachelor's degree in animal science and an agricultural engineering degree from the

Turn to CHICKENS, page 6

■ experience

continued from page 1

less "velvet revolution" occurred. Since then, Czechoslovakia has changed drastically, Tobolka said. Now people have access to a range of products, but although there are plenty of goods to buy, Tobolka said many people do not have enough money.

"In three years it is absolutely different. The only question is people don't have enough money to buy," Tobolka said. "The country is better. I can assure you. You can get anything for currency."

But with the freedom to buy goods, Szalay said the situation in Hungary is difficult.

"The situation is getting worse. People are losing jobs. The communist took loans, paying people to live a safe lifestyle," Szalay said. "Everybody had a job. Nobody starved. We need help from Western countries. We are not as bad as Romania."

Both said that getting foreign countries involved in rebuilding the economy of central European countries will improve the situation by bringing in more currency. Tobolka said other countries must open their markets to goods from central Europe. The United States has leveled protectionist measures against Czechoslovakian textiles and agriculture, because the Czechoslovaks can make material and grow crops at a lower cost, threatening U.S. producers, Tobolka said.

"Open the market. Get involved in world trade," Tobolka said. "We cannot export all our stuff to the United States, because of protectionist measure of U.S. [with Czechoslovakian agriculture and textiles]."

The rising cost of power

Environmental price said important

By JONATHAN YENKIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — Power plants have long been recognized as a source of air pollution, but can there be a price tag on environmental damage such as acid rain or global warming? A growing number of states think so.

Regulators in states such as Massachusetts, New York, California and Wisconsin have started forcing utilities to consider potential environmental costs when planning future power plants.

Some utilities have balked, arguing that the cost estimates are far too high. But experts say the system could tip the scales in favor of conservation and cleaner energy sources.

"What we're saying is when you build a plant, you need to take in these other factors, what the real cost to society is," said Barbara Kates-Garnick, a Massachusetts public utilities commissioner.

About a dozen states have adopted such plans or are considering them, experts say. Also, the Bonneville Power Authority in the Pacific Northwest incorporates environmental costs in its planning.

The typical method for tabulating the costs is to assign dollar values to certain pollutants. Here's how it can work:

On the surface, one of the cheapest fuel supplies is coal, but it also tends to emit larger amounts of pollutants such as carbon dioxide and sulfur dioxide when burned to generate electricity, experts say.

So a coal-fired plant that costs $60 million in real dollars might have environmental costs totaling another $60 million, said Susan Tierney, the Massachusetts secretary of environmental affairs.

A natural gas-fired plant, which produces less pollution, could cost $80 million and have environmental costs around $20 million.

There also is the option of using conservation methods such as extra-efficient lightbulbs to curb energy demand rather than increase supplies. Such a program might cost $85 million and be most expensive in actual dollars, but theoretically would be cheapest overall since it would create no pollution, Tierney said.

These methods already are having an impact. In California, for example, utilities now plan to acquire more power from cleaner sources, such as geothermal energy, said Tom Thompson, a spokesman for the California Public Utilities Commission.

Senator denies graft was part of S&L deal

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Phil Gramm said Sunday he provided only routine help to a savings and loan operator who was paid $63,000 for doing $117,000 worth of work on the senator's vacation home.

The FBI looked into the transaction but dropped the probe after the Senate Ethics Committee conducted a cursory review of the matter, the New York Times reported Sunday.

There was no written estimate or contract for the work, the Times reported.

The S&Lowner, Texas businessman Jerry Stiles, asked Gramm's office for assistance in dealing with regulators in 1989 when Stiles' three savings and loan companies faced collapse. Their bailout is expected to cost taxpayers $200 million.

Gramm, R-Texas, is a Senate Banking Committee member who helped develop a government bailout program for struggling S&Ls. The panel oversees regulators handling the S&L cleanup.

Stiles is a prominent Dallas homebuilder who in 1984 bought the Hallmark Savings and Loan Association of Plano, Texas. In a statement, Gramm acknowledged he and Stiles arranged in 1987 for a work crew to fly to Maryland and complete the interior of Gramm's shell vacation home on the state's eastern shore.

Gramm told the Times he contacted Stiles because the senator wanted to provide work for Texas laborers and help boost the state's sluggish economy. He said Maryland's Eastern Shore contractors and laborers had reputations for being unreliable.

Three months after the work was completed, Gramm paid Stiles $63,433, although the bill for the work came to $117,019. The Times said three or four workers were flown to Maryland and stayed in a hotel for about two months while they worked on the vacation home.

Lion-tamer finds Harvard ugly

CAMBRIDGE (AP) — A Harvard University laboratory is too small and sedate to hold a professor whose resume includes lion taming and Hollywood stunt work. He's going to Idaho.

Biologist Steven Austad was coming up for tenure after seven years on the faculty when he decided to take a job at the University of Idaho so he could be closer to wildlife.

"If Harvard were in a beautiful part of the country, I'd stay here," Austad told the Boston Globe. "But I miss the wide open spaces. Where we will live there are elk in the front yard. You can hear the coyotes. My wife sees 12 to 15 hawks on her drive to work."

Austad's adventurous streak includes a job as a New York cab driver and taking karate lessons from an Oregon rancher who had two lions.

At one point, a Hollywood producer called the karate teacher seeking the services of the lions, and Austad agreed to help.

He transported a lion 1,000 miles down the coast — in the back seat of a Mercedes.

"The idea was to control the lion with an electric cattle prod," Austad said. But when the batteries in the cattle prod wore out after 100 miles, the karate instructor suggested: "Just go BZZZT with your mouth."

Collegian Elections for Spring 1993

APPLICATIONS ARE CURRENTLY BEING ACCEPTED FOR PAID POSITIONS

Application deadline:	Candidates Night:	Elections will be held:
Wed., Dec. 9 at 3 p.m.	Wed., Dec. 9 at 7 p.m.	Thurs., Dec. 10, 10am-8pm

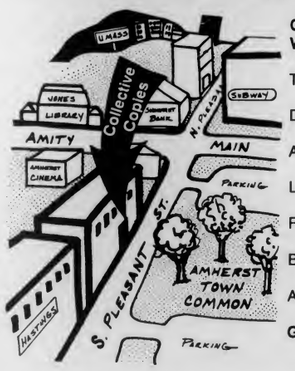
- All eligible staff can vote in the elections for Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, and Editorial Editor.
- All other desk editors will be voted for by their current staff.
- Staff status = 6 articles, with at least 3 for a particular desk written this semester to be counted as staff of that desk.
- Staff lists will be checked at the voting box.
- Please see Managing Editor Brooke C. Wheeler for an application.
- This information is accurate as of Tuesday, November 24, 1992.

The Collegian is an E.O.E.

COLLECTIVE COPIES
29 South Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-6425 FAX: 253-7475



Check out What We have to offer!
Thesis Copying
Dissertations
Acid Free Paper
Laminating
Recycled Paper
Binding
AND,
GREAT PRICES

10% OFF ANY ORDER
with this coupon
COLLECTIVE COPIES expires 1/1/93

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
$10 HAIRCUTS!
Make an appointment with Liz, Monday through Friday, and your haircut will be only $10!

Networking.

There are a lot of influential people on this campus. People with connections. People who can get things done. In order to get to know them, you could get involved with a lot of different RSO's – the Republican Club, University Democrats, Cannibis Reform Coalition, the Radical Student Union – or you could be more efficient and join the Collegian.
Rub shoulders with the rich and famous, or at least with the self-important.
The Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Fighting for bigotry in the military

Bill Clinton has promised to lift the ban on gays in the military. General Colin Powell says that "the presence of homosexuals within the armed forces would be prejudicial to good order and discipline," mimicking military bigots who, in the 1940s, fought African-American integration into the armed forces. Today military higher-ups continue fighting for their bigotry, displaying the myopic donkey-brained obstinance the army values in its leaders.

Barry DEUTSCH

One such leader appeared on "Larry King Live" last week, Rear Admiral C.A. Hill of the U.S. Navy (retired). Admiral Hill claimed attempts to acquire lovers "of course is almost inevitable with homosexual men. . . There's a difference when you talk about the confinement of men in close quarters for long periods of time, when you have someone who looks at those, those individuals differently than the normal, and I mean the normal."

Hill's argument rests on the military's inability to discipline the behavior of rank-and-file soldiers. Are our army's leaders really so incompetent?

Hill cited Gary Studds as "a good example," claiming Studds was unable to tell right from wrong, implying all gay men share this deficiency. Hill uses such ludicrous "proof" partly because he's a hateful cretin, blinded by his own bigotry, but also because there's no real evidence for his position.

Is there evidence for Clinton's position? Certainly. Consider the Danish army, which is open to gays. Danish General Kristian Anderson, questioned about problems with gays serving, responded: "No, should there be? I've been in the air force since 1954, and I can't remember one problem caused by someone being a homosexual."

Denmark's army isn't alone. According the The Washington Monthly, only five of the 16 NATO countries have policies restricting homosexuals. Three of the five (Canada, Australia and the United States) "are expected to lift their bans on gays in the military in the near future."

In Israel, military service is mandatory for everyone. Said one former Israeli soldier: "I never witnessed any morale problems caused by homosexuals. . . There were openly gay soldiers I encountered, but no one seemed to resent it. It's not an issue. I don't know why it is in America."

It's an issue here because leaders like Admiral Hill are bigoted. In the grand army tradition, they're willing to sacrifice practical military considerations to personal prejudice: the U.S. military has lost 20,000 soldiers to this regulation since 1980, throwing millions of dollars in training costs down the drain.

The most pitiful aspect of this mess is that the intolerance of military leaders seeps to the lower ranks. As far down as the UMass ROTC, one can hear Hill's inane arguments echoed by young recruits. Hopefully, they'll be the last generation of recruits to find such bigotry acceptable.

Barry Deutsch is a Collegian cartoonist

Nationality vs. personality

Thanksgiving — and due to the kindness of Americans I am not left to languish in the Campus Center hotel but am whisked away to see family life, only partially obscured by an enormous turkey. More than ever, away from the rarefied atmosphere of campus, I am a stranger in a strange land made aware of my nationality.

Jesse ARMSTRONG

As the revelries get more drunken after Thanksgiving dinner, an uncle launches into a defence of Sen. Joe McCarthy. "I liked him," he says with a devilish glint in his eye. Eventually I end up pelted with Lipton tea bags in a kind of twisted re-enactment of the Boston Tea Party (when, let me get this right, Native Americans dressed as Englishmen and dumped each other into Boston harbor as a protest against. . . tea?). Fortunately everyone has passed out before it is time to play "Battle of Yorktown."

Again and again this happens: while abroad, you are reduced to that lowest common denominator — nationality, and something curious happens to character, personality is submerged in nationality. It happens because people aren't interested in you but an Englishman. When asked about Clinton, or Charles and Diana or Letterman it's not for my opinion that they are asking, but something amorphous — the English Opinion.

The frightening thing is that you start to conform to the expectations of others. My accent has become more pronounced in the last three months, I take my Marmite (a yeast extract spread British children are raised on, which causes Americans to dissolve into a foaming mess on contact) to breakfast every morning, I drink Earl Grey tea constantly, and the final evidence of a gross transformation came this weekend when I caught myself just about to defend the monarchy.

But after this past week I don't think the monarchy will need any defending. The troubled institution will be safe for another thousand years in light of an attack made Wednesday. Attacks on the monarchy are not unusual but this assault came from Wolfgang Von Geldern, a German member of Parliament, who said, "No one in Europe seriously wants a monarchy," apparently forgetting the Spanish, Dutch, Belgians, Danish, Norwegians and Swedish. There is nothing like advice from a German to raise the backs of Little Englanders like Tory M.P. Sir Nicholas Fairbairn, who replied, "I doubt there is a person in Germany who does not know the name of our sovereign which is good enough reason to keep her glorious majesty. . . on the throne of Great Britain," a typical piece of Tory logic equating notoriety with worth, by which logic Vlad the Impaler's descendents should look to regain power in Rumania.

Fairbairn confirms my suspicion that recent adverse publicity for the royal family only strengthens them. For Britain, Empireless, Thatcherless and largely powerless, the most comforting thing about the royals is they manage to capture the front pages of magazines like Time and Newsweek for a country that would otherwise languish in cold obscurity in the North Atlantic rain.

Jesse Armstrong is a Collegian columnist

Malcolm didn't applaud isolation

Nov. 18, I attended the 2 p.m. showing of Malcolm X. I thought the movie was representative of the man's all too brief life and an accurate description of his ideologies and his teachings. But, one thing troubled me.

It was the part in the film when a White woman approached Malcolm X, who was on his way to give a lecture. She nervously approached him and his bodyguards and stated how she agreed with what he said and asked what she could do to help his cause. Malcolm replied, "Nothing," and walked on. At this point, about a third of the theater broke the cardinal rule of the movies by bellowing out their approval random hoots and claps. It is not the talking that upset me; rather it was simply the context in which it occurred.

When Rocky wins a fight or Arnold kills the bad guy this type of behavior is permissible. But when a man trying to change the world blatantly rejects assistance, it is not. Granted, Malcolm's beliefs at the time justified his remark but, before he was murdered, blowing off that woman was one of his biggest regrets.

Hoots and claps at this point in the film go against the message Malcolm X taught; it shows naivete. Malcolm was not for isolation and polarization of the races. He knew racism in America went much deeper than a difference in skin color.

Racism is a societal evil that needs to be eliminated with all people together. These actions reveal the need for education; if people were cheering, it proves they do not understand the truths the man was teaching. He later did not approve of his actions and he had the courage to admit it (which was left out of the movie). Education is the means through which to amend this problem. As the old adage goes, "Think before you act." To think one must have the facts and the only way to get the facts is to study and learn, which is what? Education.

Brooks Medoff
Amherst

Military is recycling the same tired lines

Mike Morrissey, you are right [Collegian, Nov. 20]. The military can't afford to be politically correct. Only White male heterosexuals should be allowed to serve. Women are too distracting and African Americans can't be trusted. Just a cozy homogeneous group of bigoted good ol' boys like you and Norm Schwartzkopf discussing morale and getting blown up.

In 1948, President Truman ordered the armed forces desegregated. The military stubbornly resisted desegregation using precisely the same arguments heard today regarding homosexuals in the military. Officials claimed Truman's order would "seriously impair the accomplishment of the military mission," and "no White man would ever take an order from a Black man."

Forty-four years later, every man and woman in uniform is taking orders from an African American who is the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin Powell. It is the soldiers who continue to be bigoted, not gays and lesbians, who should be thrown out the military.

What rationale do you have for patronizing an army, Queer Nation, that goes to extreme nonviolent lengths to save lives, while defending the ideals of the "real army," the military, that uses horrible weapons to kill people, all in the name of peace?

You are out of touch, Mike Morrissey. You are a dangerous and irresponsible and ignorant and have no business writing for a college newspaper.

Phillip M. Entwhistle
Williamsburg

Massive stroke isn't 'normal life experience'

I am appalled by Mary Frances Platt's letter [Collegian, Nov. 18]. While she presents valid and appropriate arguments regarding social and physical barriers to disabled persons in life, and at UMass, I cannot allow her initial two paragraphs to go unanswered.

She states, "Acquiring a disability is not a tragedy; it is a fact of life, a normal life experience," going on to say the only tragedy is systemic oppression of and discrimination against people with disabilities. These statements were in response to an article about an 18-year-old woman who suffered a massive stroke and is now a quadriplegic and unable to speak.

I don't know what reality Ms. Platt came from where having such a dramatic thing happen would be considered a "normal life experience." Eighteen-year-old women do not routinely have strokes, and we can safely assume from the extent of her deficits that she came very close to death with the stroke. The patient and her family would not be normal if they did not grieve the abrupt, and yes, tragic loss of function. It would be very normal for them to also think that it might be better is she had died. This is part of the processing of such a change that anyone would go through when faced with acquiring a disability or chronic or terminal illness. These events for this woman and her family are far outside the normal realm of experience. How can anyone truly believe this is not a tragedy?

If having a disability is a "normal life experience," why are we all as individuals not actively seeking to become disabled in our preferred manner? Does anyone who is blind want to be blind? If that person were offered the chance to have the blindness reversed, wouldn't she or he jump at the chance? Don't most disabled persons seek maximum ways to adjust to their particular limitations, not just to try to fit into our "ableist" world, but so they can do whatever they wish to the extent of their abilities, to communicate and interact with others, to contribute to society in work and art, to live the fullest lives they can? In my career as a physician, I have never met anyone who liked their disability, who would not choose to reverse it if possible, just as I have never met anyone who like their terminal cancer or arthritis or heart disease or even acne!

We all have tragedies happen to some extent in our lives. Anyone who has a disability has suffered a tragedy. It is not impossible to adjust to change, however traumatic. We must not continue to mourn our loss. It is important to recognize such a dramatic (perhaps small to others, sometimes) change does not need to be grieved, and should not be discounted so callously.

We can infer from her letter that Ms. Platt has some physical disability. I do not see this to be as much of a problem for her as her blatant lack of human compassion and sympathy toward a fellow human being who has had a devastating and tragic illness. This seems to me a far worse disability than any physical deficit.

Karen Nepveu, M.D.
Greenfield

■ shopping

continued from page 1

It was a very good kickoff for the holiday season."

But retailers also remained wary, perhaps remembering the disappointing holiday seasons of 1989, 1990 and 1991.

"At this point, we're still cautiously optimistic about the balance of the season," Howard said.

That caution is understandable — there are still signs that many consumers, while feeling better about the economy and shopping this Christmas, are again working within a tight budget.

Dayton Hudson's strongest business was at its lower-priced Target discount stores, spokeswoman Ann Barkelew said. The company's Mervyn's clothing stores didn't fare as well, and the most popular items sold there included gifts within a specific price range, such as under $10 or under $20.

But other signs indicated a potentially strong shopping season.

Sears reported strong sales for such "big-ticket" items as major appliances, as well as for video games like Sega Genesis and Super Nintendo. Target stores reported strong sales of electronic merchandise and jewelry.

At Pier 1 Imports Inc., shoppers "seemed to be buying the higher-priced items," chairman Clark Johnson said.

"We had a great weekend," Johnson said, adding that he was raising his sales projections for the season.

The torrid pace of the first weekend is likely to slack off in the first week of December, then pick up in the last 10 days of the season, if the pattern of previous years holds. Many consumers will be waiting to see if prices come down, while others will be pressed for shopping time or just procrastinating.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

HEY, BEHIND YOU! — A common view for commuters.

■ chickens

continued from page 3

Universidad Nacional Agraria, La Molina, Lima, Peru.

He received his master's and doctoral degrees from this University, and conducted his post-graduate research at the Laboratory for Hybridoma Research, Amherst College.

Smyth's extensive poultry research earned him the Poultry Science Association Merck Research Award in 1985 for his outstanding contributions to the field.

Smyth received his bachelor's degree in animal science from the University of Maine and his master's and doctorate in animal science from Purdue University. He has been a University faculty member since 1949.

—University News Office

LEARN WHILE YOU EARN
THE MULLINS CENTER
~JOB FAIR~
TUESDAY DECEMBER 1ST
10:00 AM - 6:00 PM
CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 1009
Work Study and Non-Work Study Positions Available
CONCERT/EVENT STAFF
ICE RINK PERSONNEL
OFFICE HELP
FACILITY MAINTENANCE
EVERYONE WELCOME!

COLLEGIAN
Don't just read it,
eat it

The
Collegian–
Its' not just for breakfast anymore.
Try it for lunch.
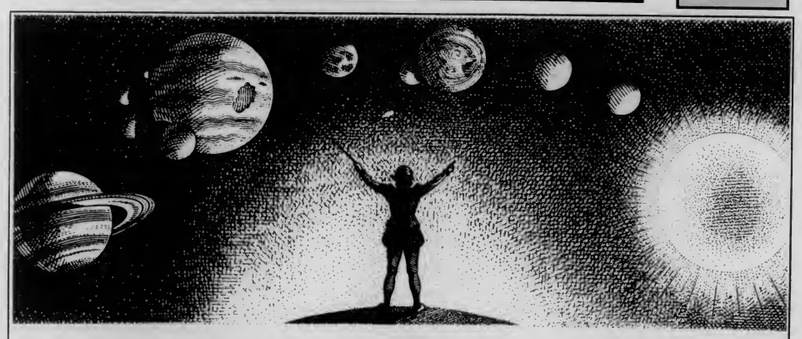
Or even
dinner.
Mikey likes
it.



It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe.
You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

Revive with VIVARIN.

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or
Self Service
Washing Machine
Starting at $1
Attendant available
all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply.
Fares subject to change & availability.
Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

Arts & Living

It's a bird... It's a plane... It's dead!

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

Superman* 75
DC Comics

I'm sorry. I promised myself I wouldn't subject you all to this. I was going to ignore the hype, just review some other comic and keep myself above it all.

But it's almost eight in the morning and I've been up all night and that other column isn't getting anywhere and I'm feeling decidedly bitter about this whole affair.

You see, Superman died a couple weeks ago.

Now, I was never a big fan of the Man from Krypton. I was always more partial to the Batman myself. It doesn't matter why; anybody who was ever a fan of superheroes has their own favorites and their own reasons for those favorites.

So it's not the fact that he died that bothers me. I mean, he's, what, 54 years old? In real-time years anyway, since he was created in 1938. God knows what that is in superhero years.

It's the manner of his death that bugs me. This 75th issue of Superman which is selling millions of copies across the country, this 24-page epic in which an international icon of Truth, Justice and the American Way is laid to rest. I mean, cheesy as the big guy was, he sure as hell deserved better than this unpardonable piece of dreck.

I'm not going to bother to tell you who wrote and drew it. Most of you have never heard of him and most of you never will and that is just fine by me. Suffice it to say that it is based on the "high" concept of every page being a splash page, full of huge static images that stop any possibility of storytelling dead in its tracks.

Also that every picture is lifted from comics of days gone by, and lifted incompetently to boot; that every line is stolen verbatim from endless reams of action trash before it, with only the names changed to protect the almighty copyright.

Suffice it to say that the agent of his destruction, Doomsday (takes your breath away, don't it?), is a huge hulking muscle-bound villain who shows up out of nowhere and begins to destroy things for no other reason than to lure Superman to him so they can beat each other to death.

If he ever said anything or provided any further rationale for his existence, I never caught it —

Turn to SUPERMAN, page 8

New releases offer old sounds

Retro hit and miss from 27 Various, Carpetbaggers

By MARK K. ANDERSON
Collegian Staff

Fine
The 27 Various
Clean

Country Miles Apart
The Carpetbaggers
Clean

Record producer Mitchell Froom (Richard Thompson, Los Lobos, Suzanne Vega, etc.) was recently interviewed about the current state of the recording industry. "I frankly don't know how young up-and-coming artists can deal with the instruments and equipment of today." He observed. "I have yet to hear one modern keyboard, for example, which has any hint of personality. All the quirks and overtones are suppressed, and the resulting sound is so cold and clean that there's no edge."

Yet, a considerable number of up-and-coming artists would probably express similar reservations. These days among many denominations in "alternative" rock (whatever that means), the Hipster's Credo (Article One, Section One) states ". . . Honor thy tube amp to keep it holy."

In fact, current trends make many alternative rock artists look and sound so Lenny Kravitz-ed that they might as well have stepped out of the Way-Back Machine. (Dial set to 1972 please, Sherman.)

Of course, with one's feet too firmly planted in the past, a body can scarcely make any forward motion. And therein lies the big pitfall of many on today's college charts. If bands such as Teenage Fanclub amount to nothing more than recycled Big Star, why bother?

The 27 Various find themselves, like so many of their current colleagues, dancing conspicuously close to rock and roll's revivalist abyss. (After all, Moog and Farfisa keyboards are the only instruments other than the standard guitar/bass/drum trinity that these lads touch.)

Fine, their latest album on the Minneapolis label Clean, holds similar ground with the last album Up, both released to a swarm of local fans and widespread critical praise. The 'Various sound has been compared to Something Else-era Kinks, Small Faces, Plimsouls and, yes, Big Star too.

Again, I would argue that starting with such rich influences can only open the door for good music. In the end, a band must offer more than just a showcase for revisiting their childhood fans.

By my ear, Ed Ackerson's superlative songwriting saves Fine (and for that matter much of The 27 Various back catalog that I've heard) from logging in as retro without a hook. Catchy melodies and all around enjoyable listening. Recommended.

Labelmates The Carpetbaggers offer a tale, albeit in an entirely different genre, of the well-intentioned dud. The press release for their Country Miles Apart album refers to many of the lost souls to which they pay tribute — namely those thousands of oft-neglected 1950s country musicians such as Jimmie Skinner, Marvin Rainwater, Eddie Noack, Porter Wagoner and Don Gibson.

COURTESY SUE KYLLONEN

The 27 Various

That they seek out and emulate the lesser knowns in country is an admirable aspect of The Carpetbagger's approach, especially considering the current marketability of the more mainstreamed sound in country music today.

That they canonize such artists via cover versions (Jimmie Skinner's "One Dead Man Ago" or Bill Anderson's "The Cold Hard Facts of Life") gives the album a sense that these lads are true fans. Sadly, though, nothing about their arrangements or originals stands out as anything noteworthy.

In the end, the album never achieves an impression greater than the studied, academic feel of three hip college kids playing country tunes from days gone by. Jonathan Richman's Jonathan Goes Country makes much more pleasurable fodder for the rock and roller who's too shy to buy Johnny Cash.

So a hearty yippee tye-yi-yay to The Carpetbaggers for keeping young ears trained on the sounds of classic country music like that which one might hear on WMUA's "Country, Blues and Bluegrass." Yet unlike the 27 Various, The Carpetbaggers offer this reviewer nothing beyond what their musical progenitors themselves can provide. Having said that, I'd sooner recommend some of the original formula (of which there are scads of re-issues now appearing on the market) than Country Miles Apart. And I think even the boys themselves would have to agree with me on that score.

The 27 Various: B+
The Carpetbaggers: C

Hot sounds from California's hottest zip code

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

Beverly Hills, 90210
Various Artists
Giant Records

Broadway and movie soundtracks came first, and it wasn't long before that idea crossed over into the television medium. Such shows as "China Beach," "Twin Peaks," and "Northern Exposure" have put out soundtracks from their respective shows.

So it only made sense for television's most popular producer, Aaron Spelling, to jump on the bandwagon. Leaving behind the production of replica 90210s (such as the failed "2000 Malibu Road"), he and executive producer Darren Star have recently released Beverly Hills, 90210: The Soundtrack.

This soundtrack is a compilation of newly commissioned Top-40 songs. A mixture of dance, rap, love and slow songs come together to form the perfect mix. Each song has the power to remind you of the show and those cool beauties from West Beverly.

For a sampling of how "90210" producers use music to jazz up the show's image, take Paula Abdul's "Bend Time Back Around" and add it to a clip of decked out tanned students entering that beautiful Southern California building called West Beverly. Upbeat and catchy, this song is perfect for the first three minutes of any "90210" episode.

When music is added to a scene filled with a plethora of Palm trees and beautiful students, the producers are defining what high school in Beverly Hills is really like (how accurate are they? — wouldn't you like to know?).

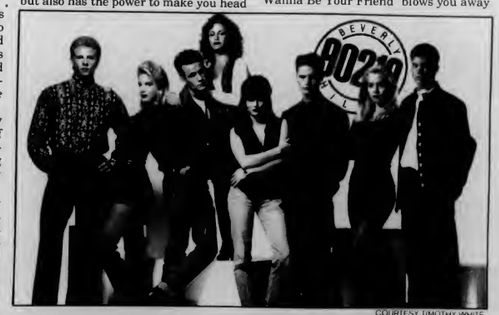
Maybe that's why millions flock to television sets every week to see what's up with their favorite bunch. Can you say "emulation?"

Color Me Badd returns to "90210" after a special appearance last season with "Got 2 Have You," a great song to use for background music for one of Donna Martin's numerous shopping sprees.

"Got 2 Have You" is not only uplifting, but also has the power to make you head out for a power walk down University Drive or grab a partner and dance.

One of the best songs on the disc, and a definite Brenda-Dylan song, is Vanessa Williams and Brian McKnight's "Love Is." Reminicent of Lionel Richie and Diana Ross' "Endless Love," this slow love song is beautifully sung that I actually felt that like Brian and Vanessa were standing in front of me and singing "love aches for everyone of us. . ."

Move over David Silver and forget your rap act because Puck and Natty's "Just Wanna Be Your Friend" blows you away from L.A.'s Bullistix Club and puts you back into that drama class you took one summer with Brenda and Donna.



COURTESY TIMOTHY WHITE

They're young, they're beautiful, they're so rich they could buy and sell us . . . they're the too-cool cast of everyone's favorite show "Beverly Hills, 90210" — and now they have their own soundtrack.

Straight from Venice Beach, "Friend" will inspire you to grab a baseball cap, put it on your head backwards and start dancing. Whether you're at a club just shmoozing with friends, this song jumps from the album higher than Donna Martin can count (sorry Tori!).

Cathy Dennis with D-Mob's "Why" will take your mind off everything (including Kelly Taylor or Brandon Walsh, wherever your tastes run) by getting under your skin to help release all your tension.

Every club in America should be playing this exhausting musical experience because "Why" is the latest ultimate dance song where you and all your friends can dance the night away. Clubs like Los Angeles' Roxbury thrive and ultimately exist on dance sensations like this. You won't be able to stop yourself from singing the chorus "whoaa..." with Cathy.

Shanice's "Saving Forever For You" is a beautifully composed musical effort that succeeds in setting a laid back atmosphere no matter where you listen to it. A smart addition to a special scene (how about Andrea and Brandon doing dinner at Spago — instead of the Peach Pit?).

Instead, this song was wasted when someone decided to thrust it into the closing credits of the last two "90210" episodes. This only makes "90210" look like a slot to run MTV videos.

Another pop song is "All The Way To Heaven," sung by Jody Watley. Even though it's a decent dance tune, "Heaven"

Turn to 90210, page 8

■ Superman

continued from page 7

though I'm sure there's some cliche or other at the heart of it all. "He's a symbol of Armageddon!" perhaps, or "He's the ultimate challenge for a hero who swore never to kill!" or some such bulls—t. To be quite frank I haven't been able to read it all that closely.

What's worse is the damage this does to the medium of comics as a whole. Because Superman is so popular (and he's owned by major media conglomerate Time Warner), dreck like this gets megapublicity. And some Jane or Joe or Akbar or Letisha Schmoe out there is going to say, "Golly, comics! I remember those. Didn't I hear they grew up? Maybe I'll give them another chance." And they'll buy a copy of Superman 75 — if they can find one that hasn't been jacked to ten dollars a copy by speculation (yes, ten dollars, I kid you not) — and they'll rip open the black plastic baggie with the stupid bloody Superman S on it — a collective gasp rises from the collective throat of fandom — and John or Rachel or Kelly or Huan Schmidt will read this piece of garbage and say, "Nope. Comics are just as stupid as I remember them being. Boy, was I dumb."

And that's one more person who believes comics to be nothing more than stupid adolescent male power fantasies, and that's one more person who will never pick up another comic again.

That collective gasp, by the way, went up from the collective throat of fandom because in this day and age, one doesn't read comics anymore. Comics — this type of comic, anyway — are sold in sealed plastic baggies, you see, and if you open the baggie, the value of the comic decreases. Comics have become junk bonds. Insane speculation drives the price up beyond belief, and frenetic suckers are always available.

To give you some idea, a similar marketing ploy recently sold 3 million copies of a comic to an estimated 500,000 people. Quick math shows you that's an average of six copies per person. At 10, 20, 30, 50 dollars a pop — Boesky never had it so good. I understand the new Catholic catechism pronounces financial speculation to be a sin, and for once I find myself in agreement with the Pope. We could use a little divine retribution here.

Because this is ultimately so God damned meaningless! Do any of you really believe that a major company has shut off such a lucrative source of marketing dollars? Nobody kills the goose that lays the golden eggs anymore; they lock it into a factory farm and force-feed it growth hormones. Duracell has already cancelled their use of Superman in a major ad campaign — do you think Time Warner will stand for much more of that?

He'll be back in four, five months. Tops.

Part of me looks for the silver lining in all this. It could be the death-knell of the superhero. Sales have been slipping. More and more people are discovering that you can do any damn thing you want in comics, despite the apparent stranglehold these bloated super cash cows hold. After all, Superman was the first to come. Maybe he's the first to go.

I apologize once again for subjecting you all to this wave of bile. Do yourself a favor, go out and buy a comic, any comic but this one. I humbly offer my recommendations; everything I've reviewed this past semester is head, shoulders, chest, thighs, knees, shins and ankles above this.

And at this point they all cost less than this Supercrap.

■ 90210

continued from page 7

comes out sounding like it's trying to imitate Sheena Easton with the almost carbon copy "love" lyrics, sounding more like Easton's "So Far So Good" from the About Last Night soundtrack.

Unfortunately, more well-known songs like R.E.M's "Losing My Religion" (played after Brenda's pregnancy scare last season) and Roxette's "Joyride" (played when Andrea and Brenda gave their drama teacher a driving tour — this is L.A. afterall — of the City Of Angels) didn't make the final cut.

Also missing is Sophie B. Hawkins "Damn, I Wish I Was Your Lover," which was inserted to Kelly and Dylan's clandestine rendezvous from the "Summer of 90210" episodes.

However, the tunes that did make it, including John Davis' title theme song, are arranged in an order to offer the ultimate mix. Laugh if you want too, but this disc will make a great addition to your CD collection.

So, even if your not a "90210" fan consider the disc anyway — it's definitely worth it.

ACRONYMBLE REMINDER

Hey — only two more Acronymble contests left this sememster — so get your submissions in so you won't miss a chance to win fantastic prizes! Send your submissions in by this Wednesday and check out Thursday's This Weekend section to find out if you're a lucky winner. Drop those entries to the Collegian Arts Desk, 113 Campus Center and you too could be a big, big winner!

This Week's letters: J - E - F - F - I

The Collegian–

A paper only a mother could love.
(And we sometimes wonder about that, too.)

Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian

YOU'VE HEARD ABOUT HIS DEATH

GET THE WHOLE STORY AT

SAME BAT CHANNEL
Comics, Cards, Games & More...5% Student Dsicount
Hampshire Mall, Hadley 586-8775 • Ingelside Mall, Holyoke 532-9797
"Up on the Wings of Imagination..."
Open Monday-Saturday 10am-9pm Sunday 12pm-5pm

TM DC Comics Inc. © 1992 All Rights Reserved

Meditation. 禅

Mental clarity.
Mystical experiences.
Emotional balance.
Spiritual depth.

Learn how.
Now.

It will be with you for the rest of your life.

A special program for people 18 - 29.

Special Class Tonight
UMass Campus Center
Intro: 7:00-8:00
Advanced:8:15-9:45
11/18 Rm.911 11/25 Rm.803
11/30 Rm.805 12/9 Rm.803
Event Added!
Dec.2 in Boston!

Free Music Meditation tapes for you!

FREE

taught by The Boston Meditation Society

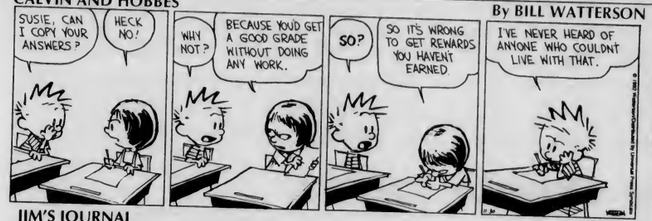
Grand Opening
November 1, 1992
THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



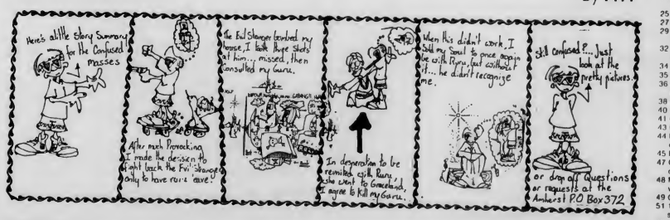
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY & RURU By PITT



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Sarah LeVèsque
PhotoTechnician ..... Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Challis Meehan, Jason George

Menu

LUNCH
Hamburger
Clam Roll
BASICS LUNCH
Oat Burger
Clam Roll

DINNER
Mac 'n Cheese
Southern Fried Steak
BASICS DINNER
Lentil Chili
Mac 'n Cheese

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Later, Edna was forced to sell her brussels sprout house.

Quote of the Day

"Our faith in the present dies out long before our faith in the future."
—Ruth Benedict

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Making your position crystal clear should wipe away or prevent a misunderstanding. Deal with banks, creditors and a tax agency today. Check on insurance coverage and recent investments, as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A good day to find out whether capital and labor will be available should they be required.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A close friendship is truly beautiful. Remain calm and avoid arguing when differences of opinion arise. Curb a tendency to spend money.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Doing your work well requires both a quick response and sensitivity to other people's problems. Momentum propels you along the career highway. You feel great about releasing at home this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Mix-ups in communication could affect travel plans, romance or your work. You make up your mind about a domestic matter. Your last impression aims to be with you tonight. Have fun!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ideas for boosting your income deserve more thought. You are able to find what you want easily. Close friends are opinionated; you can discuss things without arguing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There may be money in what you are planning to do. Wait for the proper opening to make your pitch or support. Immerse yourself in a literary classic or entertaining movie tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try to restore an understanding that has been badly bruised. Your prospects at doing so are much brighter in the afternoon. Review your options before making an important decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Promising developments on the home front are linked to events at a distance. Be patient with solitary individuals. Take a crash course in etiquette.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Long-range dreams should replace short-term gains now. Let circumstances determine the center (temperament). Flexibility is the surest way to obtain a star career.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You benefit from trying to establish a firm foundation for joint financial security. It may be a job for everybody can unwind. Your sex life continues to be hectic.

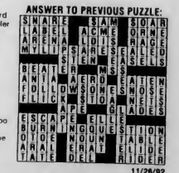
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Key associates may be ultra-sensitive now. Be considerate, not domineering. Cut down on costly social entertaining. A patient, diplomatic approach keeps you from antagonizing friends who mean well.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

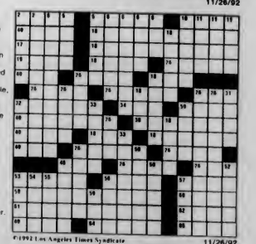
ACROSS
1 Star another way?
5 Social call
10 Samoan port
14 Grouper
15 Bitter
17 Geraint's wife
18 Organize
19 City in W. Zaire
20 Arm bone
21 Financial windfall
22 Hail, to Caesar
23 Desert gully
24 Goddess of the dawn
25 About
27 Hostile force
29 Word with eared or tace
32 Bring into harmony
34 Child bat
35 Quail family
36 Afternoon respites
38 Storyteller
40 Stopper
41 Cut down
43 Bucks
44 Elected officials
45 Prickly pear
47 Grimm character
48 Multipurpose vehicle
49 Chessman
51 1,015, Roman style
53 Reconnoitered
56 Market
57 Bubble bubble, for one
58 Disentangled
60 In a little while
61 Outlining
67 For fear that
63 North Sea feeder
64 Glue
65 Pindar output

DOWN
1 Simple photozoan: Var.
2 Face-lift
3 School terms
4 Sweet drink
5 Empty spaces
6 Tristan's beloved
7 Hurling missiles
8 Singer Petina
9 Dosage on a prescription: Abbr
10 Bronte's "— Grey"
11 Sound of laughter
12 Division word
13 Egyptian solar disk
16 Spock of "Star Trek"
23 Accustom
24 Surround closely
26 Walrus weapon
28 Otic organ
29 Resolute
30 Subject to too much light
31 Kind of scope or compass
32 Spore sacs
33 — De Valera of Ireland
35 Loud sound
37 Drench
39 Jungle monarch
42 Elks
45 The very bottom
48 Dormant
48 Threshold
50 Piece of pie
52 Slits in a jacket
53 Orent by treaty
54 Angle on a branch
55 Pierce
56 Home of the Crimson Tide, for short
57 — Alto, Cal.
59 Tam o'shanter, e.g.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



11/26/92

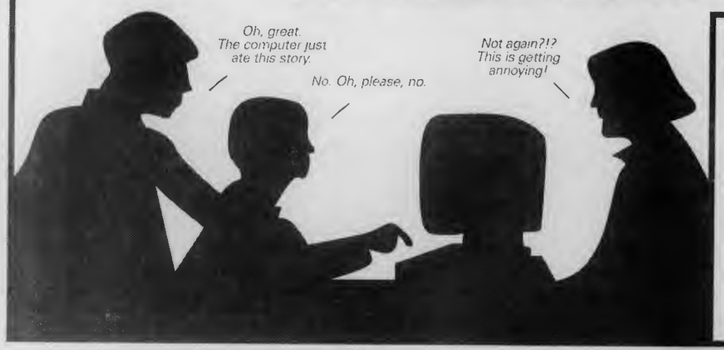


©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/26/92

Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian
Recycle it. Recycle it. Recycle it. Recycle it. Recycle it. Recycle it. Recycle it. Recycle it. Recycle it.
Collegian CollegianCollegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian Collegian

Running a newspaper without a computer system that's up to date and in good repair would almost be more trouble than it's worth.

We should know.



The Collegian is sorely in need of computer equipment for the Newsroom.

The current system is well beyond being outdated and is starting to fall apart.

If you or your business has any equipment which you might consider donating to the Collegian, please contact us at 545-3500. Thank you very much.

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

SUMMER SCHOOL FOR PEOPLE ON THEIR WAY TO THE TOP.

If you didn't sign up for ROTC as a freshman or sophomore, you can still catch up to your classmates by attending Army ROTC Camp Challenge, a paid six-week summer course in leadership training.

By the time you have graduated from college, you'll have the credentials of an Army officer. You'll also have the self-confidence and discipline it takes to succeed in college and beyond.

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.

Find Out More: Contact John Hedly
Military Science Department • 545-2321

LOW, LOW PRICE

YANKEE

DISCOUNT OIL

Northampton /Holyoke

584-4112 • 535-1888

NOTICE

Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 325, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places on Monday, Nov. 30. Please be there!

CopyCat PRINT SHOP

RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE

Valid until the end of 1992.

Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)

228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

Legal Problems?

Call UMass Student Legal Services!

Housing • Family • Student Rights
Civil Rights • Workers Rights
Criminal • Consumer Law
Military and Draft Law

922 Campus Center 545-1995

Russian court may endanger Yeltsin's rule

By ALAN COOPERMAN
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russia's Constitutional Court could provide grounds for Boris Yeltsin's impeachment if it rules Monday that he improperly banned the Communist Party last year, Russian newspapers and legal scholars say.

A ruling in Yeltsin's favor would give the president a moral boost and deprive his opponents of a major weapon before the Congress of People's Deputies, controlled by former Communists, opens Tuesday.

While it is doubtful that hard-line lawmakers who have threatened to impeach Yeltsin can muster a two-thirds majority in the 1,046-member Congress, the court could give then the legal grounds — and political momentum — to try.

The panel of 13 judges is scheduled to rule Monday on a lawsuit by pro-Communist legislators who contend Yeltsin exceeded his constitutional authority when he banned the former ruling party after a failed August 1991 coup against President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The court wrapped up a four-month trial Nov. 13. Since then, the judges have deliberated behind closed doors and given no clues about their decision.

"We know that a bomb is going to drop" when the verdict is announced, the daily Izvestia said last week. "But we don't know how many magatons it will be, or on what side it will fall."

The court, created just one year ago, is the ultimate authority on constitutional issues but do not consider criminal cases. Nine of the 13 judges are former Communists.

The timing of the decision has raised suspicions that the court wants to influence the political process.

But the judges have demonstrated their independence from other branches of government in prior rulings — particularly in their first case last January, when they shocked Yeltsin's administration by overturning his plan to combine the KGB and Interior Ministry into a "superministry" of security.

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN–
IT'S NEVER TOO LATE TO GET INVOLVED.
COME DOWN TO 113 CAMPUS CENTER
OR CALL 545–3500 FOR MORE INFORMATION

WINTER INTERSESSION • 1993

JANUARY 4 — JANUARY 16

Don't put your education on ice this winter break — enroll in UMass Lowell's Winter Intersession. This highly concentrated, two-week session is perfect if you want to earn college credit to get ahead in your educational program. And if you're enrolled in another university, it's a great way to earn transfer credits.

Credit Courses (3 credits) available in:
- Liberal Arts
- Sciences
- Mathematics
- Computers
- Social Sciences
- Management
- Music

Cost: $95/credit

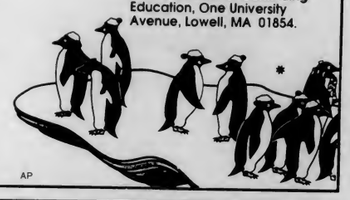
Day classes: Mon-Sat, 9am-12:30pm
Evening classes: Mon-Fri, 6-9:30pm and Sat, 1-4:30pm

Make your winter break really count! For a Winter Intersession bulletin, call the Division of Continuing Education at (508) 934-2480. Or just fill out the coupon below and mail it to: University of Massachusetts Lowell, Division of Continuing Education, One University Avenue, Lowell, MA 01854.

UMass Lowell
Continuing Education

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Phone ( ) _____
College _____

The University of Massachusetts Lowell is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Title IX Employer



BOOGA!
Got an idea for a story? Want to get published? Come down to the Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, and give it a shot.

Vision Showcase

☆ EYEGLASSES ☆
☆ CONTACT LENSES ☆
☆ EYE EXAMINATIONS ☆ ☆ 584-8324 ☆
Hampshire Mall, Hadley

Eye Examination performed by
Dr. Robert E. Delaney
Independant Doctor of Optometry

Eyeglasses & Exam $99.00 Complete

Price includes:

Frames from our special selection, 1st & 2nd division clear uncoated plastic lenses, and, a Standard Eye Examination

Please Present This Coupon at time of purchase
Offer expires 3/31/93 & precludes previous offers
College I.D. Required

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Institute for the Healing of Racism Tuesday 7 pm CCRM 917 All are welcome

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Andrea and Friend who looked at my apartment, 308 North Pleasant (near BayBanks), and talked to Robert Shumway last spring, please call Dave: 253-7522.

Attention Southwest! It's a winter Snowball Bash and you are invited Dec. 11 9pm - 1am Student Union Ballroom Only $8 for food, dancing, DJ and a great party! Tickets on sale now at DC's.

Be published! If you're an artist, poet, writer, or photographer, submit your work to Spectrum at 406 E Student Union building (Above the Credit Union) by Dec. 11. Info call 545-2240

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

AUTO FOR SALE

TRADE 83 Nissen pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

FOR RENT

Amherst 2 bedroom apt 1 room for rent 2 full baths w/heat included On bus route available immediately Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb 1st. A room and 1 bedroom apartment avail. Jan 1st. Lincoln Real Estate 25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Leverett – close to campus - room in sunny home in exhange for 12 hours of child care per week plus some light housekeeping duties must be available for early morning (7 am - 8:30 am) and some afternoons (3:30 pm-5 pm) car essential some transporting of children.

Two females for double bedroom Presidential apts 182 Each + 549-4705

FOR SALE

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9781 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

Drivers $7-$10 per hour Start immediately Apply Domino's Pizza 241 King St. Northampton

Holiday jobs for the environment Work with MASSpirg to pass the toughest environmental laws in the country.
* Learn campaign skills
* Stop Pollution
* Make a difference!
Call Carmen 256-8434

International Employment -- Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits. Financially culturally rewarding. For program call: (206)632-1146 ext. J5001

Typist is needed part time to work on Macintosh computer. Call Reza for an appointment 549-3840

Want to travel free, earn cash and resume experience? Students and oranizations call College Tours to join our team! We have 25 years experience, great prices, hotels, and destinations. Call 1-800-959-4sun

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost silver and torquoise claddaugh ring somewhere on campus 11/19. If found call 253-2733.

MUSICIANS

Band seeking experiancad lead singer and keyboard/organ player. Covers and originals. Influences include Cream, the Meters, King Curtis. Serious Inquiries only. 549-5862.

PERSONALS

Congratulations to Tri Sigma's new Chapter Officers: Stephanie, Kristen, Kim, Leslie, Holly, Maredith and Laurie. Good luck in 1993!

Happy 20th Birthday Katie & Tracey only 365 days left! We love you and with you both the best! Your roomates in #8 Say, Can, and "B"

Starvealing, Moonshine -- Walker??? You're my midsummer night's dream. I love you. Can I have my pants back? Audrey D.

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508-228-6265

ROOMATES WANTED

Single room avail. in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo+.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards Coming Dec. 1st Mountain Farms Mall Info. 256-1375

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93 Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

SKI – Intercollegiate ski weeks only $209. Includes: 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging. Mountainside condos/5 days intercollegiate activities (Drinking age - 18), sponsored by Labatts, Molson and Mt. Sutton, Canada (Just across the Vermont border) group leader discount Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

Take it off! Spring Break '93 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida Seve $$$ Before Jan. 1 Jesse 549-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Typing - Word Processing Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

WANTED

Need cash for Holidays I will buy your sports cards. Complete set or single cards. Call Dave 546-3690

Sports

COLLEGE BASKETBALL AP TOP 25

1.	Michigan	(0-0)
2.	Kansas	(0-0)
3.	Duke	(0-0)
4.	Indiana	(4-0)
5.	Kentucky	(0-0)
6.	Seton Hall	(3-1)
7.	Florida State	(2-2)
8.	North Carolina	(0-0)
9.	Memphis State	(0-0)
10.	Arizona	(0-0)
11.	Iowa	(0-0)
12.	Louisville	(0-0)
13.	Georgetown	(0-0)
14.	Georgia Tech	(0-0)
15.	Oklahoma	(0-0)
16.	UConn	(0-1)
17.	Syracuse	(0-0)
18.	Michigan State	(0-0)
19.	Tulane	(1-1)
20.	UMass	(0-0)
21.	UCLA	(3-1)
22.	UNLV	(0-0)
23.	Cincinnati	(0-0)
24.	Iowa State	(1-1)
25.	Nebraska	(0-0)

Results for week 13 in the NFL

Referee decision upsets drive by Philadelphia Eagles

Colts 16, Bills 13 (OT)

INDIANAPOLIS — Dean Biasucci made a 40-yard field goal to cap the opening drive of overtime to give the Colts (5-7) an upset victory over Buffalo (9-3). Biasucci had tied the game in the final minute of regulation with a 23-yarder, and the Colts then drove 56 yards with the overtime kickoff to set up the game-winner. Colts quarterback Jack Trudeau passed for a season-high 337 yards.

Vikings 31, Rams 16

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Sean Salisbury got his first NFL start after seven years of pro football. He made the most of it, completing 23 of 34 for 238 yards in relief of the benched Rich Gannon. The Vikings (9-3) take the NFC Central with their next win or Green Bay's next loss. The defeat was the fourth in the last five games for the Rams (4-8).

49ers 20, Eagles 14

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — The 49ers (10-2) clinched a playoff spot and Jerry Rice tied Steve Largent's record for career touchdown catches (100) when he caught a 22-yarder in the first quarter. The 49ers seemed preoccupied with finding Rice again in the end zone for the record-breaker, and it almost cost them the game. A drive by the Eagles (7-5) in the closing seconds ended at the 49ers' 10 when Philadelphia was less than an inch short of a first down.

Steelers 21, Bengals 9

CINCINNATI — The Bengals' switch from Boomer Esiason to David Klingler didn't do much good. The Steelers (9-3) began to blitz the rookie quarterback after he completed his first five passes, and the defensive unit ended up with a team-record 10 sacks. Barry Foster, the NFL's leading rusher with 1,319 scored two touchdowns and broke Franco Harris' team rushing record. The Bengals (4-8) are last in the AFC Central.

In other games, Cleveland beat Chicago 27-14, Washington routed Phoenix 41-3, Green Bay beat Tampa Bay 19-14, Kansas City beat the New York Jets 23-7.

— ASSOCIATED PRESS

Patriots revert back to old form

By ED SHEARER
Associated Press

The Atlanta Falcons finally found a blowout they could love.

This time it was the Falcons, battered by 27 or more points three times in their previous five games, delivering the blow, a 34-0 shutout of the punchless New England Patriots on Sunday.

It was the first shutout for the Falcons (5-7) since beating Green Bay 20-0 on Nov. 6, 1988, covering a span of 65 regular-season and two playoff games.

Defense set the tone with two fumble recoveries, two Deion Sanders interceptions and five quarterback sacks, with Darion Conner in on three of them.

Billy Joe Tolliver passed for 107 yards and two touchdowns in three quarters and rookie Tony Smith had 81 yards on 10 carries, including a 29-yard touchdown run in the third quarter.

Atlanta held the Patriots to 105 yards, 90 of that on the ground. Scott Zolak completed 9 of 15 passes for 58 yards, 43 of that being erased on the five sacks.

The Falcons set the tone on New England's first possession when Conner and Tim Green dumped Zolak for an 8-yard loss.

The Falcons needed eight plays to cover 78 yards and take a 7-0 lead on Steve Broussard's 8-yard run with 7:41 left in the opening quarter.

Tolliver's 26-yard pass to Drew Hill and a 32-yard interference penalty on David Pool ate up most of the yardage.

Tolliver's 10-yard TD pass to Hill made it 14-0 with one minute left in the opening quarter, and Atlanta stretched the lead to 24-0 at halftime on an 18-yard pass from Tolliver to Broussard and a field goal by Norm Johnson.

The scoring pass to Broussard came three plays after Conner forced a Zolak fumble on a sack, with Mike Gann covering for the Falcons on the New England 18.

Heisman trophy, bowl matchups still up in air

By RICK WARNER
Associated Press

With the regular season all but over, the Heisman Trophy winner is uncertain, the bowl picture is unclear and Miami's No. 1 ranking is unchanged.

Miami quarterback Gino Toretta emerged from the season's final big weekend as the Heisman favorite, but not an overwhelming one.

Running backs Marshall Faulk of San Diego State, Garrison Hearst of Georgia and Reggie Brooks of Notre Dame will get a lot of votes, and Florida State linebacker Marvin Jones could finish in the top five because many voters aren't happy with any of the offensive candidates.

Toretta made a strong campaign pitch Saturday night, completing 19 of 35 passes for 310 yards and one touchdown in a 63-17 destruction of San Diego State. The win improved his starting record to 26-1 and kept Miami on track for a second straight national title, pluses that could outweigh his less-than-spectacular passing stats.

"I've been impressed with him for four years," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said. "Obviously I think he deserves it, but I don't vote."

Faulk's Heisman hopes were damaged by a sprained right knee, which forced him to miss the Miami game. The nation's leading rusher watched from the sideline and didn't speak to reporters after the game. But his coach, Al Luginbill, still endorsed his sophomore sensation.

"I've always felt that Marshall is the No. 1 contender for the Heisman," Luginbill said.

Hearst and Brooks, who were considered longshots last week, closed their campaigns with big rallies.

Hearst rushed for 169 yards and three touchdowns in a 31-17 victory over Georgia Tech, while Brooks had 227 yards and three TDs in a 31-23 win over Southern California.

Faulk ended the regular season with 1,630 yards, compared 1,547 for Hearst and 1,343 for Brooks.

"I hope I performed well enough," said Hearst, who set a Southeastern Conference record with 21 touchdowns this season. "But whatever happens, I know I gave the voters something to look at."

The Heisman winner will be announced Dec. 12, a week after the matchups are set for the Sugar, Orange, Cotton, and Fiesta bowls.

The four major games in the new bowl coalition can't figure out their pairings until they know the winner of next Saturday's SEC championship game between No. 2 Alabama and No. 12 Florida.

If Alabama wins, it will play Miami in the Sugar Bowl. No. 4 Texas A & M will meet No. 3 Florida State or No. 5 Notre Dame in the Cotton, the Big Eight champion (probably No. 11 Nebraska) will face Florida State or Notre Dame in the Orange, and No. 6 Syracuse will play No. 9 Colorado (if Nebraska wins the Big Eight) in the Fiesta.

If Alabama loses next week and Florida State moves up to No. 2, the Seminioles would get a rematch against Miami in the Fiesta Bowl and the other coalition bowls would be scrambled. Miami handed Florida State its only loss, 19-16, on Oct. 3.

Georgia's win over Georgia Tech and Florida's 45-24 loss to Florida State will likely send the Bulldogs to the Citrus Bowl against No. 15 Ohio State and the Gators to the Gator Bowl against No. 13 North Carolina State.

JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN

FROM PRACTICE TO THE REAL THING — The University of Massachusetts basketball team, shown here in the Latvian exhibition game, opens its season in Tallahassee on Wednesday against Florida State.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL AP TOP 25

1.	Miami	(11-0)
2.	Alabama	(11-0)
3.	Florida State	(10-1)
4.	Texas A & M	(12-0)
5.	Notre Dame (	9-1-1)
6.	Syracuse	(9-2)
7.	Michigan	(8-0-3)
8.	Georgia	(9-2)
9.	Colorado	(9-1-1)
10.	Washington	(9-2)
11.	Nebraska	(9-2)
12.	Florida	(8-3)
13.	North Carolina State	(8-2-1)
14.	Stanford	(8-2)
15.	Ohio State	(8-2-1)
16.	Boston College	(8-2-1)
17.	Tennessee	(8-3)
18.	Washington State	(8-3)
19.	Mississippi	(8-3)
20.	North Carolina	(8-3)
21.	Penn State	(7-4)
22.	Arizona	(6-4-1)
23.	Southern Cal	(6-3-1)
24.	Mississippi State	(7-4)
25.	Brigham Young	(8-4)

Tuesday December 1, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 55

Mostly cloudy today, temps in the low 40s.

Local News:
Two University of Massachusetts professors have designed a plan to preserve the AIDS Memorial Quilt. Their plan was discussed at a Brown Bag Lecture yesterday. Page 3.

Sports:
UMass Football Coach Mike Hodges and cornerback Don Caparotti received postseason awards yesterday. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

State wants workers paid on merit

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

BOSTON - The Weld administration Monday pushed for changes in the way the state pays its management workers, saying pay increases should be based on merit instead of years of service.

Secretary of Administration and Finance Peter Nessen said the plan would provide an incentive for high quality work. "We need a system that differentiates between employees who distinguish themselves through hard work and exemplary performance and those who do not," he said.

But several legislators and union officials suggested the plan, which would cost $4.6 million, could wind up rewarding those who play politics best.

"The people who get the pay increases, are they the ones who are the bootlickers, the folks who are the politicos?" asked Rep. Hasty Evans, R-Wayland, a member of the Public Service Committee.

The plan would apply to 3,300 state managers, who are not covered by union contracts.

The proposal calls for raising the ceiling on salaries, so that managers in different employment categories would have a growth potential of an additional eight percent.

Raises would be given on merit. The plan would eliminate automatic salary increases and overtime for managers.

Administration officials said they would put in place a work performance evaluation system, but Nessen said the legislation would be filed separately.

Committee chairman Rep. Kevin Blanchette, D-Lawrence, said it was hard to judge a merit increase without an evaluation plan. "You're asking us to make an incredible leap of faith," Blanchette said.

Blanchette said he is not opposed to linking pay to performance. But he said no action would be taken on the bill until the evaluation piece is filed.

In addition to a merit pay system, the plan would increase managers' contribution to the state's health insurance system from 10 percent to 15 percent.

It also calls for reducing the number of days managers can take for sick time, personal days and holidays from 41 days to 31 days, cutting sick days from 15 to 8 and eliminating two holidays taken by state workers, Bunker Hill Day and Evacuation Day.

The administration proposes increasing some benefits to managers. It would offer managers dental and optical insurance coverage, which is currently offered to union

Turn to PAY, page 4

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

FLAG FUN — Members of the University of Massachusetts Color Guard practice their act in front of the Old Chapel.

Gov. Clinton's record debated

President-elect said open to reason, debate on issues

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Bill Clinton had just vetoed a school bill and dispatched it to the Capitol marked "disapproved" when state legislators persuaded him to reverse course.

That evening, a state police officer used a coat hanger to fish the bill out of a locked Capitol office. The Arkansas governor scratched out the first three letters of "disapproved," and the measure became law.

Critics say the 1985 incident shows that Clinton cannot make up his mind, that he is so eager to please everyone that no one is served in the end. Supporters say he's just open to reason, a consensus builder who pushed his state toward the 21st century, one compromise at a time.

People who watched Clinton govern Arkansas for 12 years give him high marks for preparation and vision but mixed reviews for administrative skills and decision-making ability.

Clinton ran an informal but intense office, showing a sense of humor and an occasional flash of temper.

Former chief of staff Betsey Wright says Clinton occasionally lost his cool, usually when he was tired, suffered from painful allergy flare-ups or had been away from his daughter, Chelsea, too long.

"I called it Chelsea withdrawal," said Ms. Wright, now part of Clinton's transition team.

In one instance, Clinton angrily cussed at a state employee over the phone in a disagreement over the 1990 redistricting of the state Legislature. But Clinton also enjoys exchanging jokes and telling funny stories.

Employees say Clinton is eager to reason with his staff, and accept advice from all comers.

"Debate was expected. He like to hear all sides before making up his mind," said Walt Patterson, a former member of Clinton's cabinet.

Clinton liked to delegate duties in the governor's office, prompting critics to complain that many projects began with lofty goals but withered under his hands-off style of management.

But he also has been criticized for being too involved,

Turn to CLINTON, page 2

Tsongas battles cancer

Says political plans won't be affected

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — Former Democratic presidential candidate Paul Tsongas, who has twice battled cancer, confirmed on Monday that a new growth found in his abdomen is cancerous.

"That's the bad news," Tsongas, 51, told a packed news conference. "The good news is that it's contained."

The former senator said he will undergo chemotherapy and radiation treatment as early as Thursday, and that those measures should effectively remove the cancer, which he identified as large-cell lymphoma.

"Now, is this the last one they'll ever find?" he asked. "Who knows?"

Tsongas ended his Senate career in 1984 after he was diagnosed with non-Hodgkins lymphoma. His condition worsened despite conventional treatment, and Tsongas underwent an experimental operation in July 1986 in which some bone marrow was removed and treated to kill the cancer cells.

Doctors also removed a node that was found to be lymphoma from Tsongas' armpit in 1987.

He said he was relived to learn the newest growth, discovered near his pancreas, was not pancreatic cancer, which can be quickly fatal.

Doctors at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, where Tsongas was diagnosed, declined to comment. The institute's spokeswoman, Gina Vild, said a medical history was being prepared at Tsongas' request, and would be made public.

"I have come to the painful conclusion that there's no way around full medical disclosure," Tsongas said. "I'm sorry to come to this conclusion, because I think it's going to set an unfortunate precedent for a lot of other people."

He recommended that President-elect Bill Clinton set up a commission to establish full medical disclosure for all presidential candidates.

Tsongas said his medical condition

Turn to TSONGAS, page 10

Ministers won't drop passport controls in EC

By SUE LEEMAN
Associated Press

LONDON — The European Community turned down an appeal by Germany for its fellow EC nations to accept more refugees and instead offered Bonn sympathy for its attempts to curb xenophobic right-wing violence.

The ministers failed to agree on dropping passport controls within the EC from Jan. 1, said British Home Secretary Kenneth Clarke. He said there would be "some notable easing of restrictions" within the EC in 1993, but gave no details.

Clarke, chairman of a one-day meeting of EC interior ministers, said a German proposal for a "quota system" among the EC nations was rejected.

"Racism was condemned by those assembled," Clarke told a news conference. "There was sympathy and support for the efforts of the German government in particular to contain outbreaks of racism inside Germany."

Germany has appealed repeatedly to the other EC nations to share the burden.

The influx has helped cause a surge of right-wing violence, which has prodded the government to tighten its asylum laws.

There have been nearly 1,800 rightist attacks in Germany this year, in which 16 people have died.

There are also signs of increasing anti-forgeigner sentiment and racial tension in other West European countries.

Clarke said the group agreed on swifter procedures for dealing with "manifestly unfounded claims by asylum seekers," but he gave no details.

He claimed the meeting adopted "a sensible and organized policy of who is allowed to live in our midst."

Britian said Monday it would take 4,000 refugees from camps in war-torn Bosnia-Herzegovina, up from a ceiling of 600 set this month.

"There will always be people who say we are not going far enough," said Clarke.

"You can't just open up the frontiers of a country like Yugoslavia and let people from any part of it . . . come to the United Kingdom."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Collegian Elections for Spring 1993

APPLICATIONS ARE CURRENTLY BEING ACCEPTED FOR PAID POSITIONS.
Application deadline: Dec. 9, 3pm
Candidates night: Dec. 9, 7pm
Elections: Dec. 10, 10am-8pm
For information regarding positions, staff eligibility or to get an application, please see Brooke C. Wheeler (Managing Editor) soon.
The Collegian is an E.O.E.

NOTICE

Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 325, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places on Monday, Nov. 30. Please be there!

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum runs each Thursday and consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Tuesday, December 1

Special announcement — Today is World AIDS Day.

Lunch — The Graduate Student GLB Group will have a pizza lunch from noon - 1 p.m. in the Program for GLB Concerns' Office in Crampton House, Southwest.

Thursday, December 3

Meeting — The UMass Lesbian, Bisexual and Gay Counseling Collective will have an informational meeting from 8 p.m. - 9:30 p.m. in the Campus Center for people who are interested in joining the Collective and becoming peer counselors for the spring semester.

Friday, December 4

Social — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will have a coffee social at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center.

Saturday, December 5

Café — Steven Riel, a local author, and Girls Who Can't Help It, an improv comedy troupe will perform at 7:30 p.m. in the Hatch as part of the Program for GLB Concerns' Café Series. A $3 donation is requested.

Monday, December 7

Brown Bag — Sarah Schulman, author of five novels and winner of two literary awards, will talk about "Lesbian/Gay life during the Reagan-Bush years (Let's hope they're over)" from noon - 1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th Floor. Schulman, who wrote People in Trouble and After Dolores will also give a reading at 7:30 p.m.

Deer season begins in Mass.

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. — Thomas Rabbitt was in the woods before the first shotgun blasts a half-hour before sunrise Monday heralded the opening of the deer season in Massachusetts.

But the lieutenant in the state's environmental police force had an eye out for the wayward hunters, not deer.

"We put in 18 to 22-hour days this time of year," said Rabbitt. "Deer season keeps us very busy."

He ran into some familiar faces during his pre-dawn patrol, but didn't take out his citation book.

"The fellows I checked this morning are all honest hunters," I've been working the same area for the past seven to eight years and have checked them every year. We're almost friends."

The pace didn't slacken when he reached his desk in the Northampton field office. By mid-morning he had logged 19 calls running the gamut from property owners complaining about trespassing hunters and hunters firing too close to homes to hunters reporting finding evidence of game law violations or other criminal activity.

"Sometimes it seems as if everybody in the world calls on opening day," said Rabbitt as he parceled out the investigations in order of urgency to his field officers.

Both Rabbitt and Sgt. Joe Lynch in the field office covering Worcester County reported no major incidents during the early hours. But they said lots of hunters were in the woods as the nine-day shotgun season opened under cloudy skies and temperatures in the 40's.

"Please be it stays that way," said Lynch, who heads the state's hunter safety program. "Almost all hunters are pretty responsible people. It's never more than a handful that cause problems. The unhappy part of it is the amount of harm they do to legitimate hunters."

Part of the state's 12-hour hunter safety course is devoted to ethical issues, he said, but Massachusetts is one of only three states not to require first-time hunters over 18 to take the course before being issued a deer license. The only first-time hunters who must take the course here are those between the ages of 15 and 17.

"We are not too happy about that," Ryan said. "And we have had a bill in the state Legislature every year for the past 12 years, but nothing ever seems to come of it. We are the only state without any sort of safety training."

Meantime, Thomas Keefe, regional head of the state Division of Fisheries and Wildlife in the Berkshires, was kept busy measuring the antlers, teeth and weight of the deer brought to the deer checking station set up outside his Pittsfield office.

"It's not quite as busy as last year, but we've had quite a number of deer brought in," he said. "So far they are looking very good. We've had a number of nice full-grown bucks. And even the fawns and yearlings are showing good weight.

Coming in tomorrow's Collegian...

THE UMASS BASKETBALL 1992-93 SEASON PREVIEW
EXTRAVAGANZA!
Don't miss it!

■ Clinton

continued from page 1

annoying some by personally lobbying lawmakers in public meetings or in Capitol hallways.

"All of a sudden he'd send himself in to replace a staff member who may have been doing a good job," said Republican state Sen. Travis Miles.

Even his critics called Clinton extremely bright and almost always well-studied on the issues.

During his term as governor he worked long hours, sometimes split between the Governor's Mansion and the Capitol.

Most agreed, too, that he had no trouble setting goals and convincing his constituents to share the vision.

The biggest knock against Clinton's management style is his penchant for compromise.

The trait dates to 1980, when the brash first-term governor was thrown out of office at age 34 after the state's voters and power structure found him arrogant.

Returned to office in 1982, Clinton was much more willing to bend.

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs-immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

INSTITUTE for the HEALING of RACISM
An honest and frank dialogue involving all races so that individuals may help heal each other
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 1
7:00 p.m.
Room 917 Campus Center
Meetings every first and third Tuesday of the month.

Sponsored by the Bahai Club

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TUESDAY
SHARK NIGHT
- Singles Pool Tournament -
• $2.00 Entrance Fee •
• Free Pizza Slices •
• Play for Cash •
• Sign up 7:00-7:45 •
Watch All The Sports on Satellite Dish
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Local News

Profs try to preserve AIDS quilt

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

The AIDS Memorial Quilt will deteriorate over time as it travels around the country to educate people, according to two UMass professors who presented their project to preserve the quilt at noon Monday in the Campus Center.

"The AIDS Memorial Quilt: The UMass Archival Project" was the title of the brown bag lunch presented by Karen Lederer of the Women's Studies Department and Louise Bloomberg of the Art History Program. The event was sponsored by the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Brown Bag Series.

Lederer said, "The AIDS Memorial Quilt is to create a mainstream symbol of the number of people who have died from AIDS and to represent the individuality of each person on each panel of the quilt."

She said that there are over 23,000 panels and each panel represents one name, one person and is the size of the space each person occupied when they were alive. Each panel is three feet by six feet which is the standard size of a grave.

Lederer said the quilt was started in the gay and lesbian community, but it has captured a lot of different people in a lot of different ways.

"About 140,000 people in the United States have died from AIDS," Lederer said. "The quilt represents the work of at least 100,000 people."

Lederer said that the people who created the individual panels of the AIDS Memorial Quilt often have a hard time letting them go. She said preserving the quilt and its message on an interactive video will not only help the mourners, but it will be used for research, to educate people and policy makers.

The archival system Lederer and Bloomberg are working on would index each panel of the quilt according to the person memorialized, date of birth, date of death, panel creator, date of creation and other information that could be sorted in various ways to retrieve information quickly and easily.

Bloomberg said they are using the interactive video system, because presently computers do not have enough memory for a project this big and it is the best technology at this point in time.

She said that their project is receiving much support from their departments and the Dean of Humanities and Fine Arts.

The project to preserve the quilt on interactive video is presently in the fund-raising phase. The UMass Arts Council funded a video for the project titled "Stitches in Time" to use for education and fund-raising.

Bloomberg said in January they will go back to California to photograph the first 800 panels.

She said after rolls of film are taken of the quilt in California the film will be sent to the Interactive Video Center at UMass for the processing of information.

"The photographs of the individual panels, information, letters and photographs from people close to the person memorialized in the panels will be stored in the interactive video system," Bloomberg said.

"The AIDS Memorial Quilt is so rich in visual information that it must absolutely be saved," Bloomberg said.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

LAND HO! — UMass civil engineering students survey the campus under the watchful eye of their teaching assistant.

Conte Center praised

Polymer building nearing completion

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

University Chancellor Richard O'Brien signs the top beam of the Conte Polymer Research Center yesterday.

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

As part of a custom to bring good luck to newly constructed buildings and people who occupy them, a fir tree attached to the last steel beam was hoisted on the roof of the largest and most modern polymer research facility in the nation during a "topping off" ceremony yesterday.

The 35-foot beam of the new eight-story $50 million Silvio O. Conte Polymer Research Center was signed by Corinne Conte, the widow of Congressman Silvio Conte.

The center is named after Conte for his instrumental role in getting federal funds for the building. Others who had a role in planning the facility also signed the beam before about 50 onlookers who attended the ceremony.

"We're very happy because it's something that will go on for generations," said Corinne Conte. "Education is the most important thing in this country and we've got to see our children have every opportunity to go forward. It's our future."

Tripling the available lab space for polymer scientists, the building, located adjacent to the Lederle Graduate Research Center, is scheduled for occupancy in the summer of 1994. More than 250 researchers, including visiting scientists and Ph. D. students, will work in its 172,000 square feet of laboratories, offices and study space.

"We'll have the finest facility in the world for some years to come," said Chancellor Richard O'Brien, who signed the beam before it was hoisted. "It's a reminder that the University is growing to be the finest in the country in all it does."

The design architect is Ellenzwig Associates, Inc. of Cambridge and the architect is Whitney, Atwood, Norcross, Inc. of Boston. The ceremony was performed by the general contractor R.W. Granger, Inc. of Shrewsbury.

"I think it's great that the Commonwealth is able to build something with a very big impact for years to come," said the head architect, Bernie Feldstein. "This is one of the country's finest buildings and I'm pleased to be part of it."

The Polymer Research Center is designed as two seperate, six-story wings consisting of a laboratory wing and an office wing, connected by a small elevator lobby. The lab wing will have 123,000 square feet, the office wing will have 39,000 square feet and the connectors will have 10,000 square feet.

The UMass polymer science program graduates more Ph.D.'s in polymer chemistry than any school in the nation, an average of 15 to 20 each year. This is 25 percent of all polymer science Ph.D.'s granted in the United States per year.

Polymer scientists on campus have developed the world's strongest mate-

Turn to CONTE, page 10

Amherst stores offer discount of 20 percent

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The Holiday shopping season has arrived and to lessen the dent it puts in people's wallets, several businesses have organized a shopping day offering a savings of 20 percent on any one item purchased in their stores this Saturday.

"The Greeting Card Day is very good for businesses and for Amherst," said Max Hartshorne, an advertising representative for the Daily Hampshire Gazette.

Hartshorne said on Thursday a "greeting card", which will list the 39 businesses participating in the event, will be inserted into all the local papers.

"People must have a card to receive their discount, but if a person isn't able to get one before Saturday, the cards will also be available at the businesses participating," Hartshorne said.

Mike Sliskin, manager of Modrian, said this event was very successful for them last year and as a result they had their best sales day ever. "Lots of people came and liked the event so we decided to do it again," he said.

Hartshorne said the Gazette is responsible for promoting the event because they were also involved in organizing the advertising for a similar event called the Northampton Shopping Bag.

Hartshorne said this event provides affordable advertising to small businesses. "We spend thousands of dollars on advertising, but it is cost effective because we are advertising for 39 businesses at the same time."

"Downtowns have to have events like this to compete with the malls," Hartshorne said.

Hartshorne said 10 more businesses joined the second annual Greeting Card Day after hearing how successful the event was for them last year.

"The proof is in the pudding," Hartshorne said. He said the Jeffery Amherst Bookstore had the best day in the history of their store and sold five figures worth of books.

Turn to CARD, page 4

Amherst College professor becomes Simpson Lecturer

By DAVE MASSEY
Collegian Staff

The eminent immunologist Richard A. Goldsby will deliver his inaugural address as the tenth John Woodruff Simpson Lecturer at Amherst College.

Professor Goldsby, an Amherst College biology professor, will speak on "Race, Culture and the Natural Superiority of Western Civilization" this Thursday, Dec. 3, at 8 p.m. in Johnson Chapel at Amherst College.

In February of this year, Goldsby was named Simpson Lecturer at Amherst College, succeeding the historian Henry Steele Commager, who retired after 35 years at Amherst.

Goldsby's current research on detection strategies for Salmonella and on the molecular and cellular bases of the diversification of the bovine immune system has been supported by funding from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, among others.

As a Simpson Lecturer, Goldsby joins a prestigious group of individuals. The college's first Simpson Lecturer in 1923 was the famous Danish physicist and Nobel Laureate, Niels Bohr. This distinguished company has also included the poet Robert Frost and Archibald MacLeish.

Goldsby, who is only the second scientist to hold the lectureship, is a specialist in the molecular basis of immune systems. He first joined the Amherst faculty in 1982 as Amanda and Lisa Cross Professor in Biology.

In 1988, he left Amherst to become a Distinguished University Professor at UMass, while still teaching at Amherst College. Goldsby plans to continue his work with the Cellular and Molecular Biology program at UMass.

A prolific writer, Goldsby has written extensively in professional journals. He is the author of the forthcoming Principles of Immunology. His earlier works are Thinking AIDS (1989), Race and Races (1971), and Cells and Energy (1967).

Before joining the Amherst College faculty in 1982, Goldsby was professor of chemistry at the University of Maryland at College Park. He was also, from 1964 until 1972, a member of the biology faculty at Yale University. He holds a B.A. in chemistry from the University of California at Berkeley.

The John Woodruff Simpson Fellowship Fund was established in 1921 as a memorial to John W. Simpson of the Amherst College Class of 1871. Simpson was a distinguished lawyer in New York City and a Trustee of Amherst College for 16 years.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

TREE TRIMMING — An evergreen gets a lift to the top of the new Conte Polymer Research Center.

Light pollution cutting off view of night sky

By ANNE STUART
Associated Press

BOSTON — Astronomers have long warned that the harsh glare of outdoor lights is slowly cutting off the world's view of the night sky.

But their lonely campaign to curb "light pollution" is gaining a wider audience as others realize that shading the lights can save money as well as starry sights.

Particularly in urban areas, the artificial glow has dominated the nocturnal sky, often obscuring everything but the moon and the brightest stars.

Without some controls, astronomers say, only old-timers will recall gazing at a star-studded black canopy or glimpsing a meteor or the Milky Way.

"As we brighten up the sky, we lose our view of the universe," said David Crawford, an astronomer at the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Arizona and founder of the International Dark-Sky Association.

"If things keep going the way they are, the only place you'll see a really dark sky is a planetarium."

Over the past few decades, urban glare expanded along with American cities. Even in their isolated observatories, astronomers noticed the difference.

Relentless light from surrounding cities has "effectively shut down" the largest telescope at Mount Wilson in southern California, Crawford said, and others are threatened.

And the radiance is visible from outer space. "From satellite photos of North America taken at night , you can see the population centers of the world outlined by the glow they give off," said Alan MacRobert, associate editor of Cambrdge-based Sky & Telescope Magazine, an astronomy publication.

Many amateur astronomers must travel an hour or more to find a suitably dark spot to see the stars, particularly on the congested East Coast. "From a place like Boston, you'd have to go 60 or 100 miles. By that time, you're in another urban area," Crawford said.

■ pay

continued from page 1

members. The proposal also establishes a more flexible leave policy, allowing up to six months of unpaid leave for maternity, paternity, adoption, or the care of a sick family member.

Paid maternity leave would go to eight weeks, and the state would continue full health benefits during a leave period.

Currently women can take up to eight weeks unpaid maternity leave, or use vacation or personal time.

■ card

continued from page 3

Howard Gersten, owner of the Jeffery Amherst Bookstore, said he would recommend other businesses to do this because it produced tremendous sales for his business. "People get to buy a juicy book at a good price," he said.

Judie, the owner of Judie's Restaurant, said she hopes participation in the event is even more than last year. "The more people get involved, the more they will realize Amherst is not just a series of seven or eight stores," she said.

Hartshorne said some stores are not offering a discount on everything sold in the store. "At the bike shops there will be discounts on bike accessories, but not on the bikes," he said.

LEARN WHILE YOU EARN
THE MULLINS CENTER
~JOB FAIR~
TUESDAY DECEMBER 1ST
10:00 AM - 6:00 PM
CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 1009
Work Study and Non-Work Study Positions Available
CONCERT/EVENT STAFF
ICE RINK PERSONNEL
OFFICE HELP
FACILITY MAINTENANCE
EVERYONE WELCOME!

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
$10 HAIRCUTS!
Make an appointment with Liz, Monday through Friday, and your haircut will be only $10 !

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS
AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN
QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE
253-3834

The Child Care Tuition Assistance Program is accepting applications for the spring 1993 semester from all undergraduate parents who need money for child care expenses. Applications are available in the Off Campus Housing Office, 428 Student Union, 545-0865. Deadline is Friday, December 18.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Thanksgiving holiday rings hollow amid world hunger

For us, last Thursday was a day of thanks. For them, last Thursday was a day of struggle and mourning. No thanks, only death.

Here, hometowns across the nation were invaded by Americans wanting to celebrate with family and friends. There, small villages have all but vanished. No family, no friends.

Here we worry about transition teams. There they worry about living to see the next day.

Somalia has proven to the world that we are far from creating a truly benevolent society. Thousands of people die daily and over 300,000 have been lost to the famine that is estimated to take hundreds of thousands more.

Many Somalians near death are kept alive with mere flour. Their bodies are so decimated by famine that food in too large amounts can kill them.

They walk through the desert for hundreds of miles in the hope of finding help, of finding food, but most only find final peace. Both the young and the old have become trapped between tribal feuds that have taken more than 30,000 lives. And now the world watches in horror as hundreds of belly-bloated children die needlessly.

Last week President Bush prepared military forces to help in the protection and distribution of food in this East African nation that has nearly been forgotten. For the first time in decades, United States military power may be put to some good.

Not too long ago, we as a nation supported and spent hundreds of millions of dollars a day on a war that protected oil.

David
RIVERA

We give billions of dollars to former Soviet Republics, not in the hope of bettering their lives, but in hope of opening up business opportunities to make more money here at home. Sick.

Military intervention may help, but only people who care for the suffering, people who want to stop international hunger, will make a difference. I wonder: had Somalia been a commodity-rich nation, would our national leaders have acted faster to stop the tragedy? Starvation is a disease which can be cured and completely eradicated.

The developed nations of the world have enough food and wealth to sustain every life on this planet very comfortably for the rest of eternity, but instead we wait and watch as countless — and priceless — people wither. Starvation is said to be one of the most torturous ways to die, yet it has been allowed and will be allowed again.

In 1985 it was the media that allowed Americans and the world to see the starving of Ethiopia. What soon followed was a glimmer of what humans could accomplish. Organizations around the world gathered together and began fund-raising. If governments couldn't solve the problem, people would. It was a brief shinning moment in humanity. Brief.

Famine still continues in Ethiopia, and sadly Somalia is headline news only because more die each day there.

The "nation" of Somalia is all but nonexistent. Rations of flour will not stop the suffering, for if flour is seen as an only answer then several years from now the headlines will read the same as today.

Last Thursday most Americans threw away more food than most Somalians will eat all year long. I have a hard time giving thanks when a majority of the world suffers. But I have hope that some day there will be true cause to celebrate Thanksgiving. Sadly it won't be any time soon.

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist.

Pro-human party fights red tape

The administration says: "You're in a big school now, so we can't tend to each individual need of the student."

But do the students ask for that much? Nay; but we need a fraction of that much; we must keep in mind that since the University is large, it either has or can have a large amount of people to help the students. Therefore, the size of any given school does not excuse its apathy toward the student.

But, alas, there are those philistines who would argue: "You're going to be trudging through red tape all your life, and it's going to get even worse after college — so get used to it!"

By the phrase "getting used to it," what is meant is finding nooks and crannies here and there that have been overlooked by the system of red tape and, in accordance, manipulating those weaknesses to one's advantage. Therefore, "to get used to it" is to practice while things are still easy. Indeed, the anti-human atmosphere that red tape reeks is nothing short of a narcotic that forces people to act as "little manipulators." What I'm saying — what my party is saying — is that this school, as well as this society, is founded upon evil semantic and contractual cunning in manipulative skills, and can only be abolished — nay, undermined — by "fighting fire with fire," to quote a familiar saying.

And with this in mind I offer my seals of approval to the following: Butterfield for its strive toward independence of the evil system; and again Butterfield, for its acts of individualism — which constitute the destruction of red tape at UMass; and again and again Butterfield, since we are that deserving, that worthy — that useful to the promotion of the pro-human party!

Need I, Butterfield's assigned sheriff, say more? Verily we are a kingdom unto itself. . .

Francis M. Tokarski III
Central

Few heroes lead safe, pure lives

With the opening of Malcolm X, I have heard some concern that Malcolm X, the person, will lose some of his star appeal in much the same way that Martin Luther King was seemingly tarnished after the revelation of womanizing came out of his past with the publishing of And the Walls Came Tumbling Down by Ralph Abernathy.

When a hero is shown to have clay feet we needn't lose our respect of that person. No one is perfect, certainly not our heroes. This is a dangerous idealism in that it prevents possible heroism in common people who know they've sinned in the past and yes, even sin in the present. No one is all good or all bad; often the world's most powerful potential for good comes from witnessing firsthand the world's potential for evil.

Few heroes live narrow, straight-jacketed lives, and perhaps the people who are able to mirror and express the inarticulate yearnings, feelings and hopes of an entire block of people are able to do so because they feel so deeply themselves. Perhaps our greatest heroes are people who are able to feel so deeply in an unfeeling world, people who refuse to make themselves insensitive to the insensitivities of the world around them.

People who like the artist or the musician find themselves aware of nuances in the reality they experience and work to articulate those thoughts to the rest of us, so that we might live narrow, straight-jacketed lives that will be considered respectable enough to pass the test of scrutiny. But then, we don't all become heroes.

Lauren Burke
Sunderland

'Hub' needs improvement

I'm baaack! I've decided to write about something, actually some place, we all visit every day: the UMass Campus Center.

When I attended Indiana University, which has the largest student union "campus center" in the world, I was able to do everything from banking, studying, eating, shopping, studying, seeing a movie and even bowling or playing pool (honest!), all under one roof. Forget what Indiana University has; let's take a look at our Campus Center: the UMass student "Hub."

Adam Scott
ROBERTS

I'll start with the building's exterior. The concrete structure is ugly and just rises from the ground. The only windows (excluding the Student Union and Campus Hotel) are at the building's entrance. On a cold day thousands of us are squeezed into the concourse like toothpaste from a tube. If a nuclear bomb were to drop on our campus the only people to survive would be those in the Campus Center basement, where all evil lurks.

And how about those ATM machines? Gee, four ATMs for all the people passing through this central structure is asinine. Could you imagine O'Hare Airport in Chicago (the nation's busiest and largest) with only four ATMs? I think not!

The lines to get some "X-Press 24" cash quickly (it's anything but) looks more like the line to sit on Santa's lap at the local mall. Get with it, Whitmore; with almost 31,000 students I think more ATMs are a must. But then again if the lines are too long at the hub, walk over in the mud to the Newman Center. (Not)

A plus is that we have a Condom World on the concourse (you gotta love that!). Imagine a guy walking with a female friend past the counter. "Oh, I must stop at Condom World, (insert girlfriend's name) and I ran out!" (I don't think so!)

And if you're tired you can head downstairs and sit in front of a TV for awhile with Bob Barker playing "The Price Is Right." Ugly aqua chairs arranged to look like the waiting area at an airport terminal are not my idea of luxurious accommodations.

The bookstore: my personal favorite. How can a store the size of CVS cater to all our needs? It can't. Maybe that's why we have a separate place to buy books at the Textbook Annex. How stupid!

For, starters the magazine collection is erroneously set up in a "L-shape" so that when three or four people are browsing no one else can get to the shelves to pick up their favorite magazines. That's probably why magazines started subscriptions? You decide.

The Campus Center needs some big improvements: first, more ATM's; second, expansion of the bookstore so all book supplies can be purchased in one location, getting rid of the Textbook Annex.

Finally, a "Minuteman Express" could be started, similar to Indiana University's "Hoosier Express" card which is used like a credit card. You deposit money and each time you use your card the amount is deducted from your account. Maybe this would cut down on long ATM lines, although more ATMs are still necessary.

These suggestions can only improve the quality of the campus hub, thus making the Campus Center a more efficient home base.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian staff member.

Criticism of library short on facts

After reading Mr. Edward McCreanor's letter alleging mismanagement of personnel matters in the University Library System [Collegian, Nov. 16], I feel obligated to respond to some of the issues in it.

As an employee in the library system for 11 years, I have worked in both the public and technical services departments, in a branch library, the Tower Library, and the administration has always been fair, courteous and done in a professional manner. In every case, the union contract has been strictly adhered to.

Mr. McCreanor's view that the "library director has surrounded himself with several layers of insular management positions so that he does not have to personally interface with staff" is naive, to say the least. A library director has many duties that take him or her away from the office. Having to take part in day-to-day, routine hiring, scheduling and assignment of clerical staff to jobs shouldn't be one of his/her jobs. The concept of "delegation of authority" does not seem to be one that has come within Mr. McCreanor's purview.

The letter Mr. McCreanor wrote was prompted by the Collegian's coverage of a disagreement between the library and an employees, Ms. Svetlana Speyer. He praised the Collegian's "responsible journalism." I can't agree. So far, any source that has been quoted in these stories is the alleged injured party. There have been a few half-hearted attempts to get quotes from administrators — without success.

Perhaps this is because the questions the reporters were asking could not be answered without violating the rules dealing with maintaining confidentiality in personnel matters.

There is another source of information that has been completely ignored by the Collegian. What has been the role of U.S.A., the classified employee's union? They may not be able to comment on an individual's case either, but they could provide some background information. Such as: Can the University change an employee's work shift? If so, how is this done? If the employee doesn't wish to change, what options are open to him/her" Is it recommended that an employee refuse to work? Like any contract, a union contract is binding to both parties. Sometimes this works to your advantage, other times not, but it is there not only to protect the worker but to spell out management's rights too.

Janet Hughes
Sunderland

Multicultural Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Beyond the distinct chains of sisterhood

"How long shall the fair daughters of Africa be compelled to bury their minds and talents beneath a load of iron, pots and kettles?" -1831 Maria W. Stewart

Orphaned at the age of five, a domestic servant Stewart was the first American woman to lecture in public on political issues. Despite the conditions of slavery, Stewart struggled to educate herself and challenged African-American women to reject the negative images of Black womanhood, and pointed to the racial and sexual oppression of Black women as the fundamental causes of their poverty.

One of the first Black feminists, the themes in Stewart's texts are the intellectual precursors of a large body of feminist thought by women of color.

Only recently scholars have discovered a number of Maria Stewarts, whose intellectual prowess and ability to fight could not be subordinated by the "pots and kettles"- symbolic of the oppression of women of color and poor women.

The modern day women's movement emerged in the late 60s. Historically in the United States, it has remained primarily White. The suppression of the ideas of women such as Maria Stewart, Ida B. Wells, and many other women of color has had a profound impact on feminist theory. Western feminism has been advanced as being universally applicable to all women as a group. Upon closer examination, these theories reflect their White middle-class origins. Western feminist theories have advocated for the rights of White women only. The writings promote the generic White middle-class woman, with her experiences and her oppression- an image that has been thrust on women of color world over.

It is possible to locate the oppression of women not merely in the individual actions of men, but in a system of patriarchy. For women of color this system incorporates more than economic exploitation. The oppression reflects the hierarchial relations of the sexual and racial division of labor and society. This manner in which women come to understand their oppression is not through an abstract analysis but through every day personal experiences- by life rather than theory.

The women's movement has in certain regards called attention to cultural domination. It has begun a political analysis that is not isolated from practical activity. The struggles of both women and people of color have questioned the values, images and ideas imposed on them all and placed them in the context of unequal economic and power relations within society.

If sexist attitudes have been imposed through culture and education on all men, then it becomes fair to contend that racist attitudes have been inculcated on all White people. An understanding of sexism did not enable the women's movement to understand the parallel system of oppression — namely racism.

The oppression of women of color has been structured along economic, political and ideological lines. Women of color world over are "ghettoized" into low paying dead end jobs. Survival for them has become such an all consuming activity thus they have little or no space for intellectual work.

In 1988 the median annual earnings of all women in the United States was 69 percent that of a White man's. For White middle-class women the number is as high as 85 percent. On the other-hand, women of color earn 61 percent of a White man's wage.

The unemployment rate for white women is 4 percent, for Black and Latino women it is 9.8 percent and 8 percent respectively.

According to the Federal Commission on Older Women and Poverty, 73 percent of the elderly poor are women. But 33 percent of the elderly poor are women of color. From the drudgery of enslaved labor, to the debilitating poverty of "free" wage labor the economic exploitation of women of color remains a continuation of the earlier forms of exploitation.

Women of color in the U.S. are denied political rights and privileges. They are often excluded from public office, they are treated unfairly by the legal system, they are denied access to education and high skill jobs. The need to survive forces young women of color in inner-cities to leave school before gaining literacy. Those who remain in schools receive shoddy education because of the lack of funding of schools in the inner-cities.

Shyamala
IVATURY

White women in the U.S. have for the most part gained access to educational institutions, though even for them "occupational segregation" and hitting the "glass ceiling" remains a problem. In the lucrative professions such as law, medicine, science and so on, women occupy 7 percent of those positions. But Black women comprise only 2 percent of all the persons in these professions.

Adequate health care is a problem for poor women and women of color in the United States. In 1989, 15.2 million women in the U.S. had no health insurance, the majority being women of color. The death rate of African-American women is nine times greater than that of White women. For Black women living in the inner-cities, 30 percent of them receive little or no prenatal care. Over 25 percent of all Black women's pregnancies end in miscarriages due to the lack of medical facilities.

The numbers supporting of socio-economic exploitation of women of color are indicative of the failure of the women's movement. Middle-class White women have made considerable economic gains and for the most part they have taken care of their lot.

The ideological diamension of the oppression of women of color is through media images. Ideology represents the process by which qualities are assigned to certain groups and how these qualities are used to justify oppression. The images of women of color have varied from mammies, Jezebels, Suzie Wongs, Aunt Jemimas, the ubiquitous Black prostitutes, and the ever present welfare mothers. The nexus of negative images applied on women of color has contributed to their systematic oppression. This net of economics, politics and ideology has assigned women of color to subordinate positions.

The barrage of negative, demeaning images has contributed to the invisibility of women of color within the women's movement as well. The criticisms of feminists such as Angela Davis, Bell Hooks, Audry Lorde just to name a few, has forced the women's movement to acknowledge the racism inherent in its theories. But instead of examining the shortcomings of their own policies and practices, they have resorted to "cultural pluralism" and have jumped on the bandwagon of multiculturalism. There has been no concrete analysis of their racists programs, but racism has been reduced to a moral problem — an interpersonal issue. Women of color in all feminist organizations are expected to clarify the racism of White women present, rather than the White women making the personal change that makes political transformation and action possible.

The reduction of oppression to individual actions has never allowed the women's movement to seriously tackle the state, and to recognize the role of the state in the perpetuation of these oppressions.

Instead of showing that the state is responsible for the oppression of both women and people of color, the women's movement asks for protection from the state. It is the same police force that victimizes rape victims and beats up Black men. It is the same media that exaggerates the crimes of people of color and dehumanizes women by portraying them as sex objects.

Even the articulation of the abortion debate and its focus on "free choice" is a racists articulation. It assumes that liberty and individual choice is more important than socio-economic equality. Individual rights only become important when the mechanisms of enforcement exist.

In regards to women from the Third World, the women's movement has shown a great deal of cultural imperialism. In countries locked in semi-fuedal relations of production attributing arranged marriages, dowry or circumcision to a country or culture is taking these practices out of context. The trend has been to isolate and judge sexual oppression outside the context of imperialism. The impoverishment of South Asia and the consequent increase in prostitution is a direct result of imperialism. Attacking cultural practices with invoking imperalism by the Western Nations is belittling the struggles of women in the Third World. Nawal El Saadawi, a Third World feminist, lamented that westersn feminists sensationalize marginal issues. She asks how women in Beruit subjected to daily bombardment by Israeli planes could be expected to worry about their orgasms.

Both within and outside their society, the western women's movement has concentrated on extending individual sexual freedoms as a part of liberation democracy instead of fundamentally changing society. It has attempted to promote a universalized notion of sisterhood that has ignored the complexities of race and class. It has ignored the experiences and interests of different women. For women of color all over the world, race and national interests dominate. Freedom from hunger, from mere survival, from foreign domination all neccesitate fundamental structural changes.

If theory is to guide practice, then western feminist must ask new questions, re-order priorities, thereby conceiving political struggle in a new way.

Shyamala Ivatury is a UMass graduate student

The root of sovereignty lies with information

At the root of sovereignty lies information. With the development of new technologies, access to information will be controlled by a few western media conglomerates, i.e., Associated Press, Rueters, Agence France-Presse, and United Press International. These corporations understand the importance of information in securing economic and political power. Control of the media enables the power structure to disseminate information in limited and distorted doses, leaving the masses confused and misinformed.

Only in recent decades have people realized that information is a major perpetrator in influencing and perpetuating oppressive conditions for women and people of color. The media is responsible for fabricating images that distort, misrepresent, and dehumanize women and people of color, thus fueling the ideologies of the dominant culture. To achieve independence one must recongize the significance of political, economic, and informational structures that stand in the way of liberation.

It is important for people of color and women to control media flow and have access to information in order to dismantle or challenge existing oppressive structures. The writers of this semester's multicultural affairs page have incorporated this understanding as a focal point attempting to counter the ideology of western culture.

Many people have questioned the importance and validity of the specialty pages of the Collegian. I feel that it is necessary to clarify some of the misconceptions surrounding the pages.

Journalism in the Collegian has been plagued with a vast amount of racist, sexist, and homophobic articles, columns, comics, advertisement, and journalists. Unfortunately, this type of biased journalism is protected by the "sacred" first amendment right of freedom of speech.

As a reaction to decades of biased journalism, students of color and women took it upon themselves to challenge the discriminatory policies and reporting within the Collegian. They demanded fair and equal representation for the silenced "majority" of the world's population. Active campaigning, leafletting, petitioning, rallies and sit-ins won people of color and women the "right" to gain access to the Collegian.

Sandra
ROSE

The fight for their freedom of speech was met with much resistance. Creating speciality pages is perceived to be "segregating" the respective communities represented on the pages and that women's news and news concerning people of color should be assimilated into "mainstream" news. Speciality pages is not the "segregation" of news, but rather the "inclusion" of alternative perspectives.

The pages provide people who have limited or no access to the media an opportunity to voice their opinions, concerns, and agendas, that may be complementing or contradicting the dominant views of this society. Specialty pages provide a space for discourse and engage people to think about issues that are often misrepresented in mainstream news.

The most threatening aspect about speciality pages is the potential power to educate and inform people about systematic exploitation and oppression of women and people of color. Why is this so threatening?

Understanding the structures that keep women and people of color oppressed might create a consciousness of their own oppression. Women and people of color would have the necessary knowledge to rebel against the system of exploitation.

Control over the media is an important tool that continues the dominance of western ideologies. Only 15 percent of poor people are Black, but judging from media coverage, Blacks and Latinos are mostly criminals, prostitutes, drunks, illiterate, and jobless. How often are the insidious acts of skinheads, Klu Klux Klan members, David Duke or Pat Buchanan reported or even criticized? Coverage of the Third World is limited to stories of famine, war, corruption, or disaster. Even these stories are distorted because of the mechanisms of western new agencies. How often do we read about the exploitation of people and their lands by multinational corporations and the impact of their monopoly domination?

Western media is an institutionalized form of control that automatically favors the existing power structures. Intensification of control over the media will make the maintenance of local cultural autonomy almost impossible. Examination of existing structures would create conflicting doctrines that threaten the power struture.

The U.S. is directly responsible for perpetuating journalistic imperialism upon people of color, especially in the Third World. The McBride Commission report, by the United Nations Educational Social and Cultural Organization, explained the domination over information by western press agencies and outlined suggestions to create "free and balanced flow of information." The United States was one of a few countries that rejected the report and withdrew its funding for UNESCO. (The United States happened to provide the majority of the funding for the organization.) This is a blatant admission that the United States is unwilling to give up its power.

Access and control of information will enable us to critically analyze institutions and systems that oppress people of color and women. We must print news in its due context to continue any type of struggle for true liberation. As one Indian journalist puts it, "In our environment there is, and there will be for a long time to come, much that is ugly and distasteful. If we follow the Western norm we will be playing up only these dark spots and thus helping unwittingly to erode the faith and confidence without which growth and development are impossible."

Sandra Rose is a Collegian staff member

Arts & Living

Inspired lunacy with Words and Pictures

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

Gregory
By Marc Hempel
Pirhana Press

Why are the insane so bloody amusing? I've spent the past hour or so browsing Michel Foucault's Madness and Civilization searching for some pithy quote I could use to answer that rhetorical question, but let's face it — trying to find an appropriate qutoe in a book you've never really read is downright impossible.

Still, it would've been keen to quote Foucault while reviewing a comic.

Ah, well. As anyone who's spent any time with someone who's gone mad (or flirted with insanity themselves) can tell you, it's no picnic. Losing contact with that common touchstone we call reality is a downright harrowing experience.

And yet time and time again in fiction we're asked to laugh at the insane — fools, buffoons, mad women and men are constantly tossed our way as comic relief. Whole movies and books, etc. have been based on just how funny some poor blithering idiot is. And Gregory is certainly walking in the hallowed footsteps of this tradition.

Gregory is all about, well, Gregory; a little guy who is afflicted with something "very long and hard to pronounce," the result of which is a lunatic who is never happier than when he's tearing around his cell like a hyperactive gerbil, screaming something that's very long and full of vowels.

Certainly not the most complex of characters. This is no holy fool here with sublimely witty wisdom from beyond the pale of sanity, except perhaps to show us just how much fun a strait jacket can be when you have no cognitive faculties to speak of.

And yet Marc Hempel is able to make this seemingly limited premise funny over and over again. Gregory is told in a loosely connected series of strips that are between one and 20 pages long, and there are very few moments scattered among them.

He is, of course, helped along by the requisite supporting cast. There's Hermin Vermin, the loquacious rat who gets most of the best lines due to Gregory's condition (though I suppose it is arguable whether "My God — it's Singapore '59 all over again!" is funnier than "EEEEEE! AAAAAAAAA! Bim bim bim! Zub zub!" when given the proper context).

Herman has a sidekick named Wendell, a mouse who never seems to get enough cheese. There are janitors and therapists and administrators and passers-by, all the ordered structure of the world that try to sort out the puzzle that is Gregory, and even the inanimate objects of his cell get into the act with a shtick that would make

Turn to GREGORY, page 8

A panel from "Gregory" by Marc Hempel

Nothing can protect this terrible Bodyguard

Inept script makes film this holiday's biggest turkey

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

The Bodyguard is simply a terrible movie. Constructed, it seems, for the cinematically stupid, everything about this poorly made film is either overdone or carelessly left out. From Whitney Houston's three-emotion acting (happy-mad-sad) to the movie's inept plotting, The Bodyguard is at best effectively silly; at worst cloyingly bad.

The Bodyguard, written 17 years ago as Lawrence Kasdan's (The Big Chill, Body Heat) first film, was originally intended for Steve McQueen. The film went through numerous incarnations through the years (at one time even Debbie Gibson and Dolph Lungren were considered) until Costner brought it back from Hollywood oblivion. He should have left it there.

Houston plays a big-time music superstar with a son who is receiving death threats and other assorted nastiness, supposedly from a deranged fan. Her manager hires Frank Farmer (Costner), purportedly the world's best bodyguard, to protect the pampered songstress.

The plot goes like this: Houston gets mad at Costner, they make up, she gets mad again because Costner broods, he saves her life, she gets angry, then apologetic, and they make up.

Yet, The Bodyguard is so familiar, the plot and direction so obvious — is anyone surprised when the character the camera continually lingers on will turn out to a big part of the plot? — that the film sinks to an annoying level of audience baiting, of being so user-friendly that it's just plain insulting.

Every character in The Bodyguard has been done before so many times that it practically screams generic. It's the type of movie where no one really has a character — only a few adjectives.

There's the lecherous, greedy manager and the jealous sister; each don't develop beyond their stock characterizations. Even the deranged fan is so blatant that he practically has "I'm a crazy man" written on his forehead.

The Bodyguard is a ponderously slow film; every frame mechanically advances the plot. After a few wild, preposterous plot twists, the film winds down to a big showdown at an Academy Awards ceremony where — and I just love

Turn to BODYGUARD, page 8

COURTESY WARNER BROS.
Whitney Houson and Kevin Costner in "The Bodyguard."

The Collegian.
When you care enough to read the very best.
(It doesn't hurt that we give them away, either.)

SECOND HAND DANCE COMPANY
Thursday, December 3
and Friday, December 4
DON'T MISS THIS ZANY AND UPLIFTING DANCE TRIO!
"THEIR DANCE WORK IMAGINATIVE PIECES ARE BOISTEROUS, GYMNASTIC AND JOYOUS. SOMEWHERE BETWEEN STREET HOUSE PRANKS, MARTIAL ARTS AND HIGH ART."
DANCE MAGAZINE
THE FINE ARTS CENTER
CALL 545-2511

MARVEL COMICS PRESENTS
X-FORCE
MARVEL'S MUTANT FIGHTING FORCE CAN BE FOUND AT Same Bat Channel
Comics, Cards, Games and more...
Hampshire Mall, Hadley 586-8775
Ingleside Mall, Holyoke 532-9797
Wednesday is Games Day
15% off all games and supplies
Open Monday-Saturday 10am-9pm Sunday 12pm-5pm
COMICS TRADE PAPERBACKS GRAPHIC NOVELS
TM & © 1992 Marvel Entertainment Group, Inc. All rights reserved.

■ Bodyguard

continued from page 7

this one — Houston is up for a Best Actress Oscar.

Why not a Grammy? Why is Houston up for an Oscar for a film she or anyone else hasn't mentioned for the entire movie? It's feeble plotting like this that makes The Bodyguard so ultimately stupid.

Whitney Houston wisely plays it very safe in her film debut. Much like Madonna's first effort in Desperately Seeking Susan, both Huston and Madonna play characters very close to their respective personas. So it's up in the air if Houston can truly act (we had to wait until Shanghai Surprise to find out Madonna can't act her way out of a paper brassiere).

Houston is fun to watch; her scenes — though laden with inexperience — were at least lively. She provides a competent foil (and thankful respite) from Costner's constant brood. Never has it been more clearer when Costner wants to act and when he's coasting. In The Bodyguard, he sticks to the latter; his performance consists of a droning brood.

Despite some wry moments of dry humor between the couple, Kasdan's horrible, device-laden script ultimately unravels the film. It's a shame — I really did like Houston, but not enought to recommend the film.

"I Will Always Love You," the film's irresistible theme song is by far the best thing about this movie. Do yourself a favor — buy the single and forget the film. The Bodyguard's creaky plot, awkward acting and paint-by-number execution makes for an amatuerish, tepid thriller. This is one turkey that should have been sacrificed last Thursday. Grade: D+

■ Gregory

continued from page 7

a cheap comedian blush.

Of course Hempel's deceptively simple cartooning doesn't hurt, effortlessly evoking Gregory's child-like perceptions of his surroundings. Hempel is also blessed with a superb sense of comic timing. Though the humor never quite reaches the level of "sick" as it's hyped to be (I'm sorry, but we'll have to work hard to top "Stimpy's Invention"), the comic achieves a kind of warm-hearted nastiness that makes it a delight to savor.

Ultimately it's Gregory's book — his name is on the cover, after all — and the little lunatic proves himself more than adequate to the task. In the end it doesn't matter whether we're laughing at him or with him — we're laughing because of him. Insanity is funny — fictional insanity, that is — and so is Gregory. End of story.

DiGeronimo Brothers
VICTORY Super Markets
10 University Drive - Amherst
WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES. VICTORY SUPER MARKETS ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS
And Now Introducing at Our Amherst Victory... BayBank And... Quick Pay X-PRESS24 or CHARGE IT
STORE HOURS: Mon. - Sat. 7am-9pm Sundays Noon - 8pm
Prices Effective thru Friday, December 4, 1992.
Give a little Christmas to our Community kids! Pick a gift tag from our Victory tree located at the checkouts. Shop for a girl or boy, and return your unwrapped gift and tag to the tree located by our tree. We will contact girls until Dec. 19. The First Call agency in Amherst will help Santa distribute your gifts directly to the many less fortunate children of our community.
You Are Cordially Invited To... Amherst's Celebration of Lights
Friday, Dec. 4, at 4:45pm on the Amherst Town Common
•Tree Lighting •Caroling •Horse & Buggy Rides
•Holiday Cheer and Featuring...
The UMASS MINUTEMEN MARCHING BAND
Marching from Campus to the Center of Town to meet the AMHERST JR. HIGH SCHOOL CHORUS
Raindate - Dec. 7th
PLUS... Don't forget Amherst Greeting Card Day - Sat., Dec. 5.
SAVE 20% at over 30 Amherst Stores!
USDA Select Beef Loin N.Y. Sirloin Steaks $1.99 Lb. •Regular •Thick Cut
Fresh Gov't. Insp. Boneless Pork Chops or Roast Chops are: •Reg. •Thin Sliced •Butterfly (Center Cut) $2.99 Lb.
Minute Maid Orange Juice In The Dairy... •Regular •Pulp Free •Plus Calcium •Country Style $1.39 64 Oz. Carton
General Mills Cheerios Cereal 10 Oz. Box 2 For $3
VICTORY COUPON — Oscar Mayer Meat Bologna 12 Oz. Pkg. SAVE $4.98 Buy 1...Get... 2 FREE
VICTORY COUPON — Wampler Longacre Turkey Franks 1 Lb. Pkg. SAVE $2.58 Buy 1...Get... 2 FREE
VICTORY COUPON — Mellow Crisp From Oscar Mayer Sliced Bacon 1 Lb. Pkg. SAVE $4.58 Buy 1...Get... 2 FREE
VICTORY COUPON PLU 901 — Victory English Muffins 6 Pack 2 For 50¢
VICTORY COUPON PLU 903 — Franklin Springs Spring Water Gallon Jug 2 For 50¢
VICTORY COUPON PLU 902 — Florida Grapefruit •Pink •White 40 Count 4 For $1
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $10 purchase excluding price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Dec. 4, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

King of Latin Jazz reigns

By YAHUBA J. TORRES
Collegian Correspondent

Mongo Santamaria
Charlie Sepulveda & The Turnaround
Student Union Ballroom
Nov. 23, 1992

If you did not go last Monday evening, I pity you; for this may be the last time that Mongo Santamaria sets foot on this campus. The man looked old and tired when he walked on stage but as soon as he sat in front of his congas, the young Mongo Santamaria, composer of Afro Blue, the man who turned Herbie Hancock's Watermelon Man to a hit in the Latin American community, came out and schooled all those young musicians who came to see the legend.

Warming up the crowd was Charlie Sepulveda & the Turnaround. Having released only one album, The New Arrival, he has already hit the Jazz charts all over the country.

The band is made up of young, new talent in the jazz scene. On trumpet was Sepulveda himself, who has played with Tito Puente and Eddie Palmieri. On tenor sax was a hot, fresh discovery from Puerto Rico whose style is very much like Coltrane with a Caribbean feel, having played with not only Palmieri and Puente, but Hilton Ruiz as well.

On drums was a time-keeping machine known as Adam Cruz; and on the bottom (bass) was a man I recognized immediately: Richie Flores. If you're from Puerto Rico like I am, you have probably seen him before. Flores may look young for his playing ability, but this kid was playing congas on Puerto Rico television at the age of four. He has played with Palmieri, Batacumbele and Roberto Rohena.

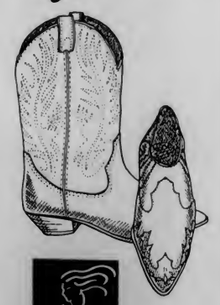
The group played every song to perfection. Their communication on stage allowed them to play freely and express themselves to their hearts' content. Their music was the kind that you wanted to dance, but these musicians were so intense that you had to stop and observe what these virtuosos were doing.

Next on stage was Mongo Santamaria and his band, a group that had experience printed all over thier faces. You could tell that these guys have been around. Mongo's band is constantly changing, so you never know what to expect.

The last two times Mongo played this area, he came once with Tito Puente's band and another with Max Roach.

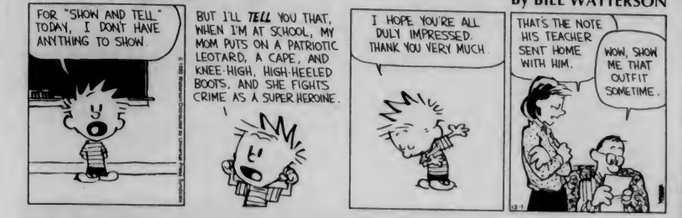
This time, the people got up and danced. There was even a limbo contest going on. Those who were not dancing were standing right in front of the stage, amazed at this man who had been around long enough to tell you about his touring with Dizzy Gillespie in the 1940's.

Well, for those who went and saw, I salute you and share a common sense of satisfaction with you. To those who missed it, I sure do hope that you get to see this legend — a man who has already engraved his name in history as one of the pioneers of Latin Jazz.

"I got mine at Zanna!"


Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

CALVIN AND HOBBES — By BILL WATTERSON



JIM'S JOURNAL — By JIM

DOONESBURY — By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE — By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED — By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU — By PITT

THE FAR SIDE — By GARY LARSON

Early plumbers

Quote of the Day

"It takes a big man to cry, but it takes a bigger man to laugh at that man."
– Overheard

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unfinished activities occupy your thoughts today. The highway to success may be paved by what you are able to accomplish in a limited amount of time. Continue to work at top speed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A money situation improves. You need new directions in both work and romance. The simple pleasures of everyday life hold fresh appeal. Sweep away the mental cobwebs holding you in the past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Refuse to be baffled by unexpected developments and last-minute changes. You decide to seek an older family member's support in making a major decision.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some long-awaited news arrives, laying the foundation for a new partnership. You may want to withdraw from a static romantic relationship. Be kind but firm.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your artistic abilities make a deep impression on a newcomer. You could find that you are on the same wavelength with a VIP. Move ahead with greater confidence. Be daring in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ingenuity brings the best results today. Your personal flair helps you advance in both business and romance. You can be very persuasive now! Enlist the cooperation of a friend or neighbor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Consider new ways to increase your purchasing power. Redesigning your assets could lead to greater financial security. Exploit mutual resources. You have an ear for languages.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Meaningful conversations produce good results. Adequate rest and regular meals will reduce health concerns. Avoid making impulsive changes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Blasty statements could tarnish your public image. Adopt a sensitive middle-of-the-road stance and matters calm a certain plans are cancelled. Take a friend's suggestion with a grain of salt.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A keen desire to accumulate lessons acquires a guarded attitude toward spending. When it comes to risky ventures, heed the advice of someone who is widely respected.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Read up on information pertinent to your personal resources. Questions regarding taxes, savings and insurance are favored. Romance effervesces, putting you in a merry mood.

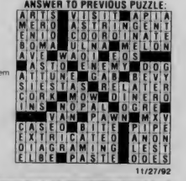
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your gentle, sympathetic manner helps you win friends and influence people. Be supportive of a loved one's dreams. A newspaper article could give you a good job lead; follow up.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

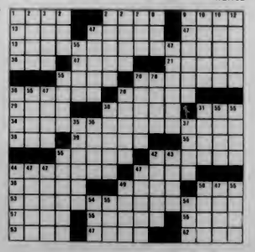
ACROSS
1 Rum cake
5 Devil-may- —
9 Brilliant-colored fish
13 An Alda
14 Seine feeder
15 California wine valley
16 Can this be genuine?
19 Low-down digit?
20 Miss Kett
21 Nose feature
22 Dr. Zhivago's love
23 Abhors
25 Tiny
28 Pub game
29 Religious image
30 Scorch
31 Pastry treat
34 Name on a reaper patent
38 Shade tree
39 Terre —
40 Away from the wind
41 Ray
42 Prepares cabbage for slaw
44 Recompenses
47 Bovine sounds
48 Valuable violin
49 Farm building
50 Sphere
53 Popular 19th cen. primer
57 Nobleman
58 Fete
59 Eagle or Ranger
60 Arid
61 Bauxite and pyrite
62 Press

DOWN
1 Fisherman's need
2 Singing voice
3 Diamond "setting"
4 Soldier insect
5 1215's Magna —
6 Kind of code
7 A nucleic acid: Abbr.
8 Slippery one
9 Husbands of tantes
10 Spotted caves
11 Sailor's "to the left"
12 Name of fame in the theater
14 British length measure
17 Dead — tie
18 Make a difference
22 Legislator's perk
23 Prom
24 Therefore
25 "Oh — and Men"
26 Narrative poem
27 "Chews" character
28 Pronouncements
30 S. African statesman 1870-1950
31 Heap
32 Frosted
33 Makes do, with "out"
35 Bridge expert Omar
36 "— to mouth": precarious
37 Red planet
41 Flipe
42 Full of regret
43 Sharpen
44 Highway features
45 Host at a roast
46 Bet
47 Spars
49 Cowshed
50 Fragrance
51 Nevada tourist spot
52 British gun
54 Sailor's address: Abbr.
55 Corn unit
56 "The Greatest"

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



11/27/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Dan Wetzel
Copy Editor ..... Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician ... Aram Comjean/Chris Evans
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Dana Dorman, Kelly D'Amato

Menu

SORRY,
MENU NOT AVAILABLE.
CALL "THE LUNCH LADY"
at 5-2626

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

America's trade deficit the worst in two years

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit surged to $26.54 billion from July through September, the worst performance in nearly two years, as record exports of American products were swamped by imports rising even faster, the government said Monday.

The Commerce Department said that the 8.1 percent widening in the trade gap in the third quarter followed a 42.6 percent deterioration in American's trade performance in the April-June quarter, when the deficit had zoomed to $24.56 billion.

From 1989 to 1991, an improving trade deficit was about the only bright spot in an otherwise bleak domestic economy, supplying more than half of what little growth there was. This year, however, the trade performance has turned negative again and is subtracting from overall growth.

Private economists say that, with America's biggest overseas markets in Europe and Japan struggling with recessions of their own, it was unlikely the U.S. trade deficit would improve anytime soon.

"It is pretty evident that whatever growth we have next year will be based entirely on domestic demand, not on exports," said Bruce Steinbery, an economist at Merrill-Lynch in New York.

"Economic conditions in Europe and Japan are both likely to get worse before they get better."

While the country's merchandise trade deficit on a balance-of-payments basis managed to fall to $73.44 billion in 1991, the first time since 1983 that it was below $100 billion, the deficit for this year is running at an annual rate of $91.09 billion.

David Wyss, an economist at DRI-Mcgraw Hill Inc., said he looked for America's trade deficit to climb back above $100 billion next year and stay there for some time to come.

"It is hard to see a lot of strength for our exports when the industrial countries remain so weak," he said.

Fruit-flavoring solvent used to make AT&T computer chip

By JONATHAN YENKIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — AT&T reported a sweet discovery Monday — the same solvent that gives flavor to cantaloupes and other fruits can replace an ozone-depleting chemical used in making computer chips.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said it has started using the solvent, n-butyl butyrate, at its largest manufacturing plant in the world, located in North Andover.

The solvent is replacing another chemical, trichloroethane, traditionally used in electronics manufacturing.

Jose Ors, an engineering supervisor at Bell Laboratories in Princeton, N.J., which helped develop the new technique, said researchers were looking for a substitute chemical that would be biodegradable.

"Our goal was to look for something that was a naturally occurring product," he said.

N-butyl butyrate met this requirement as well as the company's specifications for making integrated circuits, Ors said.

As it turned out, this solvent also can be found in cantaloupe and a variety of other fruits such as peaches and plums, he said. In fact, it's sometimes added to yogurt to enhance the flavor.

"It smells like pineapples or bananas, depending on the individual who smells it," Ors said.

Trichloroethane has been blamed as a source of chlorohydrocarbons that contribute to destroying the ozone layer protecting the earth's surface from ultraviolet rays.

Other high-tech companies, such as Intel Corp., International Business Machines Corp., Digital Equipment Corp. and General Electric Co. have taken steps to curb ozone-depleting chemicals from their manufacturing processes.

One incentive is to avoid paying additional taxes that have been levied on manufacturers who use such chemicals, Ors said.

The new solvent is much more expensive than trichloroethane, but AT&T expects to use smaller amounts so the overall cost should be about the same, Ors said.

AT&T has set a goal of eliminating chlorohydrocarbons and chloroflourocarbons, another ozone-depleting material, from its North Andover plant by the end of the year, said Kay Gibbs, a company spokeswoman.

"This alone will not do it," she said, but added that AT&T still hopes to achieve the goal.

■ Conte

continued from page 3

rial and the the world's first biodegradable elastomer, a rubber-like material.

"It's marvelous," said Angie Bawerman, the sister of the former Silvio Conte. "I'm very happy and pleased about it and know my brother would be quite pleased also if he was here."

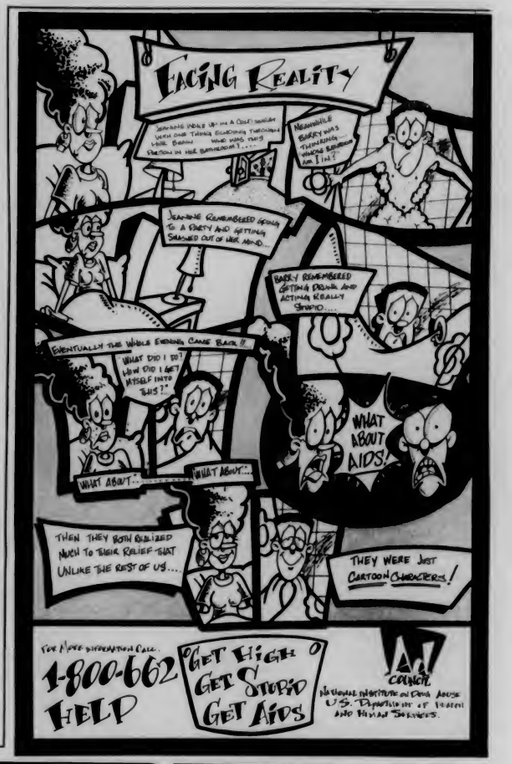
■ Tsongas

continued from page 1

would not affect his own political plans, and added that he has designs on no elected office but the presidency.

"Do I think this precludes me from running for president? Hell, no," Tsongas said.

"Whatever strength I brought to this campaign was in my head, not in my lymph nodes. To say because someone once had cancer, one cannot run again, that is a frightening conclusion."



Winter Session 1993
January 4-25

Yes, you can!

REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.

SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.

SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.

OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.

EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!

REGISTER NOW!

CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.

Division of Continuing Education

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA

PERMANENTS $45

Make an appointment between 9am and 1pm with Heather, Liz, or Terri and your permanent will be only $45!

CopyCat PRINT SHOP

RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992
Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)
228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

Take the GRE Test on Computer
ETS approved - convenient immediate scores
Sylvan Learning Center
WOBURN (617) 933-9480
WORCESTER (508)795-1140

- TONIGHT -
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
With
NEW HORIZON
"HOTTER THAN EVER"
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00 9:30~10:30
THE PUB IN AMHERST
CELEBRATES 24 YEARS 1968-1992
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

■ Crofts

continued from page 12

he was in college, simply because he played college ball in Georgetown for John Thompson. Thompson has an unique talent of limiting the offensive output of his star players.

It was funny to see Robert Parish school Mourning last week, but given time, Mourning will turn that match-up around the other way.

With these two centers and the other pivot men previously talked about, the main thing about their success is their athleticism. All of the good big men today, are great athletes, which is more than you can say for a few of the past big men (George Mikan is Exhibit A).

It is this athleticism which makes the match-ups of today's premier centers so intriguing. How will O'Neal deal with Robinson's speed? Can Mourning deal with Ewing's myriad of offensive moves? Questions like these will be answered in the near future when each center match-up is played out.

In college right now the center postition is really lacking. BYU has a great center in Shawn Bradley, too bad he is on a two-year Mormon sabbatical.

What about Eric Montross? Until he puts up some numbers in the DeanDome, I'm not a believer. Cherokee Parks? Now he has time to prove himself since Christian Laettner is not there to bully him.

Othella Harrington will be in the pivot for Georgetown. Harrington does have talent to make a major contribution right away, so it will be interesting to see how he develops.

The rest of the collegiate big men who are mentioned often are talented forwards (Chris Webber, Rodney Rogers, Jamal Mashburn) and not centers. This dearth of talented centers could change with next year's incoming freshman, there is major-league talent right now.

Rasheed Wallace, from Philly, at 6-foot-11 is known for his defensive presence. Other centers from the City of Brotherly love who have impressed include Jason Lawson (headed for Georgia Tech) and Marc Jackson.

In Chicago, there are a couple of seven-footers on the same team! Rashard Griffith at 7-foot is headed to Wisconsin while his teammate Thomas Hamilton (7-foot-3, 320 lbs.) could probably head anywhere. There are many other centers in this year's class.

The future of the center position looks bright right now. The center's of today are finally progressing with the game. They are more athletic more skilled, and better conditioned (for the most part). They are now able to carry their own weight.

On to the boxing scene:

Let's hope Riddick Bowe fights a tomato can on Fox at half-time during the Super Bowl and then fights Lennox Lewis right after.

I hope Bowe fights on Fox because it will give him the chance to show off his considerable skills both inside the ring and outside the ring. The show Bowe would probably put on would only enhance the public view of the heavyweight crown, and boxing in general. Perhaps it would even bring more boxing to the networks.

It is a sad day when the best boxer in the world, pound for pound, Julio Caesar Chavez, is basically unknown to the public. That shows just how bad shape the sweet science is in right now.

It is up to fresh faces like Bowe, "Terrible" Terry Norris, and Roy Jones to show the world that boxing is indeed live and kicking. Someone has to show the public that all boxers are not convicts, drug abusers, or grandfathers.

Bowe will knock out Lewis when the two do fight. I know Lewis beat Bowe in the Olympics, but Henry Tillman beat Mike Tyson in the Olympic Trials and what happened when they fought in the pros? Tyson knocked out Tillman in 108 seconds!

Now, fighting for his family and his livelihood, Bowe is performing at his best. Lewis on the other hand, knocked out Razor Ruddock in two and all of a sudden it seems as though he is the favorite versus Bowe.

Two tons of fun Bill Conlin of ESPN's Sports Reporters predicted Lewis to win going away. I beg to differ. I think Bowe is one of those rare fighters who has the ability to be a crossover success. That is, Bowe will have appeal to both the boxing crowd and the public at large, much like Tyson and Ali before him. In the process, Bowe will bring boxing to a new level, one higher than it is now

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

ALL-AMERICAN – UMass cornerback Don Caparotti was named to the Kodak All-American First Team yesterday.

The Collegian. Fits just right.

The Collegian. Fits just right. 19,000 times a day. Five times a week.

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Condos., seeking quiet responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

SPRING BREAK '93
Hamilton Ski • (?) Nights Hotel • Texas • Club Discounts • Transfers • Activities Program
CANCUN..... from $399
BAHAMAS ..... from $409
JAMAICA..... from $439
SOUTH PADRE.. from $469
FLORIDA (land only) from $109
For free brochure call
Breakaway Travel
1-800-862-7325
(Deposits due by December 18)

ATTENTION, STUDENTS!

1993 OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC ADVISOR AWARD NOMINATIONS

Do you know an academic advisor whom you consider to be outstanding?

Would you like to see that individual recognized?

If so,why not nominate them for the 1993 Outstanding Academic Advisor Award?!

Your written nomination may include, but is not limited to, the following effective advising qualities and practices:
- ✔ demonstration of a caring attitude toward advisees,
- ✔ effecive interpersonal skills;
- ✔ availability to and frequency of contact with advisees;
- ✔ proactive behavior designed to build strong relationships with students;
- ✔ monitoring of student progress toward academic and career goals;
- ✔ mastery of institutional regulations, policies and procedures;
- ✔ use of appropriate information sources;
- ✔ appropriate referral activity;
- ✔ ability to engage in developmental advising (career and life planning) in addition to advising on degree progress; and
- colleagues' perception of the nominee's advising skills.

Submit nominations by Monday, December 14, 1992 to:

Yvonne Morand, Chair
Outstanding Academic Advisor Selection Committee
College of Food and Natural Resources Advising Office
110 Stockbridge Hall

Supporting letters must be received at the same address by January 15, 1993.

Live From MTV

Hypnotic Hats
over 20 styles to choose from Exclusively at
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-3813
22 Masonic St., Northampton • 586-6316
Open 7 days
Thursday nights in Northampton

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Institute for the Healing of Reciem
Tuesday 7 pm
CCRM 917
All are welcome

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Andrea and friend who looked at my apartment, 308 North Pleasant (near BayBanks), and talked to Robert Shumway last spring, please call Dave: 253-7522.

Be published! If you're an artist, poet, writer, or photographer, submit your work to Spectrum at 408 E. Student Union building (Above the Credit Union) by Dec. 11. Info call 545-2240

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Spanish speakers
Earn $$$
Need fluent Spanish speakers (Native or non native) for Psychology reading study
Call Maria 545-0693

AUTO FOR SALE

TRADE 83 Nissen pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Leverett – close to campus – room in sunny home in exhange for 12 hours of child care per week plus some light housekeeping duties must be available for early morning (7 am - 8:30 am) and some afternoons (3:30 pm 5 pm) car essential some transporting of children.

Two females for double bedroom Presidential apts 162 Each + 549-4705

FOR SALE

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

BE ON T.V. Many needed for commercials. Now hiring all ages. For casting info, call (615) 779-7111 Ext. T 458

Drivers $7-$10 per hour
Start immediately
Apply Domino's Pizza
241 King St, Northampton

Holiday jobs for the environment
Work with MASSpirg to pass the toughest environmental laws in the country
- * Learn campaign skills
- * Stop Pollution
- * Make a difference!

Call Carmen 256-8434

International Employment – Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits. Financially culturally rewarding. For program call: 1206/632-1146 ext. J5001

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost silver and torquoise claddaugh ring somewhere on campus 11/19. If found call 253-2733.

PERSONALS

Sigma Keppa Pledges: Inspiration week is here! Josh says "get wicked super mega awesome psyched!" Congratulations to the new 1993 Executive Board! Many thanks to the '92 Exec Board – it's been an awesome year!

Thank you St Jude

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508-228-6265

ROOMATES WANTED

1 Bedroom available in Puffton 3 bedroom apartment, from 1/1/93, share with 2 other female students, 205/month, call 549-6212

Single room avail. in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo+.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-8393

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $$$ Before Jan. 1
Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers typed – free cover page, spell check $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

$1.50/pg. Laser print 253-5566 Ask for Anne

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations
Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5768

Sports

Hodges, Caparotti win postseason awards

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

The awards are in for the 1992 University of Massachusetts football team and heading the list is head coach Mike Hodges.

Hodges, first year coach with the Minutemen who led his team to a 7-3 mark in the Yankee Conference, has been named the 1992 New England Coach of the Year by the New England Football Writers.

"I look at this award more as a team award," said Hodges. "This award is nice but it should go more to the assistants and players - I'm very happy and pleased for the football team.

"Winning it (Coach-of-the-year) means that other people recognize that we had a good year."

Hodges became head coach last spring after Jim Reid (now an assistant with Richmond) stepped down from the helm. For 14 years, Hodges served as an assistant for UMass, the last six as a defensive coordinator. His first season as head honcho was quite impressive, as he led his troops to a third place tie in the Yankee Conference when most polls picked the Minutemen to finish seventh (out of nine teams).

UMass was in contention for a playoff berth until the last week against New Hampshire, where they lost 20-13; the loss effectively ended any chances of playing in the NCAA 1-AA post- season.

"I'm really proud of the way these guys played all season," said Hodges. "We didn't quit all year — there wasn't anyone who expected us to be 7-3 this season."

Hodges is a 1966 graduate of the University of Maine at Orono where he lettered in football two years at guard. He was an assistant coach at Colby College prior to joining the UMass staff in 1978, where he's been a part of Minutemen teams that have either won or tied eight YanCon titles.

Hodges' award marks the fifth time that a UMass coach has been honored by the New England Football Writers. Head coach of the New England Patriots Dick MacPherson was named the top coach in 1972 and 1977 and Jim Reid, assistant at the University of Richmond, won the award in 1988 and 1990.

Named to the YanCon first team offense for UMass was 6-foot-5, 265 pound junior offensive guard Bill Durkin (co-captain); making the second team offense was 6-foot-3, 285 pound Phil Hallard, who also made the second team in 1991.

On Defense, cornerback Don Caparotti (5-foot-10, 170 pound) made the first team defense for the second straight year. Caparotti also was named as a Kodak Division 1-AA first team All-American.

Linebacker Mario Perry (6-foot-2, 220 pounds), who made the first team in 1990, was named to the first team for his efforts this year. Sophomore defensive Tackle Brian Corcoran (6-foot-2, 238 pound) and junior outside linebacker Scott Assencoa (6-foot-1, 210 pound) were named to the second team defense for the first time.

Minutewomen ready for opener

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

It is showtime for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team. Tonight, the Minutewomen will open up their 1992-93 campaign as they visit the Northeastern Huskies.

O'Brien has spent the offseason recruiting for next year while preparing her returning letter winners and this years's highly-touted freshman class for the upcoming season.

Tonight, O'Brien and her staff will just start to find out how the new Minutewomen squad will play together.

Last year UMass went 4-24, which might not sound too impressive, but is four more victories than the team had two years ago, when they went 0-27. O'Brien has to hope that her team can continue the improvement from last year.

Coach O'Brien said she is anxious to see how the Minutewomen play together.

"This is going to be a situation where Northeastern is a very athletic club, they like to run," O'Brien said. "I'm looking to see if we play with discipline.

"On Sunday we had a great practice," she said. "The freshmen are excited about their first (road) trip, I'm excited to see where we (the team) are."

Last season when these two teams met, UMass was able to pull out a victory 49-40, but O'Brien said that circumstances around the game took away from the victory.

"Last year when we played them, they were unhealthy," O'Brien said. "There was a flu epidemic going around Northeastern. The original game was actually postponed."

Last season the Huskies sported a 9-18 record. But the record is a little deceiving. Nine of those 18 losses were decided by five points or less.

For the Huskies, they lose their starting point guard and their leading scorer from last year, but have some talented newcomers in addition to a strong returning cast.

Katasha Artis, a transfer from Virginia, is a 5-foot-9 forward who is expected to contribute. Carrine Jones, a 5-foot-9 swing player, averaged 11.4 points per game.

The Huskies' main outside threat, Jackie Guidroz (28 three pointers last year), is also back. Senior Cordelia Washington, a forward, and sophomore Felicia Hobson are other returnees with substantial experience.

For the Minutewomen there will be three freshmen in their starting line-up tonight. Melissa Gurile, a 6-foot-3 freshman, will be the starting center. Gurile allows senior Kim Kristofik to move to her more natural power forward position.

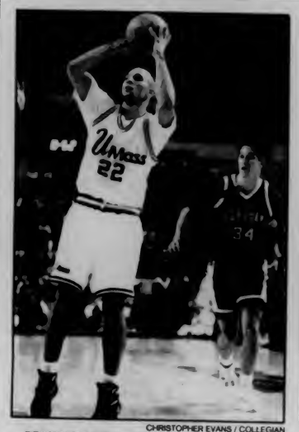
At the other frontcourt spot, freshman Octavia Thomas has the starting nod. In the backcourt junior Laurie Dondarski mans the point, while freshman Kim Gregory starts at the off-guard. O'Brien said she was pleased with Gregory's play as of late.

"Kim Gregory has come on like gangbusters," O'Brien said. "She looks more comfortable playing here now."

Off the bench freshman Tricia Hopson is expected to see a lot of time at the point while junior Maleeka Valentine will get minutes at both the off-guard and small forward slots.

O'Brien said she is not so much concerned with how the Huskies play, but how UMass plays.

"I'm not really that worried about the way Northeastern plays," O'Brien said. "What I want to see is how our team performs."



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

READY FOR FSU — UMass forward Tony Barbee, seen here in last season's NCAA Tournament, and the rest of the Minutemen will face Florida State on Wednesday night.

The centers: Part 2 and the state of boxing

Everywhere you turn in the NBA, there he is. The newest superstar in the NBA is a rookie, let me rephrase that, a big rookie. Of course the player I am talking about is none other than Shaquille O'Neal.

It is fitting that O'Neal is the first of the new centers that I talk about, because when the Shaq is through, he is probably going to be first in a lot of different things.

Jeff
CROFTS

When Orlando won the right to draft O'Neal, the franchise was understandably happy. After getting a first impression of O'Neal, the franchise should be understandably overwhelmed. O'Neal is that good.

They say there are no more franchise players. Well, O'Neal is the closest to one we are going to see in a long time. The Shaq will dominate this game for as long as he wants. Skill-wise, O'Neal has a lot to learn, but Shaq's combination of power and speed is unmatched in the NBA. Now let's move onto another rookie center.

In Charlotte, they are trying to build on the theory that three great players win a championship. Before this year, the Hornets had two great players, Larry Johnson and Kendall Gill. Then Charlotte drafted Alonzo Mourning. Now they have three.

We have yet to see these three players play together due to injuries and contract problems, but from what has been seen of Mourning so far, it is known that he can play ball in the NBA.

Mourning is better offensively right now than

Turn to CROFTS, page 11

Heisman hype falls into place

Gino Torretta. Marshall Faulk. Garrison Hearst. Reggie Brooks. Drew Bledsoe. What do these men have in common, besides being the "stars" of their respective campuses?

Well, in early December, all five should be invited to the presentation of the Heisman trophy, the richest prize in the world of college football. Even though each player may lay his claim to the award, this will not hold water come February next year when it comes to the NFL Draft.

Arthur
STAPLETON

They may be worrying about who will be chosen, and who can strike the best pose, but talent will override performance when it comes to making the big bucks. So, I'll take a step away from picking games and try to provide the reader with a brief look at who has the inside track in winning the Heisman, along with making an impact in the professional ranks.

The Miami Hurricanes are on their way to another national championship, but despite what people think, Gino Torretta is only a small reason why. Torretta is the starting quarterback, and voters like to give credit to that position whenever the team wins. However, the defense of the Hurricanes is the difference between the men and the boys.

Torretta is a solid pro-prospect, due to his arm strength and his size. He has proven that he can put points up on the board with the pro-style offense of Miami, but I question his ability to read defenses. People may shy away because he may be the second coming of Vinny Testaverde.

Speaking of quarterbacks with true pro potential, I have to look no further than Drew Bledsoe of Washington State. His team does not have the success of a Miami or a Notre Dame, but he did orchestrate the dismantling of once number one Washington.

Bledsoe has been tabbed a "can't miss", and I agree. Get ready, New England, because if the Patriots play as well as they have for the final three weeks in the season, Bledsoe is as good as here. But will he sign?

Running backs Marshall Faulk of San Diego State and Garrison Hearst of Georgia, with their amazing brand of rushing, have made watching the CFA exciting this season.

These two playmakers could leave their respective teams now and make a huge impact in the NFL. Faulk has responded to the pressure of the Heisman race, and he has been getting rave reviews by such greats as Emmitt Smith and Barry Sanders. Alas, his skill may not be what the voters will look for in the Heisman.

Faulk has the numbers, but his luck failed this great runner when he was injured and was forced to miss several games, including the big one against Miami.

Hearst, on the other hand, has come out of nowhere and pushed Faulk to the limit for the right to be called the best runner in the game. Last week's game against Georgia Tech was supposed to showcase a Heisman candidate, quarterback Shawn Jones of the Yellow Jackets; but, as usual, Hearst blew him out of the water and it was he and not Jones who was showcased. He struck his best pose after one of his three TD's, but it may not be enough.

The man who deserves the award is Reggie Brooks of Notre Dame and no, I'm not an Irish fan. Brooks came out of the shadows of both quarterback Rick Mirer and fullback Jerome Bettis. While his teammates got all of the press, this senior back ran through every opponent this season on his way to a career year.

Sure, it may be because opposing defenses keyed on stopping Mirer and Bettis, but how can you argue with the guy's numbers? His team is ranked in the top five, we all know his school could be renamed Heisman University, and Brooks is a great prospect for the NFL.

However, this phenom will probably be snubbed, unlike Irish players in the past, who didn't produce and still received the award by a process of elimination (see Tim Brown). Hopefully the award won't go to Torretta, because he is the least deserving out of the choices listed.

How else can we finish this column in a year that people complain about the bowl picture: Miami wins the championship.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

TEXTNET

The Students Used Book Exchange

Make up to 300% more by selling your books directly to your classmates through the directory listing for used texts!

Call or write for free information: P.O. Box 459, Sunderland, MA 01375
(413) 665-8471 or 800-949-TEXT (8398)

KRETE

AUTHENTIC GREEK CUISINE, ITALIAN, AMERICAN
PIZZA, GRINDERS, CALZONES, GYROS

You've tried all the others...
Now try KRETE and taste the difference
15% Student Discount

EXPRESS LUNCH! 10 MINUTE GUARANTEE!!
Available Monday-Friday 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

FREE DELIVERY!!
MINIMUM $5.00 HADLEY-AMHERST AREAS ONLY
331 RUSSELL ST., RTE. 9, HADLEY 586-8255

Who's been making Amherst's finest Pizza since 1967?

Serving the Valley for over a quarter century
1967-1992 BELL'S PIZZA HOUSE

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton/Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

1992-93 MINUTEMEN BASKETBALL SCHEDULE

Dec.	2	at Florida State (ESPN)	7:30 p.m.
	5	CENTRAL CONNECTICUT STATE	7:00 p.m.
	8	Siena at the Knickerbocker Arena	7:30 p.m.
	12	at Oklahoma	8:30 p.m.
	19	MARATHON BASKETBALL	8:00 p.m.
		ABDOW'S HALL OF FAME CLASSIC
		Springfield Civic Center
	28	UMass vs. Holy Cross	6:30 p.m.
		UAB vs. South Carolina	8:30 p.m.
	29	Third place game	6:30 p.m.
		Championship	8:30 p.m.
Jan.	2	at New Hampshire (A-10 TV)	1:00 p.m.
	5	BOSTON UNIVERSITY	7:00 p.m.
	7	CINCINNATI (ESPN) at Springfield	9:30 p.m.
	9	at Temple (A-10 TV)	2:00 p.m.
	12	at Rutgers	8:00 p.m.
	16	GEORGE WASHINGTON (A-10 TV)	Noon
	19	RHODE ISLAND (SportsChannel)	7:00 p.m.
	21	TEMPLE	7:00 p.m.
	24	DePAUL (ABC) at Worc. Centrum	1:30 p.m.
	29	SW LOUISIANA (ESPN)	11:59 p.m.
	31	at St. Bonaventure (A-10 TV)	4:30 p.m.
Feb.	4	WEST VIRGINIA (ESPN)	9:00 p.m.
	6	RUTGERS (A-10 TV)	Noon
	11	at St. Joseph's	7:15 p.m.
	13	at George Washington (A-10 TV)	Noon
	18	at Buffalo	7:30 p.m.
	20	Rhode Island
		at the Providence Civic Center	Noon
	27	at West Virginia	Noon
Mar	1	ST. BONAVENTURE	7:00 p.m.
	4	ST. JOSEPH'S	7:00 p.m.
	7	Atlantic 10 Championships

GOOD LUCK MINUTEMEN
Have a Great Season
WE'RE PROUD OF YOU & LOOK FORWARD TO A GREAT SEASON
Do Your Shopping at...

WATROBA'S
MEAT GROCERY LIQUOR

GREAT PRICES ON LIQUOR & GROCERIES
Conveniently located in No. Amherst just past the lights!
SUNDERLAND RD., NO. AMHERST, MA 549-0933

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England
Founded in 1890 • Daily since 1967

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

Founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, the Collegian is now in its 102nd year of production.

This year the Collegian celebrates 25 years as a daily paper.

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500

1991-92 campaign a memorable one

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The 1992-93 University of Massachusetts basketball team has a difficult task ahead for them: they will attempt to improve on last year's remarkable season.

As head coach John Calipari said at Midnight Madness to 4,000 basketball-hungry fans, "Repeat after me, we do not expect 30 wins. We expect 31."

While some fans may expect the Minutemen to get better, the team has a big, big standard to look up to. Let's take a look back at the 1991-92 season.

The Minutemen opened up the season at the Curry Hicks Cage for a midnight game against the Siena Saints, the team UMass had upset in the 1990 NIT to advance to that tournament's Final Four. A wild throng of fans were ready for ESPN, and the Minutemen led 47-22 at halftime and never looked back.

A 49-point blowout against Keene State three nights later boosted the Minutemen to 2-0, but the team had to travel to Anchorage, Alaska and take on tough competition in the Great Alaska Shootout.

Wins against Santa Clara and Oregon State in the first two rounds pitted Massachusetts against New Orleans and All-American candidate Ervin Johnson. The fact that UMass had made it to the finals surprised enough folks, but when the Minutemen shutdown Johnson and Lou Roe had his coming out party on ESPN, the title went to the overlooked Minutemen, who were now a perfect 5-0.

"The Alaska Shootout really set the tempo for the season," said assistant coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "The team had so much fun on that trip, and nobody thought we were going to win. I knew we were gonna have a good season after that."

The Minutemen took the Alaska title to nationally ranked Kentucky, a contest which would no doubt be their toughest of the season. A 17-hour trip which vaguely resembled the movie "Planes, Trains, and Automobiles" wore UMass out, and the Minutemen faltered 90-69 to the Wildcats.

The basketball team regrouped, winning their next three games in convincing fashion, and at 8-1 and playing their last game of the fall semester at George Washington, UMass was poised for a national ranking. Unfortunately, the Colonials weren't very agreeable, and GW came back from a halftime deficit to win 77-65.

UMass, as resilient as ever, bounced back by winning the second annual Abdow's Holiday Classic, blowing Harvard out 98-63 in the first round and defeating Big 8 member Iowa State, 73-53. Oklahoma was next at Springfield, a game which would prove once and for all if UMass could play with the big boys.

For the third time in three games, television viewers saw they could. With ESPN televising the game, the Minutemen gave a total team effort and eliminated the Sooners by the second TV timeout. In the 86-73 victory, UMass slammed home the point that UMass was a team to take seriously. Voters agreed, because at 11-2, UMass cracked the national rankings for the first time in history.

West Virginia, a nemesis of the Minutemen all season, did not overlook the team. They came to the Cage ready to

Turn to MEMORIES, page11

UMass 1992-93 BASKETBALL SEASON PREVIEW

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1991-92 Sweet Sixteen Season Recap ..... PAGE 3

Bill Bayno, John Robic, and James "Bruiser" Flint": the essential assistants ..... PAGE 3

Ted Cottrell and Jeff Meyer are ready to play after redshirting during the 1991-92 season ..... PAGE 4

Oklahoma, Cincinnati, and Florida State headline UMass' toughest non-conference schedule ever ..... PAGE 4

Jeff Crofts, Michael Morrissey and the Collegian sports staff argue over who is the number one team in college basketball ..... PAGE 5

Three teams, including UMass, fight for the Atlantic 10 Conference title ..... PAGE 7

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL PREVIEW ..... PAGE 10

Jeff Crofts runs down the women's Atlantic 10 scene

Jeff Hojlo previews coach Joanie O'Brien's Minutewomen

The Minutewomen sign four new recruits for next season

Tony Barbee ready to take command as a senior ..... PAGE 11

Frontcourt flashes rated among the tops in the land ..... PAGE 12

Coach John Calipari nears a finish to his rebuilding project ..... PAGE 13

Dana Dingle and Donta Bright: roommates this season, teammates next season ..... PAGE 14

The COLLEGIAN 1992-93 Basketball Season Preview was designed by Lisa Jezowski and Michael Morrissey. Cover photo by Christopher Evans with special thanks to Josh Reynolds. Cover design by Mike Carvalho. This Preview would not have been possible without the help of Dan Wetzel, Jason George, Brian Harrington, & the Collegian Sports staff. This is a publication of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Assistants are the invisible strength of program

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

The future of UMass basketball right now looks as bright as ever. Head coach John Calipari has a new four-year contract, a new arena, and four new recruits for next season. Perhaps the most overlooked thing Coach Calipari has going for himself is his staff of three assistant coaches, Bill Bayno, James "Bruiser" Flint, and John Robic.

Bill Bayno enters his fifth year as an assistant coach at Massachusetts. Bayno has been all around the world of college basketball, beginning here in Amherst in 1980.

For the Minutemen, Bayno played guard from 1980 until 1982. After his sophomore season Bayno transferred to Sacred Heart, where he was a backcourt standout for two seasons. In 1985, Bayno graduated from Sacred Heart.

Bayno worked for basketball programs such as Baptist College, Seton Hall, and eventually Kansas. At Kansas, Bayno worked with fellow UMass assistant John Robic.

Now, having come full circle, Bayno is back with the Mintutemen. He says the return has been a pleasant one.

"For me the situation has been great," he said. "It is kind of ironic that I'm back here, I never thought I'd be back.

"Like any business, it has it's ups and downs, but this has mostly been ups," Bayno said. "With the guys I work with and the kids I've recruited, I don't think I could too many situations better than this.

As for Bayno's job with the team, he is the lead recruiter in addition to teaching the UMass system to the players.

"We all do the same thing when it comes to coaching and teaching," he said. "We're all heavily involved in practice.

"The roles become more defined when you break it down to recruiting and scouting," Bayno said. "The scouting and recruiting are separated. John (Robic) does the majority of the scouting while Bruiser and I do the majority of the recruiting."

The rise of UMass basketball is something Bayno has enjoyed seeing happen.

"I've always thought this school was a sleeping giant," he said. "With it's beautiful campus, excellent academic reputation, and social life, with the league that it is in, I always thought you could recruit the best players here and make it one of the best teams in the league.

"I'm not that surprised that we've turned it around," Bayno said. "I really believed we would when we first came here."

All the coaches knew each other before UMass and Bayno thinks that has helped out.

"We all knew each other before coming here, John (Robic) and I always talked about coaching together," Bayno said. "I've worked with both Bruiser and John (Calipari) in the past as well.

"We've known each other for a long time, we've got a unique relationship," Bayno said. "I think that helps us, we're good friends as well as fellow coaches."

Over the summer Bayno was interviewed for the job as the University of Hartford head basketball coach. Bayno was one of the finalists before former Ohio State assistant Paul Brazeau got the job. The thoughts of moving up in the coaching world is a thought which intrigues Bayno.

"At some point I have to look at where I am going," he said. "You never know where you are going to be from one year to the next, I have to look a couple years down the road and we'll see what happens."

The future of UMass basketball is one in which Bayno believes will continue to grow.

"With the new arena (The Mullins Center) and with the class (of recruits) we just signed, I think the future is bright," he said. "I think we'll be able to continue to recruit good players, which is the life of any program, if you recruit you're going to win.

"I think we've gotten TV exposure which is important," Bayno said. "Television knows that we are a good draw, so that looks good.

"I think the future looks great," he said. "We're going to be one of the better teams in the country, maybe not Top 20 every year, but certainly Top 40 or 50, and in the tournament every year."

To anyone familiar with the Atlantic 10s past, James "Bruiser" Flint is a not-too-distant memory as a tough-as-nails point guard for St. Joseph's University. From Philadelphia, Flint led his hometown Hawks to an A-10 title in 1986.

After graduating from St. Joseph's in 1987, it was off to Coppin State for Flint. There, Bruiser served as an assistant coach and assistant athletic director for two years.

Then in 1989, he arrived at former A-10 rival UMass. Now, in his fourth year with the Minutemen, Flint is pleased with the success the program has had.

"When I came here, I knew the coaches were good," Flint said. "I think we've come a long way since our staff has been here."

Much like Bayno, a lot of Flint's responsibility lies in the recruiting department, but he, also like Bayno, is much more than a recruiter.

"I recruit for the team," Flint said. "I also help out with the players and the system (of UMass basketball)."

"I help the guys (the players) when they have problems, and I try to encourage them," he said. "I always want the players to feel like they can come to us when they have a problem."

As for the future of UMass hoop, Flint is optimistic.

"I think this could be pretty special," Flint said. "The new arena, the games on television, and national coverage will be good for recruiting.

"Now when we go into kid's (recruits) houses, they will know who we are," he said. "They will know the UMass program."

For Flint, the atmosphere at Amherst is one to his

Turn to ASSISTANTS, page 6

NORTHAMPTON BOWL
Thursday Night College Special
3 Games for $5.00
Offer Valid with College I.D.
525 Pleasant St, Northampton, MA 01060 ▪ (413) 584-2491

Heavy Sweat Shirts and Sweat Pants
$9.99
Bajas
$12.00
RICH'S
RICH'S ARMY/NAVY & CASUAL CLOTHES
24 Center St., Northampton
586-0275
(Next to the Iron Horse)

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Taking off their redshirts

Cottrell and Meyer eligible after sitting out last season

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

The life of a redshirt is a lot like the life of a convicted criminal: lots of hard work, but no time to play.

For the University of Massachusetts basketball team, last year's redshirts Ted Cottrell and Jeff Meyer will certainly get a trial from head coach John Calipari, but the jury is still out on whether these two will be able to help this year's team.

Meyer and Cottrell were certainly part of last season's "sweet sixteen" team, but redshirts are not allowed to dress for games, which made their season a long and frustrating one.

"Last year was tough mentally and physically," said Meyer. "I had to practice everyday while knowing that I would never get a chance to play. To me the practices were the games."

"I really wanted to play in the games," said Cottrell. "But it was best for me to take care of academics first."

Meyer, a 7-foot-2 sophomore giant from Wausau, Wisconsin came to UMass with a knack for blocking shots (all-time leader at Wausau East High School) and an unrelenting ability on the boards. After playing in 22 games in his freshman year and becoming crowd favorite at the Curry Hicks Cage, Meyer redshirted last year in hopes of developing himself physically.

"During all the road trips, while the team traveled, I basically hit the weights," said Meyer. "I've increased my vertical leap, bench press, and squats."

Cottrell, though three years out of Annapolis High School in Maryland, is still only a freshman and has followed in the footsteps of UMass guard Mike Williams by spending a year at Maine Central Institute in Pittsfield, Maine, one the most highly touted prep schools in the country. There, Cottrell averaged ten points and six rebounds a game for his 24-0 team.

"MCI gave me a chance learn a lot about the game because of the high level of competition," said the 6-foot-9 Cottrell. "Most of it was from trial and error, though."

Size and body weight seem to be Cottrell's weakest points, though he subscribes to a very tough and hard-nosed type of play. While Cottrell could stand to gain a few pounds, his 200 pound body frame gives him explosive first step and remarkable quickness.

"Ted has the all the tools, but he needs to bulk up," said assistant coach Bill Bayno. "He can stick the open jumper and runs the floor very well."

Bulk is a big weakness for Meyer also, though he has gotten bigger since last year. If he and Cottrell are expected to withstand the power of opposing A-10 forwards for the next three years, they will need to tear a page from the notebooks of Mel Turpin and John "Hot Plate" Williams and become better acquainted with the dining commons on campus.

"I did a lot of eating over the summer," said Cottrell. "But my weight fluctuates often."

"I think I've made some strides," said Meyer. "I'm up to about 240, a gain of about 10 pounds since last year."

Eating probably is the last thing on Cottrell's mind, as he suffered a tooth infection from catching an elbow in the mouth in the first scrimmage of the year. The blow was serious enough for Cottrell to miss a few days of practice and to have root canal done on the tooth.

"It's (his mouth) blown up pretty bad, and it's taking a while for the swelling to go down. I'll have to wear a mouth guard for most of the season," said Cottrell.

Injuries have not eluded Jeff Meyer either so far this year as he suffered a broken nose in an early season practice courtesy of Dana Dingle. Meyer had to have the nose broken back into place and will wear a protective mask when needed.

Both came from long distances to attend UMass, but both chose to come to Amherst for similar reasons. Meyer, who majors in business, and Cottrell, an Exercise Science Major, both appreciated UMass athletically and academically.

"UMass has a great business school; one of the best in the country," said Meyer. "I grew up in a really small town and I guess I out grew it. I wanted to come out east because this is where the action is."

Said Cottrell, "I really liked the campus and the way the coaching staff treated me."

Meyer agreed, "I could see that this program was up and coming. Plus all the coaches act in a very professional way. You can sense it in the air that something good is going on around you."

Because last year saw no playing time for either of them, action more than likely will be limited for both Cottrell and Meyer again, but there are minutes for them to get. Due to their size they both could be called on to give A-10 premier big men Harper Williams and Lou Roe a breather during the games.

"This is a great opportunity for both Ted and Jeff," said Bayno. "One of those two should definitely get some

Turn to REDSHIRTS, page 5

Non–conf. schedule the toughest yet

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

To be the best, you've got to beat the best.

In the 1992-93 season, the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will be put to the extreme test when it ventures out of the Atlantic 10, taking on some of the top hoop teams in the country.

The Minutemen, led by head coach John Calipari, will not only be seen by their faithful fans here in Amherst, but by millions of college basketball fanatics nationwide on ESPN and ABC.

In the world of college athletics, coaches need a venue to market their specific programs, and for basketball, television is the best medium used to lift a program into the spotlight.

ESPN is the total sports network, and UMass will grace the channel with its presence on four different occasions during the regular season. The Minutemen possess that special something that interests viewers, off of last season's run to the Sweet Sixteen.

"Our programming philosophy is try to air as many teams as possible that have the potential to make it to post-season play," said Curt Pires, a publicist for ESPN's College Basketball.

"Our schedule [non-conference] is all based on television. You give ESPN and ABC the games, and you tell them we'll play whomever whereever, as long as they give us a return game," said Calipari.

"Calipari has been very cooperative in working with us, and I think he understands the role television could play for a program. We look at UMass as being an exciting brand of basketball, and it adds something to our schedule when we have them on," said Pires.

UMass begins the follow-up to its Cinderella season tonight on ESPN at Florida State, a program which has sky-rocketed into the Top 10 even before the regular season. Led by head coach Pat Kennedy, the Seminoles are an experienced group for which the expectations are high.

Turn to SCHEDULE, page 8

UMass

Show Your Support From Head to Toe
A Complete Line of UMASS
Hats, T's, Sweatshirts, Sweatpants, Boxers, Sox & Sneakers
Including NCAA & Team Logo Shirts, Gifts & Decals

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER
545-2619
MONDAY - FRIDAY
9AM-5 PM
SATURDAY 11AM-3PM

DON'T MISS THIS!!!
LAST 3 DAYS
LEATHER GOODS
Save 50-70%
Book Bags • Sport Bags • Travel Bags
Briefcases • Handbags • Wallets
Plus Much More • This Week Only!!!
Location: Campus Center Concourse
Sponsored by UMASS Baseball

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful Newly remodeled Facility • Sunny Greenhouse • Sushi Bar • Beautiful Lounge with Big Screen TV.
Serving Lunch & Dinner 7 days a week • Lunch Specials served daily
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30AM-10PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11PM
WITH COUPON 10% OFF DINING ROOM OR CARRY OUT • DINNER • ONLY
EVERY MONDAY THROUGH THURSDAY IN OUR LOUNGE 4PM-7PM, ENJOY
Happy Hour
$2.00 Appetizers from our special menu • $1.00 Draft Beer
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Dr. • 256-8800

Hoop guru picks top 20 college teams

Crofts' Top 20

1.) Kansas- Great backcourt, and here comes Hancock.
2.) Indiana- Notes from NIT: Cheaney looks motivated, rest of team looks tough.
3.) Michigan- Fab Five returns, but does their desire?
4.) Duke- Kryzewski, Hurley are winners, Grant Hill is stupendous, it is all up to Cherokee Parks.
5.) Seton Hall- Dehere is good, Walker is rough, but is Luther Wright ready to carry his (massive) load?
6.) Florida State- Looked inconsistent in NIT, when Ward returns, he'll settle them down. Major league talent in Tallahassee.
7.) Kentucky- This is Mashburn's team. Someone has to help him up front while Travis Ford has to lead backcourt.
8.) Memphis State- Hardaway and Vaughn will shine again, but it is the return of two other starters which bodes well for the Tigers.
9.) North Carolina- Four starters return at Chapel Hill. Question– without Hubert Davis, who shoots the rock?
10.) Arizona- No more dependance on underachieving big men. Chris Mills will lead Lute's crew.
11.) Michigan State- Tough conference, tough players should be up to challenge despite lacking explosiveness.
12.) Syracuse- They lose David Johnson, but everyone else is back, including Mr. Smooth, Lawrence Moten. Probation has hit, too bad.
13.) UNLV- Rollie in Vegas? Will either explode as a volatile mix or work as a solution. I pick the latter for no apparent reason.
14.) Oklahoma- Tubbs' team will run and run, but will they stop other teams from running better than them?
15.) Iowa- The defense of Acie Earl in the paint will make the Hawkeyes play better than their talent.
16.) Tulane- Loss of Kim Lewis really hurts, but the Posse is ready for another season.
17.) Cincinnati- What can Nick Van Exel and crew do for an encore? It should be interesting.
18.) UCLA- Ed O'Bannon looked great in the NIT, team looked better than expected. Guards are so physically strong. Could surprise.
19.) Georgia Tech-Malcolm Mackey and James Forrest will punish inside, while Travis Best will orchestrate from outside.
20.) UMass- It could be rough in the beginning with new players taking over new roles, but this is now a legitimate Top 25 team. It will all come down to attitude. If the Minutemen fight the way they did last year, they could do some damage. If not there could be a trip to letdown city. Bench has got to produce, backcourt has got to be steady.
21.) Louisville- Four starters return and Cliff Rozier makes the Cardinal's season look promising.
22.) Georgetown- If Harrington is as good as advertised, the Hoyas will be alright, if not, they will be in trouble.
23.) Iowa State- Five starters return and backcourt is good. Somehow their production on paper doesn't always equal victories.
24.) Wake Forest-Two words: Rodney Rogers.
25.) Purdue- There is a new Mr. Robinson in Gene Keady's neighborhood and early indications show he is good, very good.

Crofts' All-American Teams

1st Team

Rodney Rogers, Wake Forest- Amazing body, amazing athletic prowess. Strong and quick around basket, good touch from outside. Is a bull in a china shop, will dominate ACC.

Jamal Mashburn, Kentucky- Perhaps the best all-around big man in the game. Is a terror in the post and a threat from Trey land.

Chris Webber, Michigan- Explosive, incredible athlete. Ability sometimes to amazing to believe. Dunks like it was nothing, breathtakingly talented.

Bobby Hurley, Duke- The prototype point guard. A winner. Quick, can penetrate or hit the J. Great instincts, will do what it takes to win, and that is the bottom line.

Allan Houston, Tennessee- Best shooting guard in country. Can shoot the lights out and has size (6'6") to post up many 2's. Still, it is his jump shot and smarts which got him where he is.

2nd Team

Calbert Cheaney, Indiana- If NIT is any indication, he'll move up to first team before too long. As complete offensively as anyone in the nation. If he leads, in addition to scoring, look out.

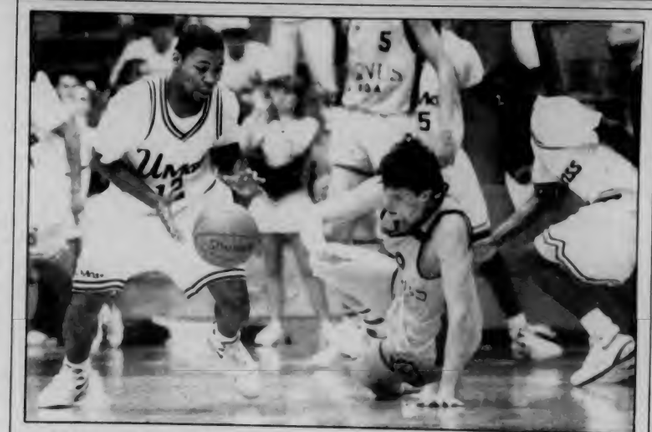
Grant Hill, Duke- Can play three positions and dominate at each. You cannot say that about many. Versatility and ability is astounding.

Anfernee Hardaway, Memphis State- Is one of the few other players who can dominate at three positions. Is as electric as any player in college today.

Terry Dehere, Seton Hall- Clutch shooting guard, and a tough one as well. Likes to talk trash, and usually backs it up. When he is on, everyone knows it, especially the poor fool guarding him.

Darrin Hancock, Kansas- This is my darkhorse pick. As athletic as anyone and now with transfer of Ben Davis (to Virginia) his stage will be bigger. He will shine and amaze, here he comes.

Honorable Mention: Doug Edwards, FSU. Lawrence Moten, Syracuse. Jalen Rose, Michigan. Acie Earl, Iowa. James Robinson, Alabama. Glenn Robinson, Purdue (think I was impressed with his collegiate opener? Just a little.) Vin Baker, Hartford.



CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

Chris Robinson, shown here picking up a loose ball in the UMass exhibition game against Latvia, is one of five guards vying for the two starting positions.

Hoosiers to be a Top 40 hit

Quite simply, the question in college basketball as the 1992-93 season begins isn't can Duke repeat, but rather who can prevent them?

There are a number of superb teams in the country that could wrestle the next national championship away from the Blue Devils, and everybody will obviously be gunning for Bobby Hurley, Grant Hill, et al. So without further adieu, here is the real top 40 in the nation.

1. Indiana. Five years ago, Bobby Knight won his third national championship in New Orleans, home of this year's Final Four. The Hoosiers have the talent, but Knight's heavyhanded coaching may hurt this team.

Michael
MORRISSEY

It's time for Calbert Cheaney and Damon Bailey to take charge. Bailey must lead the floor and live up to his pre-college superstar billing, while Cheaney hopes to win the Big 10 Player of the Year. The competition in the Big 10 will harden the Hoosiers for the Big Dance.

2. Kansas has all the tools to win a national championship, and Roy Williams' team will come close again. The Jayhawks have won two Big 8 titles in a row, and they return four starters. The fifth hole will be taken up by forward Darin Hancock, who was the junior college player of the year last year.

Returning are Rex (the wonder guard) Walters, a pure shooter who averaged 16 points per game last year. Adonis Jordan is a first team All-Name selection if not an All-American candidate. Together the two make up the best guard tandem in the nation.

3. Kentucky will reach New Orleans this year, much as I hate to admit it. Even though only two starters, All-American Jamal Mashburn and Gimel Martinez, return, Jeff Brassow is back. The guard went out early in the season, but he has fully recuperated. Super-frosh Rodrick Rhodes will step in immediately.

Pitino is a great coach, and the Wildcats will go to the Big Dance in the Big Easy.

4. Duke is Bobby Hurley's team now, and if he plays half as well as NBA coaches and players say he played in the Barcelona warmups against the Dream Team, then Duke should have no problem reaching its seventh Final Four in eight years. Cherokee Parks is no Christian Laettner, but with the Hill crew providing scoring punch, he won't have to be.

5. How far can a man take a team? Anfernee Hardaway will take Memphis State to the verge of the Final Four. A tough conference schedule will prep the Tigers for the NCAA tourney, and with starters like Anthony Douglas and David Vaughn returning, Memphis State could be the Cinderella team of 1992.

6. Where's Michigan, you ask? Right where they should be. Coach Calipari, if you worry about your team being overconfident, imagine how Steve Fisher feels in Ann Arbor? Five brash cocky starters will have trouble getting out of the Big 10 with their heads intact, and by the end of the year, Webber, Rose, Howard, King and Jackson might not even be on the best team in Michigan.

7. North Carolina fits very nicely in the seventh spot. The Tar Heels don't have the tempo to keep up with the chart toppers, but if they peak at the right time, they will surprise ACC rivals Duke and Florida State, among others. Brian Reese, George Lynch and Eric Montross make up one of the top frontcourts in the land, but who will step up to fill the void left by Hubert Davis?

8. Seton Hall is eighth. They'll lose in the first round of the NCAAs. I hate the Big East. End of discussion.

9. Michigan State was felled in the NCAAs by last year's Cinderella team, Cincinnati. Ironic because the Spartans will be the sleepers of this year's tourney. Mike Peplowski is either 6-foot-8 or 6-foot-10, depending on who you believe. I believe whatever the 270-pound center tells me. Shawn Respert is strong at the two guard, but finding someone to play point guard is head coach Jud Heathcote's task.

Turn to TOP 40, page 9

COLLEGIAN'S SWEET SIXTEEN

Compiled by Jeff Crofts

The following is based on the No. 1 team getting 16 points, No. 2 getting 15 points, No. 3 getting 14 points etc. First place votes are in parenthesis.

1.	Indiana (3)	135
2.	Kansas (3)	123
	Michigan (3)	123
4.	Duke	122
5.	Kentucky	112
6.	Seton Hall	88
7.	North Carolina	79
8.	Memphis State	73
9.	Florida State	70
10.	Arizona	54
11.	Oklahoma	44
12.	Georgia Tech	29
13.	Iowa	27
14.	UMass	24
15.	Michigan State	15
16.	Louisville	12
	Iowa State	12

Others Receiving Votes: California (9), Tulane (8), Hartford (8, ed. note: see Dave Scott), ITT Technical Institute (7, ed. note: see Dave Scott), Syracuse (6), UNLV (6), Amherst College (5, ed. note: see Dave Scott), Cincinnati (4), Purdue (3), Nebraska (3), UConn (2), Georgia (1), and Illinois (1).

Ed. Note: This poll shows that while the Collegian has a good sports department, not all of the staffers are of sound mind.

■ redshirts

continued from page 4

quality minutes. We have people that can score so we would primarily call upon them to defend, rebound and maybe block some shots."

As for their outlook on the season, Meyer and Cottrell both remain positive and hope for a chance to prove themselves.

"I'm just going to continue to play hard," said Meyer. "I'll just take the minutes given to me and try to get used to game situations."

"I going to try to do the best I can," said Cottrell. "I hope I get a chance to play so the fans don't ask 'Why did they get this guy?'."

Looking towards the future, both talents are raw, but are blessed with with a lot of heart and physical talent.

"Both players need to stay focused and stay consistent," said Bayno. "I definitely see them as major contributers on this team one or two years down the road.

Collegian Sports.
Where you read it FIRST.
Published daily since 1967.

assistants

continued from page 3

liking.

"I enjoy working at UMass," he said. "Off the court we're (the coaches) pretty close, we do things together."

John Robic is another coach who has experience at a number of a different schools. After attending Walsh College for two years, Robic moved onto Dennison College.

It was at Dennison College where Robic was a Division Three All-American. After graduating from Dennison, Robic hooked on at Kansas.

At Kansas, Robic earned both his Master's degree and served as a member of Larry Brown's basketball staff. It is that thread of Kansas which Robic shares with both Bayno and Calipari.

As soon as Robic finished with the Jayhawks, he joined Calipari's staff at UMass. Entering his fifth year in Amherst, Robic is sort of the jack-of-all-trades coach for the Minutemen.

In addition to his regular coaching chores, Robic is the head scout for future Massachusetts opponents. He is also the team's video coordinator, runs the UMass Summer Basketball School, and coaches the MiniMinutemen ball-handling group. Not only a scout for UMass, Robic does some scouting for the NBA.

Coach Robic enjoys the fact that he has many things in his hands.

"Scouting is my primary job, I'm on the road all the time from November through February," Robic said. "We all take part in teaching (at practice), and I like the fact that all the coaches have responsibilities."

Robic has seen big time college hoop at Kansas and feels UMass is on the similar way up.

"I was at Kansas for their National Championship season (1988), so at first coming here was an adjustment," he said. "But now the way the program is going, it's getting closer and closer to the level at (Kansas).

"I think the best thing is the way we've built the program," Robic said. "We were all pretty young coming here, so we've had to work harder, now UMass has gotten to a point of national respect."

The relationships between the coaches is something Robic said he enjoys.

"I worked with Billy (Bayno) at Kansas for a year," he said. "We (the coaches) got to know each other at the Five Star Basketball Camp. Off the court we are very close, and we have a very good working relationship."

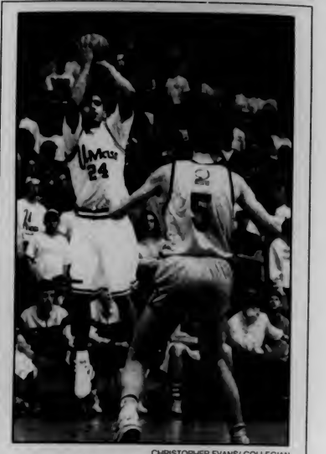
Over the next couple of years, Robic said he hopes that the UMass program continues its' upward climb.

"I hope it grows with the new arena and everything," Robic said. "I hope we can stabilize what we have going."

Coach Calipari said he is happy with the staff he has here at UMass.

"Besides all the separate responsibilities each (assistant) has, they all teach at practice," Calipari said. "All three assistants are involved here.

"I think we have as good a staff as you'll see (in the country)," Calipari said. "The important thing is that we all work together, egos do not get involved here which is also very important."



CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

Jerome Malloy has some pretty big shoes to fill — he will replace all-time UMass leading scorer Jim McCoy as the team's shooting guard.

It's About TIME!

FOSSIL

from $50.

swatch

from $40.

J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN

Shear Bliss
© 413-253-2322
479 West St. Amherst, MA 01002
$3.00 Off with Coupon
Pure flower and plant essences used in every service
AVEDA

COLLEGIAN SPORTS
FOR THE INSIDE SCOOP
ON UMASS HOOP
YOUR UMASS DAILY

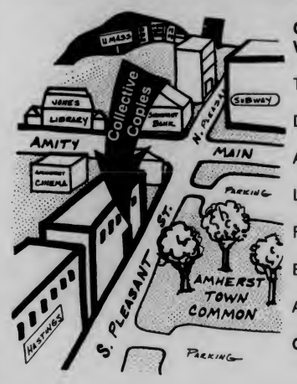
PIZZA SUBS
Bruno's
363 MAIN ST.
AMHERST
256-0222
SALADS LASAGNA
SPAGETTI

Winter Specials!
Introducing
Cheeseburger Subs! Real Bacon For Pizza!

Fast Free Delivery for Lunch, Dinner, and Late Night • 256-0222

$2.00 Off Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	$2.00 Off Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	Free Small Cheese When You Purchase a Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92
$1.00 Off Medium Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	$1.00 Off Medium Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	Free Small Cheese When You Purchase a Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92
75¢ Off Small Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	75¢ Off Small Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	2 Large Cheese Pizzas $9.95 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92
2 Spaghetti Dinners For $6.00 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	$1.00 Off Lasagna Dinner Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	2 Large Cheese Pizzas $9.95 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92

COLLECTIVE COPIES
29 South Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-6425 FAX: 253-7475



Check out What We have to offer!
Thesis Copying
Dissertations
Acid Free Paper
Laminating
Recycled Paper
Binding
AND,
GREAT PRICES

10% OFF ANY ORDER
with this coupon
COLLECTIVE COPIES
expires 1/1/93

ARAM COMJEAN/ COLLEGIAN

Front row, left to right: Kennard Robinson, Rigoberto Nunez, Tony Barbee, Harper Williams, Ted Cottrell, Jeff Meyer. Back row, left to right: Lou Roe, Derek Kellogg, Craig Berry, Chris Robinson, Mike Williams, Jerome Malloy, Dana Dingle.

Top to bottom, Atlantic 10 Conference solid

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

There is no lack of confidence floating around the Atlantic 10 Conference these days. Coaches and league officials alike are more than willing to tell you where their conference is heading — namely up.

Despite the loss of two teams (Penn State and Duquesne) in the last two years, the A-10 has made great strides in national prominence and some feel this is the season the league will break out of the Big East's big shadow.

"This is a very good basketball league," Temple coach John Chaney said. "And this season it will be better than I've ever seen it. There aren't anymore easy games on the schedule."

The rise from the basketball dead of Massachusetts, George Washington, St. Joseph's and Rhode Island teamed with perennial winners in Temple, West Virginia and Rutgers have made the A-10 a league on the move.

Last season the league sported a combined 76-36 (.679) record in non-conference play, for the second year in a row sent three teams to the NCAA Tournament and was ranked the fifth best conference in the country by the RPI power rankings.

This season, expectations are far greater.

"Fans always point to some of the top teams on our non-conference schedule, but the biggest challenge is how competitive the A-10 has become," West Virginia coach Gale Catlett said. "A-10 teams have progressed to playing some of the best basketball in the nation."

Coaches around the league are lobbying for a game of the week on ESPN.

"We are the fifth best league in the country and people should be watching us on television," Chaney said. "The league is filled with great players and great basketball environments. It is a perfect fit for a weekly game."

Although a weekly slot on ESPN will not occur this season, A-10 teams will appear on the total sports network 12 times this winter and ABC will televise two contests (UMass-DePaul on Jan. 24 and Temple-Wake Forest on Feb. 7).

Even without the constant exposure, some basketball "experts" are proclaiming the A-10 to be a notch above the Big East, an unthinkable occurrence a few years ago.

Larry Donaldson of Eastern Basketball writes "[The A-10] just might be tougher, top to bottom, than the Big East. No kidding."

Better than the Big East? Not yet. But each year as more and more top high school talent arrives, the A-10 keeps closing the gap.

The Collegian's predicted order of finish.

GEORGE WASHINGTON — Colonial coach Mike Jarvis is returning four starters from last season's 16-12 team and has brought in what is potentially the league's best recruiting class.

GW will be led by returning All-Conference guard Dirkk Surles, who pumped in 19.9 points a game last season. Surles is a streak shooter capable of scoring 30 on a given night. Point guard Alvin Pearsall (176 assists) is quite capable of getting the ball to his backcourt mate.

Also returning is Sonni Holland (16 ppg) and Bill Brigham (11.9 ppg), who will be joined by possibly the league's best recruit and definitely the league's most interesting newcomer.

Vaugn Jones, a 6-foot-4 scoring machine from DeMantha High in Washington D.C., could be the league's best frosh and will be expected to produce immediately. 7-foot-1 Nigerian Yinka Dare is reported to be an unfinished product but has unlimited potential.

"The good Lord found Yinka for us," Jarvis, who coached Patrick Ewing at Cambridge Rindge & Latin, said. "I expect him to be a factor any time he is in the game. He has the raw skills and at 7-foot-1 his presence on the court will be felt."

Jarvis is a great coach, who has been successful at each level he has worked at. Look for him and Surles to take GW to a new level this season.

MASSACHUSETTS — If UMass coach John Calipari can motivate his team like last season, the Minutemen could cruise to a second straight conference title.

UMass returns a talented frontcourt with A-10 Player of the Year Harper Williams leading the brigade. The 6-foot-7 Williams can run the floor and is a warrior underneath.

Williams will be joined by a solid Tony Barbee and 6-foot-7 sophomore Lou Roe, who should blossom with increased playing time. Despite being undersized, the frontcourt is the conference's best and, according to Dick Vitale, the sixth best in the nation.

The group relies on quickness and aggressiveness more than size. All three run well and can finish the break with authority.

Turn to A 10, page 9

- TONIGHT -
KARAOKE
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00
9:30 - 10:30
THE 24 PUB
CELEBRATES 24 HRS IN AMHERST
1960 1992
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Bausch & Lomb • Ciba Vision • Cooper Visio • Barnes-Hind • American Hydro • Johnson & Johnson
SAVE
On Replacement Soft Contact Lenses
Everything you want in replacement soft lenses. Even fashion tints!
Ask our Pharmacist about Contact Replacements. Check our low prices!
SeeQuence, NewVues or Acuvue
1 FREE lens with 6, $22 • 3 FREE lenses with 12, $44
Most Contact Lenses Available in 48 Hours
Walgreens
The Pharmacy America Trusts
Not available in TN, FL, CT, NJ NY & where dispensing by appointment is required
1919 Wilbraham Rd., Spfld... 783-2535
50 Boston Rd., Spfld ..543-5005
50 St. James, Spfld....733-3002
55 East Ludlow St., Ludlow...547-8128
78 Main St., Westfield...568-1929

schedule

continued from page 4

"I certainly hope that the expectations of a Final Four team will not follow us. I would love to get there, but you have to get lucky, get great brackets, and it all goes into that great Final Four theory," said Kennedy.

Florida State can hurt you in many different ways, but they will be playing the Minutemen without starting point guard Charlie Ward, who is with the Seminole football team until January 1. Calipari knows that he will have to focus on the potent backcourt, even without Ward.

"[Florida State] has five NBA players on their team, so our goal is not to get buried on national TV. Bob Sura is John Havlicek [former NBA great]; the Celtics right now will try to get him to go hardship next year; Sam Cassell will be in the NBA, possibly a first round pick," said Calipari.

Coach Kennedy has mutual respect for the Minutemen and their coach, and has his ideas on how Calipari has made the program so successful.

"The key to all successes is recruiting. If you are not a good recruiter, and you can't get the players, you are not going to win. Once you get them, you have to prove yourself as a coach.

"John has done both of these things, at the very highest level. He's gotten excellent players, he runs a good program, and he's proven himself as an excellent coach," said Kennedy.

Another huge game for UMass is on January 7, at the Springfield Civic Center, against head coach Bob Huggins and his University of Cincinnati team.

The Bearcats were a Final Four participant last season, and they are expected to maintain a Top 25 program this year. There have always been expectations for Cincinnati, because the program has been in five Final Fours, coming away with two national championships.

Huggins cited ESPN as "a force" in getting the game organized, and, by January, it will be down to business, focusing on the game itself. But for now, Huggins is quick to poke fun at the recent success of his good friend Calipari and his likeness to one Rick Pitino, the head coach of Kentucky.

"For as much money as John's making now, he should be able to buy better suits and some better ties; if he wants to keep dressing and acting like Pitino, he is going to have to start spending more money on clothes because he is a cheap imitation," said Huggins.

The last non-conference game to be seen on ESPN will mark the end of an era in UMass basketball. The final game in the Curry Hicks Cage will be against Southwestern Louisiana University, at midnight, on January 29.

"John Calipari has stated before that he would be willing to play midnight games because he thought it was very good for the fans and the program. The reason we went after the Ragin' Cajuns for the last game in the Cage is because their nickname was a perfect match," said Pires.

SW Louisiana made it to the Final 32 last season, and is expected to be highly competitive this year, due to its treacherous schedule, which includes UMass, Memphis State, North Carolina, Michigan, and Nebraska. Head coach Marty Fletcher is anxiously awaiting his trip to Amherst.

"I guess they [ESPN] couldn't find anybody foolish enough to come [to Amherst], so they got this knucklehead, which makes it a very difficult challenge for us, but I thought it was good for our program," said Fletcher.

Last season's game on ESPN for the Minutemen against Oklahoma pushed the program into the Top 25, giving Calipari and company national recognition. On December 12, UMass travels to the home of head coach Billy Tubbs' Sooners to continue the rivalry.

"It will certainly be a game that our players and our fans will look forward to because it is a much better rivalry since they beat us up there last year.

"In most of the publications I've seen, UMass has been picked to win the A-10; I think they have a really good frontline and a good all-around team this year, and it is going to be an outstanding game," said Tubbs.

On January 24, UMass will "travel" to Worcester for a game on ABC with a DePaul team that has gone through a major overhaul during the off-season.

"We lost six out of our top seven players from last season. We scored 82 points a game last year, which we were pleased with, but we only have 22 points coming back," said Blue Demons head coach Joey Meyer.

Meyer thinks his team is in for a uphill battle against the Minutemen, but he knows this DePaul team will not back down from any opponent.

"We play in a lot of difficult non-conference games, so we haven't shyed away from anyone. UMass on paper is a lot better than DePaul is, but we've never stopped playing those types of teams," said Meyer.

As for the coach of the Minutemen, Meyer agrees with his coaching peers on the brilliance of Calipari's program.

"Unless I'm blind, I don't think you are going to find too many people that don't say he's done a great job; obviously, I'm not as close to the program as some, but when you see him listed under the "Rising Stars" in coaching [in the November 23 issue of Sports Illustrated], I don't think in the profession you get much of an argument here."

After the Game the Good Times Continue at the UMASS Top of the Campus

Sports Bar & Lounge

Ideally located where faculty, staff & students can meet to enjoy the friendly atmosphere. The Lounge offers full cocktail service, weekly drink specials and munchies.

Monday-Saturday
2:00PM-12:30AM
Munchies Available until 11:00PM

Positive I.D. Required

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

TONIGHT

UMASS VS. FLORIDA STATE
Live on the Big Screen
7:30

Pizza Slices
50¢
9 til 1

Thursday
WHMP Live Radio Show with Coach John Calipari

University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Creative Computers
Specializing In Collegiate Computer Needs!
GUARANTEED LOWEST PRICES!!

386SX-25MHz System - $779
• 386SX-33MHz • 486DX-33MHz
• 386DX-40MHz • 486DX-50MHz

In Amherst: 256-6474

SPOLETO
Fine Italian Cuisine
Treat your sweetheart to a delicious evening
50 Main Street
Northampton, MA (413) 586-6313

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.

Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111

HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM

AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING ON DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS

LARGE CHEESE PIZZA or Two for
No Coupon Needed
Expires 12/12/92

MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA or Two for
No Coupon Needed
Expires 12/12/92

ONLY FOR 8 OVEN BAKED BREAD STICKS
MINIMUM $5.00 DELIVERY

top 40

continued from page 5

10. Florida State would be ranked higher, but foresight is 20/10, and now that Chuck Graham is possibly out for the year, and Charlie Ward will only play three months, I'm going to wait and see on the Seminoles. Doug Edwards will be the ACC Player of the Year, and guard Bob Sura is a super soph. Don't forget Sam Cassell, and don't forget State won six ACC games on the road last year, the sign of a great team.

11. Iowa State could be a great team, but they'll probably settle for being very good. Their entire starting cast, including All-American candidate Justus Thigpen, returns, and head coach Johnny Orr is senile like a fox. Look for the Cyclones to storm through their bracket come March.

12. UCLA got rid of Tracy Murray (good move, see ya in Europe) and Don (one hit wonder) MacLean. This could be a blessing in disguise, because the Bruins will play defense this year and Ed O'Bannon knows he's the go-to guy.

13. Oklahoma won't stay down for long. After a humiliating first round upset at the hands of the SW Louisiana Ragin' Cajuns, they are on a mission. Expect Billy Tubbs to run up the score at all times, and expect the Sooners to reach the Sweet Sixteen.

14. Arizona is as bland as ever. Lute Olson has good talent, they play well as a team, challenge for the Pac-10 title and make the NCAAs. This year's crop of Chris Mills, Khalid Reeves at point and Ed Stokes at center is no different. Yawn.

15. Massachusetts is not a top 15 team at this moment. Not even close. By March 30, however, they could be. Supposedly an off-year for John Calipari, the Minutemen will get knocked around in the regular season, but barring major injuries or attitude problems, UMass will sneak back into the Sweet Sixteen.

16. Tulane had a great first half last year, and then faded away. With a full year in the national spotlight, look for Kim Lewis and Anthony Reed to shine late. The Final Four is in New Orleans, Tulane's hometown. Could they . . . nah.

17. Georgetown. Goodbye Mourning, but hello Othella Harrington and Duane Spencer. Did I mention I hate the Big East?

18. UConn is pretty good. Did I mention I hate the Big East?

19. Tennesee features one of the top shooting guards in the country in Allan Houston, and they need to pick up their football team's slack. A tough non-conference schedule against Cincy, N.C. State, and Syracuse will get the Vols into the tourney.

20. Head coach Bob Huggins lost key players from last year's Final Four team, but Cincinnati still has enough in Nick Van Exel and a cast of overachievers to challenge for the Great Midwest title.

21. Iowa's strength is supposedly at center with All-Big 10 Acie Earl, and yet the Hawkeyes were badly outrebounded last year. They'll do nothing in the tourney.

22. George Washington returns four starters, and many teams will be wishing they didn't underestimate this A-10 member by the end of the year. The big question is whether Nigerian newcomer Yinka Dare can overcome his asthma and play for more than four minutes at a time.

23. Nebraska's Danny Nees has built the Cornhuskers into a perennial Big 8 challenger and NCAA-tourney caliber team. Eric Piatkowski will have another big year.

24. Louisville adds UNC transfer Cliff Rozier to a team with three returning starters. The Cardinals are either feast or famine in the tourney, it's either a first-round upset or the Sweet Sixteen.

25. Lon Kruger is an up-and-coming coach, and Florida is an up-and-coming team. Stacey Poole (17.9 ppg) leads five returning starters.

26. Temple is strong, and always plays tough D.

27. Illinois, with Deon Thomas, is tourney bound.

28. Evansville has the best unknown player: Parrish Casebier.

29. Georgia Tech has Mackey, but Jon Barry's gone. Oh no.

30. Tom Penders does it again, this time with Texas.

31. Glenn Robinson of Purdue will cook up the competition.

32. BC is the only Big East team I will discuss. See?

33. Virginia Commonwealth. Two words: Kendrick Warren.

34. Wake Forest has a few trees, notably Rodney Rogers.

35. West Virginia makes it an A-10 superfecta.

36. Georgia has a Strong-hold on an berth, thanks to Carlos.

37. California is Kidding themselves.

38. UNLV. Rollie's team wil be legally mediocre.

39. UNC-Charlotte has Jarvis Lang back. Watch out, Metro.

40. Vin Baker and Hartford are coming to an NCAA regional near you.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist

back court

continued from page 12

Taking his teammates into consideration, Kellogg has his theory on how he became the starter.

"I don't know if I am the overall best guy, but it may be the best thing for team chemistry right now. Coach Cal wants a guy like Mike [Williams] to come off the bench because he has more pure scoring ability than I have," said Kellogg.

However, Kellogg will be asked to run the team, a job that is new to him, and he is hoping to put to use what he learned last season behind a senior.

"Anton controlled the game, and he was able to remain calm in any situation; I think that is what we have to try to do," said Kellogg.

Kellogg's starting backcourt mate, Jerome Malloy, must step in to fill the spot vacated by UMass' all-time leading scorer, McCoy. He knows the responsibility he has to his team, and is looking forward to the season.

"Playing behind Jim taught me to work hard because he would be out there playing hard for the whole game; I had to deal with the pressure of coming off the bench trying to back him up, so it gave me more confidence for this year," said Malloy.

Malloy is a pure scorer, and he will fit right into the plans for the Minutemen. Last season, plays were run for McCoy to score; this season, it may be similar for Malloy, who has proven he can shoot.

"The thing about Jerome is he is a shooter as well as a slasher; we'll look for him to slash and score some garbage points for us, and if he does that, he'll be successful," said Flint.

Malloy himself knows that the task is not an easy one, and he has some weaknesses he must work on in order to truly be a threat as a two-guard.

"I have to work on my defense and strength because I'm going to have to guard bigger and stronger players as the season goes on," said Malloy.

The Minutemen may have found their pot of gold, however, with the switch of Mike Williams from point to two-guard, freeing up his ability to score at will.

"Mike is our trump card because he can score and play the point. He is a little bit more comfortable off the ball, so he may excel at coming off the bench to give us a spark," said Flint.

"I've been playing fairly well at both the point and the two, and since Jerome is our only true two guard, I'll probably be playing there to start the season," said Williams.

Williams has all of the talent to score, but the question will be whether he can stay in control while in the game at crunch time, like Brown was able to do last season when he ran the floor.

"Anton kept control of the team last season; he wasn't that vocal but his consistency showed his commitment to the team. In any position that I'm going to play, I am going to try to have the same characteristics," said Williams.

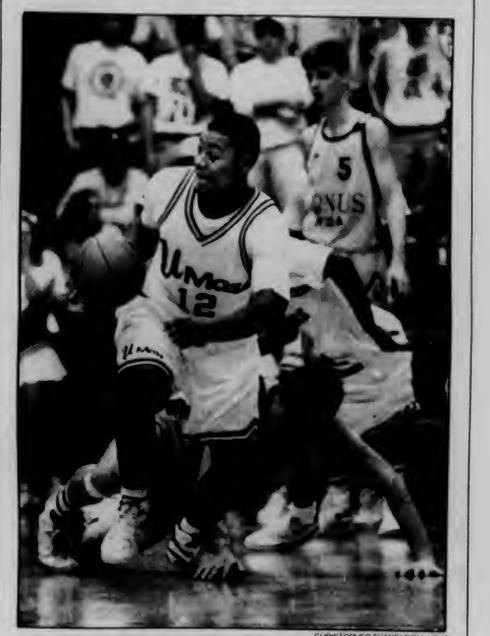
The upperclassman in this mix is Robinson, who will be looked to in order to give the other guys a rest on the bench.

"I think this season I will be able to help the team by playing stronger defense, as far as stopping good guards [on the opposing teams]; I think I'll come in and give our backcourt a breather, and just play hard and give the team a good spark," said Robinson.

As far as this junior goes, Flint knows that he is important to the success of the team, and how he plays may help the Minutemen in the long run.

The key to the backcourt this season will be how the four players adjust to playing with each other. Kellogg and Malloy may prove to be as good of a tandem as in the past, with Williams and Robinson coming off the bench to provide much needed depth.

"I think they all play hard, they push each other, and that is the key. It is going to be up and down at times, but we hope they learn from their mistakes. I don't think you can go to another team anywhere and find four guards that go at each other like our guards do," said Flint.



CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

Chris Robinson will be fighting for playing time this season at the point guard position. The scrappy junior is known for his strong defense and creative ball-handling.

UMass

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Vision Showcase

☆ EYEGLASSES ☆
☆ CONTACT LENSES ☆
☆ EYE EXAMINATIONS ☆ ☆ 584-8324 ☆
Hampshire Mall, Hadley

Eye Examination performed by
Dr. Robert E. Delaney
Independant Doctor of Optometry

Eyeglasses & Exam $99.95 Complete

Price includes:
Frames from our special selection, 1st & 2nd division clear uncoated plastic lenses, and, a Standard Eye Examination

Please Present This Coupon at time of purchase
Offer expires 3/31/93 & precludes previous offers
College I.D. Required

1992-93 Atlantic 10 women's hoop preview

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 Conference again had another typically strong year in women's basketball last season. Three A-10 teams (George Washington, West Virginia and Rutgers) made it to the NCAA tournament, which marked the seventh straight year that the A-10 had three or more teams in the NCAA's.

This year should be no different. The A-10 looks as tough as ever. The predicted order of finish in the coaches' preseason poll is as follows:

1. St. Joseph's, 2. GW, 3. Rutgers, 4. West Virginia, 5. Temple, 6. Rhode Island, 7. St. Bonaventuree, 8. UMass

St. Joseph's finished last season with a 17-12 (11-5 A-10) record. Head coach Stephanie Gaitley returns for her second year with four starters back.

The one starter Gaitley loses is point guard Cindy Anderson. India Henderson, a 5-foot-9 transfer from Richmond (where Gaitley coached for six years before St. Joe's) will most likely be the new floor general for the Hawks.

The strengths for St. Joe's is in senior shooting guard Katie Curry and junior Audrey Codner.

Curry, a returning all-Atlantic 10 member, is a deadly outside shooter (83 treys in 91-92) who led the Hawks in scoring last year with 18.1 points a game.

As for Codner, she is a tough 6-foot-1 low post player who can score from the blocks (16.1 ppg in 91-92). On the glass Codner also gets the job done as she averaged 7 rebounds a game last season.

Last season was a banner year (25-7 overall 11-5 A-10) for George Washington. The Colonials won the A-10 conference championship, went to the NCAA tournament (for second straight year) and finished the year ranked 16th in the country. Despite losing three starters to graduation, head coach Joe McKeown has an influx of young, talented players.

The two returning starters for GW form as good a forward tandem as there is in the conference. Jennifer Shasky, returning all-Atlantic 10 small forward and power forward Darlene Saar, A-10 Rookie of the Year, compliment each other nicely.

Shasky is player who can do light it up from all over the court. Last year Shasky nailed 36 treys and averaged 14.1 points a game. Saar, meanwhile, is tough inside, as she averaged 11.5 points and 6.3 rebounds a game for last year's Colonials.

Young players expected to have impact include 6-foot-5 sophomore Martha Williams, sophomore guards Debbie Hemery and Cathy Neville, and freshmen guards Myriah Lonergan and Kristin Davidson.

Last season marked the seventh season in a row that the Rutgers Lady Knights (21-11, 11-5 A-10) made it into the NCAA tourney. Rutgers' frontcourt is their strength, despite losing the A-10s second leading scorer (20.3 ppg) forward Tanya Hansen.

The other two frontcourt starters for coach Theresa Grentz return. Caroline DeRoose brings her offensive firepower (15.7 ppg in 91-92) back while senior C'ta Mitchelson brings her rugged 7.4 rebounds a game back to the mix as well.

In the backcourt, a lot depends on the health status of senior Cheryl Cop. Last year Cop got injured at midseason which hurt the Scarlet Knights immensely. If Cop is healthy she will team with fellow senior Vicki Green to form an experienced backcourt duo. Four freshman will lend depth for the Lady Knights.

COURTESY SPORTS INFORMATION

UMass Women's Basketball coach Joanie O'Brien is looking to rebuild the Minutewomen into an Atlantic 10 force this season.

Until the tail end of last season, the West Virginia Mountaineers dominated play in the A-10. After finishing the regular season 16-0 in conference play (26-4 overall), the Mountaineers were upset by now-departed Duquesne in the Atlantic 10 tournament. In the NCAA's West Virginia got by Clemson before being crushed by Virginia in round two, 103-83.

Also compounding matters for new full-time head coach Scott Harrelson, besides the late season tailspin, is the fact that four starters from last year graduated leaving him with an inexperienced cast.

The four starters gone averaged 57.5 ppg (including 24.3 from A-10 Player of the Year Rosemary Kosiorek) and 22.3 rpg. Trying to fill that void will be lone returning starter Christy Cooper (a 5-foot-9 forward), a host of of returning role players, and five newcomers.

Temple tied for fifth in the A-10 last year with an 8-8 mark (11-17 overall). For coach Charlene Curtis three starters return to go along with six new recruits.

The forward tandem returns for the Owls. Senior Margarete Rougier is a tough, inside presence (12.6 points and 7.9 rebounds a game). Curtis is counting on the other returning forward Sonya Perry to raise her game to new level.

In the backcourt, sophomore Chantel Adkins is an outside threat (42 trifectas in 91-92) and is fixated at the off-guard slot. At point guard, senior Nikki Inzano is expected to run the club but that is not set in stone, yet.

The Rhode Island WRams went 4-12 (8-20 overall) in the A-10 last year, but coach Linda Ziemke returns four starters for this year.

Among those four returnees is shooting guard Anne Kelsen. Last year Kelsen proved to be among the more versatile perfomers in the conference, as she averaged 16.5 points a game in addition to setting a new URI single season assist record (131).

Kelsen's backcourt mate Sue Morrone returns as well, Morrone will be expected to play a tough two-way game as she did last season. In the frontcourt for the WRams will be two solid returnees at forward (Rebecca Bright and Monica Games) and one at center, 6-foot-3 Cheri Douglas.

By posting a 16-12 (8-8 in A-10) mark last season, St. Bonaventure had its first winning record since joining the Atlantic 10 in 1986-87. Now coach Mary Jane Telford has to find out how to replace three starters if she expects to post a second consecutive winning record.

Of the two starters back for the Lady Bonnies, senior forward Jodi Urich is the key. Last season Urich led Bonaventure in scoring with 16.1 points a game.

The other returning starter is point guard Casey Comoroski. Last season Comoroski dished out a team-high 160 assists. The Lady Bonnies main three point threat from last year, Susan Dailer might find herself at the starting off-guard slot for Telford. Dailer knocked down 31 treys last season.

Back upfront, sophomore Melissa Jurecki will be expected to step up into the starting rotation. New freshmen Lisa Vizzoca and Mindy Brinck will also be counted on heavily.

For Massachusetts, see above story.

This year in the Atlantic 10, the balance and parity is evident. UMass' coach Joanie O'Brien knows that the A-10 is going to be very tough this year.

"Every game is going to be a dogfight," she said.

If so, strap yourselves in, because it will be one hell of a ride.

Young Minutewomen ready for a new season

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

After a subpar season last year, the theme for this year's 1992-1993 University of Massachusetts women's basketball program is, "Building for the future."

While most prognosticators have picked the Minutewomen (4-24 last season) to finish last in the Atlantic 10, head coach Joanie O'Brien is hoping that the addition of four blue-chip recruits, as well as some much needed leadership from upperclassmen will result in a successful season.

"This is definitely a rebuilding year for us," said O'Brien. "Our skill level has increased this year and we will be a lot more competitive.

"The kids feel like they can win this year but they realize they have to push themselves to do so."

This year, the Minutewomen promise to entertain with a more up-tempo game which will be led by two freshmen, forward Octavia Thomas and 6-foot-3 center Melissa Gurile. Gurile, a Communication major from Pataskala, Ohio, gives UMass a true center who has shot blocking ability. In addition to being effective in the pivot, she is also able to score 10-15 feet away from the basket.

"Melissa not only is a good shooter but she passes the ball well too," said O'Brien. "Her ability to step away from the basket helps because it allows Octavia (Thomas) to post up."

Thomas, an Arts and Sciences major from Newark, N.J., is the Minutewomen's best athlete according to O'Brien. At 5-foot-8, many people might think she's primarily a perimeter player, but (as shown by her 15.3 rebounds/game during her senior year) she plays a lot bigger than that.

"It's going to take a strong person to cover Octavia," said O'Brien. "She's a very effective player on the blocks who is also a good ball handler — you may see her bring the ball up sometimes when we're pressed.

"The (full-court) press hurt us last year but I'm not so sure it will this season because of our ball-handling ability."

A few other freshmen will also play a big part in the UMass game plan this season. Kim Gregory, 5-foot-8 guard from East Orange, NJ, will be fighting for starting time at off-guard with 5-foot-9 junior guard Maleeka Valentine. Gregory, who finished with 1,244 total career points at Clifford Scott High School, is a smooth player with a consistent jump shot. Valentine was last year's top defender with 31 steals and will be counted on for some quality minutes this season, either at off-guard or the small forward spot.

"The great thing about this year's team is that nobody cares whether they start or not," said O'Brien. "They only care about winning."

Battling for a spot at point guard will be

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 11

Women recruit four

Signees could make impact next year

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

This year the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team is going to heavily rely on the play of four highly recruited freshmen. Next year, the same exact thing could be said for coach Joanie O'Brien and her staff.

O'Brien has gotten early signing announcements from four top recruits for next year to go along with this year's bumper crop of freshmen.

The four recruits are: Crystal Carroll, Alkanease Garrett, Beth Kezmeski, and Sebryia Mitchell.

Carroll is a 6'2" power forward from Waterelite New York, right outside of Albany. O'Brien knows what to expect from Carroll, a preseason honorable mention All-American in Street & Smith magazine.

"She is strong in the post, and a very good rebounder," O'Brien said. "Crystal can also step out and face up to the basket."

Garrett, from Atlantic City, New Jersey is another strong frontcourt player who garnered All-American honorable mention in Street & Smith. With Garrett now in the fold for the Minutewomen, there are now two big-time recruits from Atlantic City in UMass folklore, Garrett and current UMass men's power forward Lou Roe.

O'Brien said she is ecstatic about getting Garrett in Amherst.

"She is an incredible athlete and a very strong rebounder," she said. "Lou had many positive things to say to her (about UMass), and we are very excited about getting her here."

Kezmeski, a guard, comes from nearby Northampton, giving her the chance to become the local girl who makes good. O'Brien said she likes Kezmeski's shooting ability and her toughness.

"Beth is a great shooter and a great competitor," O'Brien said. "You can knock her down once, but not any more. She will get great support from the local fans."

Mitchell is a 5'3" point guard from Newark, New Jersey. Garrett is not the only one who has ties to UMass, as Mitchell has played on the same AAU team as current Minutewomen freshmen Kim Gregory and Octavia Thomas.

O'Brien is impressed with Mitchell's unselfish play and her court speed.

"She (Mitchell) has more assists in high school than she does points, she just loves to pass the ball," she said. "Sebryia has some major quickness."

With four outstanding recruits for this year, and four now coming in next year, O'Brien and her staff (especially assistant Jill Rooney) have done an outstanding job in assembling talent for the forthcoming years at UMass.

Barbee wants to lead team to NCAAs

By TED KOTTLER
Collegian Staff

We all know the refrain, "five golden rings" from the Twelve Days of Christmas. And even if you lose three of them, you're still happy to have the other two.

University of Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari had a ring on each finger last season when he returned five starters, each of whom had a golden season. But three are gone: all-time leading scorer Jim McCoy, jumpin'-out-of-the-gym Will Herndon, and I'm-there-when-you-need-me Anton Brown.

But Calipari is holding on to Atlantic 10 Player of the Year Harper Williams, and ombudsman Tony Barbee. The standard line on the 6-6 senior from Indianapolis is he's not great at anything, but pretty good at everything. Calipari couldn't agree more.

"[Barbee] has been our most well-rounded player in the last three years," he said. "He can dribble, he can pass, he can defend, he can shoot, he's our best all-around player."

Though No. 22's production dropped a bit last season from his sophomore campaign, his numbers support his coach's sentiments. He averaged 12.1 points, 5.1 rebounds, 2.5 assists, and 1.1 steals per game. And while that scoring average is more than three points down from 1990-91 and his field goal percentage slipped from .450 to .426, Calipari warns that Barbee shouldn't take the floor with the sole objective of posting the biggest offensive totals of his career.

"Don't try to do too much offensively," was Calipari's warning to Barbee that he told a flock of reporters. "Don't come out and say, 'I gotta score 25 a game.' If either [Harper Williams or Barbee] does that, we're in trouble, because the key to our team is balance."

But there's no denying that Barbee will have to do more in other departments to compensate for UMass' losses. Such as?

"Try to do way too much rebounding the ball and way too much defensively," Calipari offered as his words of wisdom to the veteran who hit the first of the two great three-pointers in UMass history, the buzzer beater to tie Siena in the 1991 NIT quarterfinals and send the eventual UMass victory to overtime. Williams, of course, hit the other.

Indeed, Barbee owns a valuable defensive versatility that Calipari recognizes.

"He's tough enough to guard a quick small forward and he's tough enough to guard a big guy inside," Calipari reasoned. So, Barbee can expect to see his fair share of assignments to A-10 (or is it 8?) all-stars, such as Temple's Aaron McKie and West Virginia's Ricky Robinson.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

Senior Tony Barbee is the key to the UMass frontcourt.

But the question Barbee will field most this season will be can he assume the vaunted position of leadership. It's hard for anyone to accurately provide this job's description, but it's the most desirable for coaches to fulfill of the so-called intangibles. Barbee feels keeping his cool makes him a natural for the role.

"People see me on the floor and they see the control that I contribute to my game," Barbee said. "And that I can control the team and make everybody around me better, so I think I'm just going to continue to do that."

Crowds at the Cage and Mullins Arena will be immeasurably out of control, but it appears if Barbee is running the floor, the team usually won't.

■ memories

continued from page 3

rumble, and when the night was over, UMass was on the losing end of a 76-75 score. The loss was huge not only because it knocked the Minutemen out of the national rankings, but because it also gave UMass an 0-2 record in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

"The West Virginia game taught us a lesson," said assistant coach Bill Bayno. "It taught us that if we didn't play the way we were capable of playing, then we were still vulnerable."

A 84-82 close shave at Boston University started Massachusetts on a five-game winning streak.

Temple ended UMass' run, rudely dismissing the Minutemen, who shot a horrendous 33 percent from the field. A 83-61 loss was UMass' largest, and last regular season defeat.

Three A-10 wins against Rutgers (77-66), St. Bonaventure (76-58), and St. Joseph's (81-73) set the Minutemen at 19-4, and poised them for national stature, if they could just beat Temple.

Jim McCoy (18 points), Harper Williams (15 points, nine rebounds), and Anton Brown (10 points, seven assists) all scored in double figures as Massachusetts, giving one of their best team efforts of the year, defeated the Owls 67-52. The win over Temple was the first in 21 tries for UMass.

The Minutemen battled on, defeating Rutgers (81-67) and St. Bonaventure (104-67) again to move up in the A-10 standings and improve their record to 22-4, but in order to win the A-10 title, they had to win in West Virginia.

It took an extra five minutes and a Herculean effort from Jim McCoy (season high 31 points), whose hit two clutch free throws with a minute left to give UMass the lead for good. The 74-69 win gave UMass the lead in the A-10, and they clinched the A-10 regular season title two nights later with an easy 82-61 victory over Duquesne.

The Minutemen downed Rhode Island 96-88 to end the regular season on a nine-game winning streak. UMass then defeated Rutgers 106-94 in the A-10 quarters and Rhode Island (78-67) in the semifinals. The win meant for the first time ever the A-10 Championship would be held in the Cage.

UMass squared off against West Virginia with an automatic berth in the NCAA Tournament at stake, and the home Cage advantage almost wasn't fair. UMass exploded out to a 34-9 lead, and the game was for all intents and purposes over. UMass led 52-28 at the half, and the 97-91 final was very deceiving. The Minutemen celebrated their NCAA berth and 28-4 record, and the only question would be what seed the Minutemen received.

UMass was seeded third for the NCAA tourney. To those who had followed the Minutemen throughout the season, it was no surprise. The team proved itself by beating Fordham 85-58 in their first round game at Worcester, a game televised on CBS. The win set up a matchup with Big East Champ Syracuse, with the winner heading to the Sweet Sixteen.

With under a minute left in OT, Harper Williams hit a miraculous fallaway three-pointer as the UMass shot clock wound down, giving UMass an insurmountable 75-71 lead against the Orangemen. The Minutemen defeated Syracuse 77-71 for their 30th victory of the year, and, more importantly, gained a rematch with Kentucky in the Sweet Sixteen.

UMass rebounded from a horrible first twelve minutes against the Wildcats and closed the gap when Jim McCoy's 70-foot prayer before halftime was answered, closing Kentucky's lead to 50-42.

The Minutemen came out much more determined in the second half, closing the Kentucky lead to two with 6:17 remaining. And then, it happened.

Referee Lenny Wirtz slapped John Calipari with a technical for leaving the coaches bench, and UMass' momentum was killed. Kentucky responded with a 9-2 run to seal things and came away with a 87-77 victory.

"It was disappointing to see it end that way, but there's nothing I can do to take it back," said Calipari. "If I had to do it over again, I would be a little less emotional."

Emotion was what fed the Minutemen throughout the year, and although the team finished on a sour note, the 30-5 record will be the program's best ever . . . unless this year's squad can top it.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 10

last years starter, 5-foot-2 Laurie Dondarski and 5-foot-6 freshman Tricia Hopson. Dondarski, from Belleville NJ, immediatly became a team leader last year by showing a never-say-die attitude and a contagious work ethic. Hopson, from Ocean City NJ, is a great playmaker who will fit very nicely into the Minutewomen's running game.

"What's good about having so many good players is that we can substitute at ay time," said O'Brien, who will go with a seven-player rotation. "Last year we just ran ourselves into the wall because we didn't have the luxury of being able to substitute."

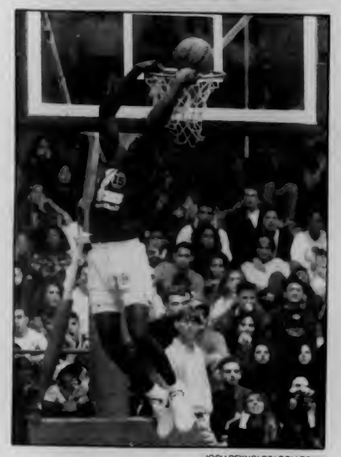
Kim Kristofik, a 6-foot-1 senior forward from Morris, NY, will return as a starter at power forward and be counted on to provide some timely offense for UMass. One advantage to Kristofik is the presence of Gurile, who will share some of the scoring and rebounding burden with Kristofik.

Overall, O'Brien feels confident about this years team.

"Last year, we were in a lot of games most of the way but with about 12 minutes left in the second half, we'd die," she said. "This year, I know we'll compete in every game."

UMass basketball

UMass forwards one of nation's top frontcourts



JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen hope Lou Roe, shown dunking against Latvia, can follow up a fabulous freshman year with a sensational sophomore campaign.

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Sixth in the country?!? Ahead of Seton Hall?!?

According to Dick Vitale's Basketball Annual, that is where the forwards of the University of Massachusetts baasketball team stack up. Head coach John Calipari, for one, is sick of the hype that his forwards and his team is getting.

"If there's a more overrated team in the country, I'd like to see them," Calipari said. "I'm worried about a lot of things, including Harper Williams."

While the forward line of Williams, Tony Barbee and Lou Roe may be good, predictions of national supremacy at the baseline are a little premature. Maybe.

"Our forwards complement each other very well. I believe that our frontcourt can play with anybody in the country," said assistant coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "Tony's the heady guy, Lou's the athlete, and Harper, he's the warrior."

As none of the forwards measure taller than 6-foot-7, the Minutemen are undersized in a big way. But what the forwards lack in height they make up with other attributes, namely intensity.

No Minuteman exemplifies the word intese more than Williams, the 6-foot-7 senior from Bridgeport, Connecticut. Williams has mixed intensity with skill, and the results have been very positive. He won the Atlantic 10 Player of the Year last season by averaging 13.9 points and 7.5 rebounds, and will try to make it two in a row this year. Calipari said he thinks Williams' success is more due to his inner fire than his ability.

"If you take away Harper's intensity, you have a very average basketball player," he said. "What worries me is he seems to be missing that intensity that made him so good last year."

Williams has traditionally been the player on the court who gets his teammates charged up, whether it be through his trademark glare or a thundering dunk.

Two years ago as a sophomore, Williams averaged 13.9 ppg and came on strong towards the end of the year. He shutdown former Stanford player and NBAer Adam Keefe in the Final Four of the NIT in 1991, despite giving away five inches in height. Assistant coach John Robic said that Harper's lack of size doesn't hurt him.

"Harper's strength is his ability to constantly play hard," he said. "He's not tall, but he compensates by having long arms, and he always works harder than his opponent."

Williams is verstile; as anyone who saw last season's NCAA second round game against Syracuse can attest to, he has a potent outside shot. Williams' three-pointer in the final minute of overtime was the big blow that pushed UMass past the Orangemen and into the Sweet Sixteen.

Turn to FRONT COURTS, page 13

Sophomores lead backcourt

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

In the sport of basketball, teams have to replace key players year after year. The Boston Celtics need to replace Larry Bird, the Los Angeles Lakers need to replace Magic Johnson, and at some point, the Chicago Bulls will have to replace Michael Jordan. These players mean the franchise to their respective clubs.

Similarly, the University of Massachusetts' men's basketball team must replace the guard tandem of Jim McCoy and Anton Brown. Because his team lost these two starters, head coach John Calipari will look to a triumvirate of sophomores plus one junior to fill the void in the backcourt.

Derek Kellogg, Jerome Malloy, and Mike Williams along with Chris Robinson, respectively, should receive sufficient playing time, each trying to contribute what they can to this year's hoop squad.

Kellogg, who received minutes as a backup to Brown last season, won the starting job as point guard to begin the 1992-93 quest for Calipari. He has shown the ability to create big plays on defense with his hustle and scrappy play.

According to assistant coach James "Bruiser" Flint, who specializes in working with the backcourt, Kellogg and Williams face the same challenges in trying to play the point.

"If you are a point guard, you have to direct the team, and tell other players where to be. Sometimes, a young guy is not used to the situation, and all the guys have to learn to settle down if we are going to be successful," said Flint.

Turn to BACK COURT, page 9

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Derek Kellogg from Springfield will provide leadership for the Minutemen as the starting point guard this season.

THE LAUNDRY CLUB

The Most Fun You Can Have in a Laundromat!

8 am-11 pm • 7 days

- Coin Operated Washers and Dryers
- State of the Art Machines
- Snack Bar
- Big Screen T.V.
- Pool Table and Video Games
- Senior Citizen Discount

COUPON

$1.00 OFF any size washer
Limit 1 coupon per customer
Coupon Expires 1/15/93

$3.00 OFF DRY CLEANING ($10 or more)
Limit 1 coupon per customer
Coupon Expires 1/15/93

Dry Cleaning

6 University Drive • New Market Center • Next To Victory Supermarket & Scott's Liquors • Amherst • (413) 549-2640

TONIGHT at the Top of the Campus
Sports Bar & Lounge
UMASS vs. Florida State
Monday-Saturday
2:00PM-12:30AM
Munchies Available until 11:00PM
Positive I.D. Required

Calipari the master rebuilder

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian Correspondent

When John Calipari was appointed as head coach of the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team, his goal was simple: to "create a love affair between the University community and our basketball program."

In his second season, Calipari led the Minutemen to the N.I.T. The next season, UMass reached the Final Four of the 1990-1991 N.I.T. tournament. Last year, UMass made it to the Sweet Sixteen of the N.C.A.A. tournament with a record of 30-5.

It is safe to say that now, after just four years as head coach at UMass, the love affair is there. He has guided this program out of mild obscurity and into the college basketball limelight in a short period of time.

Calipari is no longer a unrecognized coach of an unknown team in an unexposed conference. He has turned into a celebrity, a cult hero in Amherst, and has transformed his team into an NCAA tournament contender.

He could have left. After the magical 1991-1992 season, Calipari's name was at the top of everyone's list of coaching vacancies. St. John's. Villanova. Wisconsin.

This happens year after year, where a Cinderella team advances into the NCAA tournament, and the coach responsible for it is wanted by every team that lacks a leader.

John Calipari, though, did something different than the other coaches in this situation. He stayed. The Big East called, as did the Big Ten, and yet, Calipari stayed put.

"I am very happy." said Calipari. "I have as much of a sense of security as you can have coaching here at UMass. I feel like the school wanted me to be their coach; we have a new building (9,296 seat Mullins Convocation Center), new players, and more exposure on TV. I like it here. I've said that for the last four years. This is where I want to coach right now."

As some reepected Calipari's loyalty to UMass, others speculated that he should have made the move. Exposure-wise, the Big East and Big Ten are far more superior than the Atlantic 10 conference.

However by beating Syracuse in the NCAA Tournament last season, the UMass TV stock has risen, and the recruiting trail has become hotter. UMass will be on National television at least six times this season, on both ESPN and ABC.

This TV exposure, added to Calipari's outstanding recruiting skills, brought in 6-foot-6 blue chip forwards Donta Bright and Dana Dingle. Everything is looking up for UMass, and Calipari is pleased.

Calipari felt as if the school wanted him to be their coach? A bit of a understatement.

Who wouldn't want the coach who guided the Minutemen to their best season in the University's history? The 30 wins, the A-10 regular season as well as tournament championship, the trip to the NCAA tournament were all firsts at UMass. They had the talent; all they needed was the motivation — enter one John Calipari.

This team could score points, but their key attribute was their defense. Full penetration of the full 94 feet.

"Everybody looked at Will Herndon's dunks, Harper Williams' scores, Jimmy McCoy's fadeaways, Anton Brown's three-pointers, and Tony Barbee's all-around play," Calipari said. "But the key was we were a GREAT defensive team. We had a great margin of scoring because we beat teams by 12 points a game because we could stop them."

It would be unfair, though, to compare this year's team to last year's. Yet, Calipari uses the 1991-1992 team as an example of how the 1992-1993 team should play.

"I think we have to come together as far as team chemistry," Calipari said. "Then we've got to have some players step up who are coming off the bench so we can have better depth than we have right now. But it is all based on us defending the we did last year.

"[Last year] we played harder than anyone we played. This year, if we just go play basketball, we're going to go .500. If we go and play hard, hey, we have a chance at winning some games."

John Calipari has passed his first test. His team has hit the big time. Now, his second test is waiting to be passed, that being to keep the Minutemen consistently near the top for the years to come.

He is the ideal coach to do so. He is young (33 years-old), he's a great recruiter, his style of play is upbeat and exciting (pressuring opponents the full 40 minutes of the game), and he wins games (77 in his first four years).

His record speaks for itself, with improvement shown each year. This year will probably be the toughest one of his career thus far. After looking at his past credentials, it seems likely John Calipari will be able to handle it with ease.

■ front courts

continued from page 12

One of the main reasons the Minutemen made it to the Sweet Sixteen was the unselfish play of Tony Barbee. Barbee, a 6-foot-6 senior from Indianapolis, Indiana gave up his scoring last season and focused on becoming a defensive stalwart.

"Tony is by far the most underrated player in the league," said Robic. "He gave up so much of his game last year, this year we're expecting him to be one of the leaders."

What makes Barbee so deadly is his ability to score anywhere from the 3-point stripe in. Calipari has said many a time that Barbee "is our best all-around player."

Roe is the newcomer of the triumvirate. He replaces Will Herndon as the starter, and while many will always remember the legacy of Herndon, Roe wants to start his own legacy in Amherst.

"I've set two goals for this season," Roe said. "I want to lead the conference in rebounding, and I want to be among the top 10 in the country. I think I can reach both of these goals.

"Rebounding is the key for us right now," he said. "We play well with each other, a lot of teams have centers, but we make up for that with our quickness and by using our heads."

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

While only a sophomore, Lou Roe has already made a name for himself in the Atlantic 10 Conference and at Midnight Madness (above). Roe pledges to be among the top 10 in the country rebounding this season.

■ freshmen

continued from page 14

said. "He has got an individual workout program, that (his conditioning) has got to come from him.

"He has got great skills, he can score in the post, outside, and is great in transition," Bayno said. "It will be tough for him, sitting out a year, but depending on how he works out now and over the summer, he controls his own destiny."

If you ask Dingle about the prospects of eventually playing with Bright, you will likely see a smile develop on his face.

"Donta and I are roommates and we've become good friends," Dingle said. "It will be fun to play with him. For the future I try to set the highest goals, and with time and effort, anything can be accomplished."

The fact that the two freshmen are separated on the court for now will eventually change. While that changes, the good fortune of UMass basketball will probably stay the same.

UMass basketball

Market your business to 19,000 UMASS BASKETBALL FANS!

UMASS
University of Massachusetts
Women's Basketball

The most comprehensive daily coverage of UMass sports in the Pioneer Valley.

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING 545-3500

Talk to an Advertising Representative today!

■ A 10

continued from page 7

break with authority.

"We don't have a true center, we just have forwards," Calipari said. "Our front guys will have to carry us this year."

A trio of sophomores (Derek Kellogg, Jerome Malloy and Mike Williams) will grab most of the time in the backcourt. Kellogg will start at the point, while Malloy will audition for Jim McCoy's old spot. Williams can sub into either position.

6-foot-6 freshman Dana Dingle and 6-foot-10 Kennard Robinson will need to perform off the bench.

Each Calipari-coached team has surpassed its expectations. If the bench performs this year could be another "sweet" one for UMass.

TEMPLE— As long as John Chaney is running the show, do not ever count Temple out of the A-10 race.

Temple returns enough experience and talent to beat any team in the country on a given night.

Chaney has put together a nice blend of senior leadership and young talent. Floor general Vic Carstarphen, a steady ball handler and senior center Frazier Johnson, a 6-foot-9 powerhouse provide the experience.

Junior guard Aaron McKie, one of the league's best pure scorers, sophomore Rick Brunson, a former McDonald's All-American and a good crop of freshman will provide the young talent.

William Cunningham is the top freshman signee. The 6-foot-11 center could impact immediately but will not play until he is cleared of carjacking charges.

Despite a brutal non-conference schedule (Cincinnati, Florida State, Boston College, Wake Forest, Memphis State, Tulane and Florida) Temple should make its ninth NCAA appearance in eleven years.

WEST VIRGINA — The loss of reserve big men Wilfred Kirkaldy and Lawerence Pollard (who were injured in a car accident last Easter) for the season will not hamper the Mountaineers quest for a second straight NCAA trip.

West Virginia, which finished second in the A-10 last season, returns four starters, including 6-foot-8 forward Ricky Robinson, a first team All-Conference selection a year ago.

Robinson, who averaged 13.9 points and 7.2 boards a game last season, is a forceful widebody in the paint. Toss in 5-foot-8 junior point guard Marsalis Basey and junior forward Pervires Greene and coach Gale Catlett has some firepower to throw around.

RHODE ISLAND — The Rams were the surprise of the league last season, running up a 22-10 record and advancing deep into the NIT, with a victory at Boston College.

"The postseason play brought about some respect for us," URI coach Al Skinner said. "We want to build on that this year."

Skinner should continue to build as he returns nine of his top ten players.

Forward Mike Brown (10.9 ppg. 6.5 rbg.), a 6-foot-7 banger, will need to play big underneath to offset the loss of team leader Jeff Kent.

Skinner's team will once again play tough defensively, make few mistakes and surprise a lot of teams.

RUTGERS— Senior forward Steve Worthy can light it up (18.8 ppg.) but Rutgers does not have the defense to capture the league title.

Guard Mike Jones and forward Jamal Philips will also produce offensively on a team which can run with anyone.

Junior college transfer Anthony Stewart, a 6-foot-9 center, could provide help defensively and on the boards. It will take Stewart, or someone else, to provide the defense in the middle before Rutgers can thrive.

Early season dates with Duke and Kentucky highlight a difficult non-conference schedule.

ST. JOSEPH'S — "Guardedly optimistic" is how St. Joe's coach John Griffin describes his outlook for the Hawks. Namely because of star guards Bernard Blunt and Rap Curry.

Blunt pumped in 19.7 points and grabbed 7 bounds a game last season and Curry added 12.7 point before being injured in mid-season.

If the two-some can stay healthy and get some frontcourt help, the Hawks could cause some problems in the A-10.

ST. BONAVENTURE — New Bonnies' coach Jim Baron, who arrived from St. Francis (PA) has his work cut out from him.

The Bonnies have one great player, Harry Moore, but little else. It should be a long winter in Saint Bonaventure, New York.

Bright and Dingle hope to lead new generation

BY JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

To play the University of Massachusetts style of basketball, one has to be athletic. One has to be able to defend and run the floor with sustained intensity for 40 minutes.

In freshmen Dana Dingle and Donta Bright, UMass head coach John Calipari has exactly the type of athlete he needs to continue the success of Minutemen basketball.

Dingle and Bright represent another recruiting coup for Calipari and his staff. Dingle is expected to make some immediate impact, coming off the bench at both small forward and shooting guard. Bright, meanwhile, ineligible due to Proposition 42, is expected to work out on his own and prepare for the years ahead.

Dingle, listed at 6-foot-6, 200 lbs., went to high school at Bronx St. Raymond's. Considered a late bloomer, Dingle's first love was not basketball, but baseball.

"This is my fifth year of basketball, I used to be a big baseball player. That was my game," Dingle said. "I got tired of it (baseball), basketball is more exciting."

In high school, Dingle's skills on the basketball court did not really begin to shine until his junior year at St. Raymond's. It was Dingle's senior year, though, in which he really exploded onto the scene, and into the eyes of many college scouts. For St. Raymond's, which went 20-5 and was ranked in USA Today's Top 25 for most of the season, Dingle averaged a double-double with 19.2 points and 10.0 rebounds a game.

For Dingle there were many factors which led to his arrival on the UMass campus.

"The reasons I came to UMass were the players, the coaches, and the UMass style of play," he said. "The way we play here is great, Coach Calipari knows how to get the most out of you."

Dingle feels his strengths make him comfortable playing at both the small forward and shooting guards slots.

"I think that versatility is one of my strengths," Dingle said. "I can go to the basket, and play decent defense."

"I'll probably be playing about 50/50 (at small forward and shooting guard)," he said. "It really isn't a big adjustment."

The coaching staff at UMass is expecting good things from Dingle.

"Dana is 6-foot-6, athletic, has pretty good skills and really has a nose for the ball," he said. "Right now, though, Dana is just learning how to play UMass basketball.

"I hope Dana get's to play a lot in our rotation, having a strong rotation is important," Calipari said. "He'll probably be backing up Tony (Barbee) at the three (small forward).

Assistant coach John Robic said he is pleased with Dingle's play thus far (in practices and exhibition versus Latvia).

"[Dingle] really surprised me in the exhibition game, he struggled a bit at first, but came on strong," Robic said. "He is fighting for time right now, he just has to be patient."

As far as school work goes, Dingle has hit the books hard and has worked diligently.

"I'm doing fine in my school work," Dingle said. "As long as I work hard, I'll do fine."

Dingle is anxiously awaiting his future here at UMass.

"I'm excited about playing, we're looking to go as far as we can," he said. "I did okay in the exhibition, I can do better if I keep working hard."

When Dingle makes his actual college debut tonight against Florida State, he'll be playing against someone he knows well.

"Doug Edwards (a starting forward for the Seminoles) is my first cousin," Dingle said. "He has been calling me here, talking a lot of junk."

Donta Bright travelled the opposite road of Dingle. Bright was not a late bloomer, he did not sneak up on anybody. Instead Bright exploded onto the scene his sophomore year at famed Dunbar High, where he was the first sophomore to ever be named the Baltimore Sun Player of the Year.

Bright, another 6-foot-6 swingman, followed up his sophomore with two more stirring seasons at Dunbar. In his junior year, Bright was the leading scorer in the prestigious Nike/ABCD Camp. Bright had another great year as a senior, he helped lead Dunbar to the mythical High School National Championship, and was an All-American in virtually every respected basketball publication.

Big-time colleges went after Bright, who ended up cutting his list down to two, UMass and Ohio State. The blue-chipper ended up on deciding on UMass, and Calipari knows the profound effect Bright's signing will have on Minuteman basketball.

"Anytime you bring in a blue chip player like Donta, it has to help," Calipari said. "Players like Donta help in bringing in others (big recruits)."

UMass fans will have to wait one year before seeing Bright on the court. Because Bright did not score 700 on his SATs, he is ineligible due to Prop. 42.

For this season Bright will have to patient and prepare for next season on his own.

"Right now Donta is doing some weight training and working on his game by himself," Calipari said. "Donta is getting himself acclimated to the school academically."

Assistant coach Robic said he likes the way Bright is handling the situation and is patiently waiting for the time Bright can step on the court in a UMass uniform.

"This (not being able to play) is frustrating for Dana, but he is doing really well in handling it," Robic said. "I think Donta is doing a lot better job than I could do (in that situation).

"The crowd will love Donta," Robic said. "Donta is a slasher, he is very athletic."

Assistant coach Bill Bayno, who spearheads the UMass recruiting system, knows full well of Bright's ability.

"I expect big things from Donta," Bayno

Turn to FRESHMEN, page 13

UMASS BASKETBALL
EVERY DAY
IN
COLLEGIAN SPORTS

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"
$2.00 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
MSG
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00 pm
Friday - Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
FREE Delivery Service • BYOB
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)
Every Day 11:30-3:30
Sample our New Vegetarian Menu
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Wednesday Night is GUEST BARTENDER NIGHT
At Mike's
Free T-Shirts & Prizes
This Week's guest bartenders are:
Bill Durkin and Tom Fasano
PRIZES
• $25.00 Gift Certificate to Mike's •
• 2-Week membership to THE GYM •
• Mike's Original T-Shirt •
Drawing is Wednesday Night • Must be present to win but put your name in any time!
Drink Special
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT - $3.00 Pitcher
ALL YOU CAN EAT SUNDAY BRUNCH
11:30 - 2:30 • $3.75
Eggs Benedict • Scrambled Eggss • Roast Beef • Assorted Muffins & Breads
Sausage • Chicken & Rice • Bacon • Beef Stroganoff • French Toast
Drink Special
VODKA TONICS
Always Something For Everyone!
Drink Special
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT

LONG RADIO
MOBILE ELECTRONIC SPECIALISTS
ALPINE • PIONEER • PREMIER • BELL • METROMOBILE
259 Federal Street
Greenfield, MA 01301
30 Russell Street
Hadley, MA 01035

1992-93 MINUTEMEN BASKETBALL TEAM ROSTER

31	Harper Williams	6'7"	F	SR
22	Tony Barbee	6'6"	F	SR
15	Lou Roe	6'7"	F	SO
24	Jerome Malloy	6'4"	G	SO
10	Mike Williams	6'2"	G	SO
12	Chris Robinson	6'2"	G	JR
42	Kennard Robinson	6'10"	C	SR
14	Derek Kellogg	6'3"	G	SO
33	Jeff Meyer	7'2"	C	SO
40	Ted Cottrell	6'9"	F	FR
3	Dana Dingle	6'6"	F	FR
23	Rigoberto Nunez	6'7"	F	SO
11	Craig Berry	6'1"	G	JR

Tony Barbee
1,224 career points
40 3-pointers in 1991-92
12.9 points per game
career avg.

Harper Williams
Atlantic 10 Player of the Year
13.9 points, 7.5 rebounds per game last season
176 career blocks

COME CLEAN...IN COMFORT
$1.25 per washload
Sit back, relax & enjoy cofee... soda...snacks... and TV...while you do your laundry!
OPEN 24 HOURS A DAY • 7 DAYS A WEEK
SPEEDWASH
11 Pray St. • Amherst
549-1665
South Town Commons LAUNDROMAT
OPEN 7am-10pm 7 DAYS A WEEK
479 West St. • SOUTH AMHERST

Going To Law School, Business School or Grad School
Make Sure You Get Accepted:
SCORE YOUR BEST!

Think of it as CROSS-TRAINING
for the Mind.
At Kaplan, we integrate more different learning approaches than any other program:
•Expert Instructors
•Smaller, Interactive Classes
•Individual Tutoring Sessions
•Computer Evaluated Diagnostic Testing
Exclusive TEST-N-TAPE® Lab•
Comprehensive Home Study Notes•
Open Days, Evenings, and Weekends•
TEST YOUR BEST GUARANTEE•
LSAT MCAT GRE GMAT
For More Information: 549-5780

Follow the Minutemen...
The Collegian is your best source for daily coverage of UMass Sports.
For subscription information contact the Subscriptions Manager at 545-3500 • 113 Campus Center • UMass
Read about Coach Calipari and the Minutemen every day on the Collegian Sports Page!

CAFE DICARLO
The Ultimate in Casual Italian Dining
Good luck to the UMass Minutemen in the upcoming season!
Open daily at 11:30 AM
Reservations welcomed
Free customer parking
71 North Pleasant Street
Downtown Amherst
253-9300

DiGeronimo Brothers
VICTORY
Super Markets
10 University Drive, Amherst (formerly Louis' Foods)

Convenient Hours in Amherst:
Monday - Friday 8AM to 9PM
Saturday 7AM to 9PM
OPEN Sundays 9AM to 8PM

BEST OF LUCK
UMASS MINUTEMEN...HAVE ANOTHER SUPER YEAR!

THESE COUPONS GOOD THRU FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4TH, 1992.

VICTORY COUPON
Oscar Mayer Meat Bologna
12 Oz. Pkg.
SAVE $4.98
BUY 1...Get 2... FREE
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Dec. 4, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED.

VICTORY COUPON
Wampler Longacre Turkey Franks
1 Lb. Pkg.
SAVE $2.58
BUY 1...Get 2... FREE
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Dec. 4, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED.

VICTORY COUPON
Mellow Crisp Sliced Bacon
1 Lb. Pkg. From Oscar Mayer
SAVE $4.58
BUY 1...Get 2... FREE
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Dec. 4, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED.

VICTORY COUPON PLU 901
Victory English Muffins
6 Pack For 2 50¢
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Dec. 4, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED.

VICTORY COUPON PLU 902
Florida...Pink or White Grapefruit
40 Count 4 For $1
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Dec. 4, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED.

VICTORY COUPON PLU 903
Franklin Springs Spring Water
Gallon Jug For 2 50¢
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a purchase of $10 or more not including price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Dec. 4, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED.

Look For Our Large 12-Page Pre-Holiday Circular This Weekend.

NOW RENTING FOR THE SECOND SEMESTER

Don't live in the dorms paying 1800^{00} room and board for the second semester

You can live in beautiful

SQUIRE VILLAGE

at an average of $235/Month (room, board, utilities)

We have large 1 bedroom apartments (1000 sq. ft.)
large 2 bedroom apartments (1200 sq. ft.)
large 5 bedroom apartments (ONLY 1 LEFT!)

ALL APARTMENTS FULLY APPLIANCED WITH:
• Kitchen with dishwasher • Wall-to-wall carpeting •
• Air Conditioning • Laundry facilities •
• Swimming pool • On UMass bus route •

Don't Delay! Call
SQUIRE VILLAGE APARTMENTS
ROUTE 116 • 665-2203

Wednesday December 2, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 56

Semi-sunny today and mañana. Rain or snow or sleet tonight.

Local News:
UMass Police officers get some new wheels and learn what it's like to get around campus on a bicycle, and the horses don't really mind at all. Page 3.

Sports:
UMass Minutemen basketball team will face Florida State University tonight and you can see it on ESPN at 7:30 p.m. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU, BABE! -- The Student Union Ballroom has exactly the kind of coffee mugs every UMass student needs to get them through finals week.

More military aid may come to Africa

by THOMAS WAGNER
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Relief officials on Tuesday urged the United Nations to quickly authorize more military muscle to guarantee that aid reaches hundreds of thousands of starving Somalis.

As the U.N. Security Council debated whether to take up a U.S. offer of a force of 30,000 to deliver the food, some of the officials worried that an influx of foreign troops could spark retaliation against foreigners.

"This is a very complex society with very tough, proud people divided into competitive clans," said Brigitte Doppler of Doctors Without Borders. "None of the relief agencies know how their programs will work under military mobilization."

Without security, said Per Hammerstedt of U.N. Operation Somalia, the relief operation is pointless.

"Why should we stay here when the food is looted and we can't even bring it out of the harbor?" he said.

In London, Nicholas Hinton, director general of the relief agency Save The Children, said any U.N. military operation in Somalia must be part of a five-year international commitment to rebuild the shattered African nation.

Hinton said a suggestion that soldiers "can somehow simply go in, clean up and get out in two weeks is ridiculous."

By U.N. estimates, at least 300,000 people have died from the combined effects of drought and warfare this year and another 2 million are threatened.

As much as half the 200,000 metric tons of food delivered to the Horn of Africa nation have been stolen by bandits. At least 12,000 metric tons are stored at port warehouses but cannot be delivered because of banditry in the area.

Rival clans responsible for much of the looting have crippled a U.N. plan to dispatch 4,200 peacekeepers to get aid to Somalia's hungry. Only about 500 U.N. troops have been deployed and they have only taken control of Mogadishu's airport.

On Monday, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali recommended using military force to guarantee food deliveries, in what would be the first full-scale armed U.N. intervention to support humanitarian activities.

In Washington on Tuesday, House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., told reporters the United States is very close to sending ground troops into Somalia.

"I think the circumstances warrant it," Foley said. "Only a military intervention can guarantee the opportunity for relief for those starving.

One of Somalia's main warlords, the mercurial Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, on Sunday organized a pro-American parade of children to show his willingness to accept U.S. troops.

"Without a clear understanding between the international community and the Somalis of what the problem is and how to solve it, the famine and the fighting will continue," said Mohamed Awale, Aidid's assistant.

Bosnia airlift suspended due to fire on plane

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovnia — The humanitarian airlift to Bosnia was suspended Tuesday after small-arms fire struck part of the steering system of a U.S. Air Force transport plane on its landing approach to Sarajevo.

Bosnia's president urged "decisive stands" by Islamic states to aid his country.

The C-130 Hercules that was shot in the rudder while approaching the Bosnian capital was able to land safely, unload its relief supplies and return to Zagreb, Croatia, said Peter Kessler, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

Kessler said the airlift to the Bosnian capital was likely to remain suspended at least through Wednesday while U.N. liaison officers investigate the source of the shooting.

Twenty flights carrying food, medicine and other relief supplies were scheduled to land Tuesday in Sarajevo, but only 10 arrived before the airlift was suspended.

Earlier, Bosnia's army command had accused the Serbs of shelling the airport runway overnight "with the intention of destroying the radar system and thus stopping the humanitarian flights."

More than 17,000 people have been killed in the fighting, the Bosnian Health Ministry reported Monday.

Bosnia's Muslim President, Alija Izetbegovic, appealed for Islamic solidarity and action at a conference of the 47-member Organization of Islamic Conference in Saudi Arabia.

"International resolutions have remained empty words and the time has come for decisive stands," Izetbegovic told foreign ministers in Jiddah.

Saudi Arabia's King Fahd called for an end to the U.N. arms embargo on Bosnia that has crippled Sarajevo's defenders.

The Bosnian army commander said in a newspaper

Turn to AIRLIFT, page 4

Going beyond the classroom

Psychology students volunteering for the elderly

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

Several residents at a local nursing home are enjoying and benefiting from the relationships they have established with a dedicated volunteer group from a University of Massachusetts psychology class.

"The students increase the residents self-esteem because they make the them feel valuable and wanted in a society where they sometimes feel they are a burden to their families," said Susan Pratt-Tobin, the volunteer coordinator at the Amherst Nursing Home.

Professor Susan Whitborne, who teaches psychology of aging, said for the class project she gives students the option of volunteering because it gives them firsthand experience with older people.

"The academic material has more meaning and personal relevance to the students who volunteer," Whitborne said.

Jody Marrec, a junior communications disorders major, said by volunteering she learned that nursing homes are not the gloomy and dark places she expected.

"I like interacting with the older people and finding out about what their lives were like years ago. It gives me a good feeling," Wagner said.

Pratt-Tobin said when she takes students on tours she encourages them to observe as much as they can. "The nursing home may seem a little odd and weird at first, which is perfectly natural, but after the students confront these feelings they will have a more positive experience."

Whitborne said the 30 volunteer students have enhanced the lives of the residents because they have gone above and beyond the required minimum of three hours a week. She said some students have taken the residents to church, out to lunch or visited them in the hospital.

Turn to VOLUNTEER, page 4

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

Maurice Balicai and Rolland White (left and right), residents of the Amherst Nursing Home, visit with student volunteer Stephanie Smith, a senior French and psychology major (center).

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, December 2

Lecture — "Women in the Civil Rights Movement" will be presented by Judy Richardson, television producer and longtime civil rights worker. The event will take place at 8 p.m. in Campus Center Room 168c. This event is free and open to the public.

Meeting — An important general meeting for the Spectrum Magazine will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in room 163-173, Campus Center Basement.

Mini-Mall — A mini mall with lots of vendors and gift ideas will be held in the Student Union Ballroom from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The event is sponsored by UMass Hillel.

Music — Masterclass — Judith Kellock, soprano, will be performing at 3:30 p.m. in the UMass Fine Arts Center, room 44. The event is free.

Lecture — The "Speech as Special" Debate: Insights from Non-Human Primates — a colloquium with Marc Hauser, Biological Anthropology and Neuroscience Prog., Harvard will take place at 4 p.m. from Dec. 2-3 at UMass Morrill Science Center, South.

Lecture — "India's New Economic Policies: Panacea or Pandora's Box?" — with Praful Bidwai, Karl Loewenstein Fellow in Political Science and Jurisprudence will take place at 4 p.m. in AC Converse Assembly Room. The event is free.

Thursday, December 3

Meeting — The Campus Center/Student Union Board of Governors will hold its weekly meeting at 6 p.m. in C.C. room 805. The meeting is open to the public.

Mini Mall — the event continues.

Lecture — "The Prospects for International Peacekeeping for the 1990s and Beyond" will be discussed by retired Major General Indar Jit Rikhye, United States Institute for Peace, Washington, D.C. This is part of the Five College PAWSS fall lecture series and will be held in AC Converse Hall at 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Bankers, Bureaucrats, Blacks and Jews: the Myth of Changing Neighborhoods" with Hillel Levine, Sociology and Religion, Boston University. The event will be held at 8 p.m. in the SC Neilson Library Browsing Room.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• University police were called to the Fine Arts Center at 6:40 p.m. on Monday to assist a woman in a dispute with another woman. No charges were reported.

• A man reported the loss and possible theft of his passport to police on Monday. Police said the man was in Thompson Hall at approximately 7:30 p.m. when he reported the passport missing.

• The rear wheel and tire of a bicycle were reported stolen from a man's bicycle from Washington Tower on Monday, police said. The bike was reportedly locked to the bike rack in front of the dormitory at approximately 2 p.m. when the theft occurred, according to police.

• A woman in Northeast Residential Area reported a harassing phone call to police on Monday. The woman said she received a call from a man offering her money in exchange for answering personal questions about herself at approximately 3 p.m., according to police.

Rape crisis center refuses to hand over records

WORCESTER (AP) — A rape crisis center is defying a judge's order to turn over a victim's counseling records while pressing an appeal to bolster the privacy of such documents statewide.

Victims' advocates say the protection written into a 1986 state court ruling has been diluted by later decisions. They say Massachusetts courts are now victimizing rape victims anew and making some of them reluctant to report the crimes.

"Massachusetts is just such a glaring victim's hell hole," said Wendy Murphy, a Boston lawyer. "You have absolutely no privacy rights once you're a victim."

Murphy is representing the Rape Crisis Program of Worcester which is appealing a Nov. 23 contempt order by Gardner District Court Judge Austin Philbin. She hopes the state Supreme Judicial Court will agree to hear the case. Philbin's $100-a-day fine has been stayed pending the appeal.

The contempt order stems from the case of 17-year-old Edward Schultz of Gardner, who is accused for raping a woman last summer in that town. The 15-year-old accuser sought counseling afterward at the Worcester center.

Schultz's lawyer, public defender Gail Franco of Worcester, has asked for all those records, as defense attorneys are often doing across the state.

A senior member in the Worcester public defender's office said Tuesday that recent court rulings provide enough protection for such records.

"The rights of the defendant have to be paramount in this situation," said lawyer Michael Hussey. "The . . . right to a fair trial is a right that overrides the right to confidentiality."

The 1986 appellate-level ruling laid down strict rules for disclosing the records of rape counseling, which are granted a degree of confidentiality under state law. Defense lawyers were required to show a legitimate need for review. If they did so, a judge would first look at the records and pass on only evidence that could potentially help prove the defendant's innocence.

However, later court rulings, most recently in 1991, have cut out the initial judge's review and lifted the legitimate need standard. Defense lawyers still cannot share the records with anyone, including their own clients, until a judge grants permission.

Peter Ettenberg, a Worcester lawyer who has represented rape defendants, said the legal system must protect them from accusers who sometimes lie or suffer from delusions. He said a judge does not know all the facts of a case beforehand and cannot possibly say which counseling records might be useful

"Unfortunately for those who are accused, the scale, because of public pressure and public perceptions, is being tilted toward the complaining witness," he said.

But Marianne Winters, director of the Worcester center, said she fears defense lawyers are now not apt to twist a victim's normal feelings of guilt against her in court. "We'd really be leaving a survivor with no place to go for healing," she said.

Cheryl McLarney, director of education at Rape Crisis Services of Greater Lowell, said only about one in 10 rapes are reported now.

Collegian Elections
for Spring 1993

APPLICATIONS ARE CURRENTLY BEING ACCEPTED FOR PAID POSITIONS

Application deadline:
Wed., Dec. 9, 3 p.m.
Candidates night:
Wed., Dec. 9, 7 p.m.
Elections will be held
Thurs., Dec. 10
from 10 a.m.–8 p.m.

For information regarding position descriptions, staff eligibility or to get an application, please contact the Collegian's Managing Editor,

Egyptian terrorist found in NJ

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. immigration authorities are seeking to expel an Egyptian Islamic leader who was charged and then released for lack of evidence in the 1981 killing of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The leader, Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, is blind and confined to a wheelchair. He has been living in New Jersey and New York since he arrived in the United States in July 1990 on a tourist visa, according to immigration officials.

Abdel-Rahman, a spiritual leader of the Egyptian version of the radical underground group Silamic Jihad, has been accused in Egypt of ties to terrorist activities but has never been convicted.

Abdel-Rahman had been a legal permanent resident of the United States but that status was rescinded in March without his contesting it, an immigration source said.

An exclusion hearing is scheduled for Abdel-Rahman Jan. 20 in Neward, N.J., according to an official who provided details of the case on the condition of anonymity. "Exclusion" is similar to deportation but applies to people considered never to have legally entered the country.

The hearing is to be held before an immigration law judge, who has the power to exclude immigrants from the country. The decision could be appealed to a higher court.

State department officials said in 1990 that Abdel-Rahman should not have been issued a tourist visa because he was on a list of terrorist suspects banned from entry into the United States.

SGA Update

The SGA Update is a service of the Collegian and the Student Government Association to inform students about items on the SGA agenda.

The Undergraduate Student Senate will meet on Wed., Dec. 2, 1992 at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 165-169. All members of the University Community are invited to attend and speak on any motions that come up.

As the Student Senate is the representative body of all UMass undergraduates, the University community is encouraged to attend and be aware of the motions and the opinions it passes.

The following motions are on the agenda for December 2, 1992:

A motion for the Senate to support mandatory changes in General Education requirements, such as a mandatory course for all first year students to help fight discrimination on campus and foster multiculturalism.

Another motion is to allocate $9,860 to UVC to fund a full-time engineer position.

In addition, there is a new chapter to be added to the SGA by-laws which will guarantee the Senate seats of the Third World Caucus and the the Area Governments under the new SGA Constitution if it is finally passed.

Local News

Town resident urges UMass to pay its bills

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

An Amherst Town Meeting member recently presented the University with a mock bill for services rendered by the Amherst Fire Department in a bid to draw attention to the $203,000 Amherst claims it is owed by UMass.

The $1,500 "bill" for the extinguishing of the Nov. 16 grease fire in the Campus Center was sent out by Town Meeting Member Larry Kelley, who has been attempting to pressure the University to respond to a demand by the Town of Amherst that UMass hand over all moving violation fine monies collected by University Police since 1984.

"This is my latest media stunt. If [the University] is going to hold out on the $203,000, they should at least be paying for the other services they're getting," Kelley said.

"UMass already gets more in services than it pays for, and fire fighting springs right to mind," said Kelley, citing as a further example the 25 false alarms on campus last month, each costing the fire department about $300.

Kelley says, however, that it is not actually Amherst fire fighters' service to UMass, but the $203,000 that concerns him.

"This is a lot of money we're talking about. It's money owed to the Town of Amherst, and UMass is being totally obnoxious about paying us," he said.

The issue first arose in 1987 when Amherst Police Chief Donald Maia noticed fine money collected at UMass he believed should go to the town being sent by the Northampton District Court to the University, where it goes into a scholarship fund.

Maia brought this to the attention of the clerk-magistrate, who then rerouted fine money to the town. In 1991, however, money started going to UMass again under orders of temporary clerk-magistrate Genevieve Keller. This prompted another complaint from Maia, and another turnaround by the court, with fine money once more going to Amherst.

According to Director of University Relations Jaymie Chernoff, who gets the money depends on how the court interprets conflicting legal guidelines.

Chernoff cites a section of a 1962 State Act which provides that the trustees shall make rules and regulations for the "control, movement, and parking of vehicles on the campus of the university," and that "...all fines and penalties recovered for violation of rules and regulations...

Turn to BILLS, page 4

UMass pedal power patrolling

Police have discovered the uses of mountain bikes

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Long known as masters of the equestrian, this semester University of Massachusetts police officers have been proving their mettle on a different kind of mount - the mountain bike.

Since mid-October, seven athletically-inclined representatives of the University's finest have been patrolling the campus on rugged two-wheelers as part of a new mountain bike police unit, and finding their mechanical steeds offer many advantages.

"We're highly mobile, and we can go anywhere on campus quickly. The bike patrols are an excellent way to augment our regular cruiser, horse, and foot patrols," said Paul Vlach, coordinator of the unit.

Vlach said that officers on bicycles have been very successful because they are simultaneously high and low-profile.

"On the one hand, this is an opportunity for us to be highly visible and approachable to the public. You're seeing a face, and realizing that police are individuals. On the other hand, we've found that we can move quietly and quickly into trouble situations, often not even being noticed until we're right there," he said.

According to Vlach, the unit owns six bicycles - two Nishiki mountain bikes purchased by the department of public safety, and four other used bikes which were donated to the unit.

Officers wear blue police shirts, black turtlenecks and pants, and black and white helmets with "POLICE" printed on them in large letters. The bicycles have standard head- and taillights, but no flashing emergency lights.

Members of the unit are present on all patrol shifts, and can theoretically be patrolling campus 24-hours a day, seven days a week, although the actual frequency of their rides "depends on staffing," said Vlach.

Officers on bicycle respond to calls just like officers in cars, with the exception of incidents such as traffic accidents which require a cruiser to block traffic, according to Vlach, and their presence does not depend on weather conditions.

The unit began training last summer, taking long conditioning rides and practicing on a variety of terrain. The officers also attended a three-day workshop at the UMass Dartmouth campus on tactics, safety, and proper use of bicycles in police work. Officer Denise Duguay described the training as "intensive."

In addition, unit members consulted local mountain-bikers and bicycle shops about riding, equipment, and maintenance, said Vlach.

The idea of establishing a bicycle unit came from officers Mark Whelihan and Thomas O'Donnell, who began pushing for the bicycle patrol over two years ago. Whelihan said they were inspired after reading articles about similar patrols in Seattle and Las Vegas.

The UMass officers are in good company. Susan Jones, director of the International Police Mountain Bike Association, estimates that close to 500 police departments nationwide are patrolling on bicycle.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
Officer Don Robinson rides his bike outside Gunness Engineering Lab.

UMass students are lying down to fight against AIDS

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Every seven minutes a person dies of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

"Fight AIDS, fight back. Act up, fight back," yelled Wendy Mataya, as 18 people dressed in black lied on the floor for seven minutes yesterday on the Campus Center Concourse as part of World AIDS Day.

"Don't wait that long to practice safe sex. Use condoms or we will all be dying," Mataya said.

The purpose of the seven minute die-in was to symbolize how the AIDS epidemic has ravaged the world's population.

Over 160,000 people have died from AIDS in the United States over the last 11 years, more than the number who died in the Vietnam and Korean Wars combined, Mataya said, a first-year graduate student who organized the die-in.

"During the last decade more people

Turn to AIDS, page 10

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
AIDS Awareness Day die-in on the Campus Center Concourse.

University recommends rules about fire safety

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

The fourth floor of Aquinas hall was filled with streamers and Christmas ornaments for the decoration contest. These Providence College students even had a Christmas tree. But little did they know their decorations would become deadly.

A fire broke out in one of the resident's rooms. Suddenly it caught on to one of the streamers. Spreading from door to door, the fire set the entire hall ablaze.

Although it is estimated the fire burned for several minutes, 11 students died from the fire's smoke and heat. Many were still trapped in their rooms, others died when they attempted to "run" through the flames.

To prevent this from occurring again, the University of Massachusetts in accordance with the fire regulations of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is prohibiting the use of combustible decorations along with other fire hazards in the dorms and academic buildings, according to Senior Fire Prevention Officer Keith E. Hoyle.

"They cannot decorate with combustible decorations," Hoyle said. "They can decorate with noncombustible decorations."

Combustible materials are paper, plastics and wreaths made of natural vegetation.

Only materials labeled as "fire-resistive" or "slow-burning" are okay for use. If students are not sure about whether their decorations are flammable Environmental Health and Safety have a lab where they can test materials.

Candles will also not be allowed in Residence Halls, except for religious purposes and in those instances students must follow these regulations:

- cover flame with noncombustible shield
- anchor candle in sturdy base
- keep flammable items away from candle
- keep candle away from windy area
- do not leave flame unattended

Live Christmas trees are considered as being combustible, and so they are not allowed. Only artificial trees approved by Underwriter's Laboratories, Factory Mutual or labeled as "Fire-resistive" or "Fire-proof" will be allowed in the dorms.

"Metal trees proposed an electrical hazard," Hoyle said. "Natural trees are not permitted. They will have to use a fake tree."

As for outside lights, University Environmental Health and Safety advises students to use only lights and cords that are labelled for exterior use only.'

Extension cords should be avoided. If an extension cord must be used, make sure it has the sufficient amperage rating to handle the electrical load that you could be putting on it.

All lighting sets must be approved by Underwriter's Labs, Factory Mutual, or any other recognized testing laboratory.

If students do not follow these regulations, Hoyle said the punishment ranges from housing probation to removal from housing.

Social advocate said racism limits humanity

By JOHN WINCHELL
Collegian Correspondent

A social justice advocate spoke of racism's affect on Whites' lives last night at a meeting of the Institute for the Healing of Racism in the Campus Center.

Finnegan Fry, a recent graduate from Hampshire College, delivered a short talk on White perceptions of racism.

"It can seem really huge and overwhelming when Whites talk about racism," Fry said to a diverse audience of about 25 people. He stressed the limits racism places on Whites in all facets of life.

The institute was "founded in the belief that racism is the most powerful and persistent obstacle to the attainment of a just and peaceful society," as stated in the group's philosophy.

Fry said racism limits Whites in four major ways. It serves to keep Whites living in fear "that they are hopelessly racist." Second, it limits their capacity to relate to other people.

"We end up living in small homogeneous white social circles," he said.

Third, racism breeds an attitude of ignorance and misinformation, which directly leads to active discrimination.

The last limiting factor racism creates is obscuring humanity as a whole.

"We end up being raised under a moral hypocrisy, ignoring daily racial incidents, and acting as if it were the norm," said Fry.

He also referred to 'White privilege' as another means of confusing individuals into adopting a racial mindset. To him, this concept represents hollow benefits and civil rights that can spark the fire of racism.

An open discussion followed, with many audience members voicing their opinions and questioning Fry's ideas. A major bone of contention was the United States' role as a "moral example" for all nations through its continual internal struggle against racism.

Several argued that this country could not function as that role model because of moral inequality which, according to them, was one of the basic premises the nation was founded upon.

Others stressed the undeniable fault resting on socialization of racist ideals from one generation to the next.

The group reached a consensus on two key points. First, they agreed that racism exists as a social disease. Second, and more importantly, they said they believed the best weapon to combat racism is individual action and initiative. One member summed up the group's thoughts simply by saying, "Change begins with the individual."

They all also agreed wholeheartedly on the organization of multicultural coalitions and forums, which serve to educate individuals and empower them to effectively fight racism.

■ volunteer

continued from page 1

"The students are willing to put in the extra mile because they are excited about the class," Whitborne said.

Stacy Wagner, a teaching assistant for the psychology of aging class, said the volunteers were amazing and have done much more than required. "The students care so much for the residents and think of them as friends, which is very admirable."

Pratt-Tobin said the students enjoyed the experience so much that about half of them have asked if they could volunteer next semester.

"This volunteer program is gradually building a good reputation because many volunteers are talking to their friends and telling them about the quality of their experiences," Pratt-Tobin said.

Student loan program unveiled

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's largest provider of college student loans unveiled a program Monday that will reduce interest payments for certain borrowers who pay their monthly installments on time.

The program, called Great Rewards, "is a whole new concept in education lending . . . It rewards good repayment habits," said Lydia Marshall, senior vice president of the Student Loan Marketing Association.

"Good borrowers save us time, and they save us money" because the association, known as Sallie Mae, can avoid collection procedures, such as overdue notices and telephone calls. "The savings will be passed back to the good borrowers."

Sallie Mae is a publicly held, federally chartered financial services corporation that buys education loans from banks and other lending institutions. It owns more than $20 billion in federally insured student loans, which amounts to one in three of all such outstanding loans today.

Under the program, 2 percentage points would be shaved from the interest rate on a borrower's loan if payments are made on time for the first 48 months, Marshall said. The program is limited to Stafford loans, the most common type of student loan under the Federal Family Education Loan Program.

A typical borrower with $5,000 in Stafford loans would save $246 over the life of the loan, which is usually 10 years. A borrower with $23,000 in loans, would save more than $1,100 in interest payments.

The first group of students who would benefit by the new program typically have loans with an interest rate of 8 percent in the first four years and 10 percent thereafter, Marshall said. Under the program, on time payments for the first four years would cut the interest rate for the following years by 2 percentage points, to 8 percent, she said.

■ airlift

continued from page 1

interview that his forces were "preparing intensely" for an offensive to break the Serbian seige on Sarajevo, site of the 1984 Winter Games.

In an interview in Monday's edition of the Oslobodjenje newspaper, Bosnian army chief Gen. Mustafa Hajrula Hovic said his forces lacked materiel but were "now capable of some offensive movement."

He refused to say when the offensive would be launched, but that it would be "a battle of many days in which nothing can be left to chance."

■ bills

continued from page 3

shall be forwarded to the trustees of the university to be deposited in the scholarship trust fund."

However, in a nonbinding opinion March 13, Chief Justice of the district court Samuel Zoll said any money collected by UMass for violations of state and municipal law be given to Amherst.

While Chernoff says the University will not contest the routing of future funds to the town, she is not convinced that the University "owes" Amherst money that was collected in the past, which the town is now demanding.

"We are very sympathetic to the town, but this is not a sum that we can just do without, and it's not clear that we have to," she said.

Chernoff said that both town and University officials are determined not to waste state resources by taking the issue to court, but will work out a solution on their own. She said the University will issue a plan to resolve the conflict within the coming week.

CopyCat PRINT SHOP

RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992
Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)
228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

Public Discussion
All graduate students invited
The Pink Problem
The Graduate Employee Organization and Racism
Two sessions--
1. Wed. Dec. 2, 2:00-4:00 PM CC811B-15
2. Thur. Dec. 10, 5:30-7:30PM CC 805-09
Who are we?
Is race a labor issue?
Are we part of the problem?
What is the solution?
Three or four introductory speakers (5 minutes each) are sought to start the discussion. Please speak to Kimberly Wilson at the GEO office (545-5317) if interested.
STEWARDS -- OFFICERS -- ACTIVISTS
Participate in the polylogue!

Intersession'93
Multiculturalism: Fulfillment or Death of the American Dream?
December 30 -January 14
American International College
Post tenebras lux
Speakers:
Dr. Kamal Ali, Westfield State College
Dr. Joyce Berkman, UMASS
Rev. Charles Blakney, First Cong. Church, South Hadley
Dr. Daniel Czitrom, Mount Holyoke College
Dr. David Glassberg, UMASS
Dr. Louis Greenbaum, UMASS
David Grossbeck, Mass. Assoc. for Bilingual Education
Dr. Baily Jackson, UMASS
Eileen Kelly, Holyoke Community College
Dr. Everett Ladd, Roper Center
Thom Levy, Synthesis Center
Ruth Moore, Mass. Comm. for Deaf
Dr. Rosalie Porter, Fullbright Lecturer, Author
Register Now!
Call the School of Continuing Education and Graduate Studies
1000 State Street, Springfield
747-6325

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

How you can make your very next DC meal fun

Nobody wants to hear about the "food" that is served in college dining commons. I'm a UMass student, and I know I don't want to hear about it. So I'm not going to tell you the meals aren't much good. I'm going to explain how you can make the food better.

Of course, I could suggest that you eat dirt for three days, and then go to dinner at the cafeteria. But I know of a much less self-sacrificing method to enjoy a meal in a cafeteria: just play the colors game.

David
MUMPER

The colors game is great because everything you need (colored food) is right in the dining commons. You'll find a wide array of colors in a university cafeteria.

Take the color green, for example. You'll find at least eight different shades of green in the lettuce which, sadly, is the product of various levels of decay. There's the green icing on the cake, which is an artificial color, that looks like it's computer-generated.

But enough about colors; I'm going to tell you how to have a good D.C. meal. That's where the colors game comes in. You can play the game with as many people as you want. Start by choosing a color theme for the meal; let's pick yellow. The next step is to bring back as much yellow food as possible. Today, we have two people playing the game, Buffy and Philip. Buffy searches through the cafeteria in quest of yellow food.

"Hmmm, yellow," Buffy thinks to herself, "like the sun." Buffy finds all the yellow, sun-like food she can. She sits next to Philip and eats a banana, some bright yellow beans and a corn muffin. All yellow. Buffy ate three yellow things. Philip has two glasses of lemonade; he drinks one, and then eats some corn chips and a cheeseburger, the kind with neon yellow melted cheese.

"I win!" says Philip. "I ate some cheese, corn chips and two glasses of lemonade. That's four yellow things; you had three. I beat you!"

Buffy looks at Philip's plate and hesitates for a moment. She tries to recall the best strategy at this stage in the game. Just then she has an idea. "Nope, you didn't drink both glasses of lemonade. We tied."

Buffy must have read what you're reading, and she knows that you have to eat the food to get points.

Philip, in desperation, formulates a plan. His hand darts out, picks up the lemonade, and pours it down his throat. "Now I've got four points — game's over!" exclaims Philip, between coughs and gasps. And indeed, Philip is our winner for today. And so Buffy and Philip leave the cafeteria, after a fun meal.

This is a great game, but to insure that you don't tire playing it, you can alternate between it and the variation to the colors game. To win the variation game, find as many different colors as you can.

Janet goes through the main food line and puts pieces of white and dark meat chicken, a bowl of Jello and a piece of bread and butter on her tray. She shuffles through the crowd to the salad bar, where she takes some lettuce with carrots. While she is waiting in line for the carrots, Janet's friend Penny walks up to meet her.

"Hi, Penny!" says Janet. "Do you want to play the colors game variation?"

"Well, all right," replies Penny, rather unenthusiastically. And so they sit down to play. Penny eats her food and says, "I ate five colors. How many did you eat? I know you beat me." Penny is not a confident competitor. Janet thinks of what she ate: red Jello, tan bread, yellow butter, two shades of green lettuce, orange carrots, white and dark meat chicken. "I ate eight colors!" she says, after a few minutes of calculation.

"I knew you'd beat me," says Penny, who just isn't very confident or unenthusiastic.

Despite Penny's lack of enthusiasm, they both had a more enjoyable meal because of the colors game.

David Mumper is a UMass student.

Two pentagrams, two religions

I am responding to the letter, "University should end worship of evil" [Collegian, Nov. 19], linking Satanism with the symbol of the pentagram. While an upside down (both points up) pentagram is used by some Satanists, the right side up pentagram is used as a symbol for the religion Wicca, or Witchcraft.

Wicca is the worship of the God and Goddess, and a reverence for the natural cycles of the earth. It is most definitely not Satanic; in fact Witches are generally horrified when people mistake what they do for Satanism.

I would like to note that I was very disturbed by the tone of the letter. The writer seemed eager to establish some type of religious orthodoxy at the University, with little concern for the rights of others. I see that as unacceptable in a country such as America, which was founded on the right of freedom of religion.

Janra Pereira
Co-President,
UMass Pagan Students
Sunderland

It's a bird . . . it's a plane . . .

"Superman died," she said nonchalantly.

"What do you mean he's dead? Superman can't die — he's Superman," I replied, brushing off Jules' comment as a ridiculous rumor.

"He did too," she retorted with an astonished grin that I would actually question something coming from the 'All Knowing.' "He died, they killed him off."

"Fine, then how did he die? Tell me that!" (let's see the 'All Knowing' answer that one!)

"Some villain killed him." Her response was quicker than I had expected.

"What villain?"

"I don't know — some villain."

"What villain?! Superman can't just be killed by some random villain."

E.C.
THOMAS

Eyes rolling to the ceiling, she said (exasperated that I would still have the audacity to question her), "He died, I swear."

"He did not — he's Superman."

"Yes, he did."

"Did not!"

"Did too!" (Now I feel like this conversation has been transplanted from our living room onto the playground).

"Did not!!"

"Did too!!"

"Did not!!!" (By this point I wasn't just fighting out of pride but for Superman's honor).

"Look E," she yelled, "he's dead. Superman is dead — get over it!" and then, out of disbelief that I could be so persistent, she laughed — well, more like giggled with an evil smirk.

"How can you be so apathetic. Superman's not dead — that's impossible. You shouldn't play with people's emotions like that."

Then with a sort of silly perplexion she responded, "E, what did you do when you found out Santa wasn't real?"

"Now don't go bringing him into this!!" How could she stoop so low?!

"E, I'm sorry." A tone of regret seemed to wash over her voice. Almost as fast as I noticed this remorse, she did, adding with a grin, "He's dead, dead, dead — Superman is dead!!"

I grabbed my coffee and, like a five-year-old having a tantrum, proceeded upstairs — but not before leaving with a soft but stern, "Is not."

In my room I sat for a moment contemplating Jules' assertion. Could it be true? Was Superman really dea—no, never, it was impossible. Superman's a hero. No cartoonist would have the heart to kill a hero. I was positive Superman was alive and well, protecting the world as we know it. So I brushed away Jules' evil rumor and went about my evening as if our conversation never happened.

Thanksgiving break: Home again, food that takes longer to prepare than boiling water for five minutes, laying on the sofa without any guilt about not studying, hanging out with old friends, not worried about hangovers or getting enough sleep — I have a whole four days to do nothing (a deep sigh, stress free). All was well — until I saw Friday morning's paper.

The headline escaped me, it was the glaring picture underneath. Debris and shattered glass littered the ground, and in the midst of all the destruction, Lois Lane cried out in emotional pain, as she held Superman in her arms; he was covered in blood, his famous "S" was caught on a flag pole, a shredded emblem waving in the wind. Could it be?

My mouth hit the floor, the impossible was possible — Superman, the hero of heroes was dead. All hope for mankind was gone. I wallowed into the living room, still in shock. Life would never be the same.

"Hello — reality?! He was a comic book character," Jules rubbed it in my face as soon as I got back to school (I was stupid enough to tell her I found out she was right.) This time she didn't giggle, she cackled.

"Fine, laugh. Maybe you should be the one to tell all the kids — who looked up to Superman, who believed in him, who had faith that good would always conquer evil — that he's dead, that their hero is gone — forever!"

She shook her head and sighed, "E, you're too sensitive."

In a time when heroes are hard to trust and believe in, with out any doubts that they will fight the evil temptations of money and sex — where even the word "hero" has become cliche, what are we supposed to do when the one true hero dies? What's left other than a deep void. If not even Superman can stand the tests of evil — who else could? Here's a man with inhuman strength, intelligence, super nifty powers and compassion for mankind — and now even he has been defeated. What hope is left?

I have no answers for this one, only a sense of hopelessness for the world. (ponder, sigh. . . ponder, ponder) Then again, Michael Keaton is sexier than Christopher Reeve. . . and Batman is a pretty cool guy with an excellent cartoon. And I suppose any guy who could share the spotlight with Catwoman without inevitably paling in comparison, has something special — just maybe there is some hope. . .

E.C.Thomas is a Collegian columnist

Being Black isn't license to hate

Although I find Dr. Jeffries' teachings offensive, I am not threatened by them. His theories on the intellectual and spiritual evolution of Europeans and Africans and on a Jewish conspiracy to denigrate Blacks through film are absurd and self-condemnatory. Said Dr. Jeffries during his Nov. 12 lecture: "The enormous storm around me has nothing to do with me. It has to do with you." It is Jefferies, the man himself, the beleaguered prophet and "sacrificial lamb" of City College, by whom I feel threatened.

Jeffries wrongly believes that Blacks can't be racist and from beneath this mantle of innocence says to Jews, "It has to do with you." As a human being, his stance is alarming. Jews rally against him because they know well that anyone blaming the world for his suffering while sharing none of the world's is free within his conscience to incite or commit violence. As a teacher, his stance is unforgivable, for his dismissal of responsibility for the controversy he generates poisons young, gifted minds. "White people get upset when they don't hear what they want to hear," said a student who, as the Jewish Advocate reported [Nov. 20-26], read a poem titled "The X" before the lecture.

An undergraduate at the University between 1985 and 1989, I too, believed that my suffering as a Black gave me license to hate Whites. And when the racist I was becoming strained my relationship with my mother, who is White, I considered the anger I cultivated a virtuous part of something greater than me, something possessed by all Black people yet suppressed and feared by all Whites, something similar to Jeffries' "significance of the Nile Valley." If my White peers were offended by my bigoted posture or if my mother cried at the way I glared at her, it was because I was exposing a painful truth. "White people," I told myself, "get upset when they don't hear what they want to hear."

I wonder if the author of "The X," the members of Phi Beta Sigma, or any students who walked past protesting Jews toward Mahar as I did in 1989 when Louis Farakahn came to UMass, are upset, reading this and hearing things they don't want to hear?

Charles H. Perry
Boston

Black Affairs

The Black Affairs Page is a bi-weekly focus page highlighting Black culture, politics and student life. The opinions expressed on this page do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian.

The Black Experience

Since coming to UMass, I've interacted with many diverse people. People may call me racist or say I'm prejudiced, or even out of my mind when I say we are not the same. We may have the same physical makeup, we may even argue whetheher or not we came from the same place, but in my discussion, what makes blacks so different to me, than whites?

Yatisha
BOTHWELL

I have yet to ask myself why black people do the things that they do, but I'll be damned if white people don't amaze the hell out of me. From the craziness we see on the news, to what I've been a part of these few short months of school, I can say white people are a mystery I cannot totally understand. I'm not saying I fully comprehend the motives and actions of all black people, but being Black myself, as well as being perceptive to the American societal structure, I can identify with the Black experience more than I can with our white counterparts.

The Black experience includes commonalities that we share: our origin, how we got where we are now, and our place in society. Whether that place in society be upper, middle or lower class, or even classlessness, there is still a shared experience. We all share the same place in society. . . the back of the bus.

Those who would argue or don't understand that, to me have not really grasped the Black experience in the world today.

Yes, things have gotten better, but isn't it a shame brothers and sisters that blood, sweat and tears are the price for the "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" we should have had by right. The price is not right. They owe us a refund for the price, through slavery and years of oppression (even in 1992!) we've had to pay in order to fuel their livelihood, all at the expense of Black people (non-whites).

The Black experience is great. It entails epics from terrible hardships to miraculous triumphs, to overcome obstacles set up by "massa". In trying to understand white people, I've come to very few solid, concrete conclusions, but I do have my philosophies. I think they put up obstacles from slavery to today's laws of the land, to see us stumble.

They want us to fail so their cause can be furthered. They are testing us constantly. Did you ever notice everything with white people is a test? The way we walk, the way we talk, the way we carry ourselves around them and even in how we treat one another-they're always watching.

They primarily test our actions and reactions towards them, because that is where their interest lies, themselves.

So we try to dress the right way, walk the right way, speak correctly their confused English language, all to be accepted by their standards; to be like them.

Well, I say no! We don't have to conform to fit into a society that is supposedly a "melting pot" (or whatever they are calling this country now).

We shouldn't have to deviate from our true culture and way of life.

All we have to do is stay BLACK.

We can't begin to understand whites or their standards of living, until we first unite. Let them set up obstacles and stumbling blocks. Let them test us.

There is nothing we cannot achieve, but we must first, as I said, unite under the Black experience, know ourselves, recognize what we have in common and use our experience to form a protest, and not a condition.

Yatisha Bothwell is a UMass student.

Community Calendar

Friday, December 4,1992

The Brothers of Alpha Phi Alpha & Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity Inc. will hold a party at the Southside Room in Southwest from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. A Stepshow Exhibition will be held. An admission fee will be charged.

Saturday, December 5, 1992

"The Struggle In South Africa: What Went Wrong? ". Dennis Brutus will be a guest speaker at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 804. Sponsored by the Maoist Internationalist Movement, Office of Third World Affairs, Radical Student Union and STPEC.

Auditions will be held for the Ujima Hair & Fashion Show- Saturday December 5th and Sunday, December 6th from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the Malcolm X Cultural Center. For more information, please contact Maimouna Sam at 546-4985. This event is sponsored by The Cape Verdean Student Alliance and the Malcolm X Cultural Center.

Thursday, December 10, 1992

The Everywoman's Center will celebrate its 20th Anniversary by hosting an Open House from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Wilder Hall, UMass. For more information, please call Everywoman's Center at 545-0883.

Sunday, December 13, 1992

The Malcolm X Cultural Center will hold its annual Kwanza Celebration. Entertainment will be provided, dinner will be served, along with the traditional Kwanza ritual. The event will start at 6 p.m. All are encouraged to attend. For more information, please contact Maimouna Sam at 546-4985.

Racist lies must be overcome before we are free

A lie was told to me and I do not know the exact nature of the lie, nor do I know its teller, what I do know is that the uncovering of this lie almost took me a lifetime. All my life I wanted to be a doctor, never anything else. Besides my love of the sciences and wanting to help people, the thing most lucrative, to me, about being a doctor was the respect. As if the illustriousness of a career would protect me from the uglier side of life, from being followed in the more affluent stores, from feeling the pain of racism. I believed the all consuming mantle of the doctoral profession would shield me from such occurrences ever more. This, perhaps, is the worst lie ever told to me, for it tells me that what I am now is not respectable, not reliable, not reputable, and just not acceptable enough. It is also a lie that happens to be common to the black community, whether it was the phrase "be all that you can be" or it was called "making it", we have heard this lie.

How this lie was perpetuated, I do not know. Maybe it was taught to me in the same manner that I was taught that my hips were too wide, my lips too big, my skin too dark, and my hair too short and kinky. Somewhere in my deep dark past, I was told to be all that I could be, while an unheard voice whispered, "because what you are now is not".

Penny
CAMERON

Realizing that a building is only as sound as its base, realizing I can only improve upon what I already am, and realizing that looking for something that should have been mine, I am perpetuating failure and disappointment. Realizing all this I uncovered this lie. So I give you your first question for the day, "do you know who you are and why?". Listen up for the second question is coming up fast.

Recently I went to see the new Spike Lee movie Malcolm X, during the movie I heard loud voiced agreements and "Malcolm was a great man", after the movie I heard "lets lullaby this nigga", was a whole point missed? Malcolm X was a great man, but he stood for a philosophy that was greater than he, for after all he was only a man, with a man's weaknesses. Malcolm X is certainly a man to be admired, honored, but revered? I was always taught to never put all of your faith in a person, for people can fail you. My lover might beat me, my children might betray me, my parents might kill me or I might kill myself. I, being human, am not infalliable, so therefore I cannot revere anyone, but my god. While the movie was a good medium for showing us the courage of the man, it was also for showing us the greatness of his ideals, and this is the point that so many around me, I felt, missed. Which could be why so many find it easy to say Malcolm X was a great man and then act in a way that is opposite to his beliefs. Its easier to say a man was great than to say his ideals were, then we would have to live by them. So here comes my second question of the day, "why do you believe in what you do, can you justify it to yourself?"

I freely admit that what Malcolm X stood for was truly enlightened, even if I cannot see myself following his every stricture. Why bring it up? Well I just wanted you to question yourselves as I am questioning myself. Do I still want to be a doctor? Of course I cannot imagine anything else, but I had to question why. As it is important for anyone of color to question the information we have been given, the strictures we have been taught, and the signals we have received. I think the past has shown that often this information has been misinformation. When a blond hair blue eyed Barbie doll is given to a young Afro-American girl as a symbol of universal beauty, the subliminal message is that her beauty in not considered beautiful and this can be devastating. As a people we were taught that in order to be better, we would have to be different, in order to be beautiful, we would have to change, why? As a people we have to ask why. To do otherwise it is, to coin a phrase from Dr. Leonard Jeffries, paralysis of analysis. Then we will forever be students and followers accepting the present norms, chasing after things we cannot be.

Penny Cameron is a Collegian correspondent.

An overview of this semester

The end is here! This nuisance we have come to know as the Fall semester of 1992 is slowly coming to an end. In all seriousness, this has been a long, hard semester. The ALANA communities were in constant battle with several different forces on this campus.

Yvette
BAEZ

Kristin
ST. JOHN

In order to reach a conclusion, one must analyze the beginning. Many of the major conflicts in our communities spurred from the Arlons Barosy "incident". To use an analogy, Arlons Barosy is to UMass as Rosa Parks was to the Civil Rights Movement. He set a precedent to allow us to freely fight for what is ours and what we hope to obtain. Now, we will hopefully have a renovated Malcolm X Center at the end of the semester. The Latin American community has their cultural center back, on their terms. And our campus community can, hopefully, peacefully coincide with one another.

But, these accomplishments are not due to the UMASS administration. Without any of the turmoil that has been caused here on campus, our communities would have kept on fighting with each other while our administration turned their heads pretending that nothing is wrong. If someone would have admitted that there was tension on this campus earlier, many of this past year's incidents wouldn't have happened. If the administration had seen that we needed to diversify this campus more, maybe there would have been the tension. If the university would have acted quicker to the Barosy incident, maybe the riot wouldn't have happened.

But, we shouldn't act on "if's". As a community we have to show the University officials that burying their heads isn't going to cut it anymore. Right now the nation is watching our campus. Other colleges are using our's as an example; some even as a joke.

So, as the University winds up the first semester of our '92/'93 school year, we should go home proud of the accomplishments made here. Everything seems quiet, but, this semester is still on the minds of many on this campus. We, as students, learned that nothing is as perfect as it looks and that the University officials just needed some shaking to wake up to what is wrong. And, at the same time, the administration learned that the students on this campus are going to take a stand for what we believe in and make our voices heard.

If this semester is any preview for what waits for us this spring, 1993 is going to be a year full of change and new challenges for this campus.

Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John are Collegian staff members.

Focus on his ideas, not his personality

First of all, your argument about Malcolm's philosophies is about as sorry as you seem to be. Where is this change of philosophy you keep referring to? Where in any of his speeches does he embrace European-Americans? Where is this newfound love for white people? Nowhere, out of a four hundred page book he briefly mentions that all white people aren't bad and this seems to be the only thing people focus on out of the movie.

Second of all, it wasn't the early part of his life, it was the majority of his life that he felt this way, that's why I made the comparison about wearing KKK and wearing X. If David Duke said he liked Black people do you think I'd start wearing his name across my chest? You should ask yourself why is it whenever a Black man speaks about the reality of America he is not accepted by America until he somehow embraces the white community.

Thirdly, you repeatedly keep referring in your article to Malcolm X. Malcolm shouldn't be the focus, it is his philosophies that should be the focus. Where in your article, or anyone else's article, does that focus shift from him to the political, economic and educational agenda? Nowhere, all you focus on his how he changed his thinking to loving the European-American. If you had any sense at all you would be focusing in on his agenda, not his persona.

Douglas Greer
Central

Arts & Living

WITHIN EARSHOT

COMPILED BY JON LUPO

Prince and the New Power Generation
Paisley Park Records

Prince has reached the point in his career where it's no longer crucial what he says. It's how.

With his latest release, Prince (and his proficient New Power Generation) tills mostly musical topsoil, but still hits the dreaded clay. He wins when he spits forth wads of primal phraseology over fashionable funk.

The descending, multiple melodies are trademark, as is the crawling, subtle bass line. Sure, these are original, but how about the sampled female moans? Cliche. So is the rap epilogue.

"Sexy M.F" is an example of sensual, jazzy background buried beneath Prince's laughable lyrics. It's shameful, as that guitar is so alluring, almost ringing like a bell made of velvet. The horn accompaniment is also absorbing.

The backbone of all Prince music is that driving bass — the kind that, when volume's on 11, it shakes cerebellums. It's in "The Max," which is a "max" of some sort until the holy slim interrupts the N.P.G.'s vigor with colorless keyboards and a yawner chorus: "When the blood of my love out races every one of the stallions in your pack/That's when you go, you go to the max."

"Blue Light," a reggae/pop/poser lament, is an ideal example of his fall from funky grace. Give us instead the carnal, salacious sex of "I Wanna Melt With you": "From the tip of my typhoon to the bottom of your ankle chains/We're gonna shake and shake and shake/Until we're both deranged with endorphins." Yeaaaah.

And it's not just the sex here. We're talking complete musical climax with male grunts, female whimpers and cat shrieks (or perhaps human?) No musician today can make speakers drip with ecstasy like this one. None. If he'd just stick with it . . .

And back down the coaster's hill, with "The Continental," a guitar/vocal-driven piece of slut brilliance: 'Cuz I want the main thang/Whatever come 'fore and after that is ying yang."

And the long ride back up, with "Damn U," which speaks for itself.

Still, the release is a success. The shining moments dispersed between the tedium is worth the money. As two versions have been released, labeled (for explicit lyrics) and unlabeled — make sure to buy the labeled. It's the raw meat that tastes so good.

— By Christian Perry
Generation X Press

ABBA-esque
Erasure
Mute/Elektra

I suppose it's one of those embarrassing things you outgrow; that you don't admit to anyone unless they admit it to you first.

When I was a teenager, I loved ABBA.

I supose if I listened to my old ABBA albums now, I wouldn't get so excited. After all, I've developed a more discerning musical palette. Still, that young teen in the back of my brain started doing back flips when I heard of Erasure's remake.

Although I'm not totally into this whole technopop thing, I really like Erasure. Who better to re-release ABBA, I thought?

The answer is nobody. Those songs should've been left as they were — disco memories for teenagers with lousy taste.

Abba-esque features four ABBA remakes that Erasure is planning to highlight on its upcoming tour. "Take A Chance on Me" is the best of the four simply because it's an upbeat, fun, stupid song no matter what you do to it or how you sing it. The damage to the original is minimal if you hear the radio version but on Abba-esque, they add a reggaestyle rap by MC Kinky at the end.

I don't get it either — ABBA, techno-pop, reggae and rap? What drugs were they on when they came up with that?

The first two cuts are "Lay All Your Love On Me" and "S.O.S." My question: Why re-release any at all? Were there that many hard-core ABBA fans out there 20 years ago? Doubtful.

—By Rachel York
Generation X Press

The gesticulating master

Marcel Marceau breathes life into dying art form

Mime Marcel Marceau

COURTESY RONALD A. WILFORD ASSOCIATES, INC

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

For those of you who believe that talk is cheap and words are overrated, you may want to check out, and will probably appreciate the coming of the "world's greatest pantomimist," Marcel Marceau.

Marceau, who has been performing pantomimes since 1946, will portray a wide range of experiences, from birth to death, with everything from getting lost in a subway to hunting butterflies in between. Marceau's one-man show is simple, utilizing little else besides his gestures. Props, scenery and makeup are extraneous to the pantomimists singular focus on expression through body language.

The French artist claims that silent screen artists such as Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, Harry Langdon, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy served as inspirations to pursue "the art of silence."

Marceau studied at the Charles Dullin School of Dramatic Arts in the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre in Paris, and went on to present his first "mimodrama," Praxitele and the Golden Fish in 1946.

Marceau's first U.S. tour occurred during 1955-6, after his original company of pantomimists (and the only in the world at that time) conquered such stages as the Theatre des Champs-Elysees, Sarah Bernhardt and Theatre de la Renaissance. Marceau won fans across the U.S., and his career eventually extended into the television, film and literary realms.

Today, the art of pantomime is often described as one which is slowly fading. In a world where quick one-liners and careless, often crude dialogues fill movie and television screens to sell entertainment to a less literate society, the fine art of mime is losing its place. People are less apt to sit through a performance in which giving full concentration to a silent artist is necessary in order to fully appreciate and understand their message. Less stimulating entertainment, which is also less demanding on the intellect and imagination of the viewer, is sadly taking over as our generation's representation of art.

As one who will probably always make room for good old-fashioned, traditional art, I will be sure to check out the man who has no doubt earned his reputation as a "wordless wonder," and "genius of gesture."

Marcel Marceau will play the FAC tonight at 8 p.m. Tickets start at $21; half-price for Five College students. Available at the FAC box office.

Jefferson Airplane's CD box set showcases San Fran's 60s rock

By DAVE DEMERJIAN
Collegian Correspondent

Jefferson Airplane Loves You
Jefferson Airplane
RCA Records

I have to admit I was somewhat skeptical when I heard that RCA was releasing a Jefferson Airplane boxed set. After all, the band has already put out several good retrospective collections (Flight Log in 1976 and 2400 Fulton St. in 1987) and I though the boxed set would simply be a repackaged, overpriced version of one of these.

I was wrong. Jefferson Airplane Loves You, as the set is called, contains 22 previously unreleased tracks, which along with the other, better known songs in the collection, combine to create a comprehensive history of San Francisco's best known band.

The first disc begins with "I Specialize in Love," a beautiful Marty Balin solo which he recorded years before the Airplane formed. This song sets the mood for the rest of the disc, exploring Airplane's early years, when Signe Anderson was the lead vocalist and the band was known as a local folk/blues outfit.

The songs were remastered by engineer Bill Lacey, who must be given credit for doing a great job in striking a balance between remastering for the 1990s and preserving the band's artistic integrity. The songs are crisp and clear, without sounding as if they have been tampered by a producer.

Disc two runs through the Airplane's most successful years: 1965-1967. Most of the band's biggest songs are included, as well as live versions of "It's No Secret" and "3/5 of a Mile in a Second," remastered from the Bless its Pointed Little Head album.

Also included are two rare, live recordings from the Woodstock Festival: "Uncle Sam's Blues" and "Plastic Fantastic Lover." One of the high points of the set in "Would You Like a Snack?," a collaboration between Grace Slick and Frank Zappa that will leave you wondering just how many drugs they ingested before they wrote it.

The third disc, in my opinion, is the boxed set's best, as it gives a detailed look at the often underrated work of the Airplane between 1970 and 1972. Guitar player Jorma Kaukonen stands out with an 11 minute version of his

Turn to JEFFERSON AIRPLANE, page 8

■ Jefferson Airplane

Jefferson Airplane PHOTO BY HERB GREENE

continued from page 7

classic "Feels So Good," and a live version of "Trial by Fire," from the band's final album, 30 Seconds Over Wonderland.

Grace Slick ends the set with "You Wear Your Dresses Too Short," an outrageous song that epitomizes what Jefferson Airplane was all about: outspoken, rebellious and unwilling to abide by the rules.

The boxed set comes with an excellent 64-page book that contains many rare photos, a complete biography of the band (written by Goldmine's Jeff Tamarkin), and an extensive discography listing all Airplane albums and singles.

Jefferson Airplane Loves You is not an overpriced boxed set filled with empty, meaningless material, but an excellent retrospective chronicling the history of one of San Francisco's best known bands. The set is perfect for the longtime Airplane fan, but at the same time, would please anyone who is interested in the San

ACRONYMBLE REMINDER

The game you hate to love.

But just admit it, and get your danged submissions in by this Wednesday.

Fantastic prizes!

Winners will be announced in Thursday's This Weekend section.

Drop by the Collegian Arts Desk in 113 Campus Center.

This week's letters:

JEFFI

The world's mightiest heroes on sale monthly from Marvel.®

Available at:

Same Bat Channel

Comics, Cards, Games and more...

Hampshire Mall, Hadley 586-8775 Ingleside Mall, Holyoke 532-9797

... fly on your own wings of imagination....

Open Monday- Saturday 10 am- 9pm Sunday 12 pm- 5pm

COMICS TRADE PAPERBACKS GRAPHIC NOVELS

TM & © 1992 MARVEL ENTERTAINMENT GROUP, INC. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

JOIN HAMPSHIRE FITNESS Be FIT FOR LIFE

Amherst Survival Center Fundraiser
Saturday, December 5th
Grand Aerobic Workout
10:00-11:30 AM
Open to visitors & members
$10 participation fee given to the Survival Center
Club is open to visitors Sat. Dec. 5th
All guest fees will be donated to the Survival Center

MasterCard 256-6446 VISA

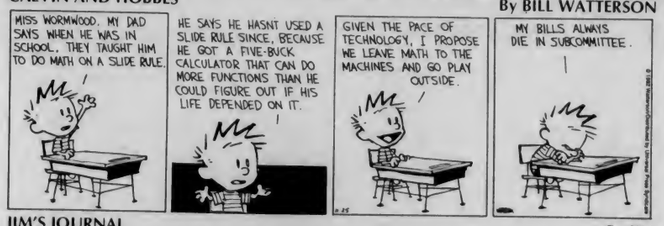
E&J GALLO WINERY
Management Development Program

An accelerated program designed to give participants a thorough foundation in consumer goods sales and sales management in preparation for the career in Field Marketing Management. Our Recruiting program is focused on graduating candidates in either business or liberal arts.

To learn more about E&J Gallo Winery's Management Development Program you are invited to attend an information session on:

Thursday, December 3rd
at
7:00pm
in the
University Campus Center, rm. 805

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Be patient, Leona, be patient. ... Zebras won't take a drink until they know it's absolutely safe."

Quote of the Day

"Any man more right than his neighbors constitutes a majority of one."
—Henry David Thoreau

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Veto speculation about saving or investment matters. DO NOT ABUSE YOUR HEALTH. Following bad advice could jeopardize your reputation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hold a partner or co-worker with a loose rein. Impulsiveness can be costly both at home and on the job. If driving, heed the rules of the road. Postpone making any big purchases.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your words could be misinterpreted by someone at work. Aim for clarity to avoid misunderstandings. Regular EXERCISE and GOOD EATING HABITS minimize health risks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A more aggressive attitude toward making money will increase profits. Potential romantic partners are attracted by your GENEROSITY. Diplomacy will help strengthen family ties.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Choose your words carefully to avoid any misunderstandings. Talented associates help broaden your horizons. Seek out the usual and UNIQUE. An infatuation could turn out to be real.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You need to continue your work efforts as apparent. A relationship is on smoother ground than in recent months. Closes to things to buy are prevalent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get EXPERT advice on dealing with any legal documents. Do not be a shrinking violet. Use the telephone to straighten out an older sibling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Discuss financial strategy with secret allies. Give your parents a friendly call; they may need assistance. Romantic matters are up for discussion. WEDDING plans are to be made.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ride the crest of confidence without acting overly aggressive. Inventive thinking is the key to financial progress. Above-done needs to discuss a problem with you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Steer clear of situations that raise your dander. You do not want to antagonize friends who mean well. A visit or telephone call from a former neighbor will lift your spirits tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Careful consideration of complex questions proves rewarding. Do not become upset if a loved one acts uncertain. Your relationship with a real go-getter prods you into action.

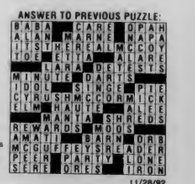
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Fragile emotions suggest you tread softly with other people. PATIENCE is needed to get things done right. Cuddling those who are hard to please will produce terrific results.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

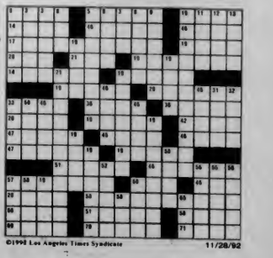
ACROSS
1 Lip
5 Singer LaBelle
10 Chow
14 Shucks!
15 Leek's kin
16 Kennedy matriarch
17 EST?
19 City sts.
20 Actress Arthur
21 USMA grads.
22 Behavior
24 "The Star-Spangled Banner" is one
26 Honored
27 Skirt
29 Famous tower
33 — breve
36 Discards
38 Vassal
39 Front purchase
40 Something to play for?
42 Spiffy
43 Lloyd Webber hit
45 Faithful
46 Annexes
47 Wait for the next set
49 Smithy's stand
51 Embellishment
53 Heretofore
57 Former London prison
60 Stat for a pitcher
61 Ventilate
62 Quarto y cuarto
63 E?
66 EPA's concern: Abbr.
67 Occurrence
68 Antlered animals
69 Pencil point
70 Rot
71 Friday, e.g.

DOWN
1 South American dance
2 Stranger
3 1978 Nobelist
4 Compass reading
5 Envelope information
6 Picnic buttinskies
7 Old school — tie
8 "The Velvet Fog" Mel —
9 Congenital
10 And?
11 Meander
12 Consumer
13 A Truman
18 Higs
23 Simon or Diamond
25 OL?
26 Part of FBI
28 Cut calories
30 Hay
31 Yipes!
32 Allows
33 Mimics
34 One of Jacob's sons
35 Café lightener
37 Twirled
41 Seriousness
44 Nimbus
48 Like a lord
50 Turkey's neighbor
52 Part of AWOL
54 Catches red-handed
55 Sounds from a sty
56 Wrench away
57 Famous Coward
58 — Homo
59 Hold your horses!
60 Sicilian peak
64 Part of a min
65 Meadow

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



11/28/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/28/92

Today's Staff

Night Editrix ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Christina Rothwell
PhotoTechnician ..... Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor ..... Mr. Blagg
Production ..... Theresa Giammattei, Jim Ganley, Dickie Barrett & the Boys

We at the Collegian regret that no information concerning Wednesday's Dining Commons fare can be provided to you, but we would like to remind you that no matter what sort of molten hot material they may offer you, there are always the well-stocked salad bars and breakfast cereals. And don't forget about those alternative dining options, namely, Pastabilities and Basics, located in Worcester and in one of those D.C.'s in Southwest. We guarantee that you can achieve the ultimate dining pleasure, if only you would keep an open mind about things. For a long time, I was really angry that the presence of Ranch dressing at the salad bar was not a consistent affair, so I just started filling out Comment Cards. And it worked. Joy. So don't despair, and for crying out loud, DON'T complain. For the hot menu, call 5-2626.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Vietnam files may be hidden

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Republican leader of the Senate panel investigating Americans missing from the Vietnam War charged Tuesday that federal agencies have been withholding documents from the committee.

Sen. Bob Smith, R-N.H., said he wants to subpoena the documents before the committee goes out of existence Jan. 3.

"We have hundreds of questions yet to be answered, thousands of documents that this committee has not seen and that this government refuses to provide," he said at the opening of four days of hearings.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs, said that while he has been at times "somewhat distressed" with the Pentagon's level of cooperation, he was satisfied with its overall efforts.

"Any document we ought to have, we get," he said. "The (Committee's) effort this far has been extensive and extraordinary and the response has been extensive."

The documents Smith wants include 60 boxes of intelligence reports from the National Security Agency, operational files from the Central Intelligence Agency, debriefing reports form returned prisoners of war and more than 500 Defense Intelligence Agency reports claiming POWs have been alive in captivity in Vietnam and Laos since as late as 1989.

Sen. Charles Grassly, R-Iowa, said that while the committee has worked for nearly a year trying to find out what happened to U.S. servicemen who didn't return from Vietnam, "our attempts have been frustrated by prejudgments."

He blamed the Pentagon, saying "the mind set to debunk (reports of sightings of POWs and MIAs) is alive and well at the Department of Defense."

One the first of four days of hearings this week, the committee was told that the Defense Intelligence Agency's office on POWs and MIAs was hampered by management problems, lack of resources, lack of leadership and pressures from politicians and activists.

The authors of several Pentagon reports critical of the DIA in the 1980s testified that these failings combined with fabricated information caused investigators to become overly cynical.

"A degree of cynicism crept into our analysis," said retired Rear Adm. Thomas Brooks, who wrote a memorandum sharply critical of DIA operations in September 1985 after serving as a flag-rank officer in charge of the agency's POW-MIA office for several months earlier in the year.

Though he said the cynicism was "part of human nature" he said "it is not appropriate to intelligence efforts."

Big Calif. quake may come in five years

By LEE SIEGEL
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Recent earthquakes may have quadrupled the odds of more big jolts soon in Southern California, creating nearly a 50-50 chance within five years of "the Big One," says a report issued Monday.

"The risk to this region is significant," said Richard Andrews, director of the State Office of Emergency Service. "I urge the public to take earthquake preparedness steps now."

He said the risk of another quake measuring 7 or more on the Richter scale "has been increased significantly" as a result of the 7.5 Landers and 6.6 Big Bear earthquakes on June 28.

If the region's next quake measures 7.5 or more and occurs closer to population centers, it "has the potential to be catastrophic" Andrews said.

The June 28 Landers quake was Califronia's strongest in 40 years and third strongest this century. Since the Landers and Big Bear quakes killed a child and injured more than 400 people, scientists have said that changes in underground stresses increased the risk of the "Big One" at least magnitude 7.

The new report by a group of state and federal agencies reflects the great uncertainty about quake forecasting. It says several factors "raise concern that a large earthquake might soon occur in Southern California." But another section adds: "The most likely case is that no large (magnitude over 7) earthquake will occur" within a few years.

■ AIDS

continued from page 3

have been diagnosed with HIV and are living with AIDS, yet there remains no cure," said Mataya. "HIV does not discriminate. Use a latex barrier when having sex, every time you have sex."

World AIDS Day was begun in 1988 by the World Health Organization to offer global community response to the AIDS epidemic. In Massachusetts, 5,384 people have been diagnosed with AIDS. In the country, there are 25,947 women with AIDS and 212,148 men with the disease.

The highest number of newly reported cases of HIV is among heterosexual women, according to Mataya, who said women continue to die from the disease without ever being diagnosed with AIDS.

"Women die four times faster than men diagnosed with AIDS and often are not able to receive disability insurance from our government because of institutionalized misogyny," said Ali Woolwich, LBGA awareness week coordinator who also organized the die-in, who said not enough attention is given to women and AIDS.

Woolwich praised Massachusetts for being one the few states to have anonymous testing sites which allow a person to be tested as a number and not a name so it is not part of their medical record. She said she is opposed to Weld's efforts to make testing sites only confidential, and to allow the test to be put on a medical record.

One of the people who participated in the die-in, Christine Murphy, a senior double majoring in women's studies and journalism, said she got involved to actively fight AIDS because, "I couldn't stand to watch it go on any longer."

"Peop.> don't do enough about AIDS on this campus and in our culture," said Murphy, who said the disease encompasses sex and morality, two issues she considers the least spoken about.

"We want to make students aware of AIDS and what they can do to save their lives and loved ones," Mataya said. "We want to wake up the campus and let them know there's a problem and what they can do about it."

"Unless we educate ourselves and our loved ones, and unless our government takes an active role in finding a cure, millions more will die," Mataya said.

Ashe calls for overcoming homophobia

By TOM COYNE
Associated Press

MYSTIC, Conn. — Changing the way homosexuals are viewed is one of the biggest obstacles in the battle against AIDS, former tennis great Arthur Ashe said Monday night.

"Unless you address the issue of homophobia it will be difficult to make headway with the AIDS issue," Ashe said at The Associated Press Sports Editors Northeast Region meeting. "We have to find ways to deal with these feelings and attitudes about gays and to influence these groups."

Ashe, who founded the Arthur Ashe Foundation for the Defeat of AIDS after it was revealed in April he had AIDS, said the anti-gay sentiment is masking the real danger. He said experts fear complacency about AIDS by heterosexuals.

"In terms of the number of gays, there's almost a finite number. But in terms of heterosexuals, there's a limiteless supply. It can spread exponentially," he said.

He said that side issues, such as how a person contracted AIDS, should be of no interest.

"It's distracting because the motivation behind the question of heterosexuals is the titillation that maybe someone will make a statement that will later turn out to be false," he said. "I try to separate the medical issues from the social issues. But it's not going to stop until more heterosexual, HIV-positive individuals go public long before they are on their deathbed. That's when it will slow down."

Ashe, who contracted the disease during heart surgery in 1983, learned he had AIDS in 1988 when his right hand went numb during a vacation. He thought he had suffered a stroke. He had an AIDS-related brain infection.

Ashe calls himself a survivor and said with the help of pills and vitamins, which he spends $18,000 a year on — taking handfuls of pills four or five times a day — he feels pretty well.

"I lead a normal life with the exception of talking to groups such as yourselves," Ashe said.

He told the newspaper sports editors one of the reasons he wanted to speak to them was that he thought he might reach the segment of the population most vulnerable to AIDS but least educated about it.

"We have to be more creative in how we pass along the information, how we get people to listen," he said. "We have to educate, even cajole — coerce, if necessary — people into listening to the facts."

Earlier Monday, Ashe was in Cambridge, Mass., to receive the first AIDS Leadership Award from the Harvard AIDS Institute, an organization created in 1988 to promote research, education and policies regarding AIDS.

Ashe said that mere knowledge about AIDS isn't enough to stop it from spreading.

"I've tried to go to great lengths to point out just knowing what to do is not enough," Ashe said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., praised Ashe's efforts, saying he "has turned a personal tragedy into the potential to save lives."

Take the GRE Test on Computer

ETS approved - convenient immediate scores

Sylvan Learning Center

WOBURN (617) 933-9480
WORCESTER (508)795-1140

haircuts always $10!
Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256-0733

It'sLATE!

EARN A FREE TRIP!*
Be a Spring Break Rep with Campus Get-Aways
Call Now
800-2-CANCUN

The Collegian can control your very destiny, little student, so you'd better have some respect for us. NOW we're playing with power!

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA
PERMANENTS $45
Make an appointment between 9am and 1pm with Heather, Liz, or Terri and your permanent will be only $45!
Good Monday through Friday.

Eating Disorder Programs • Fall 1992
Sponsored by University Health Services
• • •
Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays and Wednesdays Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
• • •
Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Condos., seeking quiet responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

■ Reds

continued from page 12

naughty Margie."

Baseball needs to send a message that racism cannot and will not be tolerated. It is especially crucial right now, as baseball prepares to expand, and next year, to negotiate a new national television contract. And it is crucial for baseball's executive ruling board to show strong leadership in the wake of the resignation of Fay Vincent as commissioner. Seventy-two years ago Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's first commisioner, set the standard for strong, effective leadership when he suspended eight players for life after they admitted to a gambling conspiracy, citing that they were a poison to the game. Racists are no different, and deserve the same fate.

Luke Erikson is a Collegian columnist

■ Florida

continued from page 12

"They've got five NBA players on that team and that's not counting [point guard and football quarterback] Charlie Ward," Calipari said. "He can play in the NFL or the NBA."

Ward, the starting quarterback of the third-ranked Florida State football team, will not join the basketball squad until after the New Year's Day bowl games.

Calipari is wary of getting beaten badly on national television.

"If this wasn't on T.V. I'd give us a chance," Calipari said. "But Florida State is one of those teams which wants to play big on television.

PROBABLE STARTING LINEUPS
At Tallahassee, Fla.
7:30 p.m. ESPN

No. 19 MASSACHUSETTS (0-0)

G	Derek Kellogg	6-3	So.
G	Jerome Malloy	6-4	So.
C	Harper Williams	6-7	Sr.
F	Tony Barbee	6-6	Sr.
F	Louis Roe	6-7	So.

No. 11 FLORIDA STATE (2-2)

G	Sam Cassell	6-3	Sr. 19.8 ppg
G	Bob Sura	6-5	So. 25.5 ppg
C	Andre Reid	7-0	Jr. 3.8 ppg
F	Rodney Dobard	6-9	Sr. 8.3 ppg
F	Doug Edwards	6-9	Sr. 18.7 ppg

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

Harper Williams and the 19th ranked University of Massachusetts basketball team begin their run at a second straight NCAA Tournament appearance tonight at Florida State.

BoSox ink free agent Fletcher

Infielder signs two-year deal worth $1.2 million

BOSTON (AP)- Free agent infielder Scott Fletcher says he hopes to win a starting job in Boston by signing a two-year contract with the Red Sox worth $1.2 million.

Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman confirmed the signing Tuesday, saying Fletcher will give the team "experience and versatility in the infield."

Fletcher rejected an offer to remain with the Milwaukee Brewers, informing Brewers general manager Sal Bando of his decision.

"We offered him a two-year deal, too, and told him we were willing to match Boston's money," Bando said. "He told me it came down to an opportunity to start."

"I really enjoyed it in Milwaukee and would have loved to come back, but I want a chance to play on an every-day basis," Fletcher said from his home in Arlington, Texas. "With Boston, I'll have a chance to win a job at second base."

Boston told Fletcher, 34, he will compete with Tim Naerhing for the starting job at second. Fletcher had a career .262 batting average in just over 10 seasons. His best year was 1986 in Texas when he hit .300 in 147 games with a career-high 34 doubles.

Fletcher was to have a utility role with the Brewers next season. Bill Spiers is expected to return from back surgery that sidelined him for most of the 1992 season.

"I want to give Scott the No. 1 shot and (Pat) Listach certainly deserves it, too," Brewers manager Phil Garner said. "That's the way we're going to go. I couldn't tell Scott he was going to compete for a starting job."

Listach was the American League Rookie of the Year.

Fletcher began the 1992 season in a utility role, but became the team's regular second basemen because of his steady play. In 123 games, he batted .275 with 51 RBIs. He had only four errors in 106 games at second base. He hit .336 with runners in scoring position.

"He was always ready to play and he never complained," Garner said. "You appreciate that. I wish him the best because he deserves it."

Fletcher was released by the Chicago White Sox after batting a career-low .206 in 1991. He signed with the Brewers in training camp for $200,000 and made another $100,000 in bonuses.

"I had a lot of fun in Milwaukee," Fletcher said. "I have a tremendous amount of respect for Sal and Phil and the entire organization. This is just an opportunity to play and have a chance to start, as opposed to a utility role. I wish the Brewers the best."

You never get a second chance to make a first impression. That's why we always do it right the first time.
The Collegian. Don't hate us because we're beautiful.

The Collegian

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Rounding One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs, immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

SPRING BREAK '93
Non-Stop Air • (7) Nights Hotel • Taxes • Club Discounts • Transfers • Activities Program
CANCUN from $399
BAHAMAS from $409
JAMAICA from $439
SOUTH PADRE from $469
FLORIDA from $109
For free brochure call
Breakaway Travel
1-800-862-7325
(Deposits due by December 15)

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
- 20c per word per day for students
- Cash in advance
- Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. - Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Spanish speakers Earn $$$ Need fluent Spanish speakers (Native or non-native) for Psychology reading study. Call Maria 545-0693

AUTO FOR SALE

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall special Small Cheese $3.50 Large Cheese $6.00 1 or 2 toppings add $1.00 Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti 549-6098 549-6073 MUST MENTION THIS AD!

FOR RENT

Amherst Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes call 586-4270

Laverett -- close to campus -- room in sunny home in exchange for 12 hours of childcare per week plus some light housekeeping duties. Must be available for early morning (7 am- 3:30 pm) and some afternoons (3:30 - 5 pm) Car essential some transporting of children. 548-9395

Take over Brandywine lease 2 bedrooms incs. heat and hot water, great location $750/month starts end of Jan.! Call Lori or Laura 549-4816

Two females for double bedroom Presidential apts 162 Each + 549-4705

FOR SALE

HP inkjets for less than retail price also no tax! Call 549-7742

Neat things: Mens black leather trench (40); Hugo Boss suits (42 r & L), 14K 20 inch herringbone chain (23.5 grams); Jeep top for CJ-7; Hitachi 30 Watt reciever; Hafler modified bookshelf speakers; BSR speakers. Reasonable BO's....John 323-9311.

10K gold ring with smell diamond size 5 $40 Women's black leather jacket size M with thinsulate lining $200 253-3757

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

FOUND

2 pairs of glasses: 1 in a grey corduroy case -- the glasses are brown the other in a blue case from Mass Bay Eye Associates -- they have a partial gold frame. Contact Justin 549-6120

HELP WANTED

Drivers $7-$10 per hour Start immediately Apply Domino's Pizza 241 King St. Northampton

Holiday jobs for the environment Work with MASSpirg to pass the toughest environmental laws in the country. • Learn campaign skills • Stop Pollution • Make a differance! Call Carman 256-6434

Internationel Employment -- Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits. Financially culturally rewarding. For program call: (206)632-1146 ext. J5001

IMMEDIATE OPENINGS
RGIS Inventory specialists needs reliable people to take inventory for various retailers in the Worcester , Leominster areas. This is a flexible, part time position with day or night and weekend hours avail $6.00 per hour to start
Comprehensive training provided
Private transportation required
Travel Reimbursment
For an interview please call (508)832-6153 Monday through Friday between 10 am to 4 pm

Local party shop hiring immediately call 549-1430

Need holiday cash? Telefund is hiring $5.25/hour plus bonuses. Stop by the basement of memorial hall for an application or call 545-3509

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.Call 1-800-351-ESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost silver and torquoise claddaugh ring somewhere on campus 11/19. If found call 253-2733.

PERSONALS

Tonight there is no longer Anyone named TimL The boy is dead Happy 21st to the man Scott Amirault Love Growie Nikki Joe and D Freakin Mo

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508-228-6265

ROOMATES WANTED

Male roomate needed to share large bedroom. 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

Need 2 girls to take over our lease for Sping 1993 There are 3 of us and 2 of us are graduating! Call anytime 549-8248

Single room avail. inspacious house sping sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo+.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings Call Chris 256-8393

SHIATSU PRACTITIONER

Shiatsu massage focused on stress management $20/hr. Hayley 256-0608

TRAVEL

Take it off! Spring Break '93 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida Save $$$ Before Jan. 1 Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Cheap Typing! $1/page call Cope 6-1355

IBM word processing No job too big or small. $1/page Jay 549-2616 evenings

Papers typed free cover page, spell check. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

Typing: Fast, accurate and conveniently located to serve your needs. No job too small. Resonable rates. Contact Donna/Dianne 642-2313

WANTED

Fraternity is looking to buy unneeded sofas, chairs and coffee tables. Any questions call Dan at 549-4646

Sports

Florida State Univ. provides primetime party

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Most coaches like to ease their teams into the season with a few tune up games before battling big time teams.

University of Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari does not have such an opportunity, as his Minutemen open their season in the hot seat — at the Tallahassee-Leon County Civic Center tonight against No. 11 Florida State (7:30 p.m., ESPN).

Adding to Calipari's worries is the fact that UMass forward Tony Barbee is questionable, due to an ankle injury, for tonight's game.

Barbee injured his right ankle Sunday afternoon during a scrimmage and has sat out of practice since then. The injury is a result of aggravated bone spurs in the ankle, according to athletic trainer Bob Williams.

Barbee insists he will play against the Seminoles (2-2).

"I am going to play, this isn't serious enough to keep me out," Barbee said.

If Barbee cannot play, look for freshman Dana Dingle to start in the senior's place.

However, even with a healthy Barbee, Calipari was concerned his No. 19 Minutemen would be outgunned by Florida State.

"They are bigger, stronger, faster and more experienced at every position than we are," Calipari said. "Talent-wise we don't compare, but we can't control that. What we can control is playing harder than they do and I don't know if we'll do that either."

Florida State coach Pat Kennedy described UMass as a program on the rise.

"UMass can play with anybody," Kennedy said. "They have great players on that team. They will give us a very tough game. They never stop hustling and hitting the boards."

Florida State (2-2) advanced to the semifinals of the Pre-Season NIT with victories over Siena and Iowa State. In the semifinals FSU dropped an overtime decision to eventual champion No. 2 Indiana (81-78) and lost the consolation game to 16th-ranked UCLA, 86-83.

Calipari says by playing four regular season games already Florida State has a significant advantage.

"I would much rather be in their shoes and have played four games," Calipari said. "I still do not know what to expect from my team, but I'll know after Wednesday night.

"FSU has lost two in a row and we're next," Calipari said. "I expect them to play their hearts out, they will press us and play us very physically. They need this win and they'll play like it."

Florida State is lead by All-American candidate 6-foot-9 forward Doug Edwards, who is averaging 18.7 ppg and eight boards a game this season. Edwards is joined up front by 6-foot-9 forward Rodney Dobard and 7-foot center Andre Reid.

The pressure will be on the Massachusetts' frontcourt to perform against some steep competition.

"They've got some good players but we just have do our things well," UMass forward Harper Williams said. "It's a challenge, but that makes me want to play harder."

In the backcourt Seminole coach Pat Kennedy will start senior Sam Cassell (19.8 ppg) at the point and sophomore three-point bomber Bob Sura (25.5 ppg) as the shooting guard.

Turn to FLORIDA, page 11

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN
Mike Williams and the University of Massachusetts Minutemen are in Tallahassee, Fla. tonight to take on the 11th ranked Florida State Seminoles in the season opener for UMass.

UMASS
University of Massachusetts
Women's Basketball

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL 1992-93 SCHEDULE

Dec.	1	at Northeastern	7:30 p.m.
Dec.	4	at Pal's Cabin/Mayfair Farms Classic
		Seton Hall vs. Rider	7 p.m.
		UMass vs. Howard	9 p.m.
Dec.	5	Third place game	5 p.m.
		Championship game	7 p.m.
Dec.	9	at New Hampshire	6:30 p.m.
Dec.	12	HARVARD	2 p.m.
Dec.	14	OHIO STATE	7 p.m.
Dec.	28	at Wagner College X-Mas Tourney
		Middle Tennessee State vs. Yale	5:30 p.m.
		Wagner vs. UMass	7:30 p.m.
Dec.	29	Third place game	5:30 p.m.
		Championship game	7:30 p.m.
Jan.	2	at Central Connecticut State	2 p.m.
Jan.	6	SIENA	7 p.m.
Jan.	9	at Temple	6 p.m.
Jan.	12	at Hofstra	5 p.m.
Jan.	18	TEMPLE	7 p.m.
Jan.	23	ST. BONAVENTURE	2 p.m.
Jan.	25	at George Washington	7 p.m.
Jan.	28	ST. JOSEPH'S	7 p.m.
Jan.	30	WEST VIRGINIA	2 p.m.
Feb.	4	at St. Bonaventure	7 p.m.
Feb.	6	at West Virginia	3 p.m.
Feb.	10	RUTGERS	7 p.m.
Feb.	13	RHODE ISLAND	2 p.m.
Feb.	18	GEORGE WASHINGTON	7 p.m.
Feb.	22	at St. Joseph's	7:15 p.m.
Feb.	27	at Rutgers	2 p.m.
Mar.	2	BOSTON UNIVERSITY	7 p.m.
Mar.	6	at Rhode Island	2 p.m.
Mar.	11-13	Atlantic 10 Championships at George Washington University

SPORTS NOTICE

Student Activity Cards will be handed out from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today at the Curry Hicks Cage. In addition, tickets for the game against Central Connecticut willl be handed out Thursday at the Cage from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. The game against Central Connecticut will be held Saturday at 7 p.m in the Cage.

Reds owner Schott strikes out

The baseball world was rocked earlier this week, when Cincinnati Reds owner, Marge Schott, was accused of making racist and anti-Semitic statements in both public and in private.

Yesterday, the Major League Baseball executive council, the game's ruling body in the absence of a Commissioner, met to discuss the allegations. The ruling body includes ex-oficio chairman Bud Selig, owner of the Milwaukee Brewers, NL president Bill White, AL president Bobby Brown, and eight club owners, including Boston's Haywood Sullivan.

Luke
ERICKSON

If the ruling body determines the accusations are true, Schott can reprimanded, fined up to $250,000, suspended, or ultimately, removed from ownership, utilizing the "best interests of baseball" clause in the Major League agreement.

The accusations were made by two former employees in legal depositions. They cite slurs against African-Americans, Jews, and Japanese on several occasions. The accusations have been made as part of a wrongful-firing suit filed by ex-Reds controller Tim Sabo, who alleges that Schott fired him because Sabo opposed her discriminatory hiring practices.

Currently, there is only one Black in the Cincinnati front office staff of 45. In the remaining 27 clubs, Blacks comprise 9% of front-office personnel, and all minorities, 16%.

Schott has allegedly referred to former outfielders Eric Davis and Dave Parker as her "million-dollar niggers." Schott has denied the quote, but has admitted to using the slur in jest.

Schott has not denied accusations of using the slurs of "Jap" and "money-grubbing Jews." She has been quoted as saying that "Hitler was good in the beginning, but went too far," in reference to German relatives and World War II.

This is the second major scandal concerning racial slurs in organized baseball in the last five years. In 1987, before a live national audience on ABC's "Nightline", then-Los Angeles Dodgers executive Al Campanis said that Blacks lack the capacities for top-level jobs in baseball. Campanis was summarily fired, and baseball given a wake-up call. Since then, minority hiring has noticeably improved, evidenced by the hirings of Frank Robinson, Cito Gaston, Hal McRae, Felipe Alou, Don Baylor and Tony Perez as managers. Dusty Baker is expected to be named as the San Francisco Giants any day now, and will become the sixth minority manager out of 28 teams.

Clearly, if these accusations are true, and Schott's denials thus far are very weak, to say the least, then Schott should be stripped of her ballclub and made an example of. Baseball, which has come a long way since 1947, when Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier, cannot afford to give a slap on the wrist and say "naughty.

Turn to REDS, page 11

Ingoglia cops conference honor

Minutemen tailback named YanCon's top newcomer

The University of Massachusetts football team has added one more award to their trophy case, as the Yankee Conference has named freshmen tailback Rene Ingoglia as their 1992 Rookie-of-the-Year.

Ingoglia, a 5-foot-11-inch, 190 pound redshirt freshmen out of Rochester, NY, finished fifth in the conference in rushing with an average of 82.0 yards per game. Ingoglia rushed for 656 yards while scoring seven touchdowns for head coach Mike Hodges.

Twice named Yankee Conference Rookie-of-the-Week, after the Boston University and Connecticut games, Ingoglia was hampered by a late season ankle injury which prevented him from playing in both the Richmond and Maine games before returning in the season finale versus New Hampshire.

Ingoglia becomes the fourth UMass player to be named the Rookie-of-the-Year in the last eight seasons, with the last being Ingoglia's counterpart at tailback, John Johnson.

The award caps a two-year comeback trail for Ingoglia, who severely injured his knee as a senior at Rochester's Bishop Kearney High School, where it was feared that Ingoglia may never play football again.

–CHRIS CUDDY

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Rene Ingoglia was named the Yankee Conference's 1992 Rookie-of-the-Year on Monday, after rushing for 656 yards

Thursday December 3, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 57

Flurries in the morn'. Clear in the eve. Highs in the 40's.

This Weekend:
Feeling blue? If so the Indigo Girls could, and probably will, snap you out of it when they play the UMass Fine Arts Center on Sunday night. Page W1.

Sports:
UMass gave 11th-ranked Florida State a run for its money, but came out on the short end of the stick, 67-64. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

UN curbs U.S. power in Somalia

By ANDREW KATELL
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. military commanders will have to give up the free reign they had in the Persian Gulf War and accept some U.N. oversight of the troops in Somalia, diplomats said Wednesday.

But a U.S. draft resolution for the Security Council leaves the door open for a U.S. general to command a proposed American force in the famine-wracked nation. Diplomats also said daily operations will probably be left to field commanders.

"The United States is likely to be commanding the operation," Sir David Hannay, Britain's ambassador, told reporters on Tuesday. Pentagon sources have said 12,000 to 20,000 U.S. troops might be sent to Somalia to get food to more than 1 million Somalis threatened by starvation. The Bush administration had offered up to 30,000 troops.

An international relief operation has been hamstrung by feuding Somali warlords and bandits in the lawless East African nation. The State Department says 1,000 people in Somalia are dying every day of starvation and disease. The death toll already exceeds 300,000.

The draft resolution is part of a compromise Washington is forging to win the support of China, which has threatened to veto a free-wheeling U.S.-led operation. African nations are also worried about U.S. domination of their continent.

The compromise was one of the issues to be discussed in a closed-door Security Council meeting Wednesday.

The Pentagon had sought complete control over its forces, including the right to decide when to withdraw. But U.S. diplomats realized it might be opposed by some Security Council members and indicated they would accept some degree of U.N. oversight.

The United States met earlier in the day with representatives of the other permanent council members: China, Russia, Britain and France.

The 15-nation Security Council was expected to adopt a resolution Thursday or Friday authorizing a U.S.-led multinational force to safeguard emergency food and medical shipments.

According to an early U.S. draft of the resolution, member states could use troops in Somalia "after consultations with the secretary-general for the command and control of their forces."

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
CULTURE CULTURE ON THE WALL . . . — Some smart students are getting the jump on their holiday shopping this year at the poster sale going on in the Student Union Ballroom. Current faves, as always, include Smilin' Jack Nicholson and Dreadly Bob Marley.

Tension mounts in Cambodia

Guerrillas hold hostages, fire on U.N. peacekeepers

By SHEILA McNULTY
Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Khmer Rouge guerrillas refused Wednesday to release six unarmed U.N. peacekeepers, escalating tensions that threaten an accord on ending Cambodia's 13-year civil war.

U.N. officials said a helicopter sent to look for the truce monitors was hit by gunfire, and a French officer on the craft suffered a back wound.

"This is very unfortunate and very surprising," U.N. spokesman Eric Falt said. "Certainly the eyes of the world, the international community, are going to be looking at this episode very carefully. I'm sure [the Khmer Rouge] understands that it will have repercussions."

In another development, Falt said six U.N. police were wounded Wednesday when their vehicles ran over newly laid anti-tank mines on a road near Siem Reap, 140 miles northwest of Phnom Penh. He said Khmer Rouge and government troops both operate in the area, so it was unclear who laid the mines.

The U.N. Security Council voted Monday to impose economic sanctions on the Khmer Rouge for refusing to disarm under terms of the peace accord they signed a year ago with Cambodia's government and two other rebel groups.

The Khmer Rouge also have refused to give U.N. monitors unrestricted access to the 10 percent to 20 percent of the countryside they control, and its leaders are boycotting the U.N. effort to organize democratic

Turn to CAMBODIA, page 7

Civil Rights fight said to help women

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

The desire for racial equality caused many African-American women to gain strength through their involvement in the Civil Rights Movement, according to a long-time civil rights activist.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Judy Richardson

Judy Richardson, a television producer and civil rights worker, spoke on "Women in the Civil Rights Movement" in the Campus Center last night.

"[The Civil Rights Movement] changed how I saw myself, my community, and my nation. It changed my entire view," Richardson said.

Richardson highlighted the Montgomery Bus Boycott of 1956, one of the major events in the Civil Rights Movement. She also related her college experiences with sit-ins and demonstrations, which led to her involvement in the the Student Non-violent Coordination Committee.

The Montgomery Bus Boycott was sparked by an African-American woman, Rosa Parks, who refused to move to an area designated for African-Americans in the back of a bus in Montgomery, Ala.

Richardson pointed out that people today tend to view Parks as "poor, tired Rosa" and treat the incident as one of victimization, instead of courage."It denies the greatness of her act," said Richards.

Richardson also said many people don't know that Parks was involved with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the time, working as a secretary for its local chapter and heading a local NAACP youth group.

Richardson also tried to dispel the belief that the Parks' incident was the first of its kind. "That wasn't the first time she refused to get up, and there had been other cases, too," Richardson said.

It was the effort of JoAnne Robinson, a professor at Alabama State, who turned Parks' incident into the Montgomery Bus Boycott. Upon hearing of Parks' arrest, Robinson put out 35,000 leaflets calling for a "one-day bus boycott," in protest of segregation.

In fact, the Montgomery Bus Boycott lasted 381 days. "8,000-10,000 people a day were transported," Richardson said. "Individuals and Black taxi companies worked through dispatch services to move everyone."

Richardson's TV credentials include being associate producer of the series "Eyes of the Prize," a two-part civil rights movement series which aired for six hours in 1987 and eight hours this year.

Richardson was also the co-producer of a documentary on Malcolm X, which is to air on PBS' "American Experience" in the Fall of 1993.

Richardson also explained how she became involved in the civil rights movement. "I was born in Tarrytown, N.Y., where there were no Black-owened

Turn to RIGHTS, page 6

Smith stalker gets two years

NORTHAMPTON (AP) — A man accused of stalking and harrassing a Smith College graduate for two years has been ordered to serve two years in prison for violation of probation.

"I keep sitting up here thinking I can't be shocked, but I am every day," Hampshire Superior Court Judge George C. Keady said in sentencing John Boyer. "He is to have no contact at all (with the victim), not even by thought."

Boyer, 29, of Wilbraham was accused of following Amy E. Ralph, 24, to Pennsylvania and Chicago after they both acted in a Northampton play in 1990. Among other things prosecutors said he mailed her a dead rat and sent a letter to the college alumni magazine claiming he was her brother and she had died of AIDS.

At the time he was on probation following a 1986 conviction and prison sentence for shooting a woman student, who had spurned his advances, in the arm during an attempted kidnapping at Western New England College.

Boyer also faces trial in U.S. District Court in Springfield next month on charges stemming from a July message left on Ralph's telephone answering machine in Pennsylvania.

"He's off the streets and that's two more

Turn to STALKER, page 7

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Feilner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003

phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

IT'S THE END OF THE SEMESTER AS WE KNOW IT / AND I FEEL STRESSED

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• University police received two complaints of annoying telephone calls from women in the Southwest Residential area. On Tuesday, a woman reported receiving a call of an obscene nature from a male. On Wednesday at 1 a.m., a different woman reported the same incident to police.

• A man reported the theft of his bicycle to police on Tuesday. The bike was reportedly locked to a construction scaffolding on the 23rd floor of Washington Residence Hall at 2 p.m. when it was stolen, according to police. Police value the bicycle at $170.

• A woman reported the theft of her hubcap from the wheel of her car to police on Tuesday evening. At 7:30 p.m., the woman discovered the hubcap missing from her car in Lot 49. Police value the hubcap at $62.

Physicians urge ban on nukes

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press

BOSTON — A group of doctors and peace activists marked Wednesday's golden anniversary of the world's first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction with a call for an end to nuclear weapons.

"It was 50 years ago today that a very dangerous nuclear genie was let out of the bottle," said Rep. Barbara Hildt, D-Amesbury.

Hildt joins members of two doctors' organization — Physicians for Social Responsibility and International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War — in urging President-elect Clinton to support the "Manhattan Project II."

Named for the project that developed the atomic bomb, the Manhattan Project II was conceived by Daniel Ellsberg, the former Defense Department employee who leaked the so-called Pentagon Papers to The New York Times. It calls for "the near-abolition of nuclear weapons and the identification of those conditions that would enable all nations to abolish nuclear weapons completely without jeopardizing their national security."

Flanked at a Statehouse news conference by about 30 children — members of the "Kids Earth Chorus" — Hildt and George Ellsworth, regional director of Physicians for Social Responsibility, urged Clinton and Congress to support several anti-nuclear initiatives, including:

• An immediate ban on building nuclear weapons, and the quick dismantling and disposal of all weapons.
• A United States "no first use" policy.
• Cleanup of nuclear facilities.

"For the sake of our children and our world, it's time to disarm," Hildt said.

Citing UN estimates, Ellsworth said by the year 2000 there will be an additional 430,000 cancer deaths worldwide caused by nuclear test explosions done up to 1980.

Led by Enrico Fermi, 42 students, scientists and laborers gathered in a University of Chicago squash court on Dec. 2, 1942, to witness the power that would fuel the atomic bomb — and ultimately much more. Now nuclear power provides 17 percent of the world's electricity.

Scientific study unearths space junkyard

By JOHN MARCUS
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Mass. — Researchers from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology are adding to the litter of outer space this week, but all in the name of science.

In an experiment designed at MIT's Lincoln Laboratory, six tiny spheres will be released from the orbiting space shuttle Discovery to fine-tune a radar system that can track down debris left in space by explorers from Earth. The advance is meant to protect NASA's planned space station.

"They want to know how much stuff is up there, how big it is and that kind of thing," said Walter Wells, assistant to the lab's director.

Lincoln Laboratory operates a powerful radar at the Haystack Observatory in Westford, Mass. that is being redesigned to measure space debris, said Wells. This week's experiment will test the radar's ability to spot the smallest objects.

"Virtually no other radars have the ability to look at stuff that's that far away and as small as a ping-pong ball," said Gerry Banner, the laboratory's chief of space surveillance.

More than 6,000 individual pieces of debris have been catalogued — fragments of satellites and booster rockets orbiting at an average speed of 17,500 miles per hour — and scientists think that is only one-tenth of the total.

A speck of space debris is believed to have chipped a window of the space shuttle Endeavor on a mission earlier this year, and shuttles last year twice had to swerve to avoid hitting chunks of old Russian rockets.

SMITH COLLEGE
School For Social Work

Join Us For

INFORMATION DAY

Saturday
Dec. 5, 1992
2:00 p.m.

WRIGHT HALL AUDITORIUM
SMITH CAMPUS

Presentation by faculty, administration, and students followed by an opportunity to address questions to the panel about graduate training and careers in human services.

Refreshments served.
Call 585-7950 / 7960
for more information.

ALLIED STUDENTS AGAINST PREJUDICE
MEETING DEC. 3, 7:30 PM
ROOM 101 CAMPUS CENTER

TOPICS TO DISCUSS: RAINBOW PATROLS
AND EDUCATIONAL THEATER

RAINBOW PATROLS are groups of students who will roam the campus on weekends to educate about racism and other forms of oppression. This is a proactive and educational group.

The EDUCATIONAL THEATER will start next semester and will go into classrooms and residence halls to do skits and lead discussions about all forms of prejudice.

COME FIND OUT HOW YOU CAN GET INVOLVED

Local News

Lighting it up

The Student Assembly at the University of Texas recently passed a resolution demanding the University Regents' Rules be modified, repealing mandatory disciplinary action for the possession of less than one ounce of marijuana.

According to The Daily Texan, the student newspaper on campus, the resolution also stated that the student body feels "being arrested, ejected from on-campus living quarters, or being suspended from the University are not appropriate penalties for marijuana possession."

The resolution was sponsored by P. Scott Ehlers, spokesperson for the UT chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Legislation.

The Daily Texan blasted the resolution in a Nov. 19 editorial, stating the Student Assembly had overstepped its boundaries.

"It is not the business of the SA to give opinions on legislative matters far beyond its limited scope," the editorial said.

The Daily Texan even criticizes the use of University funds to support the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Legislation.

While the student government's weak attempt at legalization is frivolous, it does make for interesting debates. I suggest everyone at UT get together and discuss it over bowling (tenpin that is).

Michigan masseuse

Now for the sex part of this week's column.

At Michigan State University an area man has set up a massage parlor which caters to college students, according to The State News, the campus paper.

The 24-year-old man named Tim ran an ad in The State News, which read "Think you can give a good massage? Talk to me if your open-minded, male or female, and have a desire to earn money. Call Tim."

The response brought about the hiring of three female MSU students, three local female strippers and four gay men. The clientele pay $2 per minute per massage which the worker performs in either lingerie or in the nude.

Tim splits the money with his employees 50/50 and each worker signs a contract stating they will not have sex with the clients.

However, and this is where it gets interesting, all of the women have been solicited for sex and some have had intercourse with the clients.

This brought the attention of the area police, who conducted a probe (no pun intended) on the business.

Tim said the "extras" are done at the free will of his employees and he does not charge extra for those services.

A State News reporter posed as an applicant for a masseuse position. She was never asked for her last name nor if she knew how to give a massage. She was asked her eye color, hair color, ethnic origin, bust size, weight, height and body build. Tim also asked if the women would be comfortable giving a nude or semi-nude massage.

The police report concluded that as long as the sexual acts where performed under consent and not charged for the business is legal. Tim claims the business performs three or four jobs a day.

Civil War

Back in the Lone Star state, on Thanksgiving night the University of Texas and Texas A&M celebrated their 100th year of football competition.

The two schools are fierce rivals in academics, social stature and athletics. For this season's contest, The Daily Texan ran a mean-spirited editorial, proclaiming "Unchecked Aggie (Texas A&M students) inbreeding will spell the state's ruin."

The editorial went on to rip A&M, claiming Aggies "like other primates [and] engage in territorial scent-marking by thrusting their buttocks in others' faces."

The editorial claimed this might be the last generation of Aggies to walk upright.

An editorial like this could only appear in a state wh .re football is more important than even oil.

For all their insults, The Daily Texan looked foolish because the fourth-ranked A&M team blew out UT in the game.

People's Market opens shop with DHS clean bill of health

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

People's Market re-opened Monday following a two-week closure to prevent the spread of hepatitis A after an employee was diagnosed with the disease.

When the Market first re-opened, very few customers came, according to cooperative member Brian McCarthy, a junior political science major. But after People's 26 UMass student members aggressively advertised throughout the campus, their regular customers were back, McCarthy said.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

David Wright, a senior Comlit major, gives Douglas Utter, a senior STPEC major, his change back at the newly reopened People's Market.

"[Patronage] was down on Monday. But after our avid campaign it came to pretty normal on Tuesday," said McCarthy, as he waited on the long line of customers at the register.

"Basically we are putting signs up everywhere," McCarthy added.

About two weeks ago, People's Market's Steering Committee notified the Department of Health and Safety saying one of their food handlers had hepatitis A.

Hepatitis A is a nonfatal disease that is spread through fecal-oral transmission. All People's employees were given serum globulin (ISG) shots to immunize them from the disease. All the food that was exposed to the disease was thrown out, McCarthy said. Co-op members say the exact figures of their resulting financial losses are not in.

"We lost all the food we had direct contact with," McCarthy said. "We lost a lot of food, because we had to close for two weeks. We lost money and it was substantial."

Although the 19-year-old People's Market, the longest running student co-op, is owned by the University, the students keep none of the profits. Students manage the business through unanimous votes.

"We're owned by the University, but we collectively manage the business by ourselves. We set prices and keep inventory. We work closely with the Student Affairs Office and the Center for Student Businesses," McCarthy said. "We do make a small profit, but it goes back into the business."

"It makes a place where we are all on equal footing," said senior French major Sean O'Mannion, a People's Market employee.

By having all members share equal control, students are given an opportunity to experience all parts of the business, members said.

"It gives the opportunity to learn about something you normally would not do. I ended up being bookkeeper for two years. Now I really know how to run a small business," McCarthy said.

Students who apply to work at the co-op are interviewed by a committee of five members, said People's member Sarah Baackes, a junior communication disorders major.

"You don't pay a fee [to belong]," Baackes said. "You are payed an hourly wage depending on how long you have been there."

Because the business is expanding so rapidly, McCarthy said People's is outgrowing their space.

"I thank all the people who stood by and helped us by coming back when we reopened, especially the SGA, Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin, public health nurse Anne Lardner and people from Environmental Health and Safety," McCarthy said.

Author alleges U.S. cover-up of AIDS link

By AARON-JOHN RICADELA
Collegian Staff

The U.S. government has hidden a link between nuclear radiation, low birth weight and AIDS, according to a prominent author and biostatistician.

Dr. Jay M. Gould will bring this expose to the University of Massachusetts tonight, coinciding with this week's 50th anniversary of the atomic age. The talk is scheduled for 5 p.m. in room 136 of Arnold House.

Gould will discuss recent medical validations of predictions that radiation from nuclear fusion products damages human immune systems, and how the government has covered up evidence of this, said Alvin Winder, a co-sponsor of the talk.

Much of Gould's talk will draw from his latest book, Deadly Deceit: Low Level Radiation, High Level Cover Up, said Alvin Winder, a co-sponsor of the talk.

"As a biostatistician he has a lot of statistics showing that ionizing radiation from 1950s nuclear above-ground testing, emissions from nuclear plants, and the 1986 Chernobyl accident is responsible for significant low birth weight and infant mortality," Winder said.

Winder is a member of the Citizens Monitoring Network of Traprock Peace Center, which invited Gould in cooperation with the School of Public Health Graduate Students' Organization.

Gould, a former member of the Environmental Protection Agency Science Advisory Board, directs the Radiation and Public Health Projects of the United Church of Christ Commission on racial Justice. He is the author of five books and a former economic consultant.

Gould will discuss his theory of how AIDS began in central Africa because of rainfall laden with ionizing radiation, and how the U.S. Government has covered up nuclear emission levels and accidents at home, Winder said.

He cited Gould's example of a two-rod meltdown at the

Turn to AIDS, page 7

Senate votes funds for UVC employee

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The Undergraduate Student Senate voted last night to give the Union Video Center $9,580 to help fund the salary of a full-time engineer.

SGA Senator Ken Kaplan said in the past few years the Union Video Center has acquired more complicated electrical equipment, which needs the attention of a full-time engineer to keep operational and repair costs down.

"During the past four years, all the part-time engineers have left UVC because they were not paid enough money," said Ken Kaplan, an SGA senator.

Kaplan said the Center's request for money was reasonable because without it they would not be a successful cable station. "We want to make this the foremost University in the cable station area," he said.

Kaplan said UVC was run by students and not the Housing Cable network. "The students do all the producing and editing, but the equipment is too complex to not have an engineer," he said.

The SGA also allocated $1,020 to the African-American Society so they could buy office supplies and fund publicity expenses.

Dorothy Bennett, the chair of the finance committee, said, "Although this group has recently become active, they don't have the funds to be a viable group on campus."

Martin Jones, an Amherst resident, said the goal of the organization was to set up research study groups, provide academic support for members and promote retention of people of color at the University.

"We want to provide multicultural education for Black students and for all the other students on campus," Jones said.

"I am very pleased the SGA recognized the need for multicultural organizations on campus," said Thomas Simpson, the treasurer of the African-American Society.

Turn to SGA, page 7

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the entire Five College community.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Submissions must bear your name, local address and phone number in order to be considered for publication. This information is subject to verification.

Anonymous letters will be printed at the editor's discretion.

Letters should be no longer than 50 typed, double-spaced lines. Columns should not exceed 70 typed, double-spaced lines. Untyped submissions will not be considered for publication.

Responses to, or criticism of, columns, cartoons, articles or letters are limited to letter form (under 50 lines). Columns responding to previously published material will not be printed. Responses to or criticism of letters that themselves have responded to a letter, column or article will not be printed. Collegian staff are restricted from writing letters, but may write columns. Any exceptions will be determined solely by the editors.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writer and do not represent the views of the Collegian.

The Editorial staff is committed to honoring the above-mentioned policies in order to provide a forum for community discussion of issues.

Generalizations aren't respectful

I simply have to respond to Evelyn De Jesus' sweeping generalizations [Collegian, Nov. 18] and perhaps shed a bit of light in her direction.

Ms. De Jesus wrote about the University's desire to be the "utopia of a politically correct campus," and that being a goal most everyone could agree on. Then she veers off, demanding respect and understanding for those who consider themselves conservatives. This I could live with; as much as the Republican Club's bulletin board makes me ill, they have a right to be here as much as I do.

But it is after this point that Ms. De Jesus loses me, and her credibility. She begins a random bashing of those who she believes to be 1) not conservative and 2) think of themselves politically correct.

Her first chosen example undermines what she was previously advocating. "It is rare to hear pro-choice people say they respect a woman's decision to have a baby of an unplanned pregnancy... they will not support her either." Which pro-choice people have you been listening to? As a NARAL member and an intern, not to mention as a human being, I know this is warped, demented and dangerous propaganda.

The meaning of choice is that a woman has several options and only she can choose the best course of action. As long as a woman is making an honest decision, an unpressured decision from her heart, she's got my respect. But when you block the entrance to clinics, when you run up to any female passerby and plead with her, when you shove misinformation and grotesque fictitious "photos" in her face, is that respect? Is that understanding that other people's values can be different? When you offer your church, when you offer false promises of medical care, is that respect?

Next you attacked the individuals who take over buildings, i.e., most recently Memorial Hall. While one may not agree with their methods, isn't it the motives that count? That was never mentioned in your article, only cheap personal attacks. Their course of action may not have been agreeable to some, but I for one have to respect the fact that they made an attempt at doing something.

I'm trying to respect you views, Ms. De Jesus, but for a second here I thought I picked up the Minuteman. I do not find your gross generalizations or your sarcasm tolerant, respectful, or "politically correct."

Kristin Lee
Amherst

Educating a nation of fools

1) You are walking down the street and a telephone pole blocks your way. Do you:
a) Call the phone company and have it removed.
b) Walk around it.
c) Wait for someone else to walk by and see what they do.
d) Say to hell with it and move on to the next question. This test doesn't count for a grade and you've got to go to work soon.

In a couple months you'll be graduated and you won't have to worry about answering these silly questions anymore anyway.

Nathan
CRICK

Graduating from the Massachusetts public school system you might think I'd be inclined to circle the latter, as a new report has been issued that Massachusetts students "fared poorly on standardized testing, which for the first time measured the ability to think critically and apply knowledge." I'd hope if I took it that I wouldn't be among the 71 percent who failed to reach the minimum level of reasonable thought, but you never know. To tell you the truth, if I wouldn't then be held up for the world to see how ignorant American students are these days by the older generation I wouldn't mind so much.

However, I am afraid this report will give all the traditionalists the opportunity to start preaching from their moral pulpits about the way we are corrupting our children. "When I was [in school] in the 1960s and 1970s, America was the undisputed leader of the world in technology, agriculture and in every category across the board. We were the envy of the world. . . [Today] we have the highest rates of suicide, pregnancy and violence among our young, because it is 'unconstitutional' to tell them they are unique and created with an unlimited potential. . . More sex education courses, condoms, sensitivity awareness training, environmental indoctrination and more multiculturalist propaganda and globalism [are making] our children despise their unique heritage. . . [we must] discard the Deweyan concept of 'socializing' children and revert to the fundamentals that made us great — hard work, individual accountability, and trust in God."

Funny man to get front heading in the Sunday Republican editorial page. Makes me want to go crucify all those socialist teachers and the sissy principals that control the show. And to think, all this could be solved by hard work. Who woulda thunk it? Not me obviously. I'm just another socialized student who fell for all of that ridiculous environmental indoctrination. Stupid kid.

The fact remains, however, that Massachusetts high school as well as middle school students fared pretty miserably on these tests. It honestly comes as no surprise to me, and probably not to most of the public school teachers, nor to those of us who made it through the system alive and with our sanity somewhat intact. But we know the problem is not inherent in the school systems, or the teachers, or what we are taught and how. I disliked high school to a high degree, but it had nothing to do with the way I was taught. I actually liked most of my teachers — they were intelligent and friendly people. Go figure.

Scapegoats are real fun to accuse and hang on the nearest tree, but they are just the results of our own creation. The problem is our society — what we have become, and what we are scared to look at because it we are a nation of fools. Did we ever stop and wonder if all the budget cuts and school closings and teacher layoffs had anything to do with our declining educational quality? How many times have we watched educational tax override proposals be struck down by the hoard of voters who crawl out of the woodwork of our towns simply because they heard the word "tax?" How many suicides and dropouts does it take for us to realize that "kids these days" are faced with more conflicts and social pressures than acne and the occasional hickey?

Our nation's youth is disintegrating and we continue to blame the victims of our own neglect. Are we going to take all of our nation's problems of drug abuse and poverty and racism and single parents and child abuse, and with our own near-sightedness and ignorance blame it on our struggling schools?

Don't ask me. All this multicultural propaganda has just warped my head. I wish I would stop being so god-darn sensitive.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist

Senator supports divesity plans

On Tuesday Nov. 24 I met with Martin Walsh and Lawrence Turner, the two United States Department of Justice officials who facilitated the recent negotiations between students and the University administration regarding ways to improve the climate for diversity on campus. I was pleased to be briefed about the specific plan for change agreed to as a result of their efforts. I fully support the intent of these recommendations.

The entire University community — students, faculty and staff — must now commit itself to work together to implement the plan. As a citizen of Amherst and as a state legislator, I recognize that I have a responsibilty to help address issues of diversity in our society. I stand ready to assist the University at the level of state government in any way I can to achieve fair and fast implementation of the plan. The University has agreed to publish monthly press releases detailing improvements and shortcomings in the administration of the plan and to include me in their distribution list for these releases so I can monitor closely progress that is made or the reasons for lack of progress.

I consider fulfillment of these agreements and improvements of the campus' racial climate to be of great importance not just for the University community but for all the residents of our Commonwealth.

Stan Rosenberg
State Senator

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Here's a little tidbit to consider: our next president is a cat person. What does this mean for the country? Cats, as opposed to dogs, are very independent creatures and not easily trained. You don't suppose Clinton's fondness for Socks is a sign he'll have more respect for personal freedoms than Bush and Millie, Nixon and Checkers, and Reagan and his pack of wolves?

Tuesday was International AIDS Day. But according to a flyer pinned up around campus a few days before Thanksgiving, this week is Hug Week. The flyer reads, "Please write to your local editors regarding the scarcity/abundance real/genteel, heartfelt/timid issues you want addressed during Hug Week." It's a tad late for those letters now but apparently we've still got until this Sunday to engage in warm fuzzies before the winter chill sets in. Run out and violate someone's personal space today! (But ask first, OK?)

We've had our first snow already. Protest season is officially over. Deer season, on the other had, is just beginning. Leave your antlers at home.

A good friend of mine, former news editor and now employed journalist (they're so rare) Preston P. Forman, sent me some "True Crime" trading cards after he heard I'd expressed an interest in the serial killer cards. I have to say, they're pretty interesting. My favorite is Mary Flora Bell of Scotland. Born in 1957, the card says she was an "unruly child" who "declared she wanted 'to hurt people.

Marc
ELLIOTT

At the age of 11, she killed a three-year-old and a four-year-old while her friend Norma watched. Mary confessed and was sent to a special school and upon graduation was sent to prison. Norma, on the other hand, was acquitted. Playschool was never so dangerous.

How many University of Massachusetts trustees wear coneheads in public on a regular basis? At least one and it ain't Gordon Oakes or Derek Bok.

I saw the strangest bumper sticker the other day. If anyone knows what it means, please, let me know. "Nixon: Now more than ever." Is it saying we need to bring Nixon back? Maybe it's implying the government is more corrupt than ever? Maybe it's a Mojo Nixon promotional sticker? I don't know. Please help.

Mullins, Mullins, Mullins... What are we going to do with you? I mean besides basketball. MONSTER TRUCKS! MONSTER TRUCKS! MONSTER TRUCKS! RACING! RACING! RACING! WHEN? SUNDAAAAY! Bring on the WWF's Ultimate Warrior, I'll take 'em on. Wait a minute. I know. TRACTOR PULL!

U.S. Rep. John Olver wants his money back from the political hit men he hired to find some dirt on his Republican challenger Patrick Larkin. Olver was re-elected in November but misinformation about Larkin's supposed job history provided by an "opposition research firm" embarrassed Olver, almost costing him the election. If I hired a hit man to kill a guy named Joe and he instead shot me in the foot, would I get a refund?

Marc Elliott is a Collegian columnist.

Concerned stomach takes stand on weekend frivolity

The rush to my brain began again and I leaned forward for the cool porcelain before me. I closed my eyes and winced as my stomach rejected the poison — in this case, a mixture of Canadian whiskey, ginger ale and Rolling Rock — I had offered it earlier.

"Are you okay in there?" a friend asked. I answered with my best imitation of a possessed Regan from the horror classic The Exorcist. The process repeated itself — get sick, drink water, feel ill, go back to step one — and I cursed my own stupidity.

I had overdone it. Having lost track of what I had consumed and during what time frame, I inserted way too much alcohol for my body to handle. Fortunately, my stomach was looking out for me and expelled what I had given it. Taking great pains to be thorough, it also repeated the process well after the danger was past, just to make sure it wouldn't have to deal with such foolishness again.

I wound up crashing at a friend's house that night. Crash is a good word for what I did, too, because I felt like one of those 11-car accidents they used to show on "C.H.I.P.s." You name the symptom, I had it: sweats, nausea, chills, more nausea and a big sense of disappointment that I'd failed to stay in control of the situation.

"Don't worry," some told me. "It happens to everyone sooner or later." True enough — many times uptown, I've seen what I must have looked like. You've witnessed it, too: people getting sick in alleys and garbage cans, making fools of themselves while their pals laugh and/or get pissed off that they have to deal with this poor slob, making sure he or she survives the ordeal.

This is supposed to be fun?

Greg
SUKIENNIK

Now before you turn the page to find out what happened to Jim and Mr. Peterson today in Jim's Journal, let me assure you I'm not going to get heavy on you all at once. No preaching, no public declarations of my intent to stay sober and no condemnations. That's neither my style nor my intent.

However, if I had been using what little brain I have, I would've known that mixing whiskey and beer is a no-no. I would've remembered what it's like to throw up repeatedly and violently and would've avoided that sad spectacle at all costs. I would've avoided making a complete fool out of myself in front of friends and strangers. As my floormate Tricia would say, "Who knew?"

So what happened to that brain? Good question. I'm glad you asked, because I was asking that very same question again and again all last Saturday. You know what it's like to be hung over. Jimmy Buffett even sang a song about it titled, "My Head Hurts, My Feet Stink and I Don't Love Jesus." That about summed it up for me, except for the "don't love Jesus" part. I was too busy asking him for mercy. He declined politely. "Cana was fun, but you just went too far," he scolded. "Deal with it."

Thankfully, these episodes are few and far between in the day-to-day Greg Sukiennik life. But all the same it got me thinking about the alcoholic beverage thing (gotta use those Bushisms before January 20) and what it means.

Remember that story in "News from other U's" on the freshman from the University of Texas at Austin who did 20 shots of tequila in an hour and died? It's unlikely she set out to kill herself when she took that first slug of Pepe Lopez. She probably swallowed hard, scrunched up her face from the taste and popped a lime wedge into her mouth then laughed at herself, like anyone else who's had a shot of tequila. Except she's not around to write about it.

Americans have a really weird relationship with alcohol. It's advertised everywhere in every shape and form. Its manufacture and sale is a billion-dollar industry. Alcohol is at the center of our recreational and social behaviors, especially here at UMass. It's not inherently evil or wrong by itself, used under control.

Yet this socially acceptable recreational drug kills thousands every year, through violent crime, suicides, drunk driving accidents, alcoholism and the like. Do these sad ends "happen to everyone sooner or later," too?

Greg Sukiennik will never mix V.O. and Rolling Rock again.

Pentagon defeats itself

From a Navy Department memorandum dated December 24: "The close and intimate conditions of life aboard ship, the necessity for the highest possible degree of unity and espirit-de-corps; the requirement of morale — all of these demand that nothing be done which may adversely affect the situation."

Matt
MALONE

The argument given above could easily be the defense department's present argument against lifting the ban on gays and lesbians in the military. However, it is not. The memorandum is dated Dec. 24, 1941 and was the Defense Department's argument against the desegregation of the armed forces. Curiously, these are the same arguments given now to support the Pentagon's ban on gays and lesbians: morale, security and instability. It is even more curious that this position completely contradicts the results and recomendations of the department's own reports.

In December of 1988 and in January of 1989, the Defense Department's Personnel Security Research and Education Center issued its reports concerning the integration of gays and lesbians into the armed forces. The report noted that when racial integration was first proposed by President Truman, "dire consequences were predicted for maintaining discipline, building group morale and achieving military organizational goals." The document further reported that "none of these predictions has come true (and) it would be wise to consider applying the experience of the past 40 years to the integration of homosexuals."

It would also be wise for the Pentagon to heed the recommendations of its own internal reports. The report issued by PESEREC noted that 76-80 percent of veterans interviewed who said they were gay while in the service received honorable discharges. The report cites this as "indirect evidence" that "homosexuals could be satisfactorily integrated."

Further, the Pentagon's own report maintains that "homosexuals" show "higher levels of preservice adjustment than male heterosexuals, though heterosexual women showed higher levels of preservice adjustment than lesbians and all men." The report from PERSEREC concludes that "the preponderance of the evidence presented indicates that homosexuals show preservice suitability-related adjustment that is as good or better than the average heterosexual."

"Thus, these results appear to be in conflict with conceptions of homosexuals as unstable, maladjusted persons. . ." The report concludes that the integration of gay people into the armed forces should begin. The report also noted that several other countries, some noted for the strength of their military, do not discriminate.

As I began to read the Pentagon's own reports on the issue of gays and lesbians in the military it became increasingly apparent that the hierarchy of the armed forces is establishing policy based not on sound, rational examination of the facts, but on a myopic, prejudiced and homophobic attitude.

Matt Malone is a UMass student.

Housing well-known for ineptness

As a resident on the "Academic Intensive" floor in Brooks, I am responding to the one-sided article reporting another example of the massive ineptness of Housing Office administrators [Collegian, Nov. 23]. I wonder if Housing would have handled the destruction of a special interest floor in the same vein if it was a "wellness" floor. Housing administrators created an intolerable situation and displayed the thoughtlessness and the "to hell with the students" attitude for which they are so famous.

Moreover, in a university where staff and administrators "pass the buck" and refuse accountability, the system is set up so that the on-campus students have only one person to whom they can turn for assistance and accountability — Resident Assistants. The RA on our floor should have been responsive and supportive of all his residents instead of choosing to side with a group of students that relieved him of his responsibility to maintain the integrity of an "Academic Intensive" floor. As we approach the semester's end, this RA will not admit his role in the mismanagement of the floor; in fact, he resents those of us who dismissed him because of his incompetence and reluctance.

Efforts to solicit help from the Central Area Coordinator and others were met with indifference and scorn. However, we should like to acknowledge the support of Gerald Quarles, Assistant Director of Housing. Mr. Quarles took the time to talk with residents and addressed the problem. Without his intervention, we would have been denied the opportunity to live on a floor where education comes first.

Jessica Broomfield
Central

Bashing other races is no solution

I'm responding to the article "The Black Experience" [Collegian, Dec. 2], which depicts a young Black woman's opinions of the White race. This article was disturbing because it makes many generalizations. Yatisha Bothwell's "philosphies" range from, "They want us to fail so their cause can be furthered," to, "Did you ever notice everything with White people is a test?" These statements may be true to certain individuals, but not to everyone. It's like saying, "All Jewish people have long hooked noses," or, "Every Italian person I ever met was involved with the Mafia."

Maybe if we could all learn to judge people as individuals, then people like Ms. Bothwell could understand that it's not a race's fault that there is prejudice in this world. Not all Whites are racist and want to oppress Blacks. Racism is a societal problem. All individuals — Blacks, Whites, etc. — have the capability to be racist, which I don't think Ms. Bothwell understands.

P.S. If anyone thinks I'm just another White individual trying to put down a Black individual's opinions, I'm also a minority.

Elizabeth Butler
Southwest

Editorial page is cheez puffs

The final straw was contained in the editorial that asserted that Shakespeare wrote, "Music hath charms that soothe the savage beast [Collegian, Nov. 23]." Wrong. Twice. The actual quote is, "Music hath charms to soothe a savage breast/To soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak," from "The Mourning Bride," by William Congreve.

Almost all the articles printed are soporific, fatuous or pedantic. Those of any substance usually contain flawed logic and sheepish pleas for unity and understanding "Can't we all just get along?") coupled with half-baked solutions to century-old problems (e.g., changing the name of Columbus Day).

To these writers, it is not necessary for them to make their cases clear — the onus is on the reader to come around. Of course, no article would be complete without the word "I." The solipsism in these articles is truly beyond belief: it is impossible to find a topic that does not somehow lead back to the writer. In other words, the issue at hand is not important, in fact secondary, to how the issue affects the writer.

How about some real articles on real issues that affect real people, free of "personal" feelings or experiences? Something edifying and/or entertaining would be more appetizing than the cheese puffs served here on a regular basis.

Eric A. Lindholm
Belchertown

German students express their concerns to Turkish community

Dear Turkish student community:

We are a group of German graduate students at the University of Massachusetts in various departments around campus. The current events in Germany have led us to write this letter.

We want to express our concerns about the recent racial, violent anti-foreign attacks in various parts of Germany. We condemn these events by all means and have no understanding for hate crimes committed against anybody living in Germany. The Turkish minority currently living in the united Germany has helped to establish the economic wealth of the post-war era, opened up eyes for the peaceful coexistence of different cultural backgrounds in a country and turned Germany into a multicultural society.

Thus the death of the three victims of a firebombing in Moelln, West Germany, has left us sad and troubled. We would like to express our deeply felt condolences for the death of those three victims to the Turkish community on campus as the appropriate representatives.

The outburst of right-wing extremism and the resulting numerous attacks on foreigners in Germany have caused an understandable feeling of mistrust and fear among foreigners, immigrants and refugees living in Germany. These wounds in the population will take a long time to heal before we can return to a peaceful and trusting relationship among the various groups in Germany.

Whatever is possible for us to help this healing process we will undertake. If there is anything you think we could or should do to overcome the events of the past weeks and months please feel free to contact us through the Collegian editorial page.

Christian E. Weller
Amherst

Seven graduate students signed this letter.

UMass to accept nursing transfers

By TOM KNIGHT
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts School of Nursing and four Western Massachusetts community colleges have signed an agreement to facilitate the transfer of students from associate degree nursing programs to the University's baccalaureate degree program.

Under the agreement, nursing graduates of Berkshire, Greenfield, Holyoke and Springfield Technical community colleges will be able to enter the B.S. program with all of their General Education requirements and nursing major prerequisites fulfilled through courses taken at the two-year schools.

The agreement applies to ADN graduates of the four community colleges from 1987 forward and will take effect with the class to enter June 1993.

Nancy Fisk, director of the RN Mobility Program at the University, said she believes the agreement should remove many of the bureaucratic hurdles which had discouraged prospective students in the past.

The agreement marks the culmination of a year-long collaborative effort of the Western Massachusetts Public Nursing Education Consortium which, founded in Oct. 1991. The group has existed informally for many years, according to Fisk.

With a letter of recommendation from a faculty member from their two-year college, transfer nursing students can now begin the University's year-long baccalaureate program, which begins in June, prior to passing the state boards which are given in July.

Consortium school candidates can now also transfer in 30 credits of nursing coursework from their two-year colleges. As an alternative, transfer students can accumulate 30 "in-residence" credits with satisfactory scores on the National League for Nursing Mobility Profile II Test.

Typically, students complete their last twenty-seven credits by attending three three-hour, upper-level nursing classes one day per week for a full year in conjunction with satisfaction of the clinical practice component of the degree.

Supported by state and federal grants, the Consortium has authored a nursing faculty resource book and supports a baccalaureate program at Berkshire Community College in Pittsfield in addition to the program at the University. The Consortium also works to counsel and recruit RNs and Licensed Practical Nurses (LPNs) already in the field.

Future goals of the Consortium include recruiting non-traditional and minority candidates who are underrepresented in the nursing profession, Fisk said.

■ rights

continued from page 1

businesses," Richards said, "There were no people in my community with economic or political power."

When Richardson started attending Swarthmore College in 1961, she became involved in demonstrations in Cambridge, Mary. After being denied access to a local establishment there, she protested and was arrested.

"I was in jail more on the weekends than I was on campus," she said.

At this time, she decided to leave college temporarily and join the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, an organization that had arisen from sit-ins on campuses in 1960. Richardson became a secretary at its national headquarters in Atlanta.

Richardson ended by quoting June Jordan, who said, "A righteous mouth ain't nothing you should hide."

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692

Super Savings for a Super Season
GO UMASS HOOP!

OPEN SUNDAY 12-5

MILLER LITE 24-12 OZ. CANS $11.99 +DEP.

BACARDI SILVER RUM 750 ML. $7.99

POPOV VODKA 1.75 L. $10.99

PRICES GOOD THRU 12/6/92

CORONA EXTRA 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 +DEP.

FETZER SUNDIAL CHARDONNAY $5.99 750 ML.

JOSE CUERVO CO-PACK 750 ML. TEQUILA & FREE 1.0 L. MARGARITA MIX $11.49

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!

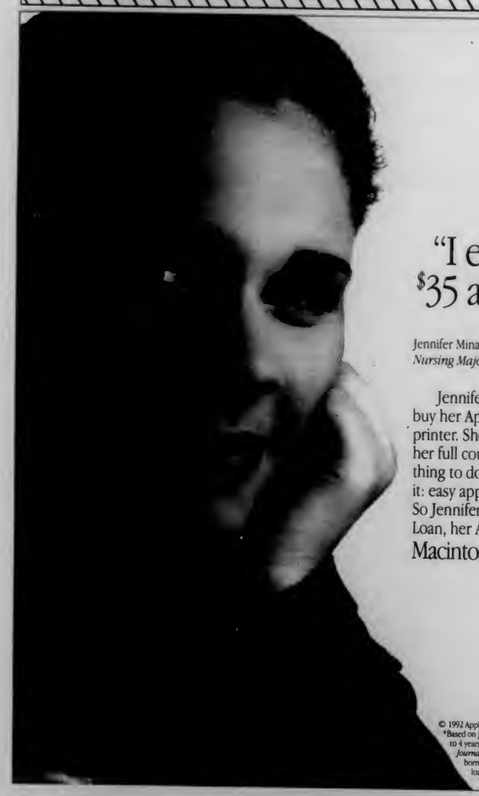
Tele-check for your personal check.

6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

Play all Mass Lottery games here!

FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS

High in fiber.
Low in fat.
No cholesterol.
Good nutrition never looked so good!
The COLLEGIAN



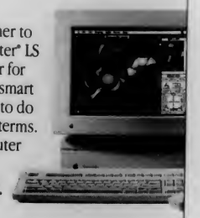
Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:
The Apple Computer Loan.

"I expected to pay a lot more than $35 a month for a new Macintosh IIsi and a printer."

Jennifer Minaya
Nursing Major

Jennifer obtained an Apple Computer Loan* that allowed her to buy her Apple* Macintosh* IIsi and an Apple Personal LaserWriter* LS printer. She knew that owning a powerful Macintosh computer for her full course load and her work as a doctor's assistant was a smart thing to do. And the Apple Computer Loan was the smart way to do it: easy application, fast turnaround and low, flexible payment terms. So Jennifer went to the only place that offers the Apple Computer Loan, her Apple Campus Reseller.

Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.



UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER
545-2619

MONDAY - FRIDAY 9AM-5 PM
SATURDAY 11AM-3PM

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, and LaserWriter are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.
*Based on Jennifer Minaya's Apple Computer Loan of $3,077.76; her monthly payment was $35 (interest only) as of 10/7/92. Principal payments may be deferred up to 4 years. The interest rate is variable, and is based on the average of the higher of the 30-day or 90-day commercial paper rates as reported in the Wall Street Journal, plus a spread of 5.35% (not to exceed 5.6%). The term of the loan is 8 years with no pre-payment penalty. The total finance charge on every $1,000 borrowed will be $543.58. Each applicant pays a $35.00 non-refundable application fee. Approved borrowers will be charged a 4% loan origination fee. The loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount and repaid over the life of the loan. For the month of October 1992, the interest rate was 7.6% with an APR of 8.8%.

■ Cambodia

continued from page 1

elections in May.

Further undermining the U.N. mission is a surge of political violence in the past month aimed at opposition politicians and their families. Many people blame the government, which denies responsibility.

But the main fear is that the civil war could erupt again because of the worsening relations between the Khmer Rouge and the 22,000 U.N. peacekeepers and officials sent to carry out the peace accord.

Khmer Rouge leaders accuse the U.N. mission of working with Vietnam, whose army ousted the Khmer Rouge in 1979 after a bloody reign that tried to turn Cambodia into an agrarian commune. The Khmer Rouge have allegedly fired on at least a dozen U.N. helicopters recently, but no U.N. soldiers have been killed.

The detained peacekeepers — three Britons, two Filipinos and a New Zealander — were seized Tuesday at a Khmer Rouge checkpoint on the Stoeng Sen River in central Cambodia while monitoring troop movements from a boat, Falt said.

He said negotiations had failed to win their release. He declined to give details of the talks, other than to say the Khmer Rouge had accused the U.N. soldiers of spying.

The peacekeepers were being held near Kompong Thom, 85 miles north of Phnom Penh.

Falt said U.N. officials had been in steady radio contact with the observers until Wednesday afternoon, when the batteries in their radio might have failed. He said the men reported they had not been harmed.

■ SGA

continued from page 3

Simpson said he hopes the SGA will see they are a serious group and that the money the SGA allocated well be used well.

"I feel very positive about receiving the money. It is very encouraging," Simpson said.

The SGA allocated $5,500 to AHORA to help them fund some of their upcoming activities. SGA Treasure Emily Rose said last year's AHORA members didn't come to the budget committee for money, which meant this year's members started with a negative balance.

"These members should not be penalized for the mistakes of last year's members," Rose said.

Jalil Mendoza, the president of AHORA, said the students deserve to have a strong representation of the Latin-American culture on campus.

"There is a lack of awareness of the Latin-American community and our goal is to unify this community," he said.

Mendoza said this money will help them fund more educational, political, social and cultural activities. "I was scared at first because we had no money, but now I'm happy we can continue what we are doing."

Mendoza said the group has planned a concert, lectures, symposiums, a play and several activities for Latin-American Week next semester.

Retail stores lead surge in growth of Mass. jobs

BOSTON (AP) — Jobs in retail stores and services helped Massachusetts gain 13,000 new jobs in October, according to Department of Employment and Training figures, while manufacturing jobs fell slightly.

"These are more positive numbers than we've had to talk about in a long time," said Robert Vinson, director of field research in the Department of Employment and Training.

The state has lost 400,000 jobs, nearly 13 percent of the total, since January 1989, but the rate has slowed this year. Payroll employment for October was 2.75 million.

The October figures represented only the second monthly jobs gain of the year and one of few in the last four years.

State officials also said Tuesday that revised figures for September indicated a loss of 800 payroll jobs for that month. A loss of 5,000 jobs had been reported earlier.

State tax revenues for the four months ending in October were 8.8 percent more than during the corresponding period in 1991. Most retailers in the Boston area reported sales during the first weekend of Christmas shopping this year were 6 percent to 8 percent higher than last year's.

Confidence among business executives in Massachusetts was up last month, according to a survey by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts.

But cuts in high technology and the defense industry continue. Digital Equipment Corp., which is based in Maynard, said it will cut as many as 6,000 jobs in the October-December quarter as part of a plan to eliminate 20,000 jobs, not all in Massachusetts, during the next two years.

The Raytheon Co. in Lexington has been laying off workers for the last year.

■ AIDS

continued from page 3

Savannah River nuclear power plant in Georgia, which the government acknowledged two years ago after a 20-year cover- up.

Gould will give his talk again at 8 p.m. in Springfield. Winder and network member Sunny Miller said the talk has special relevance to minority groups in Springfield, where infant mortality in Latino and African-American communities has reached "unacceptable levels."

Gould will add an environmental angle to the discussion of infant mortality initiated by Springfield Public Health Commissioner Dr. Delore Williams, and will address immune deficiency problems including AIDS, said Winder.

Winder said Gould will explain how he cross-references the U.S. Government's weekly mortality table against emissions levels to support his argument, and will cite examples of how Gould believes the government hides similar conclusions.

■ stalker

continued from page 1

years women are safe," Ralph said after the Tuesday hearing. "He fixated on me."

She also complained that there were few legal remedies for persons suffering the kind of harassment she had undergone.

As Keady pronounced sentence, Ralph quietly asked State Trooper Susan Mosmann and Sharon Rust, director of security at Smith College, who investigated the case, if she could hug the judge.

Ralph, a law student, said the packages and threatening letters began shortly after she graduated from Smith and moved to Chicago. First to arrive were a dozen hangers with a letter saying they were for home abortions.

"What do you get for the woman who's had everybody?" the letter said. "Yes, it's the old standby, the coat hanger! After all, if you want the job done right you have to do it yourself."

The letter was signed "Yours until death, JB."

In December 1990, Boyer sent a letter to the alumni office, which contacted friends of Ralph and learned she had not died.

On Valentine's Day 1991, a deat rat arrived in the mail.

Boyer testified that his letters, packages and a phone call to Ralph were part of an ongoing discussion on the issue of abortion. He said the theater group had discussed the issue and he had taken a pro-life stance, while Ralph was pro-choice.

The dead rat, he said, signified a dead fetus while the coat hangers were a reminder of the brutality of abortions.

Mini Mall
Dec. 1 - Dec. 4
9:00AM - 5:00PM
Student Union Ball Room
▪ Crafts ▪ Tapes
▪ Clothes ▪ Posters
▪ Jewelry ▪ & Much More
Sponsored by Hillel

Collegian
more fun than you can shake a recycling bin at

OPEN SUNDAYS NOW THRU DEC. 31ST FROM 12-5
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEER WINE LIQUORS

COORS, COORS LIGHT & COORS GOLD SUITCASE CANS $11.99 +DEP.

CORONA 12 PACK BOTTLES $8.49 +DEP.

CATAMOUNT GOLD, AMBER & PORTER CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES $16.99 +DEP.

LOWENBRAU CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $8.24 +DEP. SALE 12.49 MAIL IN REBATE 4.25 AFTER REBATE

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY SUITCASE CANS $7.29 +DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH R. H. PHILLIPS CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON $5.49 750ML

ALMADEN WINES CHABLIS, BLUSH, GOLDEN, VIN ROSE, RHINE $6.49 3.0 L

GLEN ELLEN WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.49 750ML

GEORGES DUBOEUF RED & WHITE FRENCH TABLE WINE $5.99 1.5 LITER

EDEN ROC CHAMPAGNE EXTRA DRY & BRUT $2.99 750ML

CANADIAN MIST SALE 12.49 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 $9.49 1.75L AFTER REBATE

CLUNY SCOTCH SALE 13.99 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 $11.99 1.75L AFTER REBATE

CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA $10.49 750ML

O'DARBY IRISH CREAM LIQUEUR SALE 8.99 MAIL IN REBATE 4.00 $4.99 750ML AFTER REBATE

COSSACK VODKA SALE 9.49 MAIL IN REBATE 1.50 $7.99 1.75L AFTER REBATE

not responsible for typographical errors

OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday

• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS 12/3/92 THRU WEDS. 12/9/92

Full Redemption Center

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

WELCOME BACK!

Round Trips from New York. Starting at:
CANCUN $310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!

Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is looking for writers, artisans, businesspeople and other hardened cynics of this world we inhabit. If you have a beef with the system, well by all means change the system. If the world doesn't revolve to your specifications, don't change the specifications, change the world. You can do it. You're not like all those who have come before, you're special. You've got the mettle to defeat adversity, to make that crucial difference, to stomach the bile that the world dishes out and vomit it back at it. The world is graphic, so be graphic. Wrestle your foes into the dirt, twist their arms behind their backs, put them in a figure-four leg lock, give them noogies 'til they scream with the agonizing truth that you, yes YOU, are the recipient of the wisdom of untold ages, handed down from caveman to Pict, from Etruscan to Visigoth, from to Toltec to Narnian, across the expanses of Pohl space and L'Engle time, by those who would not deign to listen to anything even remotely top-40. There are those who will laugh, those who will scoff, those who will swill in the mire of late 20th American culture who will never understand anything beyond their own personal need to degrade others in order to bolster their own fragile egos. To they you must do as your forebears have done (not destroy them, oh no. Allow them to cross-breed into oblivion. Do not soil your hands with their tawdriness.), simply ignore them. Shame them into wanting to learn the errors of their overindulgent ways. Teach them. Burrow into their minds with all the skill and intestinal fortitude your station permits. Invade their daily lives. Point to them the way. Work for the Collegian.

STUDENT FITNESS MEMBERSHIPS!!!!!
One Easy Payment! No Gimmicks!

$119.00 * SPECIAL RATE! December to May

MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES*:
• Tennis • Racquetball • Massage Therapy
• Nautilis • Aerobics(includes step)
• Free Weights • Fitness testing • Sauna
• Basketball • Cardiovascular (Stairmaster", LifeCycles")

*Not all clubs feature all amenities Nominal Fee

Comparable Value $400 if paid monthly! You save nearly 50% by paying for your membership on the day you join! Hurry! Act right now & Save!

ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA

659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SQN OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

When there is a will, the Collegian is the way.

CAFE DICARLO

5-College Student Dinner Special

Choice of:
• Lasagna Verde
• Classic Pesto with Linguine
• Veal Parmigiana
• Cozze Aglio Olio e Pepperocini (mussels with spicy olive oil and pasta)

Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.

Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Dec. 30, 1992

71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

CopyCat PRINT SHOP

RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992

Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)

228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741

FOUR (4) Bedroom Apartments!
$899 (utilities included! wow!)

RENT FREE !
Move in now- no rent until January 1,1993 !
Move in January 93' and receive it FREE!
*Promotion & prices subject to change without notice

TOP TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD LIVE HERE:
1. Your PARENTS don't!
2. YOU pick your roommates!
3. PRIVACY- Spacious Four (4) Bedrooms!
4. TWO (2) Bathrooms- no waiting in the shower line!
5. UTILITIES included $$$!
6. Directly on BUSLINE- minutes from campus & downtown Amherst!
7. It's FREE public transportation!
8. INCLUDES major appliances & w/w carpeting!
9. QUIET forest setting - for your peace of mind.

Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!

Don't wait another day, call today!

CUT THIS AD & USE IT TO LIVE "RENT FREE!" AT ALPINE COMMONS!

256-0741

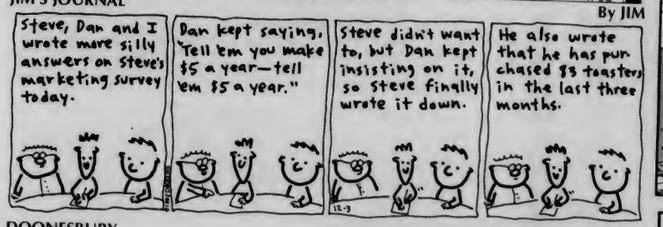
Party! Party! Party! Party! Party!
COME AND HAVE A BLAST !
FREE FOOD CASH BAR
PIÑA LOCA
8:30 P.M.
EUFORIA EL SALVADOR
EL PARTY DE LA... PIÑA LOCA 1992
Techno, House, Reggae and Mucha Salsa and Merengue
Only $3.00
($4.00 after 10:00 P.M.)
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT TIX UNLIMITED AND AT THE DOOR
Sponsored by The Latin American Cultural Center and AHORA
Saturday, December 5th, 1992
Student Union Ballroom

CALVIN AND HOBBES

By BILL WATTERSON

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM



DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY & RURU By PITT

Quote of the Day

"Golf, you liberal media goons! Golf!"
—President George Bush, on his retirement plans

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Fresh insights motivate you to make overdue changes at home. Short jaunts, romance and congenial relatives add to your happiness. Intensity and concentration pay off at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are very creative now, eager to turn a hobby into a money-making proposition. Become an efficiency expert. Admirers urge you to say, "Out with the old and in with the new."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Innovative ideas give your career a welcome boost. Seek out influential people willing to support you. Your work comes first now. Avoid taking on more than your share of family responsibilities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep the economic climate in mind and be prepared to branch out in a new direction. Confusion at home suggests there is a need for better communication.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A better day for romance than finance. Why not discuss a dubious money scheme with your mate or another close ally. Deception is possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Both romance and travel promise significant results. Protect your health by being careful about what you eat and drink.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not allow minor irritations to lead to quarrels with those you love. If you feel that your education is insufficient, consider self-improvement projects.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tax matters may require your attention. If you have a chance to get in on a cooperative arrangement, check out the details first. Do not be shy; let others know what you want.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In spite of an emotional pull, you seize an opportunity to add to your profits. Your business aims could conflict with a romantic attachment. Compromise!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be creative in your work. You can have lots of fun pursuing the artistic side of life. If a business takeover is your goal, now is the time to make your move.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An active but risky day for financial ventures. Steer clear of investments that seem doubtful. Curb extravagant spending. A work routine needs changing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A desire to be assertive can be expressed in playful ways. An independent attitude adds passion to your love life. Young people seek your attention; give it to them in large measure.

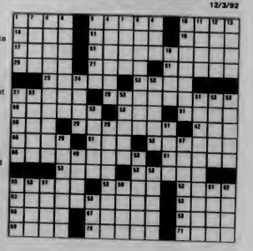
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Small cobras
5 Common follower
10 Bog fuel
14 Paste or shellack at the arena
15 Standoffish
16 Speed
17 Perry's creator
18 Pandora's box, e.g.
20 Merchandising event
21 Nothing, to Pierre
22 Shoelace tip
23 Martian
25 Green land
27 Cavalry weapon
29 Nonstop talker
34 Positive terminals
36 Mayday!
37 Kind of log
38 Fasten
39 Settled an account
42 Greek letters
43 Philbrick's "— Three Lives"
45 Verse or form lead-in
46 Tease
48 Streeter's salutation, circa WWI
51 Beatified, to Milton
52 Part of NFL
53 Modify
55 Prairie ruminant
58 S. African fox
60 Informal conversation
63 Indeterminate large number
65 "... — clock scholar"
66 Grainfield weed
67 "All that we — seem is but a dream ...": Poe
68 Passion
69 Carter and Irving
70 Utopias
71 Lyric poems

DOWN
1 God of war
2 Small rail
3 Goof
4 Strengthened
5 Stravinsky's "Le — du printemps"
6 The Rite of Spring
7 Zilch
8 — later
9 Type of small apt.
10 Descendants
11 English title
12 Pinnacle
13 Try
19 Commodity
24 Makes mad
26 Hedda Gabler's creator
27 Flavorful
28 Doddering
30 The ancient mariner's cry
31 Numbskull
32 Hebrew months
33 Correct a watch
35 Grouch
40 Above reproach
41 National —
44 Indicates
47 Magnetic beginning
49 "— are called..."
50 Home of Lafayette College
54 Glassmakers' ovens
55 "You ain't nothin' — hound dog..."
56 Shiite leader
57 Agile
59 "Graf" of the sea
61 Celestial being, in Caen
62 — the mark
64 Consume

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

12/3/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Donadio
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Janet Riley, Michele Bakis, David Maryakhin

Menu

LUNCH
leftovers
leftovers
BASICS LUNCH
tofu leftovers
soy leftovers

DINNER
leftovers
leftovers
BASICS DINNER
lentil leftovers
humus leftovers

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Rolling Rock 12 pk btls ..... $6.99 (+dep)
Sam Adams Cranberry-Lambic 22 oz btl. ..... $2.60 (+dep)
Wurzburger Ocktoberfest 6 pk ..... $5.29 (+dep)
Dinckel Acker Ocktoberfest 6 pk $5.29 (+dep)
Becks German Beer Cans only-6 pk $4.69, Case $16.79 (+dep)
Sam Adams Holiday Beer 12 pk assortment ... $13.39 (+dep)
All our holiday brews are here!!! Including Sierra Nevada Celebration Ale, Anchor Christmas Ale, Gearys Hampshire, Catamount Christmas Ale, Youngs Winter Al and many more
Poland Springs Vodka 1.75 L $9.99
Crown Royal 750 ml $14.49
Seagrams 7 Crown $13.99
Seagrams Gin 1.75 L $13.99
Gosslings Black Seal Rum 750 ml $12.99
Leroux Blackberry & Coffee Brandy 1.0 L .. $9.99

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes

Open 9 am - 11 pm
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

Lower dosages of drug could cut medical costs

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press

BOSTON — The cost of treatment with Ceredase, often called the world's most expensive drug, can be slashed by hundreds of thousands of dollars per person simply by giving smaller doses more frequently, a new study concludes.

Ceredase is the only treatment for Gaucher's disease, a rare metabolic disorder. The drug, approved last year, is extremely expensive, in part because it is extracted in tiny quantities from human placentas.

The first year of treatment costs about $380,000 for an adult who gets the recommended dose.

However, researchers from the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., found that by changing the dosing schedule, patients do just as well on one-fourth the recommended amount of medicine.

The treatment was discovered and initially tested by researchers at the federal National Institutes of Health. It was later developed and brought to market by Genzyme Inc. of Cambridge, Mass.

The company sells the medicine under the federal Orphan Drug Act, which offers financial incentives and seven years of exclusive marketing rights for finding medicines for rare illnesses. The high cost of Ceredase is sometimes cited by critics of the law, who say it encourages unreasonably high prices.

The latest study, conducted by Dr. Michael L. Figueroa and others, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

An estimated 20,000 Americans have Gaucher's disease, an inherited illness most common among descendants of Eastern European Jews.

The illness results from a genetic defect that interferes with an enzyme needed to break down a kind of fat. As a result, these fats build up in the liver spleen and bone marrow.

Ceredase replaces the missing enzyme. One unit of the medicine costs $3.50 and contains four millionths of an ounce of liquid.

A dosing plan worked out by doctors at NIH recommends that people receive 60 units of Ceredase for each kilogram they weigh. The guidelines suggest the medicine be given every other week for most patients.

The Scripps researchers theorized that because the medicine disappears quickly from the bloodstream, it could be given far more efficiently if split into many small doses. They found that 2.3 units per kilogram taken three times a week works just as well.

"Cost was uppermost in our minds when we did this, because our patients could not afford the enzyme," said Dr. Ernest Beutler, senior author of the study.

For the 70-kilogram patient, the new regimen works out to $88,000 a year for the drug. However, the medicine must be injected, so extra trips to a clinic could increase the cost of treatment if patients do not administer the medicine at home.

Bring your HOLIDAY GREETING CARD to AMHERST on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 5
and save
20% off*
any single item at each of the participating merchants:

If you didn't receive a card in your paper, pick one up at any of the participating merchants or at the Daily Hampshire Gazette office at 55 University Drive, Amherst

Amherst Farmers Supply
Amsal International
Annie's Garden Store
Atticus/Albion Bookshops
Bicycle World Too
Boyden & Perron
Cafe DiCarlo
Call Opticians
Classe Cafe
College Towne Sports Cards
Cowls Building Supply
Creative Needle
Dance Stuff
Design Supply Studio
Elder Lumber
Fentons Athletic Supply
Gypsy Heart
Harvest Moon Bakery
House of Walsh
J. Austin/Accents by JW
J•Rich
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
Joke City
Judie's Restaurant
Kamel Hassan's Furniture Barn
Le Boudoir
Lord Jeffery Inn
Lots for Littles
Mercantile
Modrian
Regency Hair Stylists
Sophia Bookshop
Summerlin Floors
The Global Trader

Valley Bicycles
Atkins Farms
Mathews Shoes
Zanna
My Favorite Quilt Shop

* See individual stores for conditions and restrictions
 Amherst Store only upside down collegian filler

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Condos., seeking quiet responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

Shop Talk
Q: Why do you like to shop at J-RICH?

Tony Riley
Amherst, Student
"Good service. You guys are always cheery. I get to layaway stuff when I'm really poor. Your clothes make me look real good."
J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-3013
22 Masonic St., Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 days
Thursday nights in Northampton

■ Scott's

continued from page 12

being billed as the Thrillue in Montague. Bo's been hangin' and bangin' with the rawhide bone. Oh, to live the dog's life.

• A long-time reader from Fort Worth is wondering what happened to the weekly references to horseback riding. Well, after winning the Triple Crown on Joker and The Breeder's Cup on Teddy, we decided it was best to retire undefeated rather than risk further injury.

• Coach MacPherson always struck me as an intelligent man, but his return to Foxboro on Monday has altered my opinion somewhat. It's one thing to go in the parking lot, tailgate and enter the game with a few barley drinks in your system. To go in under your own powers with no seditives is simply insane.

• Need the perfect compliment to this space? Turn to page three for thoroughly entertaining "News from other U's." It's like a winter beer in front of a warm, glowing fire.

• Coach Cal's got his own television show. Mind you, Ronald Reagan started off in show business as well. I'd put Cal up against Jay Leno any night of the week, but Cal loses in the one-on-one matchup with both Letterman and Arsenio.

• Bill Clinton's putting together his transition team and Jon Bagley's still available for the point guard position. Too bad Alonzo Mourning signed, he's just the kind of big man Clinton could have used. If he's got the bucks, Barry Bonds would be a good signing.

• I've hit a peak with my pool game where I'm not progressing and the digression is subtle. My private instructor, Montague's resident pro Tina, has seemingly lost hope in me.

"What should I do with this shot, Tina?" I'll ask.

"Have another beer, Dave," she'll reply.

In other Montague Inn news, my name now adorns the trophy on the video bowling game with a phenomenal 266. I was rolling strikes the way the X-Man shoots the rock — early and often.

The Shirl had no time for sports wisdom this week — she's recuperating from the monstrosity she called Thanksgiving Dinner.

The Shirl, a cook for the ages.

• The Cravat King contest enters its first official week with Milt Cole holding the slight edge.

• Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on next week's 103rd annual "Scotty's" award presentation.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 12

"I'm not sure we'll play anyone else this season as talented in the post as Artis," O'Brien said. "If I had known she was going to transfer last year, I would have gone after her.

"You have to give Northeastern credit though," O'Brien said. "They fought hard and played with a lot of defensive intensity."

HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP
HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP
HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP
HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP
HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP
HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP
HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP HOOP

It was morning... Bob smiled up at me... it was wonderful!
You never forget your first Collegian.

SPRING BREAK '93
Non-Stop Air • (7) Nights Hotel • Taxes • Club Discounts • Transfers • Activities Program
CANCUN ..... from $399
BAHAMAS ..... from $409
JAMAICA ..... from $439
SOUTH PADRE ..... from $469
FLORIDA (Panama City) ..... from $109
For free brochure call
Breakaway Travel
1-800-862-7325
(Deposits due by December 18)

BASHA'S BARGAIN BASEMENT
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
That Includes Elegant Silver Jewellery, Richly Colored Hand Embroidered Ladies Dresses & Exquisite Hand-Crafted Gifts.
241 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 413-586-6030

Take the GRE Test on Computer
ETS approved - convenient immediate scores
Sylvan Learning Center
WOBURN (617) 933-9480
WORCESTER (508)795-1140

E&J GALLO WINERY
Management Development Program

An accelerated program designed to give participants a thorough foundation in consumer goods sales and sales management in preparation for the career in Field Marketing Management. Our Recruiting program is focused on graduating candidates in either business or liberal arts.
To learn more about E&J Gallo Winery's Management Development Program you are invited to attend an information session on:
Thursday, December 3rd
at
7:00pm
in the
University Campus Center, rm. 805

Telefund Office
Jobs Available
Now and for Winter Session
If you possess excellent communication skills, telefund is the job for you.
• Great experience
• Competitive pay
• Flexible hours
- APPLY NOW -
UMASS TELEFUND
Basement Memorial Hall
545-3509

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Need a locker? We have them at OCHO 428 Student Union

PVOC oil coop. Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. Register at OCHO 428 Student Union or call 545-0865. Save money and stay warm. Come join now!

Spanish speakers
Earn $$$
Need fluent Spanish speakers
(Native or non-native) for Psychology reading study
Call Maria 545-9693

Subletting over intersession? Place your advertisement free of charge at off-campus housing. Room 428 Student Union. You may also list over the phone. Call 545-0865

AUTO FOR SALE

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.00
1 or 2 toppings add $1.00
Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098
549-6073
MUST MENTION THIS AD!

FOR RENT

Amherst Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes call 586-4770

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. Room avail. $275+ 1 bedroom apartment avail.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

Leverett – close to campus – room in sunny home in exchange for 12 hours of childcare per week plus some light housekeeping duties. Must be available for early morning (7 am- 3:30 pm) and some afternoons (3:30 - 5 pm) Car essential some transporting of children. 548-9395

Take over Brandywine lease 2 bedrooms incs. heat and hot water, great location $750/month starts end of Jan.! Call Lori or Laura 549-4818

Two females for double bedroom Presidential apts 182 Each + 549-4705

FOR SALE

HP inkjets for less than retail price also no tax!
Call 549-7742

Indigo girls tix – 2 tickets. 1 UMass – 1 Non. Good seats $30 for both. Call 253-0813. Dec. 6 Fine Arts Center

Neat things: Mens "Jack leather trench (40); Hugo Boss suits (42 + & L), 14K 20 inch herringbone chain (23.5 grams); Jeep top for CJ 7; Hitachi 30 Watt reciever; Hafler modified bookshelf speakers; BSR speakers. Reasonable BO's...John 323-9311.

10K gold ring with small diamond size 5 $40
Women's black leather jacket size M with thinsulate lining $200 253-3757

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pace + case and manuals
Call Mitch 549-9761 $450 O.B.O

FOUND

2 pairs of glasses:
1 in a grey corduroy case – the glasses are brown the other in a blue case from Mass Bay Eye Associates – they have a partial gold frame. Contact Justin 549-6120

HELP WANTED

Drivers $7-$10 per hour
Start immediately
Apply Domino's Pizza
241 King St. Northampton

Holiday jobs for the environment
Work with MASSpirg to pass the toughest environmental laws in the country.
* Learn campaign skills
* Stop Pollution
* Make a difference!
Call Carmen 256-6434

International Employment – Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits. Financially culturally rewarding. For program call: (206)632-1146 ext. J5001

IMMEDIATE OPENINGS
RGIS Inventory specialists needs reliable people to take inventory for various retailers in the Worcester , Leominster areas. This is a flexible, part time position with day or night and weekend hours avail $6.00 per hour to start.
Comprehensive training provided
Private transportation required
Travel Reimbursment
For an interview please call
(508)832 6153 Monday through Friday between 10 am to 4 pm

Local party shop hiring immediately call 549-1430

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SI-ESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost Glasses – lost somewhere between Gorman and Herter Mon. Night If found call Alison at 546-6648

Lost silver and torquoise claddaugh ring somewhere on campus 11/19. If found call 253-2733.

PERSONALS

Calli,
Have an awesome birthday!!!
Love,
The Crew

Kim Miller
21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21
Happy Birthday - FINALLY!
I hope you are not too hungover from last night to head uptown again tonight, and tomorrow and celebrate at the formal! Enjoy your day! 21 21 21 21 21 21 21 21
Love,
Karen

Sigmas!
Get psyched for formal tomorrow night, it will be awesome – Let's party!

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508-228-6265

ROOMATES WANTED

Amherst 2 bedroom apt 1 room for rent 2 full baths w/heat and hot water included on bus route available immediately. Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Female nonsmoker wanted to share bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Cheap rent 2 minute walk to town (on bus rt) walking distance to campus 253-5219

Male roomate needed to share large bedroom. 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

Need female roomate Puffton spring sem. $150 Mo/heat incl. 549-8757

Need 2 girls to take over our lease for Spring 1993 There are 3 of us and 2 of us are graduating!
Call anytime 549-8246

One or two roomates wanted for spring semester starting January 1. Washer and dryer, close to campus 549-5134

One female
Brandywine apts
Start Jan 93
$190 inc. Heat/water
Jen 549-7845

Room available now! House in Noho, $200+ per month, near bus 586-9769

Roomates needed call Mill Valley estates 253-7377
Single or double for 1 bedroom

Single room avail. in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo+.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 256-8393

SHIATSU PRACTITIONER

Shiatsu massage focused on stress management $20/hr. Hayley 256-0608

TRAVEL

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $$$ Before Jan. 1
Jesse 548-0866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Cheap Typing! 51/page call Cope 6-1356

IBM word processing No job too big or small. $1/page Jay 549-2616 evenings

Papers typed – free cover page, spell check. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

$1.50/pg. laser print ask for Anne 253-5566

Typing: Fast, accurate and conveniently located to serve your needs. No job too small. Reasonable rates. Contact Donna/Dienne 642-2313

WANTED

Fraternity is looking to buy unneeded sofas, chairs and coffee tables. Any questions call Dan at 549-4848

Sports

Florida State drops Minutemen, 67-64

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Freshmen Dana Dingle and the UMass Minutemen opened up their season last night at Florida State.

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Doug Edwards wasn't a happy player after Florida State dropped two games in the preseason NIT last week.

Edwards felt his teammates didn't do a very good job of getting him the ball during the stretch drive in losses to Indiana and UCLA, but they corrected that Wednesday.

The 6-9 senior scored 12 of Florida State's final 15 points, including two free throws with eight seconds left, as the 11th-ranked Seminoles held off No. 19 Massachusetts, 67-64.

The Seminoles (3-2) took the lead for good with 2:11 left when Edwards' tip-in gave Florida State a 64-62 lead.

"We though Rodney [Dobard] and I could get open underneath," said Edwards, whol also led the Seminoles with 12 rebounds. "The plan was to get us the ball more."

Florida State's Bob Sura hit one of two free throws with 1:26 left for a 65-62 advantage, but the visiting Minutemen got a chance for the win when Sura was called for an intentional fould with 1:04 left.

Sura banged hard into Mike Williams, who was headed for an uncontested layup. Williams was unable to stay in the game and Derek Kellog sank two free throws to pull the Minutemen to within 65-64.

Massachusetts retained possession on the intentional foul, but a traveling violation gave the ball back to Florida State which ran the clock until Edwards was fouled.

"What a first game," Calipari said. "That's the type of game we like to play."

Louis Roe had 19 points and 14 rebounds — both career highs — to lead Massachusetts and Williams came off the benceh to add 16. They were two of four sophomores employed by Calipari for much of the game.

"Our kids played with the emotion and passion I look for," Calipari said.

The visiting Minutemen, opening their season after a 30-5 campaign a year ago, built a 27-19 lead late in the first half and hung on for a 39-37 lead at intermission.

The teams were tied eight times in the final half and the lead changed hands six times.

"It was a war," said Florida State coach Pat Kennedy, after playing his fourth straight ranked opponent. "I thought the ACC was tough."

Sura added 14 points, Dobard 12 and Sam Cassell 11 for Florida State.

Scott's shots

After Sunday's Zolak-cident it might be time to throw in the towel on any hopes of the Patriots making the playoffs. Mind you, it might be time.

• My Heisman Trophy vote goes to Don Caparotti. If only my ballot would arrive. . .

• The UMass mascot will be introduced prior to Saturday night's game against Central Connecticut (a true scheduling coup for Coach Calipari) and the word around The Cage is that it's Chancellor O'Brien inside the suit. He's found his calling.

David
SCOTT

• So the Red Sox are talking with Kirby Puckett but Lou Gorman wouldn't use his name in interviews after the meeting on Sunday. The guess here is Sweet Lou a) forgot his name or, b) couldn't figure out what the Sox would do with a Kirby Puckett anyway. Sign him and the pennant flies in Boston.

• Doug Flutie, Doug Flutie — that name sounds awfully familiar doesn't it? The guy owned Boston College and now his got a share of Canada.

• Why can't ITT Technical Institute make the Sweet 16?

• Marge "Should Be" Schott is about as convincing in interviews as Clarence Thomas was.

• The Red Sox found the ultimate excuse for their lack of home runs by blaming the longball shortfall on the addition of The 600 Club. If the UMass baseball team has a similar power outage they can blame it on the new Mullins Arena. Hope for the best, prepare for the worst — a Boston sports survival plan.

• Shaquille O'Neal.

• My dog Bo has decided to come out of retirement and re-enter the boxing ring. His return bout this weekend against neighborhood tough guy Blue is

Turn to SCOTT'S, page 11

Spalding to sponsor UM teams

(AP) — Athletic programs at the University of Massachusetts will receive a boost from Spalding Sports Worldwide.

The Chicopee-based sporting goods manufacture announced Wednesday that it has become a corporate sponsor of the school's teams.

Details were not disclosed, but Spalding President George Dickerman, a UMass graduate and an active supporter of the University's school of management, said the agreement "reaffirms the ties" between the nation's oldest sporting goods company and the nearby state university.

The company has had a longstanding relationship with the university's business, engineering, polymer research and computer programs, he said.

"As a state university, UMass has been faced with significant budget cuts," said Glenn Wong, interim athletic director at the the Amherst campus. "Corporate support is extremely important to us."

In addition to providing its products to athletic teams, the deal calls for Spalding to be involved with the University's summer sport camps for youngsters and sponsor basketball coach John Calipari's show on local television.

Minutewomen drop opener to Huskies

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

Remember the old cliche, so close but yet so far?

Such was the case for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team, which opened its 1992 campaign on Tuesday night with high hopes, but ended up losing to Northeastern in a heartbreaker, 64-63, despite a herculean 34-point, 13-rebound effort from freshman Melissa Gurile.

The Minutewomen were up by one with 10 seconds left in the game after freshman Kim Gregory (6 pts, 2 rebs) took an inbounds pass and made a great one-on-one move on the baseline to beat her defender. The Huskies immediatly drove the length of the floor and with one second left, a defensive lapse by UMass made it necessary for freshman Octavia Thomas (11 pts, 3 rebs) to commit a foul. The NU player coolly sank the two free throws for the victory.

"Losing's tough enough, but it's even tougher because we gave the game away," said head coach Joanie O'Brien. "I told them that if we score on our last posession, go man-to-man. But we didn't have good defense and the girl ended up nailing two free throws."

UMass seemed to have the game in the bag in the second half as they were up by 10 and playing well. But it seemed as though the Minutewomen didn't want to win as the Lady Huskies cut the deficit from 10 to two in a matter of minutes.

The story for the Minutewomen, however, was 6'3" center Melissa Gurile. In her first collegiate game, she hit 15 of 20 field goals for a mere 34 points and 13 rebounds but it was still not enough to propel UMass to victory.

"I don't know what happened," said Gurile. "I was just throwing up shots and they were going in."

O'Brien said she was a little more impressed with Gurile's performance, though.

"Melissa was incredible," said O'Brien. "She did things during the game that we've never seen her do in practice."

"I think out of the 20 shots she took, only about two were bad [shots] - I'll be surprised if she doesn't get player of the week."

Northeastern's Katasha Artis, a 6'0 sophomore transfer from the University of Virginia, was UMass' nemesis all game long. Like a knife through butter, Artis sliced her way through the UMass defense for 23 points and 11 rebounds.

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 11

Get your television set for Saturday

College basketball has its own version of Super Saturday

Super Saturday is upon us.

This Saturday the world of college basketball officially arrives with marquee match-ups galore spreading the nation.

Indiana vs. Kansas

The matchup of the Jayhawks and Hoosiers is the best of 'em all. It will be Calbert Cheaney going at it with Darrin Hancock. The guard tandem of Adonis Jordan and Rex Walters against the horde of Hoosier guards will be intense. Bobby Knight taking on Roy Williams. The difference might be Allan Henderson, then again it could be a coming out party for Mr. Hancock.

Jeff
CROFTS

The Prediction: Cheaney scores a bundle but it does not matter — the Jayhawks will be too much for the Hoosiers. Walters will bomb away, Jordan will somehow be able to break down the Hoosier D, while Hancock will put on a show. Kansas 77-71.

Michigan vs. Duke

This is the most intriguing match-up of the day. Duke as always, will be ready. For Michigan this game could be an indication of things to come. If the Wolverines come out hungry and revenge-seeking it could be an omen of things to come for the rest of the NCAA. However, if Webber and co. come out flat and unprepared it could be an omen of things to come for Steve Fischer and his staff.

Webber should be able to abuse Cherokee Parks inside at will. Grant Hill could use this game as a springboard to greater things — he is definitely ready. If Hurley is able to penetrate with ease it could be a long night for the Wolverines. Jalen Rose had best be ready defensively to stop Hurley and Thomas Hill. Perhaps the key could be Jimmy King for Michigan — if he cans the trey, can the Dukies.

The Prediction: Webber goes sick dog with highlight film moves. It will not matter. The Blue Devils know how to win, and know how to win against Michigan. I might not like Hurley, but he sure can play. Grant Hill will explode. Duke 80-75.

Georgia Tech vs. Kentucky

A great match-up. Will someone help Mashburn up front against the tough tag-team of Malcolm Mackey and James Forrest or will this be a handicap match? If so, there could be an upset. How will Travis Ford do against Travis Best? A big question.

The Prediction: All of the above does not matter, it is at Kentucky. Kentucky 86-73.

Michigan State vs. Louisville

Mike Peplowski is taking on Cliff Rozier. The incredibly talented Cliff Rozier. Shawn Respert will have his work cut out for him against the rest of the Louisville athletes.

The Prediction: Rozier will make this game his personal playground and the plodding Peplowski will be his victim. Respert will bomb away, but it won't be enough, Louisville 75-68.

UMass vs. Central Connecticut State

To all the new students who don't know this is one of the greatest rivalries in New England History. The Minutemen currently lead this storied series 108-106. Last year Francois Firmin had to bury a trey in triple overtime to pull it out for Coach Cal. Fans had to sleep overnight in the Cage to get tickets, this year should be no different.

The Prediction: The above is total trash. It is all wrong, completely wrong. UMass 1032-6. (All right maybe 88-45).

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist

SPORTS NOTICE

Tickets will be given out to students today at the Curry Hicks Cage from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. for Saturday's basketball game against Central Connecticut. Students who do not have their student activity cards may also pick them up at the Cage today.

HOOP

indigo girls come of age

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Indigo Girls have come of age.

The popular folk duo, made up of Emily Saliers and Amy Ray, have travelled a long way from issuing the single "Crazy Game" on their own Indigo label in 1985. Four albums and one live EP later, Indigo Girls remain one of the true pioneers in the re-emergence of folk music-turned-pop music.

Combining intricate, lasting harmonies and emotional, honest lyrics, Indigo Girls have proven that folk music doesn't have to be pretentious and preachy.

Saliers and Ray have known each other since 1976, when the pair began performing together at Atlanta's Emory University. But it wasn't until 1989 that their first major label effort, Indigo Girls, and the hit single "Closer to Fine" was released that the singer/songwriters made it big.

In a recent Boston Herald interview, Emily recalls those tough years before they became big.

"We were on the phone, eight hours a day, calling radio stations and begging for airplay and gigs. Then we'd go out. Maybe play 11 days straight. Drive to South Carolina one night. Then drive to Nashville the next. Play a 20-minute opening set and then go home and get into bed at seven in the morning."

But no more. Peaking at #22 and remaining on the charts for 35 weeks, "Closer to Fine" has proven the group's signature song. Scattered with stellar guests — from Hothouse Flowers and Luka Bloom to the now-unforgettable backup vocals by Michael Stipe on "Kid Fears" — Indigo Girls still remains the group's defining album, garnering a Grammy nomination for "Best New Artist."

After a re-release of a 1987 limited edition indie Strange Fire, Indigo Girls followed up their self-titled triumph with Nomads•Indians•Saints in 1990, their second album with R.E.M. producer Scott Litt.

Nomads once again utilizes an eclectic supporting cast to supplement the group's growing lyrical depth. Drummer Kenny Aronoff, bassist Sara Lee (proven more than once to be Indigo Girls' most potent secret weapon), the Ellen James Society and Mary Chapin-Carpenter all add to the infinite worth of this follow-up. So much so that "Hammer and a Nail," the album's first single earned the group's third Grammy nomination for "Best Contemporary Folk Recording."

1990 also heralded the group's first home video, Live at the Uptown Lounge, a mini-concert at an Athens, GA nightclub.

Throughout 1991, Indigo Girls headlined various benefit concerts, including the Children's Health Fund with Paul Simon, as well as gigs with Joan Baez, Jackson Browne, Graham Nash and Mary Chapin-Carpenter. Also in 1991, an eight-song live EP, Back on the Bus Y'All, earns a Grammy nomination for "Best Contemporary Folk Album."

Turn to COME OF AGE, page 4

this weekend

Vibrant folk singer Lui Collins to visit NoHo

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Staff

The Iron Horse will, on Saturday night, be featuring one of New England's finest singers and songwriters.

Lui Collins is a 20-year-veteran of concerts, clubs and festivals on the New England Folk Circuit. This weekend, she will show the crowd just what she can do with her refreshing original repertoire, a mix of many influences, including her endless classical training on piano, violin and french horn, as well as experience with traditional music of the British Isles and the United States.

With her prolific songwriting, Collins, a native Vermonter, shows the depth and insight she produces so regularly from her everyday life, its richness and emotional power.

Collins is constantly recognized for her songwriting ability and her vibrant live performances. Covers of her songs have been released by some of the best, including Garnet Rogers (brother of the late great Stan Rogers) and Priscilla Herdman.

Collins lets out a strong pure voice and plays an inventive and always appropriate acoustic guitar that has, through the years, labeled her as one of the best guitarists-arrangers heard in years. This year alone Collins has written a fiddle tune, a song for children's theatre and a four-part round among numerous other compostions.

Collins has released three albums on Green Linnet Records that have received endless praise from journalists around the country.

She is time and time again praised by listeners and colleagues alike. In 1991, Collins was nominated for "Outstanding Folk Act" by the Boston Music Awards. The Boston Herald called her the "Folksinger For Our Times."

Collins is an artist who brings a deep understanding of the human condition to her writing and singing. She goes with you when you travel into your inner depths, casting light and comfort, bringing you back gently and gracing her insights with a nice little touch of humor.

Appearing with Collins will be Bob Franke, one of Collins' co-favorites on the New England folk scene.

Collins is ready to sing about things that matter: love, intimacy, family, friendships, pain and growth. You will find yourself completely wrapped up in her music, singing with her, dancing in your seat. You will leave smiling and, as you drive down the road on your way home, you'll still be humming to yourself that last sweet song.

The combination of Collins and Franke will make Saturday night a night to remember. Don't miss it.

Lui Collins and Bob Franke will be dazzling the crowd at the Iron Horse in NoHo on Saturday night at 7 P.M. Tickets are $10.50 in advance and can be ordered through the Northampton Box Office.

COURTESY SUSAN WILSON
Lui Collins

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT

ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS

THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN

QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE

253-3834

The Five College Program in Peace & World Security Studies

PAWSS

Presents:

"The Prospects for International Peacekeeping In the 1990's and Beyond"

A lecture by:
Major General (Retired) INDAR JIT RIKHYE
Jennings Randolph Distinquished Fellow,
United States Institute of Peace

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3rd
8:00PM
Converse Hall, Amherst College

This event is FREE, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

DURING LUNCH HOUR, I HELPED A THUNDER GOD TRIUMPH OVER IMPOSSIBLE ODDS, FOUGHT OFF AN INTERGALACTIC INVASION, AND STILL HAD TIME FOR DESSERT.

MARVEL MAKES THE MAGIC!

Available At:
Same Bat Channel
Comics, Cards, Games and more...
Hampshire Mall, Hadley 586-8775! Ingleside Mall, Holyoke 532-9797
... fly on your own wings of imagination.... .
Open Monday- Saturday 10 am- 9pm Sunday 12 pm- 5pm

DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

Bud Dry/Lt. cs./cans $11.99 + dep.	M.D. 20/20 all flavors 750 ml $2.00
Miller Genuine Draft & Miller Genuine Draft Lt. cs./cans $11.99 + dep	Purple Passion 1.5 L $3.50
Coors Extra Gold cs./bar botts. $11.99 + dep	4 Seasons Vodka 1.75 L $8.99
OPEN SUNDAYS 12:00 - 7:00 pm	ICE!! 10 lbs. $1.00 50 lbs. $4.50 1/2 bbl KEGS!! Natural Lt .... $32.90 +dep. Busch ..... $36.99 + dep. Miller, MGD & Lt. $38.99 + dep
Keystone Lt/Dry cs./cans $9.99 + dep	Plus Many More!! Nobody Beats Our Prices!
UMASS Minutemen Basketball!! Dec. 5th 7:00pm Don't miss it!	Emetts Irish Cream 750 ml $9.99
Busch bar bott $9.49 + dep	Sambuca Romano 750 ml $12.69
Narragansett $7.29 +dep	Absolut Vodka 750 ml $12.49
American $7.29 +dep	Canadian Mist 750 ml $7.89
Tired of stores with BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons you'll be treated with gratitude! And...	Bailey's Irish Cream 750 ml $14.69
WE DELIVER	Amaretto di Saronno 750 ml $13.99

HOURS ... Discount Everyday ... AID CHECK CASH

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

THURSDAY

POETRY READING — "Women and Poetry in Native America" is a poetry reading featuring Cheryl Savageau and Doris Seale. This event will take place at 8:00 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery in the New Africa House on the UMass campus. For more info. call 253-2219.

IN CONCERT — The Bay State Cabaret at the Bay State Hotel, Northampton features The Rent Party with Rockin' Dave, Flying Buttress, The Veronica Cartwrights and Jessamyn tonight in an unprecedented concert event. 9:30 p.m. Stop by 41 Strong Ave. in NoHo for more info.

EXHIBIT — "Sacred Song Sacred Dance," a solo exhibition of drawings by Scott Xaiobird, will be on display through Dec. 30. A reception will be held today for the graduate student in painting, from 5-7 p.m. at the Amherst Community Arts Center. Free.

IN CONCERT — Da Camera Singers, a 23-voice chorus based in Amherst, will present "The Chromatic Art," featuring the use of pitches foreign to a particular tonality or key. AC, Chaplin Chapel, 8 p.m. Free, but donations encouraged.

THEATRE — Surfacing, an original work by Hampshire College student Gustavo Alberto Garcia Vaca will be presented tonight at HC Studio Theatre, 8 p.m. The moody, imagistic script borrows heavily from the traditions of film noir and incorporates jazz and live singing. Show runs until Dec. 6, $3 general/$2.50 students.

EXHIBIT — "CLAY," will provide you with a "discovery" which "consists of looking at the same thing as everyone else and thinking something different" according to Albert Szent-Gyoreyi. Ceramics works by Tracey Derrig, Marty Donnell, Susan Gellantuoni, Carolyn Jones, Virginia D'Aniello, Robin Kolb and Alex Solla. Reception today, 5-7 p.m. at the Augusta Savage Gallery in the New Africa House. On exhibit through Dec. 10. Free.

DANCE — The Second Hand Dance Company, wacky masters of dance, will perform tonight and tomorrow at Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Featured on MTV and Caroline's Comedy Hour, this outrageous trio will redefine your preconceived notions of what dance is. $18 and $16 general/$9 and $8 with ID/$6 children under 16. 545-2511 for tix.

THEATRE — Vision of Fire, Andrea Hairston's kick-off event for Northampton '93 Eliminating Racism-Building Community, will be presented tonight through the 5th at 8 p.m. in Thome's Market and again Dec. 10-12. Gospel singers, martial artists, actors, dancers, musicians, poets and visual artists from diverse cultural backgrounds will be featured. $8.

EXHIBIT — Residential Arts presents the Fall BFA Thesis Exhibition featuring Denise Grenier, Cheryl Kearns and John Martin. A variety of media and themes will be incorporated into this group exhibition. Sponsored by the University Arts Council and the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund. Reception today, 5-7 p.m., exhibit runs through Dec. 11. Free.

FILM — The Imaging Peace film series continues with Program 5: "One Person Can Make a Difference." Films include Rosa Luxemburg. AC Stim Auditorium, 7 p.m. Free.

THEATRE — The F-Word, presented by Sleeveless Theatre, will be performed tonight at Hampden Theatre, 8 p.m. Call 545-2511 for ticket info.

FRIDAY

IN CONCERT — Tatoo Jungle will jam at Pearl Street tonight at 8:30 p.m. If you get in the door before 10 p.m., there's no cover. 584-771 for more info.

THEATRE — Big Tim and Fanny, by Jack Gilhooley and Daniel Czitrom will be presented tonight at Rooke Laboratory Theatre, MHC.
Directed by Sue Lawless, this play tells the story of the bitter aftermath of the historically infamous Triangle Fire of 1911. Play runs tonight through Sunday, and Dec. 10-12 at 8 p.m., reservations necessary. 538-2406 for reservations.

IN CONCERT — The Iron Horse of Noho and WRNX present Papa John Creach Blues Review tonight at 7 p.m. Harmonica Fats and The Bernie Pearl Blues Band will be featured. Come and see this "pioneer of the amplified violin" who has played with greats Duke Ellington and Charlie Daniels. 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK for tickets and info.

THEATRE — The University Madigral Singers present the 22nd Annual Madrigal Dinner tonight and tomorrow, as well as Dec. 11 & 12 at Bowker Auditorium. A March of the Comustibles, Boar's Head, Sparkling Wassail Bow, and dancers and court jesters will create an atmosphere reminiscent of a 16th century English Christmas feast. Bowker Auditorium will be decorated with banners and heraldic shields. Diners will be serenaded by the group, decked out in Elizabethan costumes, and by outstanding instrumentalists from the Music Department. E. Wayne Abercrombie will direct this award-winning ensemble. $23 general/$18 students. 545-0418 for tickets/info.

LECTURE — "Subglacial Processes in Modern Glaciers" will be presented by Dawn Lawson, Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory, as part of the Visiting Lecturer Series in Geology. Morrill Science Center Auditorium, 3:30, free.

FILM — Boyz N the Hood, a film exploring the tragedy of black youths caught in the violence of L.A. urban life will be shown tonight at AC Campus Center Theatre, 7:30 & 10 p.m. $1.75.

COMMUNITY — The UMass Muslim Student Association presents a Jummaa Salat Service at 12:30 p.m. For location and info call 546-4523.

LECTURE — "Coral Reefs: Human Impacts and Climate Change," a slide presentation by Tom Goreau, president of the Coral Reef Alliance will at SC McConnell Hall B05, 4 p.m. Free.

FROLIC — The Forgotten Frolic, an old SC tradition and Winter Weekend alternative will take place in SC's Davis Center Ballroom, 10 p.m. $4-6.

COMMUNITY — Shabbat Service and Dinner focusing on predestination and free choice, and exploring a seeming paradox will be held tonight at Chabad House. 6 p.m., all welcome, free.

FILM — Silence Like Glass, the tale of two women dying of cancer and their endearing friendship, will be presented at AC Campus Center, Women's Center at 8:30. Free.

The Madrigal Singers will host a 16th century English Christmas Feast on December 4, 5, 11, and 12.

SATURDAY

COMMUNITY — Just in time for the shopping season, the Peddler's Fair: New England Craft Show will take place at MHC Mary Woolley Hall, New York Room and Chapin Auditorium. 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. $2 general/free for students.

IN CONCERT — The Chilingirian String Quartet, one of England's foremost ensembles, will present works by Haydn, Britten and Dvorak. AC Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Balcony seats still available, $12 general, $10 elders, $8 area students, $5 AC students. 542-2195.

FILM — Grease, that early '80s disco flick that redefined musicals and made John Travolta a dancing stud will be shown tonight at MHC, Gamble Auditorium, 7 & 9 p.m. $2.50.

DANCE — Don't miss the 4th Annual Hillel Semi-Formal, party on Ben Yehuda. Call 549-1610 for ticket info. Event runs from 8:30-midnight.

THEATRE — Argos, a senior thesis project directed and choreographed by Erich Cranor, AC '93, will run tonight through Monday, 8 p.m. Work is adapted by Cranor from plays by Aeschylus and Euripides. Poetry, spectacle to the accompaniment of original of original music by Carl Evans, AC '92. Free, reservations necessary. Call 542-2277 for more info/reservations.

The Second Hand Dance Company will perform at Bowker Auditorium Friday and Saturday.

COMEDY — Comedian Carrot Top, featured on MTV's Half-hour Comedy Hour, Star Search and ABC's Friday Night Videos will split your sides tonight at AC's Campus Center Frontroom. 9 p.m., $5/$1 with ID.

IMPROV — Improvisational comedy troupe The Girls Who Can't Help It, with local author Steven Riel will perform tonight as part of the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Cafe Series. Riel will read poetry from his works How To Dream, RFD: A Country Journal for Gay Men Everywhere, and Lasting Relations. The Girls Who Can't Help It will ask the audience for ideas and suggestions and develop a skit building on the audience's original ideas. The Hatch, 7:30 p.m., $3 donation requested.

IN CONCERT — Lui Collins and Bob Frankie, two of New England's finest singer/songwriters, will appear in a double bill concert at the Iron Horse in Northampton, tonight at 7 p.m. For ticket info call 584-0610.

PRINT-IN — Lori Leininger, local artist, teacher and mother of two will demonstrate how she prints from wood blocks and help participants learn how to do the same. An exhibition of her prints will follow. Amherst Community Arts Center, 1-4 p.m. $7 fee.

IN CONCERT — The UMass Performing Arts Division presents an Honors Recital tonight at 7 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall, F.A.C. Donations accepted.

BOOKSIGNING — Jane Yolen, Jane Dyer, Barry Moser and Ann Turner will autograph copies of their latest children's books at the Odyssey Bookshop in South Hadley. Bring the kids or friends by between 1 and 3 p.m. for this special event. 534-7307 for more info.

DROP-IN CLASSES — The Guild Studio School will offer a "Wreaths and Wrapping Paper" class with Jennifer Tinker. Learn how to make festive wreaths from natural and synthetic materials, and wrapping paper from potato prints, glitter, markers and more. $7 will get your 5-12 year-old into the class running from 1-4 p.m. Call 584-3299 for more info.

SUNDAY

IN CONCERT — The Indigo Girls, that world-famous, contemporary folk duo will rock the F.A.C. with special guests, the Roches tonight at 8 p.m. Show is sold out.

READING — "A Gallery of Readers: Brett Averitt and John Norris" fills the SC Neilson Library Browsing Room with words of literary wisdom. 4 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT — The Smith College Glee Club, College Choirs Alpha and Omega, Harvard University's Men's Glee Club, Smith College Handbell Choir and the Festival Brass Choir fill John M. Greene Hall with the wondrous and mighty music of the holiday season. Lucinda Thayer and Jessel Murray conduct, Grant Moss will play the organ. 4 and 7:30 p.m. Free. Doors open 35 minutes before each performance.

COMMUNITY — Shabbat Service with Storyteller Judith Black will take place at MHC's Abbey Small Chapel at 5 p.m. Storytelling at the Eliot House Lounge at 7:30 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT — The Amherst College Christmas Vespers, a festival of lessons and carols by the AC Choral Society and director Jonathan Hirsh, AC '86 will be performed. AC Johnson Chapel, 4 & 7:30 p.m. Free.

Closer to Fine: an Indigo Girls discography

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Five albums, five different messages. Each of Indigo Girls' albums offer honest perspectives and folk-pop sensibility. Every effort reveals the Indigos at varying stages of life, love and maturity. A look back at Indigo Girls' discs shows where they've been and where they're going — with varying results.

Strange Fire — (1987; rr. 1989) The most honest and rawest Indigo Girls; unfiltered and rigidly focused. Emily and Amy have never been so in synch, from Amy's heartfelt title track to Emily's wrenchingly cathartic "Hey Jesus," Strange Fire offers Indigo Girls' at their most basically beautiful. These are the seemingly simple harmonies, the solemn and grinding guitar work and the true lyrics that are the foundation of Indigo Girls. Though their cover of "Get Together" verges on the hokey and "Walk Away" overdoes it on the 'baby'-s, Strange Fire is classic Indigo. A

Indigo Girls — (1989) The definitive Indigo Girls album. One of the most seamless, near-perfect albums of the 80's, this self-titled effort is everything good about Amy and Emily. They've come a long way from Strange Fire; Indigo Girls is more assured and lyrically more daring. Even beyond the pop song-turned-anthem "Closer To Fine," every track is a small aria of folk-pop heaven. From Michael Stipe's haunting backup on "Kid Fears" to the ripping guitar licks of "Land of Canaan," Indigo Girls is a musical feat that the duo hasn't reached since. A+

Nomads*Indians*Saints — (1990) Probably the most distant, even generic Indigos effort. A few stellar songs peak through Nomads' erratic, though mostly thoughtful texture: the brilliant "World Falls" — one of the group's best songs ever — concludes with a magnificent Amy/Emily harmony; the careful and image-rich pair of "Watershed" and "You and Me of the 10,000 Wars" as well as "Pushing the Needle Too Far" — a powder-keg condemnation if there ever was one. "Hammer and a Nail," the album's only single nominated for a Grammy, successfully walks the line between preachiness and poetry, coming down effectively on the latter. Yet there's something missing from Nomads; one just gets the feeling that their hearts' weren't in it. Simply because other Indigo Girls' albums were so good, Nomads becomes the group's weakest studio album by default. B+

Back on the Bus, Y'All (1990) An eight-song live EP, recorded at Notre Dame University, West Georgia College and the Uptown Lounge in Athens, GA. Nothing truly spectacular here, except for a spell-binding cover of Bob Dylan's "All Along the Watchtower." Also includes the studio version of "1-2-3" from the Nomads CD that seems to gain some resonance when taken in this new context. The scant eight song format leaves the listener wanting more of that unique live Indigo sound, but it's worth it if you're a fan. B

Rites of Passage — (1992) The band's most diverse and risky effort yet, Rites is a bold, exciting step in a new direction. With a new producer, new and old favorites on backup, Rites not only sounds different than any other Indigos album, but feels different.

Emily soars with a couplet of great unrequited love songs, "Ghost" and "Love Will Come To You." Amy's writing has never been better, especially in "Three Hits," inspired by the poems of Frank Stafford, "Nashville," a scathing diatribe on a Southern city, and a somber love song in "Cedar Tree." But the most memorable track on Rites is Amy Ray's pounding, emotionally devastating cover of Dire Straits' "Romeo and Juliet."

Rites also allows Indigo Girls to lighten up. With "Galliileo" and "Airplaine," the group takes a decidedly lighter look at reincarnation and fear of flying, respectively. Yet Rites shows that Indigo Girls are becoming more distinct individually; never before has it been so easy to identify a song written by Amy or Emily. But it's not a step apart; it's more indicative that both the women and the band are continually evolving. A

■ Come of Age

CONTINUED FROM WEEKEND COVER

Which brings Indigo Girls to 1992. Rites of Passage, their fifth release, may be the group's most daring effort. In addition to the Indigos' now trademark harmonies and complex lyrics, Rites of Passage brings forth not only a new producer — Peter Collins, who has worked with hard-rockers Queensryche and Alice Cooper — but also a watershed of varied, exotic instruments. From cellos to Irish fiddles to Eastern percussion, Rites of Passage not only sounds different that past Indigo Girls' efforts, but there is a genuine sense of adventure, of maturity.

But no studio album can capture the true emotion and power of Indigo Girls; they are meant to be seen and heard live. Sunday will proove that the Indigos truly deliver; it promises to be one of the best concerts the FAC has seen in a while.

Performing with Indigo Girls will be the real sister act, The Roches. A major supporting player on Rites of Passage, one can only hope that this angelic folk trio won't be able to resist an impromtu collaboration.

But most importantly, what has challenged, moved and entertained many will now do the same live for a lucky few — you should be one of them.

Indigo Girls will perform with special guests The Roches at the Fine Arts Center Sunday, December 6 at 8 p.m. Tickets $20 general; $18 students w/ valid ID. Call 545-2511. Sponsored by UPC Productions.

RUNAWAY WITH THE POOR AND TALENTED
LIFESTYLES OF THE COLLEGIAN

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
THURSDAY
WHMP Live Radio Show with
Coach John Calipari
• Question & Answer Session
• Meet the Coach & Players
6-7 PM
FRIDAY
Happy Hour
4-6
FREE Pizza Slices
SATURDAY
UMASS vs. Central CONN
POST GAME PARTY
FREE Buffet
SUNDAY
NFL Game of the Week
RAMS vs. TAMPA
$3 Chicken & Pasta Buffet
7:00-8:00 PM
Half Time Appetizer Blitz
1/2 Price
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Intersession'93
Multiculturalism: Fulfillment or Death of the American Dream?
December 30 -January 14
American International College
Post tenebras lux
Speakers:
Dr. Kamal Ali, Westfield State College
Dr. Joyce Berkman, UMASS
Rev. Charles Blakney, First Cong. Church South Hadley
Dr. Daniel Czitrom, Mount Holyoke College
Dr. David Glassberg, UMASS
Dr. Louis Greenbaum, UMASS
David Grossbeck, Mass. Assoc. for Bilingual Education
Dr. Baily Jackson, UMASS
Eileen Kelly, Holyoke Community College
Dr. Everett Ladd, Roper Center
Thom Levy, Synthesis Center
Ruth Moore, Mass. Comm. for Deaf
Dr. Rosalie Porter, Fullbright Lecturer, Author
Register Now!
Call the School of Continuing Education and Graduate Studies
1000 State Street, Springfield
747-6325

Daydreams of Connick Jr. in Dixieland

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

Harry Connick, Jr.
25
Columbia

There I was, in the heart of Dixieland — Bourbon Street, New Orleans (or N'orlins as the locals say) — sitting in a jazz club, enjoying a drink while Harry Connick, Jr. sat at the black Baby Grand piano playing songs from his latest release 25 (referring to his age). When Connick stopped playing I realized that I wasn't in Louisiana, but instead I was in my room listening to the CD for my latest review.

25 is a magical compilation of the typical piano-and-vocal solo renditions of such songs as "Stardust," "Music, Maestro, Please," and "On the Street Where You Live." In addition to these songs are beautifully crafted solos such as, "I'm An Old Cowhand (From The Rio Grande)" which happens to be one of the more rhythmic songs where the piano and Connick's voice go together magnificently.

"The Muskrat Ramble" is an absolute vaudeville piano solo that is the type of music you'll find in a Woody Allen film. "Lazybones" is a vocal duet with New Orleans howler Johnny Adams which uses an electrical organ instead of the piano.

One of the more familiar tunes is "On the Atchison, Topeka and the Santa Fe." This laid-back song allows Connick to show his voice range in a subtle manner. (Have you ever seen the Judy Garland film with this song in it? Evidentiy Connick did).

Personally, 25 is similiar to past Connick LP's in that certain songs sound similiar with his soft toned Southern voice singing each lyric with an absolute feeling from within.

Connick's classy kind of music makes it the type of music you would hear playing at The St. Regis or at The Ritz in the main dining room.

It's evident through the albums that he has released, that Connick really cares about his work. It is very revealing about Connick's love for jazz music. He's so skilled at singing and at playing the piano that there hasn't been a time when he hasn't inspired me to the point that I wished that I could play and sing the way he does.

His abilities as a piano player are anything but constrained (and he knows it). Connick's music is controlling. Once you purchase one of his albums — you're hooked. You'll listen to it for romance or to unwind. You know those times when you saunter in, turn the lights down low, spritz on the Obsession and pop in the Connick hook-up disc. LOOOOOVE music. It's everything you've ever wanted for one of those nice quiet evenings.

From any liner notes of Connick's discs it can be seen that this artist isn't playing because he wants to collect on his talent, rather he is just happy to be able to play for his fans as he says, "I only know how happy I am to be given the opportunity to make another record for you." And it sure shows. Thanks Harry!

COURTESY BRUCE WEBBER
Harry Connick, Jr.

Irish rock at the Horse

The Drovers will take you on a roll thru the clover

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

The Chicago based Irish-American band, The Drovers, will bring their fun brand of extemporaneous musical performance to the Iron Horse this Sunday. Recently voted Chicago's Best Unsigned Band at the Illinois Entertainer's Chicago Music Awards, The Drovers have released their debut album, World of Monsters, on their own label, Tantrum Records.

The Drovers' musical influences range from pop to Irish to traditional. Mike Kirkpatrick is not only on guitar and vocals, but he is also responsible for writing most of the material.

Sean Clealand plays the fiddle, and Dave Callahan plays bass and vocals. Jackie Moran's on the drums, bodhran, and percussion in general. Winston Damon is on drums, horns and vocals.

Kathleen Keane, flutist on the World of Monsters, has recently left, but you may remember her performing with the Drovers in the movie Backdraft.

The Drovers' album content has been described as "an infectious blend of rock and reel" by the Chicago Tribune.

"It's not like we're on a mission to make Celtic music palatable to modern American youth," says Callahan. "We play to entertain ourselves, and other people seem to appreciate it too."

The Drovers bring traditional Irish music together with improvisational guitar rock, and the Iron Horse usually has a nose for the best of guitar performers. They also specialize in exotic percussion, multi-cultural instrumentaion and good ol' rock n' roll.

"We're seeking out influences all the time and are influenced just as much by African music as by Irish," says Callahan.

Callahan has observed that comparisons between The Drovers and bands such as R.E.M., The Pogues and The Grateful Dead are more in spirit than in style.

"The Pogues are British-Irish, and we're Chicago-American-Irish, so it's a different perspective. Because there's no rigidity in our [gigs], we are compared to the Dead. The spirit of our performance is extemporaneous," Callahan told the Daily Vidette, the Illinois University student newspaper.

The Drovers will play at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton on Sunday Dec. 6.

The Drovers
COURTESY AMY HERGUTH

6 ISSUES TO GO! THE COLLEGIAN. FOR THE BOB IN ALL OF US.

AIDS
AIDS is everyone's problem and everyone must educate themselves now! Donate $5 or more and receive our publications. Send name, address, and enclosed donation: $_____
MAIL TO:
THE RUBBERS BROS.™
AIDS Education Publications
P.O. Box 471 - UMC, Wilbraham, MA 01095-0471
AIDS Information - Tel. 1-800-745-1057

The GYM
at mountain farms mall
Rt.9/Russell St.
$19.95
Now 'Til XMAS!
BACK TO BASICS
584-2175

ALLEY OOPS
&
Miller Lite Live Concert Series
present:
HEADLINERS
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET
NORTHAMPTON
584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

TOWER Theaters
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY • 533-2663
HARRISON FORD.
BLADE RUNNER
THE DIRECTOR'S CUT
THE ORIGINAL CUT OF THE FUTURISTIC ADVENTURE
R
Friday-Sunday at 4:30 and 9:00
Monday-Thursday at 9:00 pm Only
Dracula
Fri at 4:25, 6:50 & 9:20
Sat & Sun at 2:00, 4:25, 6:50 & 9:20
Mon-Thurs at 6:30 & 8:55
"★★★★! LOVELY AND LYRICAL..."
ENCHANTED APRIL
Fri at 6:45 Only
Sat & Sun at 2:30 & 6:45
Mon-Thurs at 6:45 Only

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"
$2.00 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
MSG
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00 pm
Friday - Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
FREE Delivery Service • BYOB
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)
Every Day 11:30-3:30
Sample our New Vegetarian Menu
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

Cutter provides entertainment for rainy day

By CUTTER GARCIA
Collegian Staff

It's a cold day outside. It's quiet. The house is empty and the town seems dead. You've just finished a 20 page paper the night before and have handed it in. The snow or rain is falling and is creating a hypnotic lull which relaxes you entirely from within.

All you want to do at this moment, the moment in which you have made the decision that this will be a day of ease, is to make a hot cup of tea, sit down in front of the TV with your comforter snuggly wrapped around you and pop a couple of movies into the VCR. Ahhh!

Enclosed for you here and now is a list of movies that I highly recommend for renting on a day like this. This is always changing, and was compiled while driving from Boston so legally I'm not bound to it. Here we go kids...

CUTTER'S COOL VIDS TO RENT ON A RAINY/ SNOWY DAY LIST

Spaceballs - How can you let this one go by? Mel Brooks' Star Wars parody is a laugh riot. John Candy's Barf the dog is amazing and for anyone who hasn't seen Rick Moranis belittle Darth Vader with his Dark Helmet send up - you don't know what you're missing.

Brooks manages to make fun of almost every aspect of the Star Wars trilogy while also throwing in his patented slapstick flavor. Spaceballs is Brooks at his best. It'll keep you chuckling long after it's over.

Brian's Song - Now you definitely do not have to be a sports fan to enjoy this tear jerker. Starring Billy Dee Williams as Gayle Sayers and James Caan as Brian Piccolo, Brian's Song is the true life story of a professional football player who is stricken with cancer.

This film was originally made for television and was such a huge hit that they ended up releasing it into theaters where it was seen by tons of people.

The story goes that Sayers and Piccolo, teammates on the Chicago Bears, form a great friendship while competing for the same position. When Piccolo is stricken with cancer we get to see the trials and tribulations that he goes through and his winning spirit which makes him a hero.

This film is a tear jerker in every sense of the word. Men and women BOTH lose it when this one wraps up. And it's a truly great film because while the football is obviously a large part of the history, it is not centered around it. It's a movie about friendship and losing someone you love.

It's hard to find this movie because for some strange reason a lot of video stores don't carry it but if enough people ask for it I'm sure the store owner will respond. Do not miss this flick!

For you guys, it's a great bonding film and for the women, it's a wonderfully touching film you can relate to without having the football overwhelm you.

The Muppet Movie - For years now I've been getting a hassle from my brothers about listening to the soundtrack to this movie, yet I can't help but notice that as soon as the tape ends these guys are whistling the tunes.

Who doesn't love this movie? It's Kermit and Ms. Piggy and Fozzie and The Great Gonzo at their best! Jim Henson's (God rest his soul) wonderful creations singing and dancing away along with cameos from some famous people like Steve Martin, Lilly Tomlin, Michael Caine and more.

How can you not watch this film and smile? And don't even for a minute try to tell me that when you hear Kermit belting out "The Rainbow Connection" that you're not singing along with him. With words and music by Paul Williams the songs; "Movin' Right Along," "I Hope That Something Better Comes Along," and "The Rainbow Connection" get you tapping your feet and remembering the words you thought you'd long since forgotten.

God bless Jim Henson for giving our generation something as wonderful as the Muppets. Let's hope that his son is able to carry the crown with as much dignity and talent. This one's eternal and PERFECT for this list.

Splash - Tom Hanks falls in love with a six foot tall fish in the shape of the winsome Darryl Hannah? How can you go wrong with a story like that? Especially when you have Ron Howard directing (who has made my list twice) along with John Candy and Eugene Levy along for the ride.

Hanks is amazing. I could do a whole list on his films. Big, Bachelor Party, Nothing in Common - all classics but I chose Splash because it's perfect for a rainy day. It's sort of like a grown-ups version of Disney's, The Little Mermaid, without the tunes.

Hanks, along with Candy, Levy and Hannah, make this an enjoyable treat for everyone. Rent it and smile.

Nightshift - Another Ron Howard classic. Henry Winkler and Michael Keaton (during his pre Batdork days) in a sidesplittinglyfunny comedy about morgue workers at night who become "Loooove brokers!" Shelly Long also appears as the prostitute who moves in next door to her knight in shining armor, Chuck (Winkler).

Chuck and his new work partner, Billy Blaisjowski (Keaton) manage to become pimps for a group of prostitutes who have no management. Chuck, the stressed out former Wall St. wonderkid gets talked into the venture by Billy, a dreamer and constant thinker who just barely borders the realm of sanity.

Ron Howard knows how to make one heck of a funny movie and it's great to see Winkler in this role instead of the typical Fonzie. Listen carefully at the end of this movie because Rod Stewart sings, "That's What Friend's Are For", the song that would later become such a big hit for Dionne, Elton, Stevie and Gladys.

The Man in the Moon - This movie came out for about 10 minutes last year and I can't understand why. It's directed by Robert Mulligan, the man who gave us The Summer of '42. It stars a bunch of newcomers and tells the tale of a young girl growing up and becoming a woman.

The family lives in a small southern town and the girl is at that awkward age where she has been a tomboy all of her life but is beginning to emerge into the young

TURN TO RENTERS, PAGE W8

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Korbel x-dry or Brut $7.99 750 ml
New! American Beer $7.29 case cans Exciting!
OPEN SUNDAYS 12:00-6:00 PM
LOWENBRAU 12/pk bots. sale price $6.99 $4.99 after $2.00 mail-in rebate
J. Roget Champagne $2.49 750ml $26.00 case (12 botts.)
BUSCH bar bottles $9.99 case
Bud & Bud Light $11.99 cs./cans
Becks reg. or dark $15.99 cs. botts.
Freixenet Cordon Negro $5.99 750ml
Kahlua $11.99 750 ml
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

"I got mine at Zanna!"

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING ON DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS
◆ ONE WEEK ONLY ◆
$5.99 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA or Two for $10.99 No Coupon Needed Expires 12/12/92
$4.99 MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA or Two for $8.99 No Coupon Needed Expires 12/12/92
ONLY $1.99 FOR 8 OVEN BAKED BREAD STICKS
MINIMUM $5.00 DELIVERY

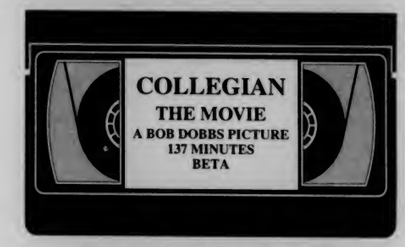
Winter Session 1993
January 4-25
Yes, you can!
REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.
SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.
SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.
OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.
EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!
REGISTER NOW!
CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.
Division of Continuing Education

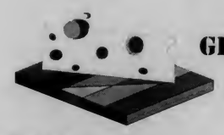
Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TOP RANK, INC.
WORLD LIGHT FLYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP
"DUEL IN THE DESERT"
AT PHOENIX'S BIG AMERICA WEST ARENA
MICHAEL CARBAJAL vs ROBINSON CUESTA
PLUS
THE RETURN OF THE DUKE
Tommy 'The Duke' Morrison vs Marshall Tillman
THIRD FEATURE BOUT
SCOTTY 'BULLDOG' OLSON vs. JOSE LUIS ZEPEDA
Saturday, Dec. 12th
$3.00-Tickets Only $5.00-Tickets and Pre-Fight Buffet
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 8 - 5 pm
Self Service
Open 24 Hours
Soap/Rinse/Wax
Bubble Brush/Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser
Vacuum Cleaners

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

Pub Street
DANCE CLUB
Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ JOB
Thursday - WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. WHMP broadcasting live.
Friday - DISCO 2000 with DJ JOB
◆ Free Admission Before 10:00pm ◆
◆ Free All Night w/College I.D. ◆
Saturday - THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ JOB
Tuesday - Dec. 8 - 9:00pm/18+/ TECHNO RAVE DANCE PARTY CD giveaways
LIVE MUSIC...
Thur., Dec. 3-8:30pm/18+/ CHUCKLEHEAD
Duck Duck
Fri., Dec. 4-8:30pm/Rock 102/ Free Rock Friday TATTOO JUNGLE Loud Crowd
◆ Free Before 10:00 pm Free All Night with College ID ◆
Sat., Dec. 5-8:30pm RIPPOPOTAMUS
Thur., Dec. 10-8:30pm/18+/ Grateful Dead Tribute THE ZEN TRICKSTERS
Fri., Dec. 11-8:30pm/Rock 102/ Free Rock Friday Tribute to the Doors RIDERS ON THE STORM
Sat., Dec. 12-8:30pm JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND
Tue., Dec. 15-8:00pm/Rock 102/ ARC ANGELS
Featuring - Doyle Bramhall II, Charlie Sexton, Tommy Shannon*, Chris Layton* (*Formerly of Stevie Ray Vaughn and Double Trouble)
THE POORBOYS
Thur., Dec. 17-8:30pm AC/DC Tribute/18+/ BACK IN BLACK
Fri., Dec. 18-8:30pm Free Rock Friday Rush Tribute MOVING PICTURES
Sat., Dec. 19-8:30pm POP BLACK with Michael Gregory
Sat., Dec. 26-8:30pm LOBSTERZ FROM MARS
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Records, For The Record in Amherst, Ticket Pro (800) 828-7000.
10 Pearl Street, Northampton • 584-

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN


COLLEGIAN THE MOVIE
A BOB DOBBS PICTURE
137 MINUTES
BETA
FOR A LIMITED TIME
THE INNER WORKINGS OF THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY NEWSPAPER IN NEW ENGLAND


GRADE "A"
"TWO AND A HALF THUMBS UP!" — THE YANKEE/ROWE DAILY
"ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF COMMUNIST INSURGENCY." — RUSH LIMBAUGH
"WHO PAID FOR THIS?" — JESSE HELMS
"I'M SPEECHLESS." — ANDREW DICE CLAY
"WHAT?" — ADM. STOCKDALE
"I LOVED IT!" — REX REED
CHANCELLOR TESTED STUDENT APPROVED
A SETHWORKS PRODUCTION

ACRONYMBLE

WINNERS

This week's winners have been chosen!

FIRST PRIZE of the hours of family fun Acronymble board game goes to Jenn Hall of Webster dorm, whose noodle was Jumping Elephants Flatten Fifty Infants. Good job, Jenn — a little twisted, but still good.

SECOND PRIZE of the fresh from the Paris fashion runways Acronymble T-shirt goes to Deryk. X. Langlais of South Street in Noho, whose noodle was Juggernaught Enzymes Foster Freakish Inbreeding.

THIRD PRIZE of a Mappelthorpe-esque Acronymble poster goes to Tracy Edgington of the French & Italian department at Herter Hall, whose noodle was Joggers Even Fight For Independence.

All those who won, come down to the Collegian Arts Desk at 113 Campus Center and claim your prize!

There's only one week left of Acronymble, so next week's letters are in honor of our departing This Weekend Associate, Emily Marino, whose tireless efforts will be sorely missed as she travels to Italy for a semester. Ciao! Emily!

Send all your submissions to the Collegian Arts Desk via campus mail or drop them off yourselves (we're lonely and could use the company) by next Wednesday. Don't miss out on the very last Acronymble . . .ever!

Next Week's Letters: E - M - I - L -Y

■ renters

CONTINUED FROM PAGE W6

woman that adolescence is dragging out of her.

It's about developing crushes on the cute boy next door, losing him to your older and pretty sister and learning to deal with the quakey years between 13 and 20.

This is a really cool movie. Mulligan is a fantastic director who lets a story tell itself without getting too technical.

It's warm, it's fun and it's a film we can all look at and smile with because we've all been at that awkward age. (Some of us stay and hangout there for many years)

O.k., with everything I had to say I ran out of space. I didn't have room to talk about my other picks like, Diner, The Sure Thing, Camelot and The Philadelphia Story (a classic black and white with Jimmy Stewart, Cary Grant and Kate Hepburn).

But like I said earlier, this list is constantly changing. You've got your action films, your musicals, your foreign picks (My Life as a Dog!) and more. I apologize for that. But the important thing is for you to find some favorites of your own. Definitely rent these films on a day like above and then let me know if you liked them or not. I've got a feeling that you will.

(Drop off your comments or suggestions to Cutter at The Collegian, c/o The ARTS desk - Campus Center basement. We love to hear from you!)

安城中国飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOMESTYLE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS • NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 MAIN STREET, AMHERST

NOTICE

Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 325, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places on Monday, Nov. 30. Please be there!

The Area's BEST CHINESE FOOD & SUSHI BAR

Enjoy the finest, freshest sushi, sashimi, tempura teriyaki and more at Panda East's new Sushi Bar. Also enjoy the finest Chinese Cuisine — Fresh, local specialties, low-priced luncheon specials and banquet facilties for your group or large party.

PANDA EAST
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
256-8923 • 256-8924

Grand Opening
November 1, 1992
THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

DYLAN.
ACOUSTIC. AGAIN.
A guitar...a harmonica...thirteen classic blues and folk songs, all recorded in the same intimate style as his 1962 debut.
"'Good As I Been To You' is one of the best things Bob Dylan has ever done...a bracing shot of unadorned passionate music."—Jay Cocks, Time Magazine

BOB DYLAN "Good As I Been To You"
SOLO. ACOUSTIC. INDISPENSABLE.
Available at Main Street Records
Register to win framed autographed color artwork from Bob Dylan's new release!
COLUMBIA
Columbia Reg. U.S. Pat. & Tm. Off. Marca Registrada 1992 Sony Music Entertainment Inc.

Friday December 4, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 58

Partly sunny today, with temps reaching 37-42.

Local: A late fall blizzard swept through most of Western Massachusetts yesterday dropping up to 18 inches in some areas. Page 3.

Sports: The UMass men's basketball team opens its last season in the Cage Saturday when they host Central Conn. Page 8.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

BEYOND THE NAMES — Students have the opportunity to express how the AIDS crisis has effected them with arts materials made available by the Five Colleges System in the University Gallery.

UN unleashes aid to starving Somalis

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council launched the world's biggest armed humanitariam rescue Thursday night, ordering a U.S.-led force to silence the guns of Somali bandits and help feed hundreds of thousands of starving people.

The council voted unanimously to approve the huge operation.

After planning with his generals and working the phones to drum up troop donations from abroad, President Bush was poised to unleash the largest U.S. military operation since the Gulf War.

Given the order, 1,800 troops aboard a three-ship strike force floating in the Indian Ocean could land on Somali beaches within hours and the full force of 28,000 could arrive in weeks. France will add as many as 2,000 troops. Italy offered unspecified help.

It came more than a year after severe food shortages and civil unrest were first reported in Somalia. And the Security Council mandate was vague: to use "all necessary means" to create "a secure environment" for relief operations.

The resolution did not say if that might mean creating some kind of U.N.-controlled civil government in chaotic Somalia and it said nothing about how long the operation would last.

Clan battles have raged in Somalia since the collapse of President Mohamed Siad Barre's rule in January 1991, worsening a famine that has killed 300,000 people and put another 2 million at risk.

Well-armed militias have stolen at least half of the food and medicine shipped to Somalia and paralyzed a 500-member U.N. peacekeeping force in place since September.

The port and airport of Mogadishu have been virtually shut down by the threat of banditry.

The maddening delays created by the port's closure could be seen Thursday at a beach north of Mogadishu, where the Red Cross unloaded a ship filled with rice donated by French schoolchildren.

The food was put aboard fishing boats and tugged within 30 feet of the beach. Somalis waded into the water and lugged each 110-pound sack ashore on their backs.

Red Cross spokesman Horst Hamborg said 250 tons were brought in .

The U.S. military, probably led by Marine Lt. Gen. Bob Johnston, plans to strike quickly: Amphibious craft, attack helicopters and Marines are ready to clear a path for the big air transports and ships that will ferry hundreds of tractors and forklifts taking food to the refugee camps.

From snowy Fort Drum, N.Y., to Camp Pendleton in southern California, soldiers contemplated Christmas in the desert on the Horn of Africa.

U.S. officials took pains to portray the intervention as a humanitarian effort, not a combat operation. "We are not looking to go in with guns blazing," said Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams. "I wouldn't expect a big confrontation."

U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins said the Security Council did not envision the need for the troops to disarm bandits and gunmen "at this time." However, Secretary-General Boutros Butros-Ghali said confiscating weaponry should be part of the job.

Gov't accused of distorting data

Expert says nuclear testing and defects are linked

By AARON-JOHN RICADELA
Collegian Staff

The United States Government has covered up a link between emissions from 1950s nuclear testing and civilian reactors, and cancer, infant mortality and immune deficiencies, said Dr. Jay M. Gould in a speech last night at the University of Massachusetts' Arnold House.

Gould, 77, a statistician and former member of the Environmental Protection Agency, used information from his fifth and latest book, Deadly Deceit: Low Level Radiation High Level Cover Up, to demonstrate rises in infant mortality, low birth weight, breast cancer and immune deficiencies which he attributed to nuclear radiation ingested by humans.

"My work has to do with a terrible secret that has been kept from the public for nearly 50 years," said Gould.

"Our foreign policy has been based on the nuclear deterrent for the last 50 years. This is the most politically sensitive subject you could choose, making people in the profession very timid about discussing the health effects," he said.

Gould said that fallout from U.S. and Soviet aboveground nuclear testing from 1945-1963 equalled the radiation of 40,000 Hiroshima bombs. Employing a series of charts which plotted Nuclear Regulatory Commission figures against his own data, Gould said that the baby boom generation suffered from abnormally high rates of low birth and infant mortality due to testing.

"This is one of those smoking-gun charts. There is no way you can look at this and not see how nuclear testing affected birth weight," said Gould. Gould said his charts peaked in the mid-1960s and are peaking again now, due

Turn to NUCLEAR TESTING, page 3

US praised for aid to Somalia

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

The U.S. deployment of military forces to protect humanitarian aid shipments to Somalia was praised as a "laudable and noble act" for which all Americans deserve "great credit" by a retired UN military commander and peacekeeping expert.

Indar Jit Rikhye, a retired Major General of the Indian army and participant in UN peacekeeping missions in the Congo, Cuba, Egypt, Cyprus, and other countries, spoke last night at Amherst College about the prospects for international peacekeeping in the 1990s.

According to Rikhye, the U.S. offer to send 30,000 troops to Somalia was the first of its kind, in that no direct U.S. interests were involved. He said that many other countries appreciate the move.

"I've spoken to representatives of many non-permanent Security Council members, including India and several Third World countries, and they are very grateful to the United States for its generous offer of forces," he said.

Rikhye said he believed such a large, U.S.-led force would "scare the lights" out of the Somali warlords, and encounter no opposition.

Before an audience of about 35 people, the retired commander and author of three books about UN peacekeeping operations spoke of the growing importance of such actions in the post cold-war era. He pointed out that the number of UN peacekeeping operations since 1988 was equal to that in all preceding years combined.

Rikhye attributed this increase in frequency to the end of the cold war and the resulting loss in influence by the superpowers, which in the past generally served to supress local conflict.

"We've lifted the lid off the boiling pot of many traditional conflicts," he said.

According to Rikhye, the UN must be equipped with more powers to deal with the new world situation. He suggested the secretary general of the UN should have

Turn to SOMALIA, page 3

Polls reflecting holiday optimism

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Economic optimism has begun to outpace pessimism as substantial numbers of Americans gain hope from falling interest rates and the election of a new president, according to an Associated Press poll.

The poll of 1,002 adults Friday through Tuesday found that 47 percent feel more hopeful, compared with 26 percent less hopeful, since Bill Clinton's election.

Even one in five Republicans feels more hopeful since Clinton won.

Overrall, 29 percent believe the economy is improving, up from 5 percent in a comparable poll a year ago. The pessimistic share that thinks the economy is getting worse fell to 27 percent from 69 percent.

Those from high-income households were most likely to be in the 43 percent who said they feel more hopeful because of lower interest rates.

The poll was taken by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants. Results have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The number is intending to spend more money on gifts this Christmas season compared with the last few years has almost doubled to 13 percent, from 7 percent in a comparable poll a year ago.

Those who plan to spend less dropped from 40 percent to 32 percent. The rest plan to spend the same amount as in past years.

Another change this year is a much stronger tendency of women than men to expect to spend less this holiday season.

Optimism about the nation's economy is lower among women than men. While 37 percent of men believe the economy is improving, only 23 percent of women do.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Feliner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Friday, December 4

Meeting — The Muslim Students Assocation is holding Jumaa Salat at 12:30 pm in Campus Center Rm 917.

Flower Exhibit — A holiday exhibit of floral designs will be presented by the floral design students of the Plant and Soil Science Department and the Stockbridge School. The event will be held from 11:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the French Hall, room 105.

Special Event — The Celebration of Lights will be held on the Amherst Town Common at 4:30 p.m. The UMass Marching Band and the Amherst Junior High Chorus will perform, Santa Claus will make an appearance, and hot cider and candles will be distributed.

Sabbath Dinner — There will be a Sabbath Dinner held at the Hillel House at 5:30 p.m. A $3 donation is requested.

Shabbat Services — The Chabad House will hold its weekly Shabbat Service and meal at 6 p.m. There is no charge.

Campus Design & Copy
1992
Students Working for Students
403 Student Union
(413) 545 - 2271
RÉSUMÉS
RÉSUMÉS
RÉSUMÉS
$15
All Inclusive
Layout, typesetting, 10 copies, 10 matching envelopes and one year storage

PIZZERIA
Paradiso
TRADITIONAL WOOD-FIRED BRICK OVEN PIZZA
12 CRAFTS AVENUE
NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS
586-1468

haircuts always $10!
Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

FREE TRIP TO CANCUN MEXICO!
Sun bound vacations needs campus representatives to organize a small group for Spring Break 1993, and earn a free trip to Cancun, Mexico—call 800 Sun Trek (800 786-8735) for complete information and free gift. Sororities, Fraternities, Clubs and Associations are invited to inquire.
1•800•SUN•TREK
1•800•786•8735
SUN BOUND VACATIONS

CopyCat PRINT SHOP
RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992
Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)
228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

The GYM
at mountain farms mall
Rt.9/Russell St.
$19.95
Now 'Til XMAS!
BACK TO BASICS
584-2175

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202
Free Parking 北京
on Route 9, Hadley

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING ON DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS
♦ ONE WEEK ONLY ♦
$5.99 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA or Two for $10.99
No Coupon Needed
Expires 12/12/92
$4.99 MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA or Two for $8.99
No Coupon Needed
Expires 12/12/92
ONLY $1.99 FOR 8 OVEN BAKED BREAD STICKS
MINIMUM $5.00 DELIVERY

Local News

Snow hits Berkshires

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The season's first major storm of the season that dropped up to 18 inches of snow over parts of western Massachsetts left ski resort officials smiling and residents without power.

The Jiminy Peak Ski Area in Hancock, Mass., operated a lift on gas power after the resort was struck by a power outage that affected many in the Berkshire Mountains.

"We'll take all we can get," said Ted Blazer, general manager at Whiteface in Wilmington, N.Y.

But for many people Thursday's heavy, wet snow meant closed schools, and snarled traffic. The storm knocked down branches and trees, and injured at least four motorists across western and central Massachusetts, northern Connecticut, and eastern New York.

"I looked out the window. I didn't believe it," said Frank Dwyer, a Sandisfield resident in the southern Berkshire Mountains.

Pondering Poland's economics

UMass professor offers candy and observations of Krakow

By TOM KNIGHT
Collegian Correspondent

"The sky's the limit" is how University of Massachusetts Finance Professor Nelson Lacey, described the economic growth potential in Poland last Thursday evening before an audience of about 25 faculty, students and local residents.

Foregoing the perfunctory opening anecdote, Lacey passed around a bag of Krakow Christmas candy instead.

Professor Lacey recently returned from a four month teaching stint in Krakow where he is a founding member of the Professional School of Business (PSB) at Jagiellonian University.

The PBS offers a post-graduate, free-market economy based curriculum and was established through cooperative efforts of faculty from the host university and professors from the University of Hartford, Boston College, Columbia University and UMass.

"There are real reasons for optimism in Poland," Lacey enthused. "Economic indicators suggest zero percent growth in the country's Gross Domestic Product this year which is quite good when compared to negative 10 percent in the rest of Europe and negative 20 percent in the former Soviet Union. Forty-five percent of GDP now comes from the private sector. That is a significant number. It's very, very dynamic what's going on there now."

"There are real reasons for optimism in Poland."
– Nelson Lacey
UMass Professor of Finance

Lacey also lectured in St. Petersburg in Russia and commented, "There is no comparison. Krakow is so far ahead of where St. Petersburg is now. I can't get a sense of what Krakow was like 10 years ago. It's changed so much."

Lacey found his PSB students "incredibly sophisticated in principles of economics" but acutely lacking in many free-market fundamentals like marketing and human resource skills.

Lacey described his students as very motivated and predicted that they would graduate into jobs paying three times what their Polish professors earned.

When asked what role the Polish government was playing in education reform, Lacey said, "The new boss is a lot like the old boss."

Lacey addressed the question of whether the move towards a free market had prompted any increase in crime, Lacey replied, "I grew up in downtown Philadelphia and I consider myself pretty street-wise. There was not one time, day or night, when I did not feel safe. I loved that about Krakow." The sentiment was supported by several nodding heads in the room.

Lacey addressed several challenges to the survivability of the PSB, most notably a question of continued funding. While Poland was "hot two years ago," much of the U.S. money that was going into Poland is now being earmarked for the former Soviet Union republics.

Will Poland make it? According to an acquaintance of Lacey, "Of course we're going to make it. We have no choice."

Students battle with Housing

24 hour quiet floor restored after seven week conflict

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Students involved in the housing conflict over the quiet floor of Brooks residence hall are more upset with the way Housing handled the situation than the actual problem.

Students who supported having the special interest floor in Brooks, which has a 24-hours quiet policy, said they are unhappy with how long it took Housing services to respond to the problem.

"They found a way to fix the problem seven weeks into the semester. They could have done it in two or three weeks," said junior journalism major Jessica Broomfield, a resident of the floor who supported the quiet hours policy.

About 20 students were placed on the special interest quiet floor without requesting it. After seven weeks of conflict between students who wanted quiet hours and those who did not, Housing agreed to give rebates to everyone on the floor for their inconvenience.

About 16 students moved out of Brooks into other dorms so the 24-hour floor could be restored. After signing an agreement with Housing, these students are to receive $250. Students remaining on the fourth floor who signed a contract to obey the 24-hour corridor rules are to receive $100. In addition, the students shall receive priority housing next semester.

Broomfield said at the first meeting with housing officials, two days were designated non-quiet hours. Because the students who wanted total quiet hours were not satisfied and wanted the special interest floor reinstated, they approached housing services again.

"Housing kept pushing us off to different people," said Broomfield. "We were literally at the office screaming. No one listened to us."

But when Jerry Quarrels, the assistant director stepped in in the middle of October, Broomfield said Housing listened to their complaints. She said he worked quickly to find a solution for everyone.

"[The students] had a right to be upset," said Quarrels, who was instrumental in solving the conflict.

"I found that we as a system had not clearly articulated the right expectations," said Quarrels.

"There's no reason seven and a half weeks should be devoted to this," said Broomfield. "It took a lot of valuable study time and added stress. Everyone suffered. There should be a way students can get a response as soon as possible, at least two or three days."

"It was extremely frustrating not to be heard and have no one respond to our needs," said senior management major David Bass, a fifth semester resident of the floor who supported the 24 hour quiet floor policy. "People just didn't seem to care."

Bass said if it weren't for everyone's parents who got involved, no action would have been taken to get the special interest floor back, but said Quarrels was helpful in the process.

"All of us are doing everying we can," said Quarrels. "We are committed to having the quiet floor."

"Administrators didn't move quickly enough," said Missy Travis, a sophomore astronomy major who lives on the quiet floor. "Housing administrators told us to compromise and it will take care of itself."

SAFA lobbies for more financial aid

By KELLY SPANG
Collegian Staff

Students Advocating Financial Aid, SAFA, will be going to Washington D.C. and Boston this spring to lobby Congress to increase financial aid for college students.

"It's important to educate Congressmen and women [about financial aid]," said Kendra Marchant, a senior BDIC major in International Economics, "because no one can afford college."

The organization usually has about 50 students that go to Washington to lobby approximately 130 to 150 Congress offices, said President William Kenoi, a senior Political Science major.

Students break up into small groups of three and talk directly with Congress members and their aids.

"SAFA gathers students and educates them about government politics," said vice-president, Anne-Marie Cervini, a second semester sophomore CASIAC major.

"Essentially we educate each other," Marchant said. Students learn about potential bills that will effect financial aid, and Congress members receive students' points of view on the issue.

The trip planned for the spring of 1993 will be in April rather than in March like past years. With Democrats taking over office and many new persons coming into Congress, SAFA hopes to gain even more support from the government.

"The students that join are self motivated and already have an interest in politics," Kenoi said.

■ nuclear testing

continued from page 1

to civilian reactor emissions.

He said nuclear reactors emit Strontium-90 and radioactive iodine in high amounts, which have lethal biological effects when they enter the atmosphere and the food chain.

"If you ingest Strontium-90, it lodges in the bone marrow, where the immune system is seated, and stays there for the rest of your life," said Gould. "It's like having a series of tiny X-rays every second of your life," he said.

Reactor emissions and test fallout contributed to an immune deficiency crisis among baby boomers, causing their mortality rate for the last 10 years to deteriorate, said Gould, who complemented every point with a statistical display.

"I'm confident that AIDS victims in the 1990s will be mainly older, as a result of the boomers' exposure to nuclear radiation," said Gould. "This is the terrible burden they will have to bear," he said. Gould also showed charts linking radiation to breast cancer, and said New England's radiation levels are among the country's highest.

"The probability that any of these anomalies is the result of chance is one in many, many trillion. This is an issue which the scientific community must address," said Gould.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• University police are investigating a report from the AT&T phone center that a man in Patterson Residence Hall made threatening remarks to an operator on Wednesday. The complaint was made at 9:30, police said.

• A fire in a trash container in the laundry room of the 21st floor in Kennedy Residence Hall on Wednesday caused heavy smoke on the upper floor, according to police. Amherst Fire Department and Environmental Health & Services were called to the scene at 11:30 a.m. No injuries were reported, according to police.

• Homophobic graffiti was discovered on the walls of the 19th floor men's room in the University Library on Wednesday, according to police.

• A man received two calls of a threatening nature on Wednesday, police said. The man reported the calls at approximately 1:30 p.m., police said.

• Two women reported their wallets stolen from different locations on Wednesday. One woman reported the theft of her wallet from her bag on a couch in the Campus Center concourse. Police value the wallet at $30.

The second woman reported that her wallet was stolen from her backpack while attending a class in Boyden Gymnasium at 4:45 p.m., according to police. The wallet is valued at $100.

• A woman reported a telephone call from a man who offered her money on Wednesday, police said.

■ Somalia

continued from page 1

his own emissaries, monitors, and small military units he can deploy quickly to trouble areas.

Rikhye also criticized the present Security Council format, in which non-permanent member countries rotate through the seats, as "flawed."

Referring to countries such as Yemen and Cape Verde, which have recently occupied Security Council seats, he said that nations with practically no foreign service or information sources of their own have to depend on larger countries for advice, and therefore have nothing to contribute.

Speaking of the various organs of the UN, Rikhye expressed hopes that the International Court of Justice would play a larger role in future conflicts, since its jurisdiction is gaining wider acceptance. But he also said the General Assembly was only of minor importance, since the Security Council, which has priority in any decision, had learned how to reach agreements on its own.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Domestic violence is most common yet overlooked crime

The woman is slapped across the face. Again and again he hits her, adding more force to each blow. When she finally crumples to the floor in pain he stops, but not before kicking her in the ribs. As he leaves the room he tells her to shut up, her crying is annoying him. Terrified, she bites her lip, and soon her muffled cries have stopped.

She drags herself off the floor, and cleans herself up, trying to ignore the pain she's already become used to. She then wanders into the bedroom, perhaps to call the police and describe this vicious attack, yet the woman does no such thing. She prepares for bed, and then climbs in quietly next to her husband, the perpetrator of her pain.

The above scenario is all too typical in American households. Over two million women are physically and emotionally abused each year by their spouses. Domestic violence is the most common violent crime in this country, yet paradoxically it is the most frequently overlooked crime in the country. There are virtually no laws on this topic, and many courts feel that domestic disputes belong in the private sector of the home. In essence, battered women are the most ignored group in this nation, and probably the ones who need the most help.

Often, cases involving domestic violence take on something that is commonly called the "blaming the victim" perspective. This viewpoint asks women what they had done to deserve this abuse, and furthers that by stating if they didn't like their treatment than they were free to leave their homes. It is this view that has swept the American public and lead them to believe that domestic violence is a petulant but petty problem.

Quite bluntly, to contradict the above perspective, women never deserve abuse, no matter what they may have done. There is a never a time when she "deserves" to be hit.

Stephanie
EISENBERG

An even more moronic attitude is when people ask why a woman remains in her abusive situation. The woman remains for several reasons, the leading one being fear. She is terrified that if she leaves him, he will find her and kill her; he has threatened this many times.

She is overcome with shame and embarrassment because she doesn't want friends and family to know her marriage has failed. She also has a very low self-esteem and is overcome with helplessness. She feels that she won't be able to survive on her own and that she won't be able to support herself. Finally, she is afraid of the unknown. After a lifetime of abuse, how could she be anything but afraid.

It is frightening that domestic violence has become such a commonplace thing in contemporary society. It has been widely accepted into the realm of "just one of those things," making it the most difficult crime to punish. And often it happens right here at good ol' UMass.

Obviously spouse abuse doesn't run rampant across campus but it's very possible that abuse of women does. The meanings are virtually the same, except that rather than a spouse it is a girlfriend or female friend who is being abused. Yet this leads to those guys who will carelessly throw a punch, or slap a female friend like she's "one of the guys." Even if it is in retaliation to an attack provoked by her, once you strike a girl, woman abuse is being committed.

I am a firm believer in the saying "never hit a girl." Perhaps this makes me old-fashioned but I do believe men shouldn't hit women, no matter what. In all honesty, any guy with true class will be a firm believer in this too.

Woman abuse is becoming all too common in this country. For such a sick crime to be accepted as "normality" indicates that there is a severe lack of morals in this country. Spouse, girlfriend abuse and even the occasional female friend abuse are all variables on the scale of violence against women. While casually hitting a female friend isn't even in the ranks of beating a female spouse almost to death, they still fall under the same category.

Either way, violence against women should never be tolerated. Perhaps if everyone had enough class to believe "never hit girls," the nation would be a better place.

Stephanie Eisenberg is a Collegian columnist.

Unveiling hypocrisy in community

With the recent racial disharmony on campus, we should commend the hard work and persistence of our student leaders. I must however express disgust and disappointment in those I describe as "wanna-bes" — people who "fail to practice what they preach," and will be the first to critique others' behavior, which they themselves manifest behind closed doors.

I was taken aback by Douglas Greer's article, "Malcolm not a fad [Collegian, Nov. 18]." It seemed quite inconsistent with his presumable deepness, which he said most of us lacked, that the theme of his article was vague. I was appalled by many statements.

"Don't take everything you see for granted." I presume that Greer meant don't take everything you see as "absolute truth." If that is so I agree with him, but will go further and not only advise people to question what they see and hear, but question where they see it and who they hear it from.

Greer's criticism of the commercialization of Malcolm X is a personal judgment call that would require a more in-depth analysis and an article of its own. The commercialism of this man, has many positive hidden components. The increased awareness and interest will entice some people to research this man's character and beliefs. This is an accomplishment our contemporary education curriculums have failed to address effectively. I don't believe Spike Lee made this film solely to make money, as Greer implied.

Greer mentioned the integrity of Malcolm X. Mr. X was a man who admitted his many mistakes. He upheld simple morals that are not found in some youths today. Had Mr. Greer taken the time to discuss moral issues such as truth and honesty, values held by this man, and their impact on today's generation, his article would have been more effective.

The criticism of listening to rap music, suggests ignorance of its important impact on Black American youths. This music is an effective medium that enables the articulation of the reality of existing conditions. These conditions represent the social and economic injustices of Black people in U.S. cities. It is a form of "Black media" for which one can receive the "raw truth" of not only the experience of those in the ghettos but Blacks in all echelons of society.

In response to the statement, ". . . making yourselves look like a fool to your peers," it is demeaning and disrespectful of the hardworking, positive undergraduate Black students. They have let their actions be the focal point of their arsenal and have stood up well. Participating academically, socially, and learning how to deal with a university system that created isolation and alienation is an experience that prepares them for today's society.

Mr. Greer, how about calling another meeting in which we can collaboratively discuss issues from the article? I honestly believe there are other students who were not able to attend the first meeting but would like to see another held. This would enable them to voice their opinions on issues brought up in the first meeting and other important issues that weren't addressed because of their absence.

Raymond Thompson
Amherst

Final Four a farce at VCU

This is a column that people will say should run in the sports section, but I think it's too important to be relegated to the back page.

There are misconceptions that the NCAAs have all of this money they like to throw around on college athletics. They give this impression by creating the mythical image of basketball-playing gods out of our 20-and-21-year old peers. If there is this huge surplus of funds, I certainly didn't see it down in Richmond, Virginia two weeks ago at field hockey's Final Four.

Michael
MORRISSEY

Imagine if you were one of the top 80 athletes in your sport, and you were about to play for the national championship. Imagine that from the time you reached the city until the time you left for home, you were treated like third-class mail.

Hard to believe, but this exactly what happened to head coach Pam Hixon's field hockey squad, and the squad of the other three teams participating in the Final Four.

Virginia Commonwealth University, the host of the Final Four, is partly to mostly to blame for the way the tournament was run. Yet it was the NCAA's responsibility to oversee the development of the tournament, and step in when it was obvious that the way the tournament was run was abominable. What could be so terrible? First of all, the hotel (Holiday Inn in downtown Richmond) the host booked for the four schools was not appropriate lodging for the elite athletes . . . of any sport.

A complementary tin of peanuts was left in every room, true, but the fact that VCU picked one of the most isolated, slummy parts of town to house the teams shows their lack of foresight. UMass moved out after the first night when Hixon decided the team would like a hotel which had a lobby.

If that wasn't bad enough, the press conference before the tournament was held in a lobby inside one of the school's gyms. That's right, a lobby. It made real sense to put a press conference right next to the front doors where people were walking in and out. I think the fact that VCU put this press conference so close to the doors symbolizes how they feel about the sport.

Virginia Commonwealth held the field hockey tourney to prepare for this spring's women's basketball East regional and next year's women's basketball Final Four. It seems the university wanted to practice as a host for an NCAA function, using field hockey as a quiz before those big tests. Needless to say, they failed their quiz.

If the peripheral goings-on weren't bad enough, the field the teams played on was also substandard. The school had to build seats and a press box specifically for the event, and they used a temporary scaffold as their press box. If you are wondering how they got the tournament, I am sure you are not alone.

The field itself was a surface of sand-Astroturf, which is s' ,wer than normal Astroturf and easier on athlete's joints. Usually. Players complained that the field was not unlike a sandy beach, and if the Houston Astrodome was the first stadium to install turf, believe me, Richmond's Cary Field was a close second.

The Final Four banquet (if you can call it a banquet) was held in a dining common, not unlike the fine culinary atmospheres at UMass. The only difference was that in Richmond, there was construction going on, with plastic sheeting covering the floors and yellow "Do Not Cross" tape strewn all across the building. The key note speaker, chancellor of Virginia Commonwealth, addressed the athletes by saying, "I was just at a physics demonstration of finite systems, and you know, finite systems and field hockey have a lot in common."

It's really too bad that Virginia Commonwealth and the NCAA disrespected these fine athletes during what should have been the weekend of their lives. The Final Four could have been something special for the young women, and I cringe to think of how VCU will handle those basketball responsibilities in the future. As for the four field hockey teams, all they got was a tin of peanuts.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

Change threatens White women

In response to Shyamala Ivatury's well thought out article on the Western feminist movement [Collegian, Dec. 1]: as a White woman raised in an upper-middle class family, I have experienced the lack of understanding about the plight of the poor in many women's organizations I have been involved with. Many White women are threatened by anyone who is attempting to change the economic system in a radical way. Poor women, non-conformists and women of color threaten their social privilege. Deep down these so-called progressive and leftist women want to keep their houses and well-trimmed lawns secure so that their property will be passed down to their daughters and sons.

Isn't it time we take the advice of Ivatury and begin asking "new questions, re-ordering priorities, thereby conceiving political struggle in a new way?" Isn't it time to begin a dialogue on Neutopian thought? But where do we begin the dialogue? Isn't that why we need a women's issues page at the Collegian, a place where people, regardless of race and sex, can begin to build the sisterhood and brotherhood our world so desperately needs?

Libby Hubbard
Amherst

Elizabethan revelry in the Campus Center

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

If modern Christmas traditions like jammed malls, too-strong eggnog, and Christmas carols sung by the likes of Alvin and the Chipmunks have turned you into someone who would probably enjoy the company of Ebenezer Scrooge, the 22nd Annual Madrigal Dinners may be the perfect cure for your holiday blues.

This typically sold-out dinner/show features an atmoshpere that brings diners back to 16th centry England. Clad in Elizabethan costumes, The University Madrigal Singers serenade guests with special Christmas fare while they enjoy a multi-course, gourmet feast. The Campus Center Auditorium is transformed into a 16th century ballroom via banners and heraldic shields. Also, a March of the Comestibles, Boar's Head, Sparkling Wassail Bow, and dancers and court jesters will kick off the evening's events

Traditionally, this type of dinner is served true to the meaning its name, madigral, and provided "entertainment to delight all senses." All guests were expected to play some role in the festivities as jesters, dancers, mimes or singers.

Food historically played a vital, if even excessive role in the festivities during a time when eating was considered indicative of the "full essence of life." The meal afforded guests an opportunity not only to indulge in delicious cuisine, but to renew and refresh friendships as guests ate, sang, danced and laughed together.

Musically, 'madigral' literaly translates to mean "partsong," and signifies the ideal that the singer/performer was to enjoy his/her part as much as the listener. This weekend the University Madigral Singers will be joined by outstanding instrumentalists from the UMass Department of Music, and directed by E. Abercrombie.

The University Madrigal Singers serenade guests with special Christmas fare while they enjoy a gourmet feast.

Specializing in vocal chamber music composed before 1650, the group has won awards throughout the New England area for their performances.

While Christmas is one of my favorite holiday seasons, I cannot help but note the lack of true Christmas spirit that dulls the senses this time of year. It is events like the Madigral Dinners that help to remind us of times past when festivities focused on the jubilant good will of friends and family to celebrate.

The Madigral Dinners prove to evoke such holiday spirit in light of their assertion that, "Our hope is that each of our guests leaves with a sense of this joyous season, of sharing good fortunes and good friends, and with music in the heart."

The Madrigal Dinners will take place on Dec. 4, 5, 11, and 12 in the Campus Center Auditorium. For information and ticket reservations call 545-0418.

Holiday releases bring in big dough

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff and
Associated Press

Two powerhouse kids' movies helped set Thanksgiving box office records over the five-day holiday weekend. Despite mediocre to poor reviews, the carbon-copy Home Alone 2: Lost In New York shared with the well-received Disney animated extravaganza Aladdin to earn $64.4 million last Wednesday through Sunday. The other new release was The Bodyguard and scathing reviews didn't hurt the Whitney Houston and Kevin Costner flick; earning $24.2 million.

Below is the estimated top ticket sales Wednesday through Sunday, according to Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater locations, total gross and number of weeks in release. Figures are based on actual receipts and projections where actual figures were not available. Note that one location can include several screens in multiplex theaters; studios generally do not disclose the true number of screens.

1. Home Alone 2: Lost In New York 20th Century Fox, $39 million, 2,031 locations, $72.2 million in two weeks.
2. Aladdin Disney, $25 milllion, 1,131 locations, $25 million in three weeks.
3. The Bodyguard Warner Bros., $24.2 million, 1,717 locations, $24.4 in one week.
4. Bram Stoker's Dracula Columbia, $14 million, 2,491 locations, $70.1 million in three weeks.
5. Malcolm X Warner Bros., $11.5 million, 1,249 locations, $26.9 million in two weeks.
6. Passenger 57 Warner Bros., $5.3 million, 1,854 locations, $33.2 million in four weeks.
7. A River Runs Through It Columbia, $4.1 million, 1,080 locations, $28.3 million in eight weeks.
8. Under Seige Warner Bros., $3.4 million, 1,560 locations, $72.4 million in eight weeks.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 4 584-9153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Jennifer 8
Dracula *
Passenger 57
Malcolm X *
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7950
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Home Alone 2: Lost in New York *
Distinguished Gentleman *
Walt Disney's Aladdin *
The Bodyguard *

ALLEY OOPS & Miller Lite Live Concert Series present: HEADLINERS
Alley Oops 525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON 584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

You love the Collegian – your mom told me so

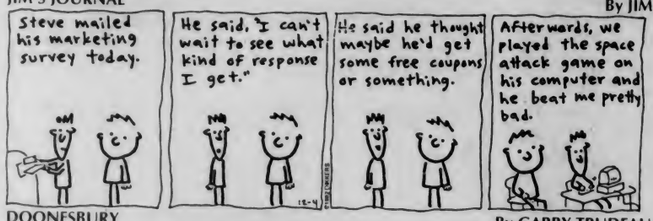
La Cucina di
Pinocchio
PIZZA, SUBS, & CALZONES
FREE DELIVERY ~ 256-4110
30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
Hours:
Mon-Thurs. 11:30am to 2:00am
Fri.-Sat. 11:30am to 3:00am
Sun. 11:30am to 1:00am
LASAGNA SALADS
Coupons valid for delivery or pick-up only.
$1.50 OFF any Large Pizza with 2 toppings
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
$1.00 OFF any Large Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
Any 2 Calzones for $7.00
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only
3 Calzones for $9.95
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only
TWIN SPECIAL
2 Large Cheese Pizzas
$12.50
Any Topping $1.25 more
Pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
$1.00 OFF any Medium Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

CALVIN AND HOBBES

By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL

By JIM



DOONESBURY

By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE

By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED

By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BUY AND RURU

By PITT

Today's Staff

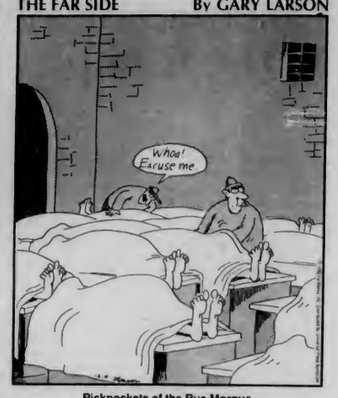
Night Editor ..... Chris Cuddy
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Curtis
PhotoTechnician ..... Jacob Adelman
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Todd Elliott
Theresa Giammattei

Sorry, No Menu Today
call 545-2626 for info.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON



Pickpockets of the Rue Morgue

Quote of the Day

"The delights of self-discovery are always available."

—Gail Sheehy

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your luck changes for the better today. Bring your thoughts and feeling into alignment. It is possible to socialize without being a big spender.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The emphasis now is on financial security and your long-term prospects in career or business. Be hospitable but avoid falling victim to someone who takes without ever getting in return.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A wonderful day to kick off a new project. Be considerate of a loved one's special needs when planning for the future. Watch out for temper tantrums and draining arguments.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Although domestic affairs may be stressful, the tensions strictly temporary. Resist extravagance and relax; everything will look much brighter tomorrow. Make holiday plans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Find new ways to finance visionary project or joint forces with someone who shares your not-so-impossible dreams. Watch out, though, for power plays.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sidestep arguments at home and the office. People are super-sensitive today. Focus on projects you can handle alone. Crosscurrents may hamper your effort to get what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Encourage teamwork and steer clear of any turbulence between co-workers. Let your neighbors know your views on a community matter. You efforts to help someone add luster to your halo.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The advice offered by your mate or another dependable counselor hits the nail right on the head. Be receptive. Something stirs up your hopes regarding a social event.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hidden emotional issues are once again rising to the surface. View your options objectively before choosing a course of action. Loved ones shy away from giving advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are on a winning streak. It is your belief in yourself that will pay the biggest dividends. Accept an apology; forgiveness is the beginning of an emotional healing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid lashing out when irritated. Conceal that iron hand in a velvet glove. Your ESP is working. Peek into the future and amaze your loved ones.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let no one know what you are up to in the financial world. Strangers could misunderstand your intensions. Be prudent; get someone else to act.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

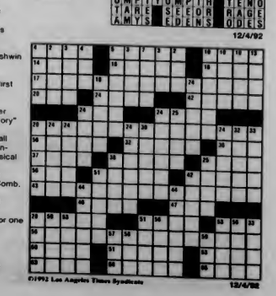
ACROSS
1 Moiety
5 Western capital
10 Parlor piece
14 Wheeling's river
15 Honshu island port
18 Word for Yenick
17 Sophie Tucker's theme song
20 Hurricane center
21 Cooking direction
22 Granted
23 Monogram connected with "Cats"
24 Fumbles
26 1923 Caldwell-Kern song
34 Poker move
35 French or Melba
36 Arts deg.
37 Covers
38 Mall units
39 Jot
40 Dollar bill
41 Onlooks comments
42 End of a shoelace
43 1933 Gershwin musical
46 Prod
47 Burma's first premier
48 Task
51 "The Never Ending Story" author
53 Service call
56 1947 Calvin-Styne musical
60 Actress Nazimova
61 Mother, Comb. form
62 Taj Mahal locale
63 "Trees," for one
64 Dido
65 Heath

DOWN
1 Stockings
2 Nautical cry
3 Florida export
4 The other side
5 Tone down
6 Italian wine district
7 Memorable Bert
8 Make do, with "out"
9 Pas' mates
10 Cruelty
11 Popular name in Oslo
12 Alice of old movies
13 Org.
18 Actor Davis
19 Plumed bird
23 Hardy lass
24 Pass
25 Singer Columbo
26 Ship's lowest deck
27 Mrs. Yeltsin
28 Fall guat!
29 Ready for visitors
30 Spoils
31 Ancient Greek coins
32 Author Joyce Carol
33 Under, poetically
38 Aria
39 Snow place like home?
41 Biblical mount
42 "— of God"
44 Cattle breed
45 Annoying bloke
46 Fellow
49 Hawaiian port
50 Give the eye
51 Kett or James
52 Scandinavian goddess of fate
53 Trademark
54 Architect Saarinen
55 Despot
57 Ref's kin
58 Gob
59 Bad actor

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	S	P	S		S	T	E	N	O	S		P	L	A	Y
R	O	U	T		A	L	L	O	F		M	A	C	E
C	E	L	L		G	A	N	G	O	F	W	O	R	M	S
S	A	L	E			A	L	I	E	N		A	G	E	E
		A	L	I	E	N		E	A	R	B	E	R
S	A	B	E	R		E	A	R	B	E	N	D	E	R
A	N	O	D	E		S	O	S		V	U	L	S	E
P	I		K	N	O	W	S	O	U	A	R	D		V	U	L	E
I	L	E	D		U	N	H	A	N	D		L	E	S	T
D	E	R			M	A	I	L	A	B	L	E
			B	I	S	O	N		A	S	S	E	M	B	L	E
D	I	S	C	O	U	N	T		S	Y	M	P	T	H	E	M
I	A	R	E		S	E	E	D	R		T	E	N	D	E	R
A	R	E	S		T	E	D	S		R	A	G	E	S
					O	D	E	S

12/4/92

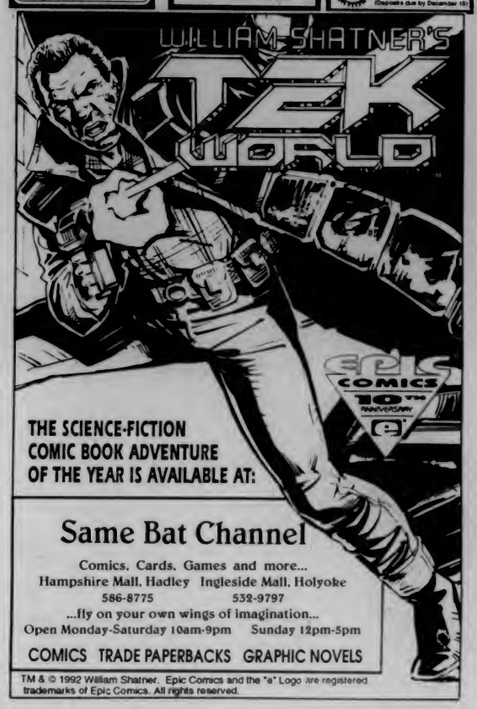


©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 12/4/92

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Condos., seeking quiet responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

SPRING BREAK '93
Non-Stop Air • (7) Nights Hotel • Taxes • Club Discounts • Transfers • Activities Program
CANCUN ..... from $399
BAHAMAS ..... from $409
JAMAICA ..... from $439
SOUTH PADRE ..... from $469
FLORIDA (local only) ..... from $109
For free brochure call
Breakaway Travel
1-800-862-7325
(Deposits due by December 18)



RECYCLE YOUR COLLEGIAN

Mini Mall
Dec. 1 - Dec. 4
9:00AM - 5:00PM
Student Union Ball Room
▪ Crafts ▪ Tapes
▪ Clothes ▪ Posters
▪ Jewelry ▪ & Much More
Sponsored by Hillel

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Spanish speakers
Earn $$$
Need fluent Spanish speakers (Native or non-native) for Psychology reading study
Call Maria 545-0693

Subletting over intersession? Place your advertisement free of charge at off-campus housing, Room 426 Student Union. You may also list over the phone. Call 545-0865

University of Massachusetts Holiday Barn Festival at Hadley Farm. Friday, Dec. 4 6-9 pm Saturday, Dec. 5 10 4 pm. Arts & Crafts, food, Santa, raffles and auctions, horse drawn hay rides and more. Shop for the holidays. Student shuttle available behind Stockbridge Hall every hour on the hour for both days.

AUTO FOR SALE

1981 Volkswagen Rabbit
High Miles, runs well
$600, will neg. for stereo
549-8416, RON

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $8.00
1 or 2 toppings add $1.00
Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098
549-8073
MUST MENTION THIS AD!

FOR RENT

Amherst Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes call 586 4270

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. Room avail. $275+ 1 bedroom apartment avail
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

Leverett – close to campus – room in sunny home in exchange for 12 hours of childcare per week plus some light housekeeping duties. Must be available for early morning (7 am -8:30 am) and some afternoons (3:30 - 5 pm) Car essential some transporting of children. 548-9385

NORTHAMPTON – two 4 room houses avail. Dec. 1. Jan. $775-800 Skibiski Realators No Pets. 584-3478

1 bdrm avail aft Dec. 15 in 2 bdrm apt lease to May 31 Wint. ses. disc. $180 incl 665-4407/665-2947

Take over Brandywine lease 2 bedrooms incs heat and hot water, great location $750/month starts end of Jan.! Call Lori or Laura 549-4816

2 rooms available in 2bed in Amherst. 220/clean/bus/ASAP call Holly 548-4259

3 bedrooms available in a spacious house in Suderland Spring Semester on bus route Call 665-0265 190.00/mo +

Two females for double bedroom Presidential apts 162 Each + 549 4705

FOR SALE

HP inkjets for less than retail price also no tax!
Call 549 1742

HP Printjet like new color printer. $425 or B.O. Great print and graphics in color. Call Alan 546 3421

Indigo girls ticket for Sunday night
call Amy 253-3218

Indigo girls tix – 2 tickets. 1 UMass – 1 Non. Good seats $30 for both. Call 253-0813. Dec. 6 Fine Arts Center

Neat things: Mens black leather trench (40); Hugo Boss suits (42 r & L), 14K 20 inch herringbone chain (23.5 grams); Jeep top for CJ 7; Hitachi 30 Watt reciever; Hafler modified bookshelf speakers; BSR speakers. Reasonable BO's ...John 323-9311

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548 9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

Drivers $7-$10 per hour
Start immediately
Apply Domino's Pizza
241 King St. Northampton

Holiday jobs for the environment
Work with MASSpirg to pass the toughest environmental laws in the country.
* Learn campaign skills
* Stop Pollution
* Make a difference!
Call Carmen 256-6434

International Employment – Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits. Financially culturally rewarding. For program call: (206)632-1146 ext. J5001

IMMEDIATE OPENINGS
RGIS Inventory specialists needs reliable people to take inventory for various retailers in the Worcester, Leominster areas. This is a flexible, part time position with day or night and weekend hours avail $6.00 per hour to start Comprehensive training provided. Private transportation required
Travel Reimbursement
For an interview please call
(508)832-6153 Monday through Friday between 10 am to 4 pm

Local party shop hiring immediately call 549 1430

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-351-ESTA ask for Bonne

LOST

Lost Glasses – lost somewhere between Gorman and Herter Mon. Night. If found call Alison at 546-6648

Lost silver and torquoise claddaugh ring somewhere on campus 11/19. If found call 253-2733.

PERSONALS

Doug,
I feel so safe when you're working security. You're a man among boys. Hold me in your muscular embrace.
Guess Who?

Eve–
Almost two years ... unbelievable! There will be many more!
Love ya
Me

Happy Birthday Jennifer
Hugs and kisses and pickles
Love Always, Chris

Happy 21st Janny
From the UMass
Cheerleaders

Hey sigmas! Get psyched for formal! We're going to rock the Marriott! Congrats to the '93 Executive Board! I love you all! - Kay

Kristin Keefe!!
Happy Birthday!!
We love you!!
LML, Steph and Maureen

Kyle
Have a happy ho down on the big 22
(the night of shame cometh)
Da House & Dawn-o

Tall male likes spray cheese seeks mate call Andrew K.

To the Quad:
Heck's to a great formal.
Thanks for the best semester!
I will miss you all.
Love, KH

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508-228-6285

Looking for room to sublet over intersession. If interested please call Rob at 546-4235

Responsible male student seeks room in quiet non smoking environment for winter session. Call 66409

ROOMATES WANTED

Amherst 2 bedroom apt 1 room for rent 2 full baths w/heat and hot water included on bus route available immediately. Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Female nonsmoker wanted to share bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Cheap rent 2 minuts walk to town (on bus rt) walking distance to campus 253-5219

Female needed to take over Brandywine lease Jan 1st. Call 549 4003

Male roomate needed to share large bedroom. 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

M/F roomate for Puffton Cheap but nice. Call for details. 549 0975/549 6794

Need female roomate Puffton spring sem. $150 Mo/heat incl. 549-8757

One or two roomates wanted for spring semester starting January 1. Washer and dryer, close to campus 549-5134

One female
Brandywine apts
Start Jan 93
$190 inc. Heat/water
Jen 549 7845

Room available now! – House in Noho. $200+ per month, near bus 586-9789

Room in great apartment 5 min. Walk to campus or downtown. Fully equipped and furnished.
549-8024

Roomate needed call Mill Valley estates 253-7377 Single or double for 1 bedroom

Single room avail. in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265. 190.00/mo+.

Single room available in 3 bedroom townhouse apartments. Call 549-3523

3 Females or males needed to take over Brandywine lease ASAP $190 + util Call 549-0953

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carnage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 256 8393

TRAVEL

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $$$ Before Jan. 1
Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Cheap Typing! $1/page call Cope 6-1356

IBM word processing No job too big or small. $1/page Jay 549-2616 evenings

Papers typed – free cover page, spell check $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing: Fast, accurate and conveniently located to serve your needs. No job too small. Reasonable rates. Contact Donna/Dianne 542-2313

WANTED

I need a car. Do you want to sell yours? If it hasn't been around since WWII, isn't threatening to explode, and is in good working shape (I don't care about outer beauty) CALL ME. Brooke @ The Collegian 545-0719

Fraternity is looking to buy unneeded sofas, chairs and coffee tables. Any questions call Dan at 549-4848

Sports

Minutemen open home slate with CCSU

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Watch out, Central Conn.!

The University of Massachusetts basketball team, coming off a tough 67-64 loss Wednesday at Florida State, opens its home schedule Saturday against Central Connecticut State University at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

The Minutemen (1-0) looked impressive in the loss to the No. 11 Seminoles, and probably will not hold back against the Blue Devils (1-0). Central Connecticut struggled against weakling Queens College before squeaking out an 82-74 win Wednesday and they will have a tough time keeping up with the Minutemen.

The UMass frontline of Lou Roe, Tony Barbee and Harper Williams played well against Doug Edwards, Rodney Dobard and Andre Reid of Florida State, who were rated as one of the top frontcourts in the land. Roe tied a career high in points with 19 and grabbed 14 rebounds against FSU. Roe should dominate the boards again against the depleted Blue Devil forwards.

Guard Mike Williams, who was injured Wednesday, is probable for Saturday's game. Williams suffered a bruised knee when FSU's Bob Sura intentionally fouled him Wednesday, unneccesarily slamming Williams into the backboard support.

Williams scored a career-high 16 points in the contest, coming off the bench as the sixth man. UMass instantly loses depth as long as Williams is on the shelf, but it appears he will be ready for Saturday.

The starting guards, Derek Kellogg and Jerome Malloy, will have their work cut out for them, as Central Connecticut's top three players are in the backcourt. Damian Johnson scored 27 points in the Blue Devils' season opener, and he is the leader of the Cenral Conn. squad. The 6-foot-3 senior scored 20.5 points per game last season.

David Corbitt and Marc Rybczyk are second and third, respectively, in point totals for Central Connecticut, and for the team to have any chance to win, they will probably have to outplay UMass in the backcourt. Corbitt scored 11.4 ppg, while Rybczyk averaged 11.3, but both will need to at least double those totals Saturday.

Two players who Calipari hopes will have bigger roles are Barbee and Harper Williams. The two combined for only 18 points Wednesday, and will need to provide more scoring punch as the season progresses. Williams scored only one second-half point against the Seminoles, which may because the forward is still working his way back into shape.

The Minutemen will probably play an up-tempo style against Central Connecticut, hoping to use the fast break to throw the Blue Devils out of rhythm. It will not help Central Connecticut that they will be playing to a capacity crowd, as the Cage sold out early Wednesday afternoon.

This game will be a good chance for the bench players to assert themselves, with plenty of minutes possibly up for grabs.

The team will raise the 1992 NCAA Sweet Sixteen banner before the game.

Game notes: The game can be heard on WMUA (91.1 FM) with Mike Correa on play-by-play and Jeff Crofts on color. The game will also be broadcast on WHMP (99.3 FM) with George Miller on play-by-play and Kevin Kennedy on color.

JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts basketball team plays in its home opener against Central Connecticut State Saturday night at 7 p.m.

Arthur's Pigskin Picks

Two weeks of Pigskin Picks left, and this prognosticator has been flying high as of late. I don't mean to sound too proud, because I'm not. Just when you thought it was going well. . .

I think we'll start off in Philadelphia, with the Vikings-Eagles matchup. Sean Salisbury will remain the starter for the rest of the season. Well, enough for wishful thinking; Salisbury just wishes he had half the skills of another Salisbury: Jenn, that is, of the UMass field hockey team, who was named to the All-American team this week.

Arthur
STAPLETON

I'll steal a quote from my friend Brian "Gerbs" Garber, whom I've dubbed the Fanatic from Philly: "Reggie White and the rest of the Eagle D is going to eat Salisbury alive. Gannon will be in by halftime, trust me!"

OK, Gerbs, I've been known as the master of the obvious, but you may have surpassed me on this one. Randall better show me something, or else I'll be calling for McMahon, so the Eagles have an excuse for getting bounced out in the first round of the playoffs (if they even make them).

It seems as though the NFL officials who worked the Eagles-49ers game last week decided to do their best imitation of referees working a Celtics game in the Boston Garden. Talk about a kind spot. Philadelphia 31, Minnesota 20.

Next we'll go to Denver, where the Cowboys ride in at 10-2, with a three-game lead in the East. John Elway should be back, and everyone and their brother is picking the Broncos to knock off the young inexperienced Cowboys.

Nope, I'm not picking Denver. What a surprise, but Jimmy Johnson should have his team primed for this encounter. Remember what happened against the Raiders earlier this year. Here's another surprise: Troy Aikman still hasn't been injured this season. . . Oh, well, I just jinxed him, but he will be healthy enough to beat Denver. Dallas 20, Denver 0.

It is time to take a break from the games and introduce the finalists for the Babe "I'm the loser of the semester" Laufenberg award. First up is Ray Handley, the soon-to-be ex-coach of the New York Giants. Enough said.

Another candidate threw his proverbial hat into the ring on Wednesday night. This award is supposed to be for football only, but Florida State's Bob "Fish Lips" Sura proved that basketball is indeed a contact sport. I'll borrow (steal) this line from an esteemed collegue: "Four words: March, tournament, Orlando, rematch". Remember Kentucky. . . nah, it's not possible!

Our third and final candidate is John Dockery of NBC's Notre Dame Saturday. My inside source in South Bend tells me that Dorkery is constantly made a fool of by the players, including Demetrious DeBose.

Here's the deal: Send your ideas for awards, as well as your choice for the Babe "I'm the loser of the semester" Laufenberg award to Art's Picks c/o Collegian Sports, 113 Campus Center Basement, or bring it down to me directly.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

Women's basketball in Classic matchup

BY JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Well it may not be the NCAA Tourney, nor the NIT, but this weekend's Pal's Cabin/ Mayfair Farms Classic at Seton Hall University represents an early test for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team.

Tonight the Minutewomen (0-1, lost to Northeastern 64-63) will play their first round game against the Howard Lady Bisons. The other first round contest of the tournament will pit the host the Seton Hall Pirates versus the Rider College Lady Broncos.

Here is an outlook on the other three combatants:

Howard University

Much like the Minutewomen, the Bisons rely heavily on the play of freshmen. Two freshman start for Howard, center Tianna Scott and guard Melissa Young. Another starter for the Bisons, junior forward Tara Gray, is in her first year of basketball at Howard.

The other two starters for Howard contributed heavily last season for the Bisons. Junior forward Annette Lee was a force inside last year, as she averaged 14.8 points and 8.3 rebounds a game. Another junior, guard Dorothy Williams, was effective in the backcourt as she scored at 11.3 a clip.

Last season the Lady Bisons went 8-19 in the MEAC. This is the first time that UMass has met with Howard.

Seton Hall University

The Pirates are 1-0 right now, after opening up the season with a 65-57 victory over Farleigh Dickinson this past Wednesday.

Seton Hall also has a young lineup with three sophomores, a freshman, and a junior making up the nucleus. The sophomores are forward Amanda Makarewicz, center Dawn Johnson, and guard Kia Walker. Walker had 13 points and eight rebounds for the Pirates in the opener.

Junior guard Jodi Brooks led Seton Hall in their opening victory as she scored 15 points.

The lone freshman starter, forward Texlin Quinney, crashed the boards against Farleigh Dickinson to the tune of ten rebounds.

Rider College

The Broncos are also undefeated at 1-0 in this short season, as they squeaked by St. Peter's 66-65 in overtime last Tuesday.

In the pivot, sophomore Amy Berg is expected to get the nod for Rider. On the wings, sophomore Jennifer Feeney, who pumped in fourteen in the opener, and freshman Kerry Szemple will start.

In the backcourt, the point guard is junior Maureen Ryan, who dished out five assists against St. Peter's. Senior Debbie Snyder, who bombed away for 14 points in the season opener, is the starting off-guard for the Broncos.

As for the Minutewomen, they will continue to look inside to freshman center Melissa Gurile (34 points, 13 rebounds versus NU), freshman forward Octavia Thomas (11 points vs. NU), and senior forward Kim Kristofik.

In the backcourt, Laurie Dondarski should remain as starter with Tricia Hopson coming off the bench. At the off-guard, freshman Kim Gregory will get the nod. Maleeka Valentine will provide help at both the off-guard and small forward slots.

Men's swimming heads to Rutgers for A-10s

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team is at Rutgers University this weekend for the Atlantic 10 championships. It is the first time in six years that the conference has bothered to hold such an event, and UMass has darn near no knowledge of the teams it will be swimming against.

Despite these uncertainties, head coach Russ Yarworth is looking forward to competing in the new pool that Rutgers has, and feels the team will make a splash

"We're going in with the attitude that we don't really know our competition all that well," he said. "But we're going in there to try to get ourselves ready for championship competition, and also to try to win the meet. I might be all wet in saying that because West Virginia and George Washington might be better than us because I know they are heavily scholarshipped programs."

Championship-meet formats have not been held in swimming for the past few years because the A-10 has been ordered by the NCAA to sponsor only a certain number of team championships.

"A few years back," Yarworth said. "We weren't as competitive as we are now. We're still not on an even standing with some of the schools as for as scholarship aid goes, but I have no complaints about that. We do what we can. We're going to go there to compete in a very good conference, and try to prove that the A-10 is a great conference for all sports."

The 3-0 Minutemen have racked up impressive wins over two of their three opponents this year, with Yarworth placing his swimmers in their non-prime events more often than not. This weekend he will put the boys in their prime events as the team goes for its seventh consecutive New England championship later in the season.

"Everybody will be trying to achieve their personal goals for this time of year," Yarworth said. "Hopefully the team is going to crank out, because I think they're ready."

The team has not seen meet competition in two weeks, but the depth it possesses should enable it to hold its own against any of the teams in the championship,

Monday December 7, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 59

Possible snowflakes, clearing in the afternoon, temps in 40s.

Arts & Living:
The Bobs, they're musical. They don't use instruments. They're natural. They use the human body to entertain. They're there to amaze, no lie. Page 7.

Sports:
Men's basketball crushes Central Connecticut, 78-52. But some say it should have been by a wider margin. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Seige broken, relief workers deliver food

By TINA SUSMAN
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — With armed guards riding shotgun, relief workers Sunday broke a month-old siege of Mogadishu's port and sent 100 trucks loaded with food roaring off the docks to the isolated northern half of the capital.

More desperately needed food made it to the central city of Bardea, where three relief planes landed as aid workers were down to their last 25 sacks of grain. It was the first food to reach Bardera in nine days, but was not soon enough to save the 160 people who died of starvation there Saturday, said Ian MacLeod, a U.N. aid spokesman.

But Somalia's anarchy still made it difficult for relief groups to get help to starving Somalis in inland areas, even as 1,800 U.S. Marines made final preparations to come ashore to begin an armed, U.N.-mandated mercy mission.

Aid groups planned to parachute food to tens of thousands of people in villages around Bardera who are trapped by land mines surrounding the city. The international relief agency CARE convoy in Baidoa were killed last week in a looting attack, and the agency was down to three workers in the city on Sunday.

Some 28,150 soldiers from the United States and other nations are expected to participate in the operation to restore order and guard food shipments. The first detachment of the more than 2,000 French soldiers earmarked for the force will be ready to go Monday, Defense Minister Pierre Joxe said in Paris. Egypt, Turkey and Mauritania also announced they will send troops.

Somalia has descended into chaos since rebels drove dictator Mohamed Siad Barre from power nearly two years ago. Central authority collapsed, and drought and warfare have ravaged the nation.

About 300,000 Somalis have died this year form starvation, disease and the fighting. An additional 250,000 could die by the end of the year without help. Some 2 million people, or one-third of the popluation, are at risk of starvation.

Aid agencies estimate at least half the food donated to Somalia so far has been stolen.

In Mogadishu Sunday, relief workers reopened the port and got food for the first time in more than a month.

Arranging the convoys took tow days for negotiations between the two rival clan militias that control halves of the city, but their success raised hopes that more of the food sitting in warehouses would soon reach the hungry.

"What's really significant is that this is the first convoy we've been able to move out of the port since Nov. 12, and the first into north Mogadishu since late October," said Rick Grant, a spokesman for CARE, which handles most U.N. food shipments in Somalia.

Four convoys of 20 to 30 trucks delivered a total of 1,000 metric tons of wheat, rice and beans to a warehouse in north. An additional 11,000 mertic tons remain in the port waiting to be delivered. The World Food Program says 1 metric ton of grain is enough to feed 2,500 people a day.

Hungry Somalis in northern Mogadishu have received far less than their countrymen in the south, despite calling for equal distribution.

"The south has not only got its full percentage of food, it's got all the benefits of the looting," Grant said.

Mogadishu's port is expected to be one of the first tagets of the Marines in three warships off the Indian Ocean coast.

Amherst Somalis discuss U.S. role

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Somalian students attending the University of Massachusetts said they support sending troops to famine-stricken Somalia, but question the United States' long-term intensions.

"I fully support the effort," said Hassan Mohamed, graduate student and co-cordinator of the Help Somalia Committee. "Although late, it's still a noble effort to give special attention to the problem in Africa."

Yesterday, U.S. officials sent more than 28,000 troops to Somalia to help what press reports estimate at 1.5 million starving people.

"It's a noble helpful effort that is needed," said Mohamed, who said restoring security in Somalia will help relief organizations.

Mohamed believes the short-term effort to secure the safe passage of food and relief systems will alleviate suffering and starvation by helping relief organizations

Turn to SOMALIS, page 4

Guarding against racism with the Rainbow Patrol

By SETH KAYE
Collegian Staff

Armed only with literature, Ally pins and optimism, the UMass Rainbow Patrol set out Thursday through Saturday nights to make the campus free from hate crimes.

"The Rainbow Patrol was formed because of what we saw as a lack of initiative on the part of the administration to combat actions caused by racial prejudice," said Greg Maney, a graduate student and a founder of the Patrol.

The Patrol, thus far numbering up to a dozen undergraduate and graduate students, patrol the campus hoping to deter potential hate crimes. Their route takes them from the Southwest Residential Area, through the Campus Center to the Northeast Residential Area. Additional patrols are being planned to cover the entire north and east ends of campus, as well as the distant "E Lot."

Patrol members can be identified by their multicolored tie-died shirts they wear while out on the job. "Tie-dies aren't really an anomaly on campus," Maney said, "but so many at once have got to stand out."

"Information and visibility are key to getting this off the ground," Maney said. Leaflets with details and information on getting involved with the Patrol, as well as multicultural "Ally" pins, are distributed to passers-by as they walk through campus.

"The group was modeled in part after New York's Pink Panthers," Maney said, "though the Rainbow Patrol is intended to combat all prejudicial actions, racial, sexual and otherwise"

Student reaction to the group was mostly positive as they walked through campus this weekend. Most thanked the Patrol for the pins and information, and for simply doing what has not been done previously. One student shouted back, after walking away and studying the leaflet for a moment, to "keep up the good work."

Detractors voiced concerns over what they perceived as vigilantism and baiting. Maney later said "that's not what we're about. We would only intervene at that moment or immediately after the fact."

Turn to RAINBOW PATROL, page 4

SETH KAYE / COLLEGIAN

Josh Lyons (left), of the Rainbow Patrol, hands out leaflets outside of Machmer Hall Thursday night.

More sanctions sought

Activist asks U.S. to pressure S. Africa

By PENNY CAMERON
Collegian Staff

Dennis Brutus, the University of Colorado professor who persuaded a committee to ban South Africa from the Olympic games and was once incarcerated in a South African prison, told about 30 people in the UMass Campus Center Saturday night that sanctions against the Apartheid nation must continue.

Brutus gave a speech on the current state of South Africa and expressed concern over the American attitude towards Apartheid.

"With Mandela's release from prison, people had the impression that Apartheid was over and your president, George Bush, stated that there was no longer any need for sanctions against South Africa," Brutus said.

While the Unites States still will not vote for South Africa to receive a World Bank loan, Brutus said he was saddened that every other U.S. sanction once imposed on South Africa had been lifted. Brutus said he has not seen any improvements.

Brutus went on to reiterate the need for continued U.S. support in the fight against Apartheid.

"I feel that it is urgent the people of America knows what is going on in South Africa, because you have made a difference in the past," he stated and urged American supporters to "ask hard questions and not give blind support."

Talking about predictions he had made that the situation in South Africa would become more violent, Brutus cited the recent bombing of a hotel in Queenstown and the attack on a country club by an liberation group.

Turn to SANCTIONS, page 4

Porter abuse settlement to cost church millions

FALL RIVER (AP) — The Roman Catholic Diocese of Fall River will pay between $3.4 million and $5.4 million to settle complaints from 68 people who say they were sexually molested by former priest James R. Porter, according to a published report.

The alleged victims, who where children when the abuse allegedly occurred in the 1960s, will receive $50,000 to $80,000 apiece, the Boston Sunday Herald reported.

One provision of the agreement, announced Thursday, prohibits either side from publicly discussing dollar amounts. The settlement was supposed to be so confidential that even the mediators who determined damages did not know exactly how much each individual will receive, the Herald said.

The newspaper did not identify the source of the financial information.

Meanwhile several parishioners said they supported compensating the complainants.

"Is money even really the issue?" asked Christine Repoze, a member of St. Joseph's Parish in Fall River and a mother of four young children.

Porter's alleged victims "were injured in a way they will never forget," Repoza said. "They lost their childhood. No amount of money can ever replace that."

Brian LaBerge, a parishioner at Notre Dame de Lourdes Church said he didn't see the settlement as unreasonable.

"It doesn't seem fair that we should pay for soemthing that happened a long, long time ago, but if they've got to do it, they've got to do it," LaBerge told the Boston Sunday Globe. "It's not like we know where all the money we give goes anyway."

Others expressed concern about

Turn to CHURCH, page 6

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Dorienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, November 7, 1992

Lecture — As part of the Studies Brown Bag Series, Sarah Schulman, author of five novels and winner of two literary awards, will talk about "Lesbian/Gay life during the Reagan-Bush years (Let's hope they're over)," from noon - 1:30 p.m. in the Campus center, 9th floor.

Tuesday, November 8, 1992

Roundtable — The next Community Business Roundtable will be today at 4:30 p.m. and will feature Judith Fine, proprietor of Gazebo and John Brocheck, proprietor of New England Natural Bakers. They will discuss "Running a profitable Business in the '90s."

Song — Hillel House is hosting a time of Chanukah song sharing at 4pm in the Hillel House Conference Room, at 388 North Pleasant Street. All are welcome.

Meeting — "Out of Bounds" presents the first meeting of "Poets Anonymous" today at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center, rm. 805-09. Please bring your ideas and one poem.

Auction — The Student Union Gallery of UMass, in association with the Graduate Arts Student Association, announces an auction and exhibition to be held in the gallery. Work will be exhibited from 11 to 6 p.m. and the auction will begin at 6.

Film — "When the Mountains Tremble" will be shown in Herter 231 at 7:30 p.m. The film is about revolution and indigenous struggle in Guatemala. Rigoberta Menchu, 1992 winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, narrates.

Presentation — The Marketing Club is sponsoring a presentation featuring three marketing professors from the School of Management. The presentation will be in SOM, rm. 110 from 7 p.m. - 9 p.m.

Jobless don't share optimism

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — Maura Kolinsky and Bill Frehse are longtime casualties of Massachusetts' recession. Laid off from well-paying jobs, they aren't optimistic about recovering their earning power anytime soon.

Economists pointed to a silver lining in the state's 9 percent November unemployment rate announced last week, saying that one reason for the increase may be that more people who gave up job hunting are back in the market now because they sense a turnaround. People who give up looking for work are not counted in the unemployment statistics.

But neither Kolinsky nor Frehse, both of Boston, see much improvement.

Kolinsky, 38, lost her management job in the travel industry nearly two years ago when her department was eliminated. "I don't think it's getting that much better to tell you the truth," she said. Kolinsky, who is single now is entertaining the idea of moving out of the state.

Frehse lost what he still calls his "real job" three years ago. He was a business analyst for a research company with a decade's experience. Now, after a stint in retailing, he is doing temporary secretarial jobs.

"I think that the job environment is improving, but I have very serious doubts and fears for myself because I think I've been out of the mainstream for so long that even when the economy improves, my prospects might not necessarily improve," he said.

Frehse, 39, also single, said he does not want to leave the Bay State. He expects any new full-time job to pay up to $8,000 less than the job he had before the recession.

In Massachusetts, the number of employed people rose by 15,000 in November from the previous month's level. But the number of unemployed people rose by 23,000, to 282,000.

The state also showed a significant 38,000 increase in the labor market in November, a factor that contributed to higher levels of both employment and unemployment. The numbers reflect the first growth in the labor force in four months.

Both Frehse and Kolinsky said they have conducted job searches since they were unemployed, although with varying degrees of intensity.

"For the past year or eight months, I haven't really been looking all that hard in my field," Kllinsky said.

Frehse said he has been looking consistently throughout his unemployment, but "sometimes with more enthusiasm than others. I can't give up, because I have to live."

ATTENTION
COLLEGIAN STAFF MEMBERS
CANDIDATES NIGHT HAD BEEN RESCHEDULED TO WEDNESDAY, DEC. 9 AT 9 P.M. (INSTEAD OF 7 P.M.)

OUR GIFT TO YOU!
Diet Free 'Til 93
You pay only for Nutri/System meals.
Get into your nutri/size® this holiday season!
Judy Thompson
Nutri/System® client old size 22
nutri/system
413 ◆ 586 ◆ 8111
137 Damon Rd. Northampton, MA
Weight loss and maintenance vary by individual.
Participating centers only. Cannot be combined with other offers.
Offer expires 12/31.

NOTICE
Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 325, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places on Monday, Nov. 30. Please be there!

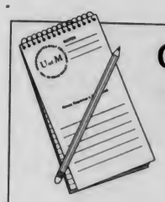
CAFE DICARLO
5-College Student Dinner Special
Choice of:
- Lasagna Verde
- Classic Pesto with Linguine
- Veal Parmigiana
- Cozze Aglio Olio e Pepperoncini (mussels with spicy olive oil and pasta)

Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.
Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Dec. 30, 1992
71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

The Collegian tells you what the D.C. is serving for breakfast, lunch and dinner. Try not to hold it against us.
19,000 copies every gosh-darned day.

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

Local News



CAMPUS SHORTS
compiled by David Massey

Goodbye glitz

Fleeing the high-fashion, high-pressure ephemeral and "empty" world of modeling, Lauren Lindberg feels more at home taking graduate premed classes at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

For a while, Lindberg, a graduate of Amherst College, was nearing the peak of the fashion modeling industry, nailing the cover of the French Elle twice. But the money and fleeting fame was a fatal attraction.

"Models don't have a right to have an opinion," says Lindberg in an article in the Fall 1992 Amherst College alumni magazine. "Or if they do have an opinion, it's never listened to. People have you convinced that all you're good for is just the way you look."

The glamorous world of modeling is merely a facade that covers the daily indignities and deceiving images produced in an assembly-line like industry, according to Lindberg. "There's always someone else out there who can fit into the clothes as well or better than you," she says in the article.

Lindberg, who defeated a leukemia-like blood disease as a teenager, plans on applying to medical or nursing schools. Her aspirations contrast with her negative portrayals of the "sleek and chic" glamour business.

"You haven't helped anyone. You just come out feeling imperfect."

Sit-bomb

The Fox Network sitcom "Down the Shore" welcomed a new housemate to the show on Thursday night.

The show, about six twentysomethings who rent a beach house on the New Jersey shore, features UMass graduate Nancy Sorel playing the new character "Sammy."

Nancy who? That's what the Alumni Office tells us. But "Down the Shore" producer/director Alan Kirschenbaum informs the Collegian that Sorel graduated from UMass in the mid-'80s.

Sorel, who's previous work was the soap opera "Generations," was hand-picked from "hundreds" of actors who auditioned for the role.

In the Thursday show, the roomies decide they need another housemate and deem Sammy as a wise choice. But one of the characters is flabbergasted when he recognizes the feather-earing-wearing Sammy from a previous drunken one-night-stand.

But the inane, repetitive jokes uttered by the cast foretell a swift demise for the Fox show.

"We were looking to add another woman to the show," said Kirschenbaum in a phone interview from Los Angeles. "And we were lucky enough to find her."

"She's very attractive and she's very funny," said Kirschenbaum on the UMass graduate. "She's got a real ethereal quality."

Red alert

The Commies are coming! Rush Limbaugh, radio talkmeister and TV host, fired his conservative cannons at an international Marxist conference held at the Campus Center in November.

The three-day conference was like a close encounters of the Communist kind, according to Limbaugh, recent author of "The Way Things Ought to Be." On his nationally-syndicated Friday night talk show, Limbaugh said:

"At the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, 500 Communists from American universities gathered for this forum. . . I've always told you that militant environmentalism is the new home of Socialism and Communism in the world. And I've said this and people say, 'Rush, you're one of those McCarthyites. You see a Commie behind every rock.'

"In fact, I have suggested, ladies and gentleman, that we keep two Communists on site at every U.S. college campus as museum pieces. They think that Marxism and Socialism are not flawed — they just haven't been tried by the right people."

Granada's culture 'comes alive'

UM graduate designs summer study abroad program

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts graduate has started a summer study abroad program in Granada, Spain which he hopes will provide affordable language, cultural and civilization study.

"It will be an awakening experience for people who go on the program to realize the commonalities and the differences between all the different cultures," said Dominick Vene, one of the program's founders.

Vene said there are people from Africa, Canada, Asia, many European countries and the United States who study at the University of Granada. "Spanish is the common form of communication," he said.

Vene said he graduated from UMass in three years with a major in history, a political science minor, a cultural anthropology minor and a Five-College International Relations certificate.

Vene said he and his partner, Mazin Chami, started the program because they were dissatisfied with many of the study abroad programs American universities offer.

"When I was teaching in France I noticed the American students were not used to different cultures and felt uncomfortable interacting with foreigners," Vene said.

Vene said when American students study abroad they are not immersed in the language because they are always with American students. "They live in dormitories and eat in the cafeteria with Americans and are taught by American professors," he said.

Vene said in Granada, the students are taught by professors from the University of Granada, live with Spanish families, go on guided cultural excursions and can attend many cultural events.

"The program is designed to provide diversity and richness for everyone, not just the students," said Vene, who speaks Italian, French and Spanish and knows a little bit of German, Japanese and Arabic.

Vene said American study abroad programs are also very expensive. He said his study abroad program in Granada costs $2,300 for one month, while another Spanish study abroad program costs $4,000 for one month.

"We kept our costs down because we worked directly with the University of Granada," Vene said. He said other abroad programs are more expensive because the people who organize the programs are trying to reach the tuition rates of the school.

Vene said the program is open to students who have never spoken Spanish before. He said people are accepted to the program on a first come first serve basis. "If students are motivated enough to study abroad, then we feel they should have the opportunity," Vene said.

Vene said the program offers optional courses in economics, politics and teaching Spanish as a second language for advanced students.

Vene said one of the most interesting aspects of the program is its setting. He said in under an hour the students can be skiing on the peninsula's highest mountains or swimming in the Mediterranean Sea.

"Students can read about the Arabic and Spanish cultures in a book, but when they actually live in Granada the culture comes alive," Vene said.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
MEMORIAL MATERIAL — Arts materials made available in the University Gallery by Five Colleges System give students an opportunity to express their feelings about the AIDS virus epidemic.

Sororities to host 'open rushing'

By CHRISTINA THORPE
Collegian Staff

It's never too early to begin thinking about rush especially since formal sorority rush for next semester begins just a week after the first day of classes.

"Being involved in the Greek Area provides the opportunity to meet new people and to make UMass smaller and more comfortable," said President of the University of Massachusetts National Panhellenic Council Monique Nash.

Nash referred to her own experience as a Greek as her "main interaction with quality friendships with other women."

The actual rush period will last only one week next semester, Feb. 3 to Feb.10. Rushees must attend an orientation, three rounds of "rush parties," and a Preference Night. Preference Night usually reflects the serious side of sisterhood while other events are used more for sisters and rushees to become acquainted. House tours are given during rush and there are skits or slide shows.

During the past few years, the sororities here at UMass have been conducting a "formal" or an "informal" rush every semester. With a formal or informal rush, rushees are given the opportunity to visit all chapters on campus under the supervision of the National Panhellenic Council, the governing body of all sororities.

For 1993, however, the University may become a deferred rush campus. The NPC will conduct a formal rush only in the spring, and individual chapters will be responsible for "open rushing" or "continuing open bidding" in the fall.

There are advantages and disadvantages to having formal rush only once a year.

Kathleen Flaherty is a senior political science major and sister at Sigma Kappa sorority and has participated in a formal or informal rush every semester since she joined the Greek Area.

"Without having two formal rushes a year," Flaherty said, "we can concentrate more on our other activities like philanthropies and scholarship."

Rush keeps sororities alive so it's hard to say," said Amy Weiler a junior English major from Kappa Kappa Gamma. "I think formal rush is the way to go. I do think this [deferred rush] is worth trying. Open rush is less time consuming. It can be confusing though, but only because we have not had that much experience with it."

Jennifer Seitles is a junior psychology major and the rush chair for Delta Zeta. Seitles feels that one formal rush per semester is ideal, however she believes it should be held in the fall rather then the spring.

With fall formal rush she said, "you have all summer to plan for it, nothing is on your mind and you can jump right into rush. If your numbers are high, in the spring you can kick back and have a good time and enjoy your seniors."

In order to participate in spring formal rush, unlike the formal rush conducted this semester, women must have a minimum Grade Point Average of 2.0 to register. There will also be a small registration fee which will used to fund Bid Day. This ice cream social is planned for the last day of rush when rushees receive their "bids," or invitations to pledge a sorority. A portion of the registration fees will go to charity.

Somalis

continued from page 1

get food, health care and other survival skills.

However, Mohamed questions the United States' intentions in making the country more stable, as he said he is waiting to see how the program develops in upcoming weeks. He wonders whether the United States will impose a government favorable to its own ends or help Somalis solve their problems by themselves.

"While I support the current efforts, I'm not sure of what the long-term intentions are," said Mohamed, who also said he wants to know what the United States plans to do about the warring factions of Mogadishu, a country located near Somalia.

Girma Kebbede, a professor of African development and geography at Mount Holyoke College said he supports the effort but wishes it took place months earlier. However, he said it is unclear what the overall peace and stability of the long-term goals will produce. He suggested warring factions could resume fighting once the U.S forces withdraw.

"It's not too late, but it would have been nice if it had taken place months ago because the situation got out of hand months ago," said Kebbede.

Also a member of the Help Somalia Committee, graduate student Mohamed Driri said he expects deploying troops will be useful. He added that he hopes and expects the troops will do more humanitarian work, such as building bridges, helping the weak and feeding people, rather than fighting.

But Driri said he would like to see the U.S. media concentrate on other events in Somalia, such as negotiations between Somali leaders. He said there other significant events going on in other parts of Somalia, where there is less severe suffering.

Mohamed said he'd like to see the United States or the United Nations take the initiative to facilitate a process where all leaders come together to reconcile differences.

Mohamed said he appreciates the efforts of students and the community who have shown concern over Somalia's difficulties and encourages people to continue to find ways to help the starving people.

Dec. 13, the American Friends Service Committee will be sponsoring a community gathering and candlelight vigil in support of those suffering in a violent world. The keynote speaker will be Irving Staub, professor of psychology at UMass and author.

Rainbow Patrol

continued from page 1

He went on to say that self-defense classes are being planned for members of the Patrol next semester.

Members "only use what amount of force they would personally feel necessary or appropriate to deter a hate crime," Maney said. This would range from deflecting blows to a victim, to defending oneself against force, or restraining an offender until the police arrive. Though the Patrol, Maney said, has not yet encountered a situation that warranted intervention.

"We need an action, on the part of the students, to do this for ourselves," Maney said.

sanctions

continued from page 1

Brutus also cited facts on Apartheid. Eighty-five percent of the population is Black, but because of the Groups Areas Acts, which allot certain areas to certain racial groups, Blacks are allowed only 13 percent of the nation's land.

Commenting on the political atmosphere of the South Africa, Brutus was critical of South African President F.W. DeKlerk.

"DeKlerk's primary strategy is to re-group cooperation from Blacks into his ranks, so if Blacks ever get the vote then he will be returned to power," he said.

Brutus said it was ironic that negotiations with the African National Congress started just when the sanctions against South Africa were starting to "bear fruit."

DeKlerk's government should not be called the government of South Africa, according to Brutus who said the real government of South Africa will not be seen until non-Europeans are allowed to vote. Meanwhile, Brutus said, DeKlerk is asking that an interim government rule for 10 more years while a new constitution is negotiated.

Brutus said the ANC should compromise with the existing government and share power while he said any benefits the White minority receives through Apartheid should end immediately.

Brutus painted a dismal picture of quality of life for Blacks in South Africa today. Brutus said there is a 80 percent unemployment rate for Black teenagers and an increase of crime. He said, in fact, that he was mugged in the streets during his last visit, and that he saw "no improvement [in South Africa], except in rhetoric."

Collegian,
If you don't read it, someone else will.

RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN. YOU WILL FEEL VERY HAPPY.

QUIET
If you're tired of yelling this, Come and see us
The Brook
253-2834

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

WINTER INTERSESSION • 1993
JANUARY 4 — JANUARY 16

Don't put your education on ice this winter break — enroll in UMass Lowell's Winter Intersession. This highly concentrated, two-week session is perfect if you want to earn college credit to get ahead in your educational program. And if you're enrolled in another university, it's a great way to earn transfer credits.

Credit Courses (3 credits) available in:
- Liberal Arts
- Sciences
- Mathematics
- Computers
- Social Sciences
- Management
- Music

Cost: $95/credit

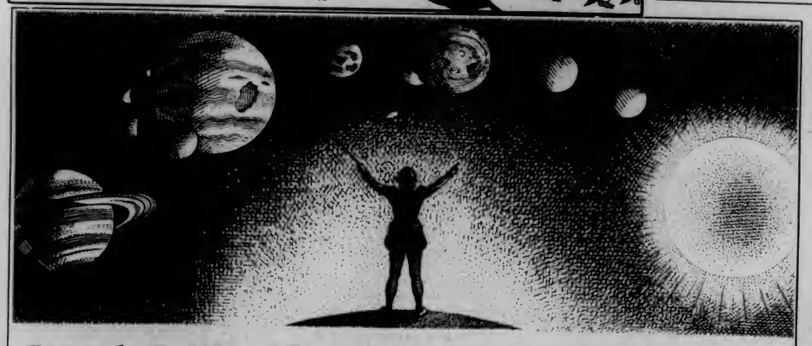
Day classes: Mon-Sat, 9am-12:30pm
Evening classes: Mon-Fri, 6-9:30pm and Sat, 1-4:30pm

Make your winter break really count! For a Winter Intersession bulletin, call the Division of Continuing Education at (508) 934-2480. Or just fill out the coupon below and mail it to: University of Massachusetts Lowell, Division of Continuing Education, One University Avenue, Lowell, MA 01854.

UMass Lowell
Continuing Education

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Phone ( ) _____
College _____

The University of Massachusetts Lowell is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Title IX Employer AP



It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

Revive with VIVARIN.

Use only as directed. Contains caffeine equivalent of two cups of coffee. © 1992 SmithKline Beecham

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Relocating sleazoid doesn't end pattern of harassment

Turkey Genocide Day has come and gone, and winter break is almost here. It's time to arm ourselves in financial battle against the dark forces of General Electric, AT&T and the evil empire of landlords. It was this battle that led me to don a name badge in a processed cheese food pizza shell hell, and motivated me to stay, though I loathed the job so much I had to perform deep breathing relaxation exercises every day before my shift began.

At first, my only problem lay in the fact that I was one of only three women working with a legion of high school boys who spent the majority of their time shooting tiny clumps of feta cheese out of the their nostrils at one another. The other two women were supervisors; I was the token female plebian, and the brunt of a never-ending slew of immature jokes and horrifying pranks. When a new male manager was sent in to take control, I was elated. He was young, funny, charismatic and most importantly, authoritative. I was sure my torture at the hands of the army of prepubes was over. Actually, my real problem hadn't even begun.

Ever so slowly, ever so mildly, the new manager began acting a bit unusual. He began with dirty jokes that would make Andrew Dice Clay blush crimson, and progressed to making comments that made my stomach queasy and my pulse race. At this point, he didn't refer to me specifically, but to women in general. I wasn't sure what to think of his behavior. Was he crossing the lines of propriety or was he just an outgoing, open kind of guy?

I asked around, and the consensus was that I was being small-minded and prudish. I had never been accused of this before, but I'd also never been in such a disconcerting situation. All I knew was that something very disturbing was happening, and it was getting increasingly worse with every shift I worked. Every day I prepared myself to inform him that I was, in a word, uncomfortable. But every day, I worried about coming off like a chastity-belted Victorian-era schoolmarm and let it go.

Lori
O'CONNOR

I shouldn't have. Before long, the sleazoid was spreading imaginative, NC-17 tales about the supposed fling I was having with another employee. He threatened to walk into the dressing area as I was changing out of my uniform at the end of the night. "Accidental" trips sent him crashing into me and crushed my body up against walls. It got to the point that the mere mention of his name made me tremble with anxiety. Trying to fend him off verbally had no effect, since he treated it all like an innocent joke. No one would take me seriously when I spoke of my uneasiness; it was the, "Well, I've never seen him act that way so you must be exaggerating" syndrome. Mind you, this was pre-Anita Hill awareness. No one seemed to believe I was a victim, especially when I was splattered with sauce and stinking of pepperoni.

Finally my fear turned to rage, and I followed my instincts and fought for what I believed. Unless I wanted to continue living on the mummified Tupperware surprises in of my refrigerator, I couldn't afford to call in sick on my shifts with Sleazoid any longer. I demanded a meeting with the corporation's leaders, and got it. I was forced to sit at a table of company big wigs, Sleazoid included, and repeat word for word every vile comment he had ever made. Sadly, nothing came out of the meeting; the panel of double-breasted ding dongs acted as if I were fabricating the complaint. I never even received an apology.

I later learned the meeting had been a sham. Sleazoid had harassed several women at his last place of employment, and the company had him transferred in the hope that a change of scenery would curtail his behaviors. I was so outraged that I quit. Sexual harassment is not a haunted house; moving doesn't make the problem disappear.

That meeting was one of the most intimidating, emotionally draining experiences of my life, but I survived. As college students who are constantly in need of a steady cash flow, it is a temptation to try ignoring sick, sexually dysfunctional people in authority rather than fighting them. Speak up if you're being harassed in the workplace and if nothing changes, quit. Believe me, the feelings of pride and strength you'll enjoy afterward are worth far more than a few extra dollars for cable television and groceries.

Lori O'Connor is a Collegian columnist.

Smooch strains friendship

I do not appreciate being kissed on the lips by another man. Personally, it revolts me. But that is only my point of view. Before I get called a "queer basher," a "breeder," or whatever other euphemisms one can come up with for my person, hear my tale of concern and aggravation.

Kris K.
EARLE

I am not against the gay lifestyle; it exists and I am willing to accept it, but it is not for me. A second point is I do not parade around holding a sign saying "I am a heterosexual," nor do I take part in the "straight pride" or the "gay pride" rallies; they are a waste of precious time when there are so many other problems to confront. I've always stayed away from the issue of human sexuality; I figured both I and my friends know about my sexual situation and that would be enough. Unfortunately, I guess I have finally decided to add my two cents on the subject of human sexuality since it has come to annoy me.

A while back, one of my friends came over and said he was "in need of help" and wanted my honest opinion. I said fine, since I am more than willing to listen to a friend in need. My friend told me he was bisexual and he wanted an opinion on if someone was attractive. I answered truthfully, stating I had little knowledge on the subject, since I am partial to the beauty of the female body and not the male. My answer obviously did not appeal to him. He kept going on and on, stating that he was not interested in "sleeping with" me. He repeated it about 10 to 15 times. He then spilled beer all over my carpet and told me to look him in the eyes and to sit down when I was talking to him. He is the anal retentive type of friend, so I usually respect what he has to say and am willing to give him that extra attention. I never had a problem with his little temper tantrums in the past four years of our friendship. Until this one evening.

He stood up and sluggishly waltzed across the room. He came over to where I stood, clenched my arms, and planted one sloppy smooch on my trembling lips. No tongue, but it still disgusted me. This wasn't the usual drunken male-bonding kiss-on-the-cheek. I've been friends with this guy for four years and never have I seen such animalistic urges spawn from him. Maybe it was the beer talking, but I think that is a rather flimsy excuse. Why'd he do this if he knew that I'm heterosexual and have had a steady girlfriend for over five years? Why'd he say that he has no sexual interest in me and then confront me with a kiss? After I broke free of his grip, he stepped onto my cassettes and fell backward onto my stereo. This was the last straw.

I told him it was time to leave and he'd be given a ride home. He tried to grab me again but I kept my distance and told him he was starting to irritate me. He said he'd understand if I wanted to "smash [him] in the face," which is a typical response when someone has done something wrong and knows it. Sorry, but I don't fight my friends and haven't fought anyone since second grade recess.

Let us look at what this incident would've been if I were a female. If I were a female and one of my platonic friends came over to me, restrained my arms, and kissed me, it would qualify as date rape. Am I not correct? But since I am a man who is larger and stronger than the "friend" who came after me, it qualifies as me being a loser for not "smashing [his] face in." Or perhaps I wanted it all along. Or perhaps I was scared of this revelation and am "homophobic." I am sure all of you gentle readers will have your own interpretations.

Let me leave you with this: Imagine that one of your friends comes up to you and attacks you, whether it be a male or female, gay or straight. What will you do? Since my friend has decided to do this, he has put a damper on our four-year friendship and has created confusion and static between the two of us. I don't go up to my female friends and attempt to restrain them and stick my tongue down their throats. They would be quite surprised and most likely terrified by this sudden change in character. I believe that restraining our animalistic urges is one of the reasons most of us stand apart from being savages. Most of us.

Kris K. Earle is a Collegian staff member.

Customers can change services

How many students on this campus feel the food in the Campus Center needs improvement? How many feel the "speedie burger" isn't so speedy and the coffee wakes you up more out of its awful taste than the caffeine?

The students are the largest and most important customer of the Campus Center. If you feel the restaurants in the Campus Center do not meet your standards, help re-direct them. The grads did it! They created and now run the Graduate Lounge.

We can improve the food in the Campus Center so they meet our needs. The Board of Governors wants your help to form a consensus and mandate change. The Campus Center staff is interested and capable of filling its customers' requests. Help make things happen. Board of Governors meetings are Thursdays at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center.

Dan Gordon, at-large governor
Board of Governors

Ridiculous column wastes space

Once again, the Collegian has devoted valuable space to the moronic drool known as the comments of Adam Scott Roberts. In his criticism of the Campus Center, Mr. Roberts compares our "hub" to that of Indiana University, noting that at I.U.,. one can shop, study, see a movie, bowl, eat or play pool. With the exception of bowling, one can do all of these at the Campus Center. We can also have a drink at the Hatch or the TOC, see live bands and productions and much more. There are plenty of windows by the coffee shop; perhaps the fact the Campus Center is underground might attest for the fact there aren't many windows.

Mr. Roberts claims the Campus Center's four bank machines are insufficient, asking if one could imagine Chicago's O'Hare Airport with only four ATMs. Millions of people circulate through O'Hare 24 hours a day, while the Campus Center hosts a few mere thousand, mostly during the daytime, making this comparison ridiculous. "Condom World" is there to provide condoms for people who need them! Why doesn't he think people should buy condoms there? Hasn't he heard of safe sex?

Can't the Collegian make better use of space than uninformed babble such as this?

Eileen Loh
Amherst

Criticism of Campus Center unfair

Adam Scott Roberts [Collegian, Dec. 1] fails to consider the Campus Center fairly. The Campus Center is part of the Association of College Unions-International, an organization that unites administrators and student representatives from college union facilities around the world. The UMass Campus Center has been rated as among the best unions in the country, based on diversity of services and accessibility.

There are areas where the facilities can be improved. But there are structural and financial limitations under which the University Store and other operations have been able to provide stunningly high quality and service. The magazine rack is part of a very crowded and dense network of shelving and displays. The reason is that the store strives to make as many products available as possible. Penn State, with an undergraduate student body twice the size of UMass, offers a selection roughly 30 percent smaller than UMass. I would argue students should strive to have access to diverse and reasonably priced products.

Regarding the Textbook Annex, I wonder how Mr. Roberts would cotton to standing on the combined lines of the University Store and the Annex at the beginning of the semester. While a student has to walk that 800 feet to get to the Annex, he or she saves time by avoiding doubly long lines in a single facility.

The Board is grappling with issues involving: possible privatization of the University Store, the student office space needs, the quality of food service in the building, and how to avoid the imposition of user fees or general fees to support the operation of the facility. I invite Mr. Roberts and all other interested students to attend our meetings.

Benjamin Preston, Chair
Board of Governors

Clinton to woo new Congress, name his Cabinet

By JOHN KING
Associated Press

LIITLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton hopes to convince House freshmen they are "natural allies for change," a senior advisor said Sunday as Clinton prepared to court Congress and make his first major administration appointments.

Clinton attended services at Immanuel Baptist Church, waving to reporters but saying nothing about what looks like a busy week. It opens with a two-day visit to Washington, via Illinois, and is likely include Clinton's resignation as Arkansas governor and several appointments.

In Illinois — a critical state in both his primary and general election strategies — Clinton will hold a town hall style meeting with students and teachers at a Chicago community college.

"He looks forward to talking to the students about their educational opportunity and job prospects and how the right training can lead to the right job," said Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos.

In Washington, Clinton's schedule includes sessions with House Democrats as a group, as well as the House members at which aides said Clinton will appeal for support for his economic and political reform programs.

"They are all part of the same moment in history and President-elect Clinton wants them to know he wants to listen to them an work with them," Stephanopoulos said.

"They were elected on the same message he ran on and he hopes they will be natural allies for change and progress and reform in the beginning," said Bruce Lindsey, a Clinton confidante and member of his inner transition circle.

Clinton could resign as governor as early as Wednesday. No date had been set as of Sunday, aides said, but several said they believed Clinton would wait until Thursday to name his treasury secretary and perhaps a few additional members of his economic team. Texas Sen. Llyod Bensten is Clinton's choice for the Treasury post, according to transition and Democratic sources.

Another Cabinet post where Clinton is said to be near making an appointment is Health and Human Services secretary, according to advisers, as well as heads of the Energy, Interior and Environmental Protection Agency.

"I think you will see a series of appointments beginning this week," said one senior Clinton aide. Another, however, predicted only a few appointments this week and a few more next week. With the exception of Bentsen, Clinton's search has been highly secretive, with many of the prospects interviewed for Cabinet posts waiting to hear from the president-elect.

■ church

continued from page 1

whether the diocese, said to be among the poorest in the state, can afford to make the multimillion-dollar settlement from its own funds.

In August, two firms that sold the diocese liability insurance during the 1960s, Continental Insurance Co. and Boston-Old Colony Insurance Co., said they shouldn't have to cover the claims because the diocese was so negligent in its handling of the Porter case.

Alleged victims said that, whenever someone complained, the diocese simply transferred Porter to a new spot.

"It's insane," said one man, identifying himself only as a parishioner at St. Mary's Cathedral. "There must be some way they can make them pay. It's like insurance for you and me. We pay our premiums and expect the company to come through. (The church) doesn't have that kind of money."

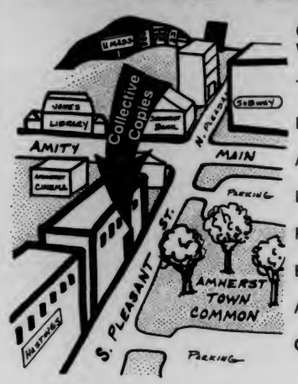
Others said the diocese should make restitution and move on.

"Hopefully, we can move forward now with a much more positive approach and with a real return to pastoral concerns," said a priest at St. Patrick's Churhc, who declined to give his name. "There's so much healing to do."

Porter allegedly abused dozens of youths when he served as a priest in North Attleboro, New Bedford and Fall River in the early 1960s.

HANDEL'S
MESSIAH
Springfield Symphony Orchestra
&
University of Massachusetts Chamber Choir
Raymond Harvey, conducting
Wednesday, December 9, 8:00 p.m.
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMass, Amherst
Tickets $12/$8 Students, Elders & Children
Available at Fine Arts Center Box Office 545-2511 or at the door
Co-sponsored by WFCR 88.5 FM

COLLECTIVE COPIES
29 South Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-6425 FAX: 253-7475



Check out What We have to offer!
Thesis Copying
Dissertations
Acid Free Paper
Laminating
Recycled Paper
Binding
AND,
GREAT PRICES
10% OFF ANY ORDER
with this coupon
COLLECTIVE COPIES
expires 1/1/93

660 CORPORATION
MAKE YOUR TIME OFF ... PAY OFF

This Winter Break, you can have it all: fun, friends, and extra cash! All at 660 Corporation. We're the management professionals behind the B.U. Bookstore Mall and other retail ventures — selling everything from books and prints to computers and clothing. And when students come back to Boston this January, they'll come straight to us.
Come to our OPEN HOUSE and ask about our Temporary Sales/Stock Associate positions. Fill out an application, and you could be hired on the spot. But you'll have to come early, because these jobs go fast!
- Full and part-time temporary positions, Christmas-late January
- Immediate hiring
- Very flexible hours
- Store discount up to 30%
- Fun, friendly environment

Make this a winter break to be remembered. If you can't stop by our Open House, call (617) 236-7402 for more information.
OPEN HOUSE
for the B.U. Bookstore Mall, Kenmore Square
Wednesday, December 9
9am - 2pm
Campus Center Concourse
An equal opportunity employer.

Grand Opening
November 1, 1992
THE MUG SHOT
Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.
Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.
Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

Arts & Living

The Bobs' a cappella will amaze you, no lie

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

They tell you that there are no overdubs, no electronic effects, not even any instruments. They tell you that every sound you hear in their songs (with the exception of "The Deprogrammer," where they cheated) is a sound made by the human body, whether sung, slapped, stomped, popped, pounded, or guffawed.

They tell you that there are only four people making noise at any one time (there were five for a brief period, which made them the world's largest quartet).

They tell you all this, but when you listen to one of their songs you know they must be lying. No way that a naked human voice can do that. No way that only four voices can create that harmonic wall of sound that towers over Phil Spector's.

Unbelievably, the Bobs don't lie.

What's more, all these a capella pyrotechnics come with a seemingly unlimited wit, the kind that sees nothing wrong with songs about religious deprogrammers, the tribulations of dictators with dirty laundry, and the valid reasons to hate the Beach Boys. It's the kind of wit that slides a jazz solo by a faux trumpet into Johnny Cash's "Burning Ring of Fire," and laughs as it tacks a swinging doo-wop ending onto the Talking Head's "Psycho Killer." It has to be heard to be believed.

Richard Bob Greene, Matthew Bob Stull, Janie Bob Scott, and Joe Bob Finetti will be bringing all this and their gracious manners and uncommon stage presence to the Iron Horse Monday and Tuesday nights, Dec. 7 and 8, where they will undoubtedly sing many of their old favorites as well as the covers from their latest album, The Bobs Sing the Songs of. . . which includes songs written by Jimi Hendrix, Led Zepplin, Peggy Lee, the Rascals, and Tom Waits, all done by four people with no instruments and a whole lot of attitude.

Joining them on Tuesday night will be comedian Jonathon Katz, about whom I can say nothing, as I've never heard any of his routines before. He does note that he is a longtime friend and fan of the Bobs, which should certainly count for something.

So what are you waiting for? Take the Bobs challenge. See if you can believe that four such meek, mild-mannered people could possibly perform with just their mouths and hands and feet a "Helter Skelter" that would once and for all shut those voices up in Charles Manson's head and then turn right around and leave you polka-ing till dawn with their own "Bulky Rhythm."

They dare you.

Punchline's tyranny

Words & Pictures meets Thousands

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

You all know who Barry Deutsch is. He draws Cast of Thousands. And here's the interview already.

Kip: Okay, here we are in the studio of campus-famous cartoonist Barry Deutsch —

Barry: (Derisive snort)

K.M.: So, Barry, why don't you give us a little background on yourself?

B.D.: I was born in July of '69 and I read Harold and the Purple Crayon soon after. Further updates as events warrant.

K.M.: I guess the question everyone wants answered is "Where's Cast of Thousands?"

B.D.: It's hiding under my bed. I've been trying to coax it out — at first with doggy treats, and then with tuna fish, and lately I've been trying The Complete Works of Jane Austen, but so far no dice.

K.M.: No, really, where's it been lately?

B.D.: Well, I'm taking a break. Writing a punchline every four panels can be pretty tiresome, y'know. I got to a point where I needed a tight deadline for motivation, so I'd run to get the strip to the layout people at midnight every night, and, quite reasonably, they all got sick of me. Then I thought: Why put myself through all this if I'm not getting paid? So I quit, and for a few weeks it felt wonderful. But now I miss it, so Cast of Thousands will be back next semester.

K.M.: Have you been working on anything else?

B.D: Yeah. Let's see. . . I drew a poster for the Theatre Guild — "A Midsummer Night's Dream." I'm working on a serialized radio comedy, which will eventually be heard on MUA, I hope. And I'm in the initial stages of several cartooning projects, most of which have the main trait of being completely and utterly unlike Cast of Thousands.

K.M.: And what about the future of COT?

B.D.: Zack's gonna come out of the closet. He's gotta —

K.M.: You've only been dropping lead-weight hints for a year and a half.

Turn to THOUSANDS, page 8

Walls rang with silence

Marceau: lessons in communication

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

The walls of the Fine Arts Center rang with silence Wednesday night as world famous mime Marcel Marceau performed for a captivated audience.

Marceau, along with Blanca Del Barrio and Bogdan Nowak, soundlessly portrayed a variety characters and experiences in a 2 and 1/2 hour show that seemingly defied the laws of human nature and hushed the large, yet attentive crowd.

The performance had two segments, one consisted of style pantomimes of various situations, and the other a selection of pantomimes featuring Bip the clown, a character heralded worldover as Marceau's trademark.

The first of Marceau's six style pantomimes, The Painter, served to initially demonstrate his technique in a simple way. This piece had no complex story, and illustrated an artist merely having fun with the creative process. It was in this piece that Marceau helped the audience become accustomed to seeing the boundaries of the objects that he created.

The Bird Keeper was a more profound piece, but started out simply, so the audience could begin to fathom the birds and cage Marceau felt and saw. With the help of a chirping soundtrack, the artist brought to life a whimsical feathered friend that evoked mocked aggravation in Marceau and delighted laughter from the audience. After Marceau's playful struggle with the bird, the piece took on a serious note as the winged creature died, leaving Marceau alone in the locked cage. The mime eventually evolved into the bird, and the audience was left to ponder the significance of relative freedom.

In The Hands, Marceau utilized only his hands to portray life and death. With meticulous positioning of his fingers, wrists and arms, he represented these two contradictory facets of existence. Every move conjured images of jubilant, youthful vivacity plotted against abrasive decay. The piece ended with the hands joining together in a union of compromise and reconciliation.

My favorite of Marceau's style pantomimes was titled Pygmalion, and featured Blanca Del Barrio as a statue that Marceau creates which eventually comes to life. Del Barrio's incredible muscle control and endurance sustained the artist's stone-like pose, creating an eerie effect. Throughout her graceful interaction with Marceau once she took on a life of her own, Del Barrio maintained a quasi-human quality that, coupled with the haunting music, struck the captivated audience as verging on frightening. In accordance with the unnerving visual effect of the pantomime, the story ends with the statue murdering Marceau, making a statement about the danger of allowing our dreams to become obsessions and fully consume our lives.

Marceau's other style pantomimes were excellent, especially The Mask Maker in which the mime's face took the form of different masks, and audience had to separate his face from his body in order to fully understand his mood and message.

Those of us who were not around in 1947 to see Marceau's first Bip pantomimes quickly learned the tremendous popularity of the character when Marceau donned his famous beflowered opera hat and assumed a lackadaisical jaunt. Applause broke out from the audience, and Bip comfortably claimed the stage as his throne throughout his numerous antics.

Marceau delighted the audience with his portrayals of a circus clown, soldier and even David & Goliath. The audience was overcome with shock and disappointment at the sight of the title of the "Bip Commits Suicide" pantomime, until the lovable clown portrays the thought of suicide as one of fleeing nonsense. After many attempts using various methods, Bip proves physically unable to do the evil deed, emotionally smug, and manages even to find joy in staying alive long enough to play around with the thought of death.

Throughout the performance Marceau created an atmosphere of intimacy and solitude, but clearly acknowledged our presence in letting us catch quick glimpses of the emotions behind his gestures. With his animated storytelling he proved that silence does not always wreak solitude, and inspired a realization that communication is far more complex than mere words.

Marceau also demonstrated a great understanding of common human expression that exceeds culture and language. The pantomimist proved to me that truly there are characteristics that bind us all as human beings that allow us to communicate with, understand and learn from one another.

It is with this knowledge that Marceau has travelled the world and shared his stories and lessons of humanity with countless people. In doing so, he has afforded us all a closer look at our own actions and gestures that prove often to speak louder than words.

Eddie Murphy loses laughs as a Gentleman

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

From his mansion "Bubble Hill" in posh Englewood, N.J. near the Palisades and the banks of the Hudson, to the Potomac's political district, Eddie Murphy heads to Washington in Hollywood Pictures' The Distinguished Gentleman.

It's the story about Jefferson Johnson (Eddie Murphy) a Florida con-man who lies and cons better than Goldie Hawn did in last summers' Housesitter. Johnson decides to add to the political corruption in Washington when he runs for Congress on the grounds that people will vote for the candidate name that they are familiar with.

So, when the real congressman of the same name (James Gavin) dies while shtooping his legislative assistant, Murphy's character runs for Congress in his Florida district under the slogan "Jefferson Johnson, The Name You Know."

Similar to Robert Altman's The Player which laughed at the way the entertainment business runs, The Distinguished Gentleman succeeds in showing the underside to a very corrupt city and political mischief.

Murphy does everything from imitate a raspy eldakaka Jewish guy, a snooty WASP, to a computerized phone-sex operator. His imitations are hysterical and ring true of common stereotypes.

But the best is the Robin Williams' style of mimicry used by Murphy when he pretends to be an official with the NAACP in order to get onto an exclusive committee. It's hysterical as the committee asks questions such as,"Are their any Blacks on the committee?" "Are any homosexuals on the committee?" And he concludes with asking if any Latino's are on the committee. Whal-la! Then comes the favorable sneaky Axel Foley smile. Guess who becomes the newest member of the committee?

Murphy's character is put to the test when a mother and a cancer ridden child from his district demand to meet their congressman. Murphy's Johnson thought it was all a game until he had to deal with the people who live in his district. This type of storyline sits well in a Bette Midler Beaches type of film. The scene doesn't work to further the plot, instead it corrupts the comedy that is trying to be achieved.

The film is funny yet it moves like the Maryland Terrapins, slow enough to seem like just another 48 Hours. . . But just before the boredom really kicks in, and there is only a sip of lemonade and a few popcorn kernels remaining, the movie picks up with more laughs that get funnier as the clock ticks.

Murphy's performance was similar to that of his roles played in Trading Places and Beverly Hills Cop. More so of the latter. The Axel Foley slickness beams from Murphy's eyes and can trick you into seeing Foley in a suit. Murphy succeeds in making audiences laugh but

Turn to EDDIE, page 8

COURTESY HOLLYWOOD PICTURES COMPANY
In the Distinguished Gentleman Eddie Murphy plays a con-man who worms his way into Congress.

■ Eddie

continued from page 7

he's a far cry from a Golden Child.

Victoria Rowell (Drucilla on "The Young and the Restless") plays Celia, Murphy's love interest. She's a tough cookie who looks like Anita Hill and makes a remark about sexual harassment to include the conduct of Congressman after Murphy throws himself at her. Was this little pun and her similar appearance intended? Of course it is, after all this is Hollywood.

Another performance to stand out is "Murphy Brown's" Grant Shaud who plays Murphy's assistant. Shaud brings that Jewish Miles Silverbergness to the role. He's hysterical and just as neurotic as his character from "Brown." Shaud plays the part so well on "Brown" that I think he'll be type-casted for a long time. But, hey it works for him and he's very convincing. He comes across in The Distinguished Gentlemen as your typical Potomoc-Silver Spring yuppie.

Lane Smith (My Cousin Vinny) plays committee chairman Dick Dodge who resembles Richard Nixon and Dan Rather. His performance makes him look like a high strung politician.

In addition, Sheryl Lee Ralph and Charles Dutton (from FOX's "Roc") join the cast to make the latest Murphy film entourage.

Although there are some laughs, the film mildly entertains, with no real character development on Murphy's part. However, Murphy and Director Jonathan Lynn (My Cousin Vinny, Nuns on the Run) tried to capitalize on this election season and they made the mistake of releasing the film almost a month after election day.

The Distinguished Gentlemen isn't as exciting as last summer's Boomerang. Wait for it to come out on video and save some cash. GRADE: C+.

■ Thousands

continued from page 7

B.D.: Weirdly, some folks haven't caught on. And I've been wanting to do Jo trying LSD for the first time. Also, since I wrote out Albert the Ghost, there hasn't been a single straight male in the strip, so I suppose I should put one in. I'm an affirmative action cartoonist

K.P.: How about strips or characters that you want to do, or have wanted to do, but haven't thought possible? I mean in terms of having to censor yourself —

B.D.: Well, there's Dr. Demerious, who's a combination ventriloquist and abortionist. Imagine him throwing voices into the womb, during the operation: "Mommy! Mommy! Help me, Mommy, it hurts!" But most people would find a character like that incredibly tasteless.

K.M.: Yes. Well. Um. You have had some problems with your strips about race relations. I'm thinking about the ones where you began drawing Robin with shading. . .

B.D.: Well, Robin was African-American all along, but I drew her so badly at first that only I knew. That's also poor writing, of course. How to handle race in the comic strip has been the thing I've worried the most about. . .I mean, I didn't want to do what most strips do, which is to have the strip take place in a mysteriously all-White world. But I also didn't want to do a strip with one Black character exactly like the White characters, except with shading on her skin. So I used Robin.

Robin was raised in a White town, and until college she had virtually no contact with the African-American community, which gave me an excuse for her having mostly White friends at first. The idea is, as the strip goes on, her heritage, and the Black community, are becoming more and more important to her. I've done a few — too few — strips along those lines, because it's a hard subject for a White person to write about and not make an ass of himself, so I chicken out a whole lot.

K.M.: You don't seem to have the same difficulty with the gay, lesbian, bisexual community. I mean, most of the cast falls into one of those categories.

B.D.: Well, I enjoy writing about intelligent, interesting characters, and the fact is that the average dyke or fag is many times more interesting, witty, educated, well-read, artful, and original than the average breeder.

If you're a college grad looking for a career, we offer the opportunity for...

Management in less than a year!

Take charge of your future with the NO. 1 COMPANY IN ITS FIELD, AMERICAN FROZEN FOODS. We have immediate openings for COMPETITIVE GRADUATES with LEADERSHIP ABILITY and STRONG PEOPLE SKILLS. Our expansion plans include PROMOTING 40 NEW SALES MANAGERS from our Fast Track Training Program within the next two years. We're looking for individuals who enjoy hard work and love the challenge. If you're the right candidate, you could be a Manager, EARNING $50K-$100K WITHIN ONE YEAR! Look for us in the National College Placement Association's 1992 Career Resource Digest as one of the top 100 best companies to work for in America. We have sales offices in your local area as well as from Maine to Florida and as far west as Minnesota.

Please call or send resume immediately to: Robert Kane, V.P. Recruitment
American Frozen Foods, Inc
National Recruitment Office Attn: Dept. C
111 Sibley Ave., 2nd floor
Ardmore, PA 19003.
800-241-7187

AMERICAN FROZEN FOODS, INC.
Equal Opportunity Employer

• Attention Undergraduates. Outstanding sales/management INTERNSHIPS now available–call for details.

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA

$10 HAIRCUTS!

Make an appointment with Liz, Monday through Friday, and your haircut will be only $10 !

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

News
Sports
Arts
Comics
Crosswords
Horoscope
Opinion
Lunch

Everybody reads us.

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
545-3500

Wednesday, December 9th is the Last Day to Place Classified Advertisements for the Fall Semester.

RECYCLE YOUR COLLEGIAN. IT BELONGS IN THE BLUE RECYCLING CONTAINER. THANK YOU.

CopyCat PRINT SHOP

RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992.
Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)

228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

SPRING BREAK '93

Non-Stop Air • (7) Nights Hotel • Taxes • Club Discounts • Transfers • Activities Program

CANCUN	from $399
BAHAMAS	from $409
JAMAICA	from $439
SOUTH PADRE	from $469
FLORIDA (Panama City)	from $109

For free brochure call
Breakaway Travel
1-800-862-7325
(Deposits due by December 18)

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over: $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
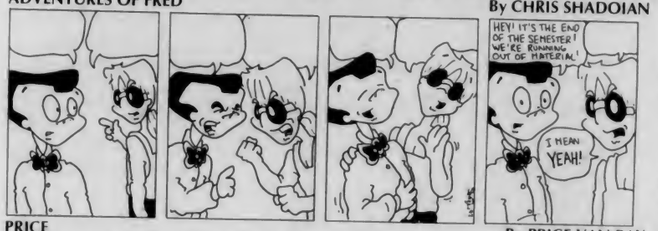
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN



PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

WILMINGTON By MARK K. ANDERSON

Suggested Winter Holiday Arboreal Unit Ornamentations

Glitter Tassle. What the heck. If they were taken out, you might as well put 'em to good use. (Affix baby teeth to popcorn strands for a tree-wide tribute to things that were once part of your body but aren't anymore.)

Richard Dawson Nativity Figurines. The kids'll enjoy this one. Introduce the famous holiday scene as it might have happened if Hogan's Heroes' Newkirk or the host of Family Feud were present.

Anti-Freeze Medical Warning Tree Skirt. It's sure to offer a useful lesson for all on the dangers of ingesting this automotive chemical.

String O' Sting. Flame retardant but still festive, the 25' long rope supports two dozen life-size portraits of the aging rocker. For outdoor use only.

Drunken Sailor Wind-up Mimbe Box. A lusty alternative to carols.

Yes, it's that crazy holiday time of the year again. Thus, we here at Wilmington offer a few suggestions for those who may find (for whatever weird reason) that they want to decorate an evergreen tree with little silver ball things and other stuff.

New Age Pyramid Doodle. Put on top of tree and increase personal karmic aura or your money back.

Former Reagan Appointees Currently Facing Indictment Advent Calendar. We may have to taper into January to fit 'em all in.

The Boss Is A Lush" brand Breathalizer. For those office parties with a bit too much holiday cheer. (Not an ornament, but still nice to have.)

Deadbeat Gnomes" by Currier and Ives. A 365" print which shows the other side of Santa's helpers.

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Marc Elliott
Copy Editor	Sarah Levesque
PhotoTechnician	Tom Haller
Production Supervisor	Nicole Dumas
Production	Challis Meehan, Jim Ganley

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Dutchess Meat Pie	Zesty Basil Chicken
Grilled Turkey Sand.	Veal Cutlet
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Grilled Turkey	Zesty Basil Chicken
Hummus Vege Pocket	Cauliflower Casserole

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Hey, Lola. Did you see this thing in the paper?"

Quote of the Day

"No, no. It's not really cold enough for mulled wine."

—Clarence the Angel from "It's a Wonderful Life"

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do some research. Higher-ups look favorably on your ideas. Present the facts clearly and you could move up the career ladder. Avoid getting caught in the crossfire between co-workers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Remain in the wings and conduct business privately today. Tension between two higher-ups could spell over as your direction. By keeping cool, you win points with both parties.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone could be on the warpath at work. By pitching in on a special assignment, you could earn important points.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Well-meaning friends may entice you into going along with their unconventional work ideas. Be careful not to jeopardize your reputation. Make plans for a pre-holiday party.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An unexpected development could raise doubts or worry. Turn to allies who will put you in a positive, problem-solving state of mind. Keep calm if loved ones get into a huff.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be diplomatic with the boss and sidestep disputes with your co-workers. Taking unnecessary financial risks could lead to a cash shortage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Distant horizons or a change of lifestyle may pique your interest today. Spend the afternoon on creative work. Flaunt your talents before influential people.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The pendulum swings back in your favor. Your colleagues are more receptive to teamwork. Let good humor override any arguments with your co-workers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Candidly discussing your ideas will let potential allies know exactly where you stand. Romantic and social ties grow stronger. Wish upon a star — dreams do come true!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Publishing, advertising and research enjoy highly favorable influences. Know your limits, emphasize long-range benefits and keep all negotiations strictly confidential.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emotions could run your usually good judgment. Try to keep your feet on the ground even if your head is on cloud nine. Be careful about how you handle money and other assets.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The embers of a romance could be reignited. An introduction leads to an important discovery. Use it if you can.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Thin strip of wood
5 Hemingway or Haydn
9 Hard roll
14 Dies —
15 Cheers, in Madrid
16 Concur
17 Detailed plan
19 Christmas songs
20 Full
21 Entry
23 Peer Gynt's mother
24 Tepee
26 Verve
27 Isle of — 28 Busy as —
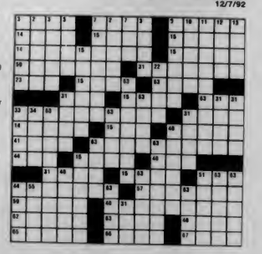
30 Salamander
33 At sea
37 Bronte's "Jane —"
38 Yearns
39 Pastry
40 Dutch painter Jan
41 Facial feature
42 Became a close acquaintance
44 Torrid
45 Grouse
46 FDR measure
47 Epic poetry
49 Cloy
51 Mineral spring
54 Capital of the Peach State
57 Refreshed
59 French river or valley
60 Cousin of an orange
62 Arabian chieftan
63 Theater award
64 Formerly
65 Curves
66 Equal
67 Appear

DOWN
1 Zodiac sign
2 Van Gogh painted here
3 Brownish gray
4 Scoundrel
5 Bode
6 Foreigner
7 Wrtte
8 Italian wine center
9 Bracelet
10 Green marketplace
11 Jealous
12 Morays
13 Minus
18 Flower parts
22 Exigency
25 Duties
27 Demeanor
29 Beverage on tap
31 Gratis
32 Care for
33 Composer Johann Sebastian
34 Resound
35 Small fibs
36 Fencer's weapon
37 Sicilian spewer
40 Calm
42 Outwit
43 Digit
45 Blunders
48 Gay —
50 Golfer with an army
51 Porker
52 Small change in Surrey
53 Take away, in law
54 Toward the sheltered side
55 Cruise and Thumb
56 Over
58 Caped
61 Presidential nickname

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	O	L	A	S	C	A	M	F	I	N	D	S
P	A	A	R	T	I	D	E	A	D	O	R	E
S	T	I	R	A	S	E	A	T	A	S
	S	C	A	R	E	F	A	R	E	E
		N	T	L		C	H	A
B	L	A	T	H	E	R		F	E	A	T	H
R	I	M		O	D	E		T	R	A	D	E
A	V	E	R	T		D	E	L		R	Y	D	E	R
G	R	E	E	R		G	A	L	E		E	M	U
H	E	R	C	U	L	E		A	R	T	I	E	A	N
		R	E	I				A	M	M
	D	O	U	B	L	E	T	R	O	U	B	L	E
P	E	R	I	L		D	O	O	R		I	D	N	A
T	A	N	T	A		E	N	D			O	D	E
E	R	A	S	E		L	I	E	F		T	I	E	S

12/7/92



Bowls set, Bonds about to bolt to SF

By RICK WARNER
and BEN WALKER
Associated Press

ATLANTA— The new bowl coalition got something it wanted Sunday - a national championship game between the No. 1 and No. 2 teams in the country- and something it didn't want: controversy.

The coalition met a major goal by matching top ranked Miami (11-0) and No. 2 Alabama (12-0) in the Sugar Bowl. But the Cotton Bowl's selection of No. 5 Notre Dame as an opponent for No. 4 Texas A&M upset the Aggies, No. 3 Florida State and other coalition members.

The Seminoles (10-1) and Aggies (12-0) thought they were going to play each other in the Cotton Bowl, but Cotton Bowl officials nixed the plan by taking Notre Dame (9-1-1). Florida State will now play No. 11 Nebraska (9-2) in the Orange Bowl.

The Cotton Bowl passed up a game between the No. 3 and No. 4 teams because it didn't want a rematch of last year's Florida State-Texas A&M game in Dallas and because it preferred the glamour and television power of Notre Dame.

"If we could not get 1 vs. 2, then 3 vs. 4 was not that important to us," Cotton Bowl president Bob Smith said at a news conference where the pairings were announced.

However, it was important to Texas A&M and Florida State. While officials from both schools publicly expressed their support for the coalition and said they were happy with their bowl opponents, they privately criticized the Cotton Bowl's decision.

If A&M had beaten Florida State in the Cotton and Miami had tied Alabama in the Sugar, the Aggies could have made a strong case for the national championship. A&M coach R.C. Slocum feels the Aggies still have a shot at the title if they beat Notre Dame, but he realizes chances would have been better with a victory over Florida State.

"We wanted to play the highest-ranking team, so from that standpoint, we're disappointed," Slocum said. "But we hope voters keep an open mind until all the games are played on Jan. 1."

Florida State also is unhappy with the Cotton Bowl, but for a different reason. School officials said the Cotton Bowl told them early in the season to expect an invitation, then changed its mind and took Notre Dame.

"We're happy to go to the Orange Bowl, but vibes I received from the Cotton Bowl were, 'make yourself available,'" Florida State athletic director Bob Goin said.

. . . . . .

LOUISVILLE — He has the big number he really wants — the famed No. 24 jersey of the Giants. All that's left for Barry Bonds Sunday was to put the finishing touches on the game's richest deal.

Bonds and San Francisco prepared to announce the details of a six-year, $43 million contract Sunday night at the winter meetings.

But sometime soon, back in San Francisco, fans will get to see real baseball history. That's when Giants Hall of Famer Willie Mays, in a ceremonial display, will hand over his retired No. 24 jersey to let it be worn by his godson, Barry Bonds.

Bonds wore No. 24 while winning two National League MVP awards in the last three seasons with Pittsburgh, and it's not unusual for a star player to ask for his old team number when he goes to a new team.

But in this case, No. 24 on the Giants means Mays. The Giants retired the jersey to honor their center fielder, and hung it on the outfield fence at Candlestick Park.

Collegian... Cause mom said it was okay!

DiGeronimo Brothers
VICTORY Super Markets
10 University Drive - Amherst
WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES. VICTORY SUPER MARKETS ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.
And Now Introducing at Our Amherst Victory... BayBank And... Quick Pays or CHARGE IT
STORE HOURS: Mon. thru Fri.: 8am - 9pm Saturday: 7am - 9pm Sunday: 9am - 8pm
Prices Effective thru Friday, December 11, 1992.
Give a little Christmas to our Community kids!
USDA Choice Beef Round Boneless Bottom Round Roast $1.89 Lb.
Gold Medal All Purpose Flour 5 Lb. Bag 79¢
Fresh...Perdue Oven Stuffer Roaster Chickens With Pop Up Timer! 6-7 Lb. Avg. 79¢ Lb.
Maxwell House Ground Coffee •Perk Reg. •ADC •Late •French Roast $1.59 12-13 Oz. Cans
All Natural Hendries Ice Cream Assorted Flavors 1/2 Gallon 2 For $3
Duncan Hines Cake Mixes •Regular •DeLights Assorted Varieties 79¢ 18.25 Oz. Pkg.
Tropicana Orange Juice In The Dairy... PURE PREMIUM •Regular •Homestyle $1.89 64 Oz. Carton
12 Pack Pepsi Cola •Regular •Diet •Caffeine Free •Caffeine Free Diet •Mountain Dew •Orange Slice •Schweppes Reg. Ginger Ale 12 Oz. Cans $2.99 Plus Dep.
B & M Brick Oven Baked Beans Large 28 Oz. Can 99¢
All Liquid Laundry Detergent •Regular •Free & Clear Gallon Jug $3.99
Bumble Bee Chunk Light Tuna 6.125 Oz. Can •In Oil •In Water 2 For $1
Bounty Paper Towels •Designer •White 72 Count Roll 69¢

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TONIGHT
DA BEARS vs. HOUSTON
- Mexican Buffet -
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS' CHOICE 1992 1st Place
1/2 Price Add Blitz at Halftime
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL NFL
University Drive & Amlty
Amherst • 549-4040

Winter Session 1993
January 4-25

Yes, you can!

REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.

SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.

SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.

OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.

EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!

REGISTER NOW!

CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.

Division of Continuing Education

Patriots' offense hapless in 6-0 loss

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press

FOXBORO — The smallest crowd of the NFL season saw one of the weakest offensive shows: no touchdowns, few yards, and many costly penalties.

With a game-time wind-chill factor of minus 5 degrees, the 19,429 fans watched Dean Biasucci's two first-half field goals in a swirling wind give Indianapolis all it needed in Sunday's 6-0 win over New England.

"On offense, I felt we had to play it close to the vest and play not to lose because of the conditions," Colts coach Ted Marchibroda said. "It was tough to throw long."

The Patriots (2-11) had trouble throwing anywhere with a net passing total of 23 yards after the eight sacks for 69 yards were deducted.

"We didn't make any plays," Patriots quarterback Hugh Millen said. "I'll put myself at the top of the list. They did a good job of covering people. That's the anatomy of a shutout."

The Patriots should know that well. For the first time in history, they have been blanked two straight games and three times in a season. Their shutout string reaches 10 quarters, while the Colts (7-6) got their first shutout in 69 games.

With a solid defensive effort, they also avenged a 37-34 overtime loss three weeks earlier which gave New England its first win after nine losses.

"There was a difference in this game," said Colts linebacker Duane Bickett, who had 3 and a half sacks after getting three all season. "In the first game they made a couple of big plays. . . Here, there was poor footing. People were slipping and sliding."

Coming off a 16-13 overtime win over Buffalo, the Colts managed 265 yards, 209 of them on Jack Trudeau's passes.

The Patriots lost their previous game 34-0 at Atlanta when they gained only 105 yards, third lowest in team history. That's now the fourth lowest as they struggled for 94 yards against the Colts. Indianapolis had the NFL's second-lowest defense, one spot above Atlanta. Both teams committed several penalties.

"The wind was a factor," Marchibroda said. "We moved the ball well, but penalties just killed us. It seemed we stopped ourselves more than anything."

Indianapolis improved its still slim playoff hopes as Biasucci, whose field goals late in the fourth quarter and 3:51 into overtime gave Indianapolis the win over Buffalo, kicked a 30-yard field goal on the last play of the first quarter and a 48-yarder with 52 seconds left in the first half.

But neither team got inside the others's 10-yard line.

"We got up 6 points and we struggled," Trudeau said. "With our defense playing as well as it was, I wasn't going to take any chances."

"We didn't make any plays on offense," said Patriots acting coach Dante Scarnecchia. "This is two weeks in a row. I thought we were out of our rut, but we're back in it."

The Colts' deepest penetration was to the New England 11 on their first series. But they were called for a holding penalty on the next play, and Biasucci missed a 31-yard field goal attempt two plays later.

The Patriots got as far as the Colts' 13, and the offense had nothing to do with it. Maurice Hurst's interception return put the ball there with 9:56 left in the first half. But the next four plays were a 3-yard loss to Leonard Russell, a 3-yard sack, an incompletion and a 37-yard field goal attempt by Charlie Baumann that fell short.

The attendance was far below the NFL's previous low of 27,642 who attended the Patriots' 24-3 win over the New York Jets in Foxboro two weeks earlier. There were 10,837 no-shows Sunday.

It was also the smallest crowd in the 22 seasons the Patriots have played in Foxboro and the smallest New England home game since Nov. 2, 1969, the year before the NFL-AFL merger.

Not even the return of quarterback Scott Zolak could spark the Patriots.

He was 2-1 the previous three games as Millen rested his separated left shoulder. Millen started Sunday after a five-week absence but strained his left shoulder when he was sacked on the last play of the half after throwing for just 37 yards.

Zolak played the second half but completed only 6 of 20 passes for 55 yards. He was sacked five times.

At Milwaukee, the Green Bay Packers scored five first-half touchdowns on a snow covered field for their fourth consecutive win over the Detroit Lions, 38-10. . . The Buffalo Bills lost their second consecutive game to a heavy AFC East underdog, this time falling to the Jets, 24-17. . . Barry Foster rushed for 125 yards and his 4-yard TD run with 2:22 left in the game gave the Pittsburgh Steelers a 20-14 victory over the Seattle Seahawks. . . At Philadelphia, Randall Cunningham ran for 121 yards and two TDs as the Eagles beat the Minnesota Vikings 28-17.

SUPPORT ISRAEL NOW!

Join the
VOLUNTEERS FOR ISRAEL
Low Student and Adult Fares
Special Flight Starts from
$599 - Dec. 27, 28 (JFK)
(+ reg. fee)
$649 - Dec. 21 (JFK)

2 OR 3 WEEK WORK PROGRAMS INCLUDE:
• Working at army bases and hospitals •
• Round-trip airline ticket • Tours • Lectures
• Full room and board • 3 kosher meals a day

All flights, past, present and future are partially subsidized by VFT and SAR-EL

Hope to see you soon,
Love Israel

VOLUNTEERS FOR ISRAEL
330 West 42nd St. • Suite 1818
New York, New York 10036-6092
Call now! 212-643-4848 for more information or a free brochure about our work program.

D.P. Dough delivers CALZONES
call 256-1616
Now Open at 11:30 A.M.

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES EXPIRES 8/30/93 Delivery Only One coupon per 2 calzones.
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES EXPIRES 8/30/93 Delivery Only One coupon per 2 calzones.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

100% Recycled wrapping paper and holiday cards. Dec. 7,8, • 9th Campus Center Concourse.

AUTO FOR SALE

1981 Volkswagon Rabbit High Miles, runs well $600, will neg. for stereo 549-8416, RON

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall Special Small Cheese $3.50 Large Cheese $6.00 1 or 2 toppings add $1.00 Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti 549-6098 549-6073 MUST MENTION THIS SPECIAL

FOR RENT

Amherst Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes call 586-4270

Amherst 2 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. Room avail. $275+ 1 bedroom apartment avail. Lincoln Real Estate 25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

Leverett -- close to campus -- room in sunny home in exchange for 12 hours of childcare per week plus some light housekeeping duties. Must be available for early morning (7 am- 8:30 am) and some afternoons (3:30 - 5 pm) Car essential some transporting of children. 548-9395

NORTHAMPTON -- two 4 room houses avail. Dec. - Jan. $775-800. Skibiski Realators No Pets. 584-3428

1 bdrm avail aft Dec. 15 in 2 bdrm apt lease to May 31 Wint. ses. disc. $180 incl 665-4407/665-2947

One big bedroom in Sudderland house take over my lease Available now 230.00 month + 665 4348 or 568--4323 On bus line

Take over Brandywine lease 2 bedrooms incs. heat and hot water, great location $780/month starts end of Jan.! Call Lori or Laura 549-4816

2 rooms available in 2bed in Amherst 220/clean/bus/ASAP call Holly 549 4259

3 bedrooms available in a spacious house in Suderland Spring Semester on bus route Call 665-0265 190.00/mo +

FOR SALE

Fish-African Cichlid And Accessories Call Tim 546-5361 Price Negotiable

HP Printjet like new color printer. $425 or B.O. Great print and graphics in color. Call Alan 548-3421

HP 15c Scientific calculator $40 b.o 323-8648

Neat things: Mens black leather trench (40); Hugo Boss suits (42 r & 11, 44r 20 inch herringbone chain (23.5 grams); Jeep top for CJ-7; Hitachi 30 Watt reciever; Hafler modified bookshelf speakers; BSR speakers. Reasonable BO's...John 323-9311.

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

FOUND

Venesse Bioch e bird regurgitated your ring. Call Mark 546-0863

HELP WANTED

Babysitter -- Afternoons, January-June need car and references. 548-9086

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.Call 1-800-3SU-ESTA ask for Bonnie

Would you like to work? At Hampshire county transit part time drivers will train for evenings and weekends earn up to $10.05 per hour starting rate $6.50 have company paid insurance, paid holidays, paid vacations, paid sick days paid funeral leave. Apply to: Hampshire County Transit 54 Industrial Drive Northampton, MA 01060

LOST

If you found my walkman and want to give it back call 546-7248

Lost silver and torquoise claddaugh ring somewhere on campus 11/19. If found call 253-2733.

MOTORCYCLE

82 Honda V45 Sabre 750 CC $750 b.o. 323-8646

MR. T'S COMMANDMENT

Mr. T.'s Commandment: Believe it, cause every word is true Mr. T.'s. commandment.: I could talk all day but the rest is up to you. Follow thy mother and father Tha Bible makes it clear If you break a rule god help you fool you've got Mr. T to fear

MUSICIANS

Drummer needed: Phish, creative Improv 256-8115

Keyboardist Wanted: Yes, Phish, etc. 586-9377

PERSONALS

Adriane my best friend for life, happy birthday MESS! I'll always be there cuz I Love Ya MICHELLE

Congratulations and Welcome to the new sisters of Sigma Kappa! Karan, Susan, Debbie, Kim, Kerria, Hope, Kristin, Alicia, Tracy, Missy, Melissa, Stephanie, and Christine. Love, the sisters

Hamlin House Council wishes a Happy Birthday to: Mark Carmey Robert Dennis Neil Lambert Daniel Lee Matthew Marc Aeden Motnyk Jim Panaro Zak Umanoff Lui Yeung

Happy B-day to The blonde in the track office Boyden Who wears the Raiders Jacket Finally your 19! D.

Hey Jenny Winchell-- Happy (belated) 21st! Love, ARHS contingent @ AC

Missy Done congratulations! You're awesome and I'm so happy to be you mother In sigma love, Angie

Vanesse, Congrats, Honey! I am very proud of you welcome to wonderful, non-abusive family (not). Lova your Big Sis/Sibling Mikkie

Wildcat May your dreams come true Happy Birthday I love you always!!! Your Stud, James

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508-228-8265

Looking for room to sublet over intersession. If interested please call Rob at 548-4235

Responsible male student seeks room in quiet non-smoking environment for winter session. Call 66409

ROOMATES WANTED

Amherst 2 bedroom apt 1 room for rent 2 full baths w/heat and hot water included on bus route available immediately. Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Female nonsmoker wanted to share bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Cheap rent 2 minute walk to town (on bus rt) walking distence to campus 253-5219

Female needed to take over Brandywine lease Jen 1st. Call 549-4003

Fun but serious fem student looking for roomate Amherst house 195+ starts Spring sem 6-1042 for details

Male roomate needed to share large bedroom. 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

M/F roomate for Puffton Cheap but nice Call for details. 549-0078/549-6794

One female Brandywine apts Start Jan 93 $190 inc. Heat/water Jen 549-7845

Roomates needed cell Mill Valley estates 253-7377/Single or double for 1 bedroom

Single room avail. in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265. 190.00/mo+.

Single room available in 3 bedroom townhouse apartments. Call 549-3523.

3 Females or males needed to take over Brandywine lease ASAP $190 + util Call 549-0853

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings Call Chris at 256-8393

TRAVEL

Take it off! Spring Break '93 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida Save $$$ Before Jan. 1 Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Cheap Typing! $1/page call Cope @ 1355

$1.50/pg Laser print ask for Anne 253-5566

Papers typed - free cover page, spell check. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing: Fast, accurate and conveniently located to serve your needs. No job too small. Reasonable rates. Contact Donna/Dianne 542-2313

Typing/Wordprocessing, Resumes, reports, theses Laser printing. Campus pick-up and delivery Call Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

Band to play Mon. Dec. 13 in South College. Show is to be videotaped 536-7744

I need a car. Do you want to sell yours? If it hasn't been around since WWII, isn't threatening to explode, and is in good working shape (I don't care about outer beauty) CALL ME. Brooke @ The Collegian 545-0719

Fraternity is looking to buy unneeded sofas, chairs and coffee tables. Any questions call Dan at 549-4848

Sports

The WHMP-FM Game Summary

Central Conn.	22 - 30 52
Massachusetts	40 - 38 78

Central Conn.(52)
Smith 3-10 6-10 12, Francis 0-2 1-4 1, Corbitt 0-6 2-2 2, Leach 3-4 1-2 9, Johnson 10-20 3-3 23, Rose 0-2 0-2 0, Rybczyk 1-4 0-0 2, White 0-0 0-2 0, Veazey 0-3 1-2 1, Anderson 1-3 0-0 2. Totals: 18-54 14-27 52.

Massachusetts (78)
Barbee 6-13 4-10 17, Williams 8-11 2-4 18, Roe 6-8 1-2 13, Kellogg 2-4 2-2 8, Malloy 2-9 2-2 6, Dingle 2-7 2-4 7, C. Robinson 0-1 1-4 1, Nunez 0-0 0-0 0, Meyer 0-2 2-2 2, Cottrell 0-2 0-0 0, K. Robinson 3-5 0-0 6. Totals: 29-62 16-0 78.

Three-point goals: Central Conn. 2-7 (Corbitt 0-1, Leach 2-3, Rybczyk 0-3). Massachusetts 4-13 (Barbee 1-2, Kellogg 2-3, Malloy 0-5, Dingle 1-3). Rebounds: Central Conn. 32 (Smith 7). Massachusetts 51 (Williams 11). Assists: Central Conn. 12 (Corbitt 5). Massachusetts 16 (Kellogg 10). Fouled out: Smith, Leach. Technicals: none.

Attendance: 4,058 (sellout).

Player of the Game

Harper Williams
6-7 Sr. Forward
Bridgeport, CT

University of Massachusetts forward Harper Williams scored a team-high 18 points, and added 11 rebounds. Williams, last year's Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, was a strength underneath for the Minutemen.

Why UMass Won

The Minutemen simply had more talent than Central Conn. could handle. The team burst out of the gate with a 15-2 run early and never looked back. The main question which was asked by many was why UMass did not win by 50 points.

UMass' next opponent

The Siena Saints will host UMass at the Knickerbocker Arena in Albany, New York this Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. UMass destroyed the Saints 92-49 in last year's season opener. Two years ago, Tony Barbee's 3-pointer with one second left in the NIT quarterfinals snatched an almost certain victory away from Siena and gave UMass the momentum they needed for an overtime win and a trip to the NIT Final Four.

Catch all the UMass Men's Basketball Games – Home and Away – on the New 99.3 WHMP-FM!

the New 99.3 WHMP-FM

Minutemen win home opener

UMass blows out Central Conn., 78-52

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts basketball team, for the second time in two games, played to the level of its competition in winning its home opener at the Curry Hicks Cage Saturday against Central Connecticut State University, 78-52.

The problem was that the Blue Devils, unlike Florida State, are not a very good team. Nevertheless, the Minutemen (1-1) iced the game immediately with a 15-2 run early in the first half, and went through the motions for the rest of the game.

"I don't know if I've been this mad after a game," head coach John Calipari said. "I'm almost like depressed; it's hard for me to get mad now. I've been seeing the team play like this all year, and you guys haven't seen this until now."

With the Blue Devils down only 10-8 with 15 minutes left in the first half, the Minutemen decided to end any suspense that might have been building. Sophomore Lou Roe's baseline drive got the team started on a run that would eventually up the score to 25-10. Roe (13 points) was fouled on the bucket and completed the 3-point play with his foul shot.

After the UMass defense stopped Central Conn., freshman Dana Dingle completed a smooth drive with a 4-foot bank shot to up the score 15-8 in UMass' favor. The Minutemen stole the inbounds pass and guard Derek Kellogg immediately drained a 3-pointer from the left side which gave the home team a 10-point advantage.

Forwards Kennard Robinson, Harper Williams (18 points, 11 assists) and Tony Barbee (17 points, 10 assists) got into the act on the decisive run, with Robinson and Williams scoring on second chances, and Barbee burning the Blue Devils with a 3-pointer from the top of the key. Central Conn.'s only basket in this span was on a drive by a Bart Leach. With the early 15-point lead, UMass dropped off and mailed the rest of the game in, most noticeably the second half.

"If we're gonna be ranked, we have to play like we're ranked, we can't have games like this," Kellogg said.

"You can never be unsatisfied by a 20-point victory, but when it's a team you should dominate by 50, you can't really be happy with yourself," Barbee said. "I think it's that killer instinct. We have to come out no matter who it is and try to bury them."

With a 40-22 halftime lead, UMass played an uninspired second half, but the hapless Blue Devils could never get back into the game. The closest Central Conn. ever got was 16 points, due mainly to a field goal rate of 33 percent.

Blue Devil Damian Johnson was the game's high scorer with 23 points (on 10-of-20 shooting), many of which came on fast breaks while the Minuteman defense stood and watched.

The only excitement in the second half arose when 7-foot-2 center Jeff Meyer entered the game with about 10 minutes left. Meyer, a fan favorite in his freshman year, saw action for the first time in a year and a half. The hulking sophomore swatted one Central Conn. shot into the second row of the stands, and he had two blocks in five minutes.

"I think I relaxed and let some of the flow come back," said Meyer. "I was glad to feel it. Coach Cal[ipari] says if I rebound and defend, then I'll play. My role is to contribute as much as I can."

One question which was not answered during the game was who will play when at point guard. Kellogg, the sophomore starter, scored eight points and dished out 10 assists, but seemed flustered at times and passed up many opportunities to take open shots.

"I wasn't nervous, I wanted to go out and try to pick up the team," Kellogg said. "I did that for a little while, but I began to play the crowd a little bit and went downhill from there."

One man who did impress in the place of injured sixth man Mike Williams (who did not play due to a strained thigh) was junior Chris Robinson, who manned the point for 20 minutes and grabbed three steals and an assist.

Instead of clearing up the point guard picture, this game may have clouded it even more. When Williams returns, the three true point guards will fight it out for playing time.

"I think I played all right, but I think I could have played better," said Robinson. "Mostly I just tried to stay in control and tried not to make plays I couldn't."

UMass finished the game as it started with a 10-0 run at the end, though many in the capacity Cage crowd had left by then. Dingle's two free throws, a Kellogg 3-pointer, a Kennard Robinson tip-in and a Jerome Malloy layup pushed a 70-50 advantage up to 78-50. Central Conn.'s David Corbitt hit two free throws at the end to end the game at 78-52.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore forward Lou Roe scored 13 points and grabbed four rebounds in Saturday's 78-52 win against Central Conn. Roe was honored as the Atlantic 10 Co-Player of the Week.

Women's basketball takes second

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

When the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team travelled to Seton Hall University this past weekend for the PALS/ Mayfair Farms Invitational tournament, they only knew one thing: they would have to play well both offensively and defensively to have a chance at winning the tournament.

Well, both the offense and defense played well enough to give UMass that chance, as the Minutewomen made it to final where they fell to the host Seton Hall, 66-60.

In the opening round, the Minutewomen took on Howard University. In a battle of young teams, UMass cruised to a 70-50 victory.

The whole starting unit for the Minutwomen contributed greatly to the 20-point victory. Inside UMass was too much for Howard, as the starting frontcourt for the Minutewomen had a combined 50 points.

Senior power forward Kim Kristofik led the way up front with 18 points and two steals. The two freshmen starting up front, center Melissa Gurile and forward Octavia Thomas, chipped in with 16 points each. Gurile had four blocked shots while Thomas snagged 12 rebounds, including seven offensive caroms.

In the backcourt, junior Laurie Dondarski dished out nine assists and had two steals for the Minutewomen. Meanwhile, starting shooting guard, freshman Kim Gregory had 11 points (3-4 from three point land), two steals, and three blocks.

For Howard, forward Annette Lee had 15 points and 11 rebounds but it was not nearly enough. The tough UMass defense forced Howard into 26.6 percent shooting for the game, while the Minutewomen offense clicked for 48.1 percent (including a scorching 58.3 percent in the first half).

In the final against Seton Hall, UMass was ahead by four at halftime 35-31. In the second half, though, the Pirates fought back for the victory.

Kristofik again had a big game for the Minutewomen as she pumped in 26 points and grabbed 12 boards. Gurile and Thomas also contributed double figure scoring with 12 and 10 points each, respectively.

Seton Hall was led by guard Jodi Brooks, who had 15 points and forwards Dawn Johnson and Texlin Quinney, who scored 14 each.

UMass outshot Seton Hall for the game, 38.8 percent to 35.5 percent, but the fact that the Pirates took thirteen more shots than the Minutewomen made that a moot point.

Tournament Notes: UMass had two players named to the All-Tournament Team, Kristofik and Gurile. Gurile was named Atlantic 10 Rookie of The Week.

Tuesday December 8, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 60

Sunny today, but brisk and chilly. Highs in the 30s. Cold tonight.

Local News:
Sarah Schulman, a lesbian activist and prize-winning author, spoke last night on the importance of a national gay and lesbian political movement. Page 3.

Sports:
The UMass men's basketball team looks to up their record to 2-1 as they face Siena tonight in Albany's Knickerbocker Arena. Page 8.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

CLOWNING AROUND – Hampshire College student Amber DeLaurentis gets her face painted by Njeri Cruse, a UMass animal science major, at the Holiday Barn Festival and Crafts Fair held this past weekend.

Local schools face discrimination suit

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

SPRINGFIELD — A national civil rights organization is filing a precedent-setting suit against the Amherst-Pelham Regional School District for allegedly discriminating against minority students.

The Amherst chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, backed by the national organization, is taking the school district to court for allegedly violating a federal civil rights statute by discriminating against minority students through ability grouping.

"The lawsuit is to challenge the discriminatory effects of ability grouping," said Attorney Bill Norris, who is working with the NAACP on the case.

Norris said the case is based on a 1991 state report that students of color are more than twice as likely to be placed in lower ability groups than White students, while White students are more than twice as likely to be placed in advanced groups.

In an effort to enforce the state's mandate, Norris said the purpose of the lawsuit is not to abolish, but reform the school system, so all students can receive equal treatment.

"The law required all students be treated equally so that's why we're here," Norris said. "The problem is that students of color are not being treated equally."

But the Superintendent of the Amherst-Pelham school system, Gus Sayers, said students of color in Amherst in fact have the opportunity and choice to study in advanced groups. He added that most students of color choose to be placed in the upper level courses.

"Grouping in Amherst affords everyone opportunity to work at higher levels," Sayers said. "Most students of color are in higher levels, not the lower levels. Only a handful of courses are taught to students of color at the basic level."

Because minorities, as well as low income children, are disproportionately assigned to lower academic groups, Reynolds Winslow, president of the Amherst NAACP chapter, said grouping serves to reinforce racial and economic isolation in public school systems.

He said he believes this reinforcement may perpetuate racial prejudice among

Twisters' license revoked again

Select Board proposes setting tavern's capacity at 63

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Select Board revoked Twisters Tavern's liquor license for the dates of Dec. 17 - Dec. 19 yesterday at the town meeting held at the Bangs Community Center. The suspension comes in response to two overcrowding violations.

"I hope we don't have to do it again," said Select Board Member Elisa Campbell. This is the third meeting in which Twisters' violations have been brought before the board.

Campbell suggested New Year's Eve as part of the revocation, but the proposal was voted down.

Twisters has a permit to seat 120 patrons. The Amherst Fire Department reported 180 people at the premise on Sept. 25. There were 141 patrons at Twisters on Oct. 30, according to the Amherst Fire Department.

"This time we were 15 to 20 people over. Not very much. There was no question of violation," said Sheldon Rosenthal, a Springfield lawyer representing Twisters owner Mark Forsych. "Other bars have been cited for overcrowding and have not been brought before this board."

But Zilma Mayawts, who lives at the Clark House located near Twisters, said the noise keeps her neighbors and herself up till the early morning.

"We love students. It is all right to have a good time. But they have no right to ruin people's lives," Mayawts said. "We have been deprived the right to sleep for five years, since Twisters appeared."

Forsych said the capacity limit for Twisters is set too low.

Turn to TWISTERS, page 3

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Amherst resident Zilma Mayawts speaks out about Twisters Tavern and student drinking at last night's town meeting.

New testimony against Porter

By MARY R. SANDOK
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — A woman who says former priest James Porter molested her when she baby-sat for his children five years ago took the stand Monday to describe three incidents of alleged abuse.

The woman, now 21, told jurors that each of the incidents occurred on a living room couch in Porter's home in Oakdale. She said Porter instigated them by sitting near her, running his hands through her hair and telling her she was beautiful.

"He said, 'Everything's OK,'" the woman testified. "I told him I didn't think it was OK."

The woman, who was composed but spoke quietly, testified that Porter pushed her to the couch and pressed himself against her, touched the skin of her back under her shirt and rubbed her breasts, inner thigh and pelvic area through her clothing.

In the first incident, the woman testified, Porter had an erection and she saw his "bare butt."

She said the first incident happened in May 1987, and the second a few days later. She said she baby-sat for the Porters several more times without another incident until sometime in August 1987, when she said the third incident occurred. After that, she said she did not baby-sit for the Porters again.

The woman, who was 15 at the time of the alleged incidents, said she did not tell her parents when she got home, and pretended like nothing had happened.

"I was afraid," she said under questioning from Washington County prosecutor Richard Hodson. "Afraid of Dad's reaction, afraid people might find out." She said she did not tell her mother probably because she was "scared and embarrassed."

But she said that, about a month after the last incident, she told her mother not to let her younger sister baby-sit for Porter "because he was a pervert."

Most of the woman's testimony in response to prosecution questioning centered on the three alleged incidents that led to six counts of fourth-degree criminal sexual conduct against Porter.

The former priest, now married and the father of four children, also is accused of molesting dozens of children in Minnesota, Massachusetts and New Mexico before he left the priesthood in 1974.

Marines begin aid to Somalis on Wednesday

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, SOMALIA - Somalia got their first look at U.S. power Monday when Navy warplanes roared over Mogadishu, and Pentagon sources said Marines would land at dawn Wednesday to begin helping the starving people.

The 1,800 Marines standing offshore on three Navy ships are the vanguard of a multinational rescue mission in the war- and famine-wracked nation. Pentagon sources said that most of the 28,000 U.S. soldiers and Marines committed to the operation might not begin arriving for several days.

Robert Oakley, a special U.S. envoy and former U.S. ambassador to Somalia, arrived Monday to meet with leaders of Somalia's warring clan leaders and with international aid workers to outline plans for the U.S.-led operation. He stressed that Washington envisioned a humanitarian effort and not a military one.

Oakley told reporters the U.N.-authorized operation would be the opposite of Desert Storm.

"We hope it will remain a humanitarian operation all the way through, because the purpose is to protect deliveries of relief supplies, relief workers and relief recipients," Oakley said.

Aid groups say half the food donated for starving Somalis has been stolen by the gangs of gunmen who have held sway during a nearly 2-year-old civil war. An estimated 300,000 Somalis have died from starvation, disease and fighting this year, and 250,000 more are feared to be in imminent danger.

Rival militiamen battled for a second day in Baidoa. A spokesman for the international relief agency CARE, Rick Grant, said at least 48 people were killed and 50 wounded Monday.

Grant said at least 28 and possibly 34 died in fighting Sunday between feuding clansman.

Michael McDonagh, an official of the Irish relief agency Concern, said relief workers feared Somali militiamen would go on a last-minute spree of shooting and stealing.

"They know that come tomorrow the gravy train is over. The next 24 hours are going to be very crucial," McDonagh said.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Feliner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum runs each Thursday and consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Thursday, December 10

Lecture — "Sex, Drugs and Coming Out," will be the topic of a lecture at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center 101. This event is being co-sponsored by the Regent Hospital of New York City.

Film — A movie about race, class and sexuality in Britain today. My Beautiful Laundrette tells the story of love between an interracial male couple. It will be shown at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th Floor.

Friday, December 11

Social — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will host a coffee social at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th Floor.

Saturday, December 12

Dance — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will sponsor a dance from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the Bluewall. A $4 donation is requested.

Monday, December 14

Brown Bag — Richard Cornwall, a professor of economics at Middlebury College in Vermont, will discuss "Why it matters so much if we're queer." From noon - 1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th Floor.

Social — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Group will host a coffee social from 3 p.m. - 5 p.m. in the Program for GLB Concerns' Office.

Memorial — A memorial for Audre Lorde, a lesbian feminist writer, will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 168. Members of the community will read from her works.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

THEFTS

• A man reported the theft of his bicycle from the bike rack in front of Johnson Residence Hall on Friday, according to police. The bike was valued at $100.

• University police received six reports of vehicle break-ins in Lot 22 over the weekend. All of the cars had windows smashed in, according to police.

On Friday at noon, a man told police that a window of his car was smashed and the stereo was stolen along with some cassettes. Police estimate the goods to be worth $630.

At 4:45 p.m. on Friday, another stereo was reported stolen from a man's car. A screwdriver and a pair of gloves were found in the car. Police estimate the stereo to be worth more than $200.

A stereo equalizer was stolen from a man's car at 5:45 p.m. on Friday, according to police. The equalizer is valued at more than $250.

• A woman reported the theft of her sunglasses and a radar detector from her car on at 10 p.m. on Friday, according to police. They are valued at $200.

• On Saturday afternoon, a man reported the theft of his radar detector, worth $300, from his car.

• A man reported the theft of his radar detector from his car on Friday evening. Police value the detector at $100.

• A woman reported the break in of her car to police on Saturday evening. According to police, the car was also located in Lot 22. Nothing was stolen, but the glove box was rifled through, police said.

• A man reported the theft of his coat from the Top of the Campus Lounge while he was watching television there on Saturday. Police said that a male subject is under investigation in the theft. The coat is valued at $100, according to police.

ANNOYANCES & VANDALISMS

• A woman reported receiving a derogatory remark over the phone and an obscene remark written on a poster on her door on Friday. Police are investigating the incidents, which were reported at 7:30 p.m.

• University police called in Residence Hall Staff to investigate a disturbance between a security receptionist and a male subject on Friday in Webster Residence Hall. According to police, there was an argument between the two over presenting an ID card at 8:45 p.m.

• A broken lounge window and a broken room lock resulted in $600 in damages on the 17th floor of Washington Residence Hall on Saturday, according to police. The matter has been referred to Housing Staff.

• A woman reported electric rear view mirrors and the antenna on her car broken at 2:40 a.m. on Saturday, according to police. The car was parked in Lot 22 when the damages were sustained. Police estimate the damages to be in excess of $225.

• A man reported a series of annoying telephone calls received over the past month to police on Saturday morning. Police later located the parties responsible for the calls and issued them a warning to stop calling the man.

MISCELLANEOUS

• Police were called to Butterfield Residence Hall on Friday to investigate a broken window. Further investigation led police to a house on Butterfield Terrace, where a Carbon Dioxide BB gun was confiscated from two men in connection with the broken window.

• A bong and a small marijuana plant were confiscated by police on Saturday morning after the officers investigated a loud music complaint in Coolidge Residence Hall.

• Roommates reported a missing woman to police on Saturday at 3:30 p.m. The woman was located several hours later and was all right, according to police.

■ lawsuit

continued from page 1

students and increase alienation among lower achieving students.

The 1991 state report on "Structuring Schools for Student Success," found that grouping students by ability is harmful to students, particularly to those placed in lower groups, according to an NAACP statement.

Despite this report and other studies, Winslow said the Amherst school committee won't accept that its process of grouping has proven to be one of the "most divisive and damaging" school practices in the country.

"We believe there's an opportunity to change the system so we can better effect the system of education for all — particularly people of color," Winslow said.

The school system has not complied with the department's requirement that a plan be submitted to eliminate the current system of grouping and weighted grades, including plans for staff training to organize and teach heterogeneous groups, according to Winslow.

The state's department of education found that the school's staff are more likely to confront students of color for behaviors which tend to be ignored when exhibited by White students. The school has also ignored the department's order to train staff to better understand different cultural responses and to ensure that staff confront their own biases, according to NAACP statements.

"We think there is a need to educate students, faculty and staff, so the perception of behaviors are not affected adversely," Winslow said. "It will take a creative effort. We believe we could have the finest system in the country."

"The fact that the state has found that discrimination exists reinforces our belief that there is a problem," said Ray Elliot, vice-president of the Amherst N.A.A.C.P. chapter.

"As more people of color are coming to this district there is is going to be a need to change," Winslow said.

Amherst school committee chairperson Katherine Feldman declined to comment.

"It's a landmark case," said Norris. "The nation will be watching."

"I got mine at Zanna!"

ZANNA

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

COMING OUT

December 10
7:00 - 9:00
at
The U. Mass.
Campus Center,
Room 101
Amherst, MA

Coming Out is developing a positive identity as a lesbian or gay man. The crises of each stage of coming out are complicated by chemical dependency. Gays addicted to alcohol or drugs confront the double stigma of addictions and sexual identity.

For more information please call:
Program for Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Concerns, U. Mass.
413/545-4824
The Regent Hospital
(800) 8-REGENT

The Collegian.
113 Campus Ctr.
545-3500

haircuts always $10!
Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
PERMANENTS $45
Make an appointment between 9am and 1pm with Heather, Liz, or Terri and your permanent will be only $45!
Good Monday through Friday.

Psst...
Want some friendly advice?
Did you think about coming down to the Collegian this semester, but you got too busy? Or did you figure there weren't any openings? Well, make plans now to get involved next semester. Come to our first meeting which will be announced in the first issue of the Spring semester.
We'd be happy to have you join us!
THE MDC WANTS YOU!

QUIET
If you're tired of yelling this,
Come and see us
The Brook
253-2834

Local News

Gays, feminists need political independence

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

The gay and lesbian communities need an independent gay political movement separate from the Clinton administration, according to a lesbian author and activist who spoke Monday night in the Campus Center.

Sarah Schulman, the author of five novels, presented a book reading of her newest novel Empathy and an analyzation of the feminist and lesbian movements within the past few presidential terms. The event was sponsored by the University's Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns.

"After the past twelve years and three presidential terms, I can now see how unprepared we were for the Reagan years," Schulman said.

She said with the Reagan administration she did not expect all of the selling of intolerable ideas, the religious fanatics and the anti-abortionists which infiltrated the White House.

"The first few years with Reagan in office," Schulman said, "The left movements looked like a dinosaur made up of women, gays and lesbians.

"When President Reagan made coalitions with religious fanatics and the right wing movements, the form of coalitions changed," Schulman said. "The feminists, gays and lesbians constantly gave up ground for Reagan's coalitions."

Schulman said that the lesbians at the time believed women could live outside the traditional roles of women and that women were not subordinate to men. However, the pro-life movement changed abortion to a choice rather than a right.

"Anti-abortionists had clipped away at the women's rights movement and only a very small group of women in the 1980s were fighting the anti-abortionists," Schulman said.

She said there has been a break down of women's rights movement into special issues and a massive amount of demobilization of people who gave up a much needed fight.

Schulman said the special issues have divided straight women from lesbian women, Jewish feminists and black feminists from one another and all of them from white feminists.

"No matter how organized a movement is, the United States federal government has proven they can be weakened and even destroyed," Schulman said. "Feminism under the Reagan administration was ready to collapse."

Schulman said that the Democrats got the women's vote this presidential election and the gay movement gave Clinton $2 million dollars.

Schulman said that the Clinton Transition Team has reviewed the "Five Point Plan" of the gay and lesbian movement and so far four of the five points were accepted.

She said the points accepted dealt with explicit safer sex information, anti-discrimination, the processing of drugs for AIDS patients and other issues. The only point that Schulman said was not accepted by the Clinton Transition Team was a proposal for national health care.

Schulman, the recipient of the Gregory Kolovakos Memorial Prize for AIDS Writing and the winner of the American Library Association Lesbian/Gay Book Award, hopes the politics of the future are based the real life of real people.

Schulman said, "We must have clear views of our movements and remain independent from the Clinton administration so the politics can be based on how we really live."

Campus bikes tampered with

Police say students must check bikes for problems

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

For a week, whenever Elisabeth Olbert, a junior human resource management major, left her bike in front of the School of Management building, she would always return from class to find the quick-release on the mountain bike's front wheel to be tampered with, her fiance Bhavin Pattl said.

"Someone had released the quick release, she said. Not only hers, but others as well. The problem with this, is if someone releases it and you are riding, the wheel can pop off," Pattl, a senior BDIC major, said. "She would go fix the other bikes too. But you can't fix everyone's bike."

Mountain bikes have a quick-release lever which allows the rider to take the front wheel with them. Other bikes usually have the wrench-on type for the front wheel. If the lever is in the released position while the bike is being ridden, the front wheel can actually come out of its axis, University of Massachusetts Police Officer Paul Vlach said.

"People can get some serious injuries that way," said Vlach, who is part of the University police bicycle patrol unit. "Bicyclists should be double checking before they ride off."

So far police said they have received no reports of serious injuries occurring because of the tampering.

Vlach said people usually fiddle with bikes on outside bike racks at night. Olbert's bike was tampered with in the morning and only outside the SOM building, Pattl said.

But police said they wonder if this is not happening all over the campus. Many students may not connect their front wheel being loose to their bike being tampered with, Vlach said.

"Most of the time you don't think about it," Pattl said. "You hop on the bike and go."

"Students need to know their bike and they need to check for these things," Vlach said.

Police have also heard of students finding their front brakes stolen, Pattl said.

"You can get into an accident because you have no brakes," Pattl said.

Vlach and Pattl said they feel the tampering of the quick-release levers may just be someone's idea of a cruel prank, but stealing someone's brakes is not only malicious but could be an attempt to destroy the front wheel of the bike.

Students should report to police any suspicious activity they see around bike racks, Vlach said.

"50 bikes have been stolen since the beginning of the school year," Vlach said. "Most occur while parked at racks [at night]."

■ Twisters

continued from page 1

"When we do go over 120, it is not a public safety issue," Forsych said.

Forsych said there is no problem with raising Twisters' capacity to 300. Amherst Building Inspector Chester Penza said if Forsych wants to raise Twisters' capacity he "would have to put additional public facilities in." Forsych said he would add a bathroom.

Assistant Town Council Alan Seewald said the Amherst Zoning Board proposes to drop Twisters' patron limit to 63.

Amherst Town Resident Mark Enoch said he was present at Twisters, when one of the overcrowding violations occurred.

"I felt very comfortable when Twisters was over capacity. I am encouraging the town to look at all angles," Enoch said. "We may be sending students east of 128 and 495 that Amherst is a pretty unfriendly town."

But Select Board Member Harry Brooks said Twisters must be dealt with more harshly to prevent these reoccurrences.

"I move we revoke the [liquor] license to Twisters," Brooks said. "I think it has gone on and on."

CONTACT LENS CARE

AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses

•••

Offering a broad array of contact lenses with a large in house inventory.

•••

The new daily wear disposable and frequent replacement contact lenses are now available.

•••

All fittings are done by our eye doctors with experience in contact lens care and solving contact lens problems.

•••

Emphasis is placed on your ocular health and professional service.

uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient hours and convenient on campus location.

For questions or appointments, call 549-2671

MUNCHY SALE
End of Semester Survival Kit

Maxwell House Coffee ..... Reg. $2.99 NOW $2.29
Pepsi Products ..... 1 liter 79¢ +dep. 16 oz. 2/99¢ +dep.
Sweet Life Water ..... 1 Gal. 59¢ Reg. 69¢
M&M/Mars Candy ..... 2/79¢ Reg. 50¢ ea.
Value Star Aspirin 250 ct... $1.79 Reg. $2.49
Value Star Ibuprofen 100 ct. $3.49 Reg. $4.59
Campbell's Vegetable or Chicken Noodle ..... 65¢
Chef Boy-R-Dee Assorted Varieties .... reg $1.36 $1.09
Assorted Name Brand Cookies reg 1.00 now ..... 89¢

Sale Prices in Effect Through Thursday, December 24th
Now Serving Coffee • Donuts • Danish and Bagels at Hampden Munchy

REGISTER TO WIN A "KUDOS" DIRECTOR'S CHAIR!
Name _____
Address _____
Phone _____
Entries Close Thursday Dec. 17th
Drawing Held Friday Dec. 18th
Kudos Chair is on display at the University Store.
Drawing is not open to Store Employees or their families

CopyCat PRINT SHOP
RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992.
Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)
228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Holiday offers stress relief

Finals are just around the corner. What does this mean? It means that students everywhere are running around with bloodshot eyes, a result of excessive reading, studying and sleep deprivation. In almost every conversation held on campus, stress is the operative word. Yes, all is well in good old Amherstville, U.S.A.

Unfortunately, many of us would rather be somewhere else. Maybe sitting by a nice fireplace somewhere in Alaska. Maybe not. The point being, this time of the semester can be a real downer.

Diana
D'AVANZO

On the one hand, you want to hit the malls, decorate something (anything), forget about those dreaded finals. On the other hand, you are obligated not to forget about school, work and, we must not forget, STRESS. Obviously, these emotional swings are a real damper on the holiday season. Hmmm . . . is there any encouraging news to be found? Why, Yes! Yes? Yes!! The word "holiday" hit it for me.

For some of you it is the holiday season. I respect that. For me, however, it is the Christmas season. The key word here being the Christ in Christmas.

Most people may know the Christmas story found in Luke 2:8-14, "And there were shepherds living out in the fields nearby, keeping watch over their flocks at night. An angel of the Lord appeared to them . . . The angel said 'Do not be afraid. I bring you good news of great joy that will be for all the people. Today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you; he is Christ the Lord.'

"Suddenly a great company of the heavenly host appeared with the angel, praising God and saying, 'Glory to God in the the highest, and on earth peace to men on whom his favor rests.'"

This passage tells of the magnitude of God's love for us. The fact that a Savior, Christ the Lord, came to earth as a baby is incredible. During his ministry, Jesus said, "I and the Father are one." This means God came to earth in the form of man in order to save us.

If you still do not see the wondrous love God holds for us, perhaps this story I heard will make things a little bit clearer.

One day, a farmer was standing inside his room looking outside the window. It was cold and snowing outside. There were all these baby birds hopping along. A barn door was open, but not wide enough for the birds to pass through. The farmer knew that if the birds did not get into the barn, they would freeze and die.

The farmer went outside to open the barn door. But the birds were afraid and flew away into the cold woods. When he went back inside he was sad. The farmer knew the birds would not find warmth outside. An hour later, the birds came back. Again, the farmer went outside. Again the birds flew away.

The farmer loved these birds, so he prayed to God that he would become one of them so he could save them. God granted him his request. The birds were again gathered around the barn door. The farmer went outside to where the birds were around the barn door. He opened the door for them. The birds were no longer afraid to go near the farmer. They entered the barn and found warmth.

In the same way, Jesus became one of us so that we might see Him for who He really is. He clothed himself in frail humanity, suffered and died on the cross for us and, three days later, rose from the dead in order that we might have life. To think that there is a personal, almighty, loving God who says we are worth it. If this does not make your day, I don't know what will.

This is the part of the column that gets a tad bit complicated (I can already hear the editorial responses ringing, but I'm going to tell you just the same). My prayer for all who read this column is this: that God will richly bless you and show you a wonderful truth this Christmas season.

Diana D'Avanzo is a Collegian columnist.

Idealistic hope for 1993

Tense. If one word could describe the beginning of this semester, it would have to be: tense.

Whether anticipated or not, the racial unrest which came to a boil last spring carried over to this semester, and was once again given a great deal of coverage in the media. Newspapers, television and radio networks wanted to get the inside story on why UMass Amherst is so "racially divided."

David
RIVERA

Suddenly our campus wasn't alone in this fault. Racial incidents at campuses around the state began surfacing. Even Smith College had events that led to student protests; wealth doesn't protect you from ignorance. Were they copycat incidents or were they there all along? Whatever their origin, the UMass media-blitz brought them to surface and now finally these problems are being addressed.

This semester we've had reports of anti-Semitic graffiti throughout campus. In Europe, neo-Nazi and White supremacist groups are killing foreigners. Beware. The recent events in new Germany look very similar to the events that lead to genocide during World War II. I've become more and more uneasy with this "new world order." Sometimes it makes me think the cold war wasn't so bad after all.

This semester I've seen our nation's leaders turn away thousands of Haitian refugees, and then give entry visas to citizens of former Soviet republics. Is this racism? It has been proven that thousands of Haitians have been killed, tortured and imprisoned following the coup that ousted President Aristide. If such human rights violations are not reason enough to offer political asylum — what is?

This semester I've heard people call for a wall between Mexico and the United States to solve the "border problem." Is this racism? Everyone forgets that most of the West was settle by the Spanish, and it's ironic that people with Hispanic names can't live in states and towns called San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Nevada, Las Vegas, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. . . Did you ever wonder why we had states and cities with Latin names? Maybe it's time to wonder.

This semester we've seen how famines that have ravaged East Africa are only now being acted on. In the past ten years millions have starved to death in Somalia and Ethiopia. Why has it taken so long to care? Finally our country's military is being used for true good.

Somalia is long from salvation, but I'm confident that our forces can be successful in getting food to those who could care less about the internal unrest. The near dead don't give a damn for these so called warlords. All they care about is getting food to survive. Politics can mean little when you can't stand or walk due to starvation.

Someone told me we shouldn't get involved in Somalia because "there is nothing to be gained politically." I agreed, and walked away proudly. It's about time we did something for reasons other than political gains. Most soldiers, I believe, want to protect and save lives. This Christmas they'll get to do just that. Wish them well, and hope for their safe return.

Both around the world and on our very own campus, things are unstable. People are looking towards better times and a better future. Mostly I feel sorry for the freshman at our school who have been thrown into a caldron of trouble and turmoil. A school should be just that — a school, and no one should have to spend their time and money worrying about racial or anti-Semitic attacks, subtle or otherwise. Dealing with these problems may be part of learning, but it shows we haven't come one inch towards understanding each other's differences. At least, our generation hasn't.

Look to the freshman and hope they can learn from our errors. A campus free of racial incidences may be idealistic, but for the younger and uncorrupted it may be easier for them to accept such differences — but hopefully not only accept, but also celebrate. A student body that could celebrate cultures and traditions would truly make this a great university.

Let's hope that 1993 can bring such idealism.

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist.

Thoughts on racism from Japan

I was disappointed to read about the racial turmoil in Amherst and our nation. I am a graduate student at the University. This year I am employed by the government of Japan's Ministry of Education and work in the Northern Prefecture of Iwate.

You and I are some of the fortunate few who have the opportunity to study at one of the finest internationally reknown universities in the world. Japanese government officials were impressed when they read that I've graduated from the UMass at Amherst.

The solution to racial, religious and ethnic prejudice is hard work. When faced with oppression, do as the immigrants did in the 1890s, work even harder. Protesters have been locked in prison but it's difficult to restrain the person who starts a successful business or earns an advanced degree. Take every opportunity to study and travel that becomes available to you. The United States is facing an economic depression, Italy's economy is collapsing, Japan is entering a serious recession and Nazi skinheads are roaming the streets in Germany. The mighty Soviet empire has become an unstable mass of confusion.

It is easy to choose a scapegoat when times are tough, to blame a racial, cultural or religious group for the problem at hand. This has proven to be a foolish, deadly choice in not-so-distant history. The answer is to take your classes seriously and study, study, study! Work hard to be the best doctor, scientist, teacher, professional and world citizen your spirit will allow. Show honor and respect to each member of our fragile world.

The time is at hand for each of us to set aside out petty differences and work together. We must cooperate as citizens of the United States and of our world for future prosperity and peace.

Kurt Barbuscio
Japan

Special interest floors form of discrimination

For years, I was brought up to believe that people were created equal and should be treated that way regardless of the situation. Then I came to UMass. The Housing Assignment Office has introduced the special interest floor. Any group of people who share an interest can request to live together on a floor.

This semester, I witnessed to how the HAO goes about establishing one of these floors. Chadbourne is home to the Native American Indian Cultural Center. Chadbourne has five Native American Indian students who want to transform the second floor into a special interest floor. Four days before room choosing, the HAO issued a letter to residents stating the creation of the Native American Indian floor. The same day, students were told that as of fall 1993, students on the floor would have to find other places to live. Two representatives from the HAO said all residents would be forced to move off the second floor unless they were considered to be a Native American Indian ally. "Ally" was never successfully defined.

UMass officials and the HAO are acting hypocritically. They proclaim we live in a racially and ethnically diverse university but approve special interest floors. This semester, UMass has been plagued with racial incidents. By condoning and organizing a floor of this nature, they segregate ethnic communities by boundaries and territories. This greatly takes away from the diversity of the campus and adds to the already high level of racial tension.

If a group wishes to be together, a cultural or resource center should be established in a common place central to where members live. I believe Housing approves these floors because they're afraid to deny a request of a minority group. Everyone is created equal and should be treated equally. Special interest floors highlight minorities by secluding them in one small area on such a huge campus. People should wake up and see those floors for what they are and what they could do to this campus.

Adam Goldberg
Central

Die-In uncovered

As a participant in the World AIDS Day Die-In, I was looking forward to the Dec. 2 Collegian to see how it was covered. I glanced at the front page, noting a picture of coffee mugs, and no news of the die-in. On page three, I saw the article buried in the corner, accompanied by a blurry photo of some participants. Glancing through the rest of the paper, I noticed a half-page photo of Jefferson Airplane. Are mugs and an out-of-date rock group more newsworthy than World AIDS Day?

I am disappointed by the Collegian's paltry coverage of World AIDS Day, which serves as a call to action heard around the world. Many students here heard that call and participated in the die-in. I suggest the editors of the Collegian rethink their priorities on newsworthy stories.

Felice Yeskel, Director
Program for GLB Concerns

Arts & Living

An evening feast of Madrigal splendor

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

The 22nd Annual Madgrigal Dinner
Campus Center Auditorium
Dec. 5, 1992

Saturday's lazy snowfall set the perfect mood to precede the 22nd Annual Madgrigal Dinner, which was held at the Campus Center Auditorium that windy evening.

Walking into the Auditorium, the lively, warm atmosphere quickly instilled in one a sense of being amongst good friends. The wreaths, Christmas trees, lights, tinsel and red and green decorations captured both the eye and the holiday spirit, and brought us all into the mindframe that Christmas was near.

Seated at the long tables, guests quickly engaged in introductions and conversation, indulging in bread, cheese and wine.

Gazing at the display of mouth-watering, extravagant comestibles, guests were definitely eager for the Entrance of the Madrigal Singers. Upon a table in the back of the Auditorium lay a monstrous bounty of food. With delectables including the largest salad I have ever seen, a mountain of yorkshire pudding, endless tiers of figgy pudding, a loaf of bread three times as long as I am tall, a roasted boar's head (apple and all), enough roast prime rib to feed a troupe of knights and a boiling cauldron of wassail, the meal promised to be a literal feast for all of the senses.

As the Madrigal Singers marched in, the transformation back in time was complete. The authentic, 16th century costumes, designed by Cecilia Precciozzi, were lovely reminders of a time past when fashions were as much a part of the decoration as were those on the walls.

As the evening progressed, we enjoyed the witty dialogue and heavenly song of the ten-member Madrigal ensemble, seated at a long table upon the stage. Between courses of the delicious meal (excluding the boar's head, thank goodness) the singers performed a variety of beautiful pieces.

The songs ranged from jubilant praises of friendship and frolic, as in "Pastime With Good Company" by Henry VIII to more sullen ones like the melancholy-laced "Too Much I Once Lamented" by Thomas Tomkins.

During the main course, groups of four or five singers travelled around the dining room to serenade individual tables, adding to the feeling of an active, integrated group of guests rather than an audience.

In addition to the spirit-lifting music, mime Robert Rivest served as a perfectly silly, entertaining jester. Rivest explored, quite facetiously, the possibilities of his own body motion, and in acting out the story of Sleeping Beauty, put a new, incredibly funny and modern twist on the classic fairy tale.

Clearly, the success of this multi-faceted event was the result of much hard work. Catering Supervisor Tiesa Graf asserted that preparation for the event is continual process throughout the year.

While ordering items such as candles may be done in August, decorating the Auditorium takes the staff (members of the Food Services Staff that sign up to work the dinner a month in advance) a full week. The twenty waitpersons, four full-time kitchen staff and 6 or 7 students in the kitchen, along with the supervisor work to organize and coordinate food preparation, display and delivery down to the minute.

Despite the stressful nature of their work, however, Graf emphasized that she and the staff enjoy the Madgrigal Dinner and look forward to it each year. The lights and decorations put everyone into good spirits, and Graf admitted that "every year I catch some of my waitstaff crying" in response to the heart-felt music and celebration.

Likewise, singer Matt Dorman expressed the immense pleasure that he and the other singers get from performing in the holiday show. "I love it," he explained, "it is a very rewarding experience."

Having auditioned last Spring and practicing since the second week of classes, the Madrigal Singers have been eating, drinking, breathing and sleeping 16th century Christmas for months. The result, asserts Dorman, is "one big, happy family."

The tenor explained that whatever nervousness persisted before the performance quickly disappeared once the ensemble took the roles of their characters and began to interact with one another.

Working with Director/Professor E. Wayne Abercrombie, who teaches a class

Turn to MADRIGAL, page 7

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip / One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customary immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave NY NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

Now Renting for January
Spacious Two Bedroom Apartments on Bus Line
$400/Month
Call KAMINS REAL ESTATE at 253-2515

NOTICE

Attention students currently enrolled in Classics 224, Greek Mythology and Classics 325, Near Eastern Mythology: Class meetings will resume at the regularly scheduled meeting times and places on Monday, Nov. 30. Please be there!

La Cucina di
Pinocchio
PIZZA, SUBS, & CALZONES
FREE DELIVERY ~ 256-4110
LASAGNA
30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
Hours:
Mon-Thurs. 11:30am to 2:00am
Fri.-Sat. 11:30am to 3:00am
Sun. 11:30am to 1:00am
SALADS
Coupons valid for delivery or pick-up only.
$1.50 OFF any Large Pizza with 2 toppings
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
$1.00 OFF any Large Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
Any 2 Calzones for $7.00
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only
3 Calzones for $9.95
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only
TWIN SPECIAL
2 Large Cheese Pizzas
$12.50
Any Topping $1.25 more
Pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993
$1.00 OFF any Medium Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

CALVIN AND HOBBES

By BILL WATTERSON

THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

"Sheriff! Ben Wiggins is ridin' into town, and he's wearin' that same little chiffon number that he wore when he shot Jake Sutton!"

JIM'S JOURNAL

By JIM

DOONESBURY

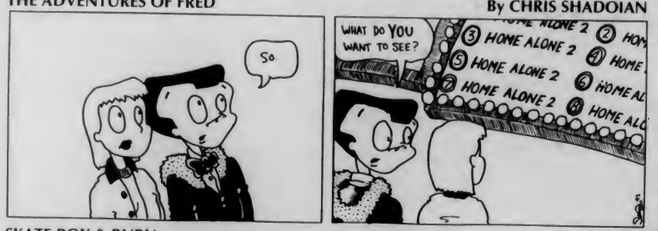
By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE

By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED

By CHRIS SHADOIAN



SKATE BOY & RURU

By PITT

Quote of the Day

"I knew I was Irish before I knew I was an American"

– Fmr. House Speaker Tip O'Neil

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today finds you in a great mood, with a fresh sense of purpose, and ready to enjoy the best life has to offer. An intimate dinner could rekindle a lackluster romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lie low at work and wait for further developments. A complicated business maneuver will surprise your competitors and put you way ahead. Stick close to home tonight. Let loved ones know you care.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Adopt a more professional approach to your job responsibilities. Institutional bonds and group ties will help your career. Handle important documents with special care.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You now think in terms of the whole, rather than in bits and pieces. Romance takes on a new glow. Concentrate on developing closer rapport with family members. Catch up on world events tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You benefit from viewing the past in a new light. Although your workload is heavy, the payoff is close at hand. The outlook for romance improves greatly when you reveal your feelings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An out-of-town visitor could play havoc with your work or business plans. Communicating with a former employer could lead to a lucrative second career.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Working behind the scenes lets you conserve your energy. Good timing is the key to continued success. Pay bills promptly to protect your credit rating.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A hobby could turn into a profitable business enterprise. A child plays a key role in an important decision. A move to another town is pending. A college loan comes through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A conflict between work and home could put a crimp in your social plans. A compromise will alleviate tension. Someone tests your loyalty — you pass with flying colors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not feel if a friend fails to keep a promise. There could be a very good explanation. Someone in the arts gets a vote of confidence. Romance moves into high gear.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A close pal will help out in an emergency. Return the favor as quickly as possible. Your creative talents begin to get greater recognition. Refrain from bragging.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do everything that you can to promote harmony at your place of employment. Pool resources with your associates while looking for opportunities to gain new knowledge or skills.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

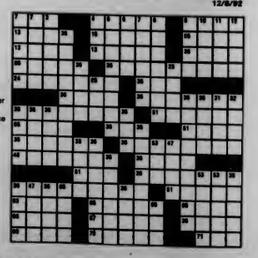
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Half a dance
4 Frolic
9 Dextrous
13 Toppe and toque
15 Amalgamated metal
16 Kin Te Kanawa solo
17 European capital
18 Lively dance of yore
19 Color lightly
20 Personnel
22 Juniors
24 Part of EST
26 The sixth sense: Abbr.
27 A Great Lake
28 Thinks
33 Wrenches, in Yorkshire
37 Miscellaneous information
38 Pilgrim to Mecca
39 Alarm signal
41 Appetizing store, for short
42 Citrus fruit
45 Remaining closed
48 Objectives
50 Pindar creations
51 Much-used article
52 Laundry machines
56 Posteriors
61 Sum
62 Stratford's river
63 Comfy
65 Surfer's surface
66 Machete-like knife
67 Behaved
68 Hastened
69 Dill
70 University city on the Aire
71 UBNA grad.

DOWN
1 Opted
2 "— la vista, Baby!"
3 Compendium of maps
4 Droop
5 Strategists
6 Earthenware crock
7 Lodger
8 Compose
9 Computer fodder
10 Actor Estrada
11 Speeding penalty
12 Does handiwork
14 Melting
21 Fiddlehead, e.g.
23 Box
25 Meadow barley
29 Midway entertainments
30 Chamber for Child
31 Blue or White river
32 Herated
33 Photo
34 Chute opener?
35 Half-opened
36 Trifle
40 Avalanche shelter
43 Acquires
44 Having moral principles
46 Harem room
47 Brat or bore
49 Tempt
53 Troop encampment
54 Poe's bird
55 Luges
56 Rum dessert
57 Stratford's river
58 Nat or Natalie
59 Gordian —: problem
60 Town near Padua
64 Units of length Abbr.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

12/8/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Dan Wetzel
Copy Editor ..... Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician ..... Chris Evans
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Dane Dorman, Kelly D'Amato

Menu

LUNCH
Tri-County Fairwich
Chicken Burrito

BASICS LUNCH
Tomato/Egg/Cresswich
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Fettuccini/Meat Sauce
Pan Shish Kebab

BASICS DINNER
Cheese Spinach Ⅱ's
Fettuccini w/Sauce

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ Madrigal

continued from page 5

for the Madrigal Singers throughout the semester, is also rewarding, related Dorman. Abercrombie insists that the performers learn the translations of the pieces so as to "help bring out the song of it [the music] more" according to Dorman.

Both Dorman and Graf expressed a desire for more student attendance at the Madrigal Dinners. Most guests were adults of the outside, local communities, and few students took advantage of this wonderfully entertaining, festive event. Despite the expense, Graf contended that the cost was worth the performance.

Having had the pleasure of experiencing this event first-hand, I could not agree with Graf more. Not only was it a feast for all of the senses, but a perfect way to start off the holiday season.

Indeed each of felt that the event served as a "reservoir of goodwill and peace" as was intended by the performers and staff.

Furthermore, what perhaps brought the success of the evening into full perspective was when, at the very end of the evening, after the final Christmas carols, from the back of the room near the kitchen, one waitress exclaimed quietly with unbridled glee, "It's Christmas!"

ACRONYMBLE REMINDER

Don't forget to submit your submissions for the very last Acronymble EVER! Drop them off or send them to the Arts Desk c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center by Wednesday and check Thursday's This Weekend section to find out if you're one of the final lucky winners!

This week's letters: E - M - I - L - Y

Your ad isn't TOP SECRET it's in the Collegian's CLASSIFIED SECTION. There are still a few days left for you to get the point across 19,000 times. Collegian. 113 Campus Center. 545-3500

- TONIGHT -
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
With
NEW HORIZON
"HOTTER THAN EVER"
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00 9:30~10:30
THE 24 PUB
CELEBRATES 1968~1992 IN AMHERST
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET

When You're Considering
A Career in Investment Banking,
Consider One More Thing.

Consider the investment bank that is uniquely in tune with the abilities and aspirations of the people who comprise it. Where high professional standards are reflected in principled every day practices. Where the talent of each individual is an integral part of the team effort. And where those who choose to accept the challenges set before them grow both personally and professionally.

In Short, Consider
the Fixed Income Division at Goldman Sachs.

Goldman Sachs
Financial Analyst Program
Information Session

Wednesday, December 9, 1992
Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center, Room 917
University of Massachusetts
8:00 p.m.

All undergraduates are welcome to attend

Resume drop deadline is December 21, 1992.

Goldman Sachs

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GIRLS
QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE
253-3834

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily".

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Pre-vet Anoci club meeting Tuesday Dec. 8th 6pm Grinnell Arena Canine protection training

UPC' s Holiday Festival Quick! general committee meeting for Fall semester. Fun, excitement, suspense, food, prizes. All this Holiday cheer and more! Tonight at 8:00 p.m. in Campus Center room 168C.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

100% Recycled wrapping paper and holiday cards. Dec. 7,8, + 9th Campus Center Concourse.

AUTO FOR SALE

1981 Volkswagon Rabbit High Miles, runs well * $800, will neg. for stereo 549-8418, RON

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3062.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall Special Small Cheese $3.50 Large Cheese $8.00 1 or 2 toppings add $1.00 Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti 549-8099 549-8073 MUST MENTION THIS SPECIAL

FOR RENT

Amherst Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes call 586-4270

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. Room avail. $275+ 1 bedroom apartment avail. Lincoln Real Estate 25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

Laverett – close to campus – room in sunny home in exchange for 12 hours of childcare per week plus some light housekeeping duties. Must be available for early morning (7 am–8:30 am) and some afternoons (3:30 - 5 pm) Car essential some transporting of children. 548-9395

New York City – Furnished rooms and apartments for intersession and weekend stays. Upper West side. Reasonable rates. 212 662-1358 Save this ad!

NORTHAMPTON – two 4 room houses avail. Dec. – Jan. $775.00/. Skibiski Realators No Pets. 584-3428

One bedroom apt. Southwood 362/month 256-4877

1 bdrm avail aft Dec. 15 in 2 bdrm apt lease to May 31 Wint. sec. disc. $180 incl 665-4407/665-2947

One big bedroom in Sudderland house take over my lease Available now 230.00 month + 665-4348 or 568-4323 On bus line

Single room Phillips St. $185+ Call 549-1458

Take over Brendywine lease 2 bedrooms incs. heat and hot water, great location $760/month starts end of Jan.! Call Lori or Laura 549-4816

2 rooms available in 2bed in Amherst 220/cleen/bus/ASAP call Holly 549 4259

3 bedrooms available in a spacious house in Sudderland Spring Semester on bus route Call 665-0265 190.00/mo +

FOR SALE

HP Printjet like new color printer. $425 or B.O. Great print and graphics in color. Call Alan 548-3421

HP 15c Scientific calculator $40 b.o 323-8646

Neat things: Mens black leather trench (40); Hugo Boss suits (42 r & L); 14K 20 inch herringbone chain123.5 gramst; Jeep top for CJ-7; Hitachi 30 Watt reciever; Hafler modified bookshelf speakers; BSR speakers. Reasonable BO's...John 323-9311.

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9361 $450 O.B.O

FOUND

Venessa Bioch a bird regurgitated your ring. Call Mark 546-0963

HELP WANTED

Babysitter – Afternoons, January-June need car and references. 548-9096

BE ON T.V. Many needed for commercials. Now hiring all ages. For casting info. Call (615) 779-7111 Ext. T 458

Students $$ EARN EXTRA CASH OVER THE HOLIDAYS! 80 customer service/order entry positions avl. December 16 - January 2 in Hingham. Day & evening shifts. Transportation a must. $6.50/hour. Call Adia Personnel Services today! (617) 472-2000

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.Call 1-800-3SI-ESTA ask for Bonnie

Would you like to work? At Hampshire county transit part time drivers will train for evenings and weekends earn up to $10.05 per hour starting rate $6.50 have company paid insurance, paid holidays, paid vacations, paid sick days paid funeral leave. Apply to: Hampshire County Transit 84 Industrial Drive Northampton, MA 01060

MOTORCYCLE

82 Honda V45 Sabre 750 CC $750 b.o. 323-8646

MUSICIANS

Drummer needed: Phish, creative Improv 256-8115

Keyboardist Wanted: Yea, Phish, etc. 586-9377

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Jeff! (Don't tell me for real!) Love, Patti

Thank you St. Jude – B.D.

PETE'S DRIVE IN

Pete's Drive In December Special 2 burgers for 2 bucks

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508-228-8265

Responsible male student seeks room in quiet non-smoking environment for winter session. Call 66409

ROOMATES WANTED

Amherst 2 bedroom apt 1 room for rent 2 full baths w/heat and Hot water included on bus route available immediately. Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Apt room for rent – Uptown – 2 minutes from bus stop m/f $200+ 549-2810 A stumble home from bars

Female nonsmoker wanted to share bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Cheap rent 2 minute walk to town (on bus rt) walking distance to campus 253-9219

Fun but serious fem student looking for roomate Amherst house 195+ starts Spring sem $ 1842 for details

Male roomate needed to share large bedroom. 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

M/F roomate for Puffton Cheap but nice. Call for details. 549 0078/549-8794

One female Brandywine apts Start Jan 93 $190 inc. Heat/water Jan 549-7845

Roomates needed call Mill Valley estates 253-7275Single or double for 1 bedroom

Single room avail. in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo+

Single room available in 3 bedroom townhouse apartments. Call 549-3522.

3 Females or males needed to take over Brandywine lease ASAP $190 + util Call 549-0953

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free lessing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings Call Chris at 256-8393

TO SUBLET

Two rooms for winter sublet in Amherst house. $250. 256-6367.

TRAVEL

SKI-Intercollegiate Ski weeks, ONLY $209 Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDOUS DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age + 18), Sponsored by Labatt's, Molson and MT. SUTTON, CANADA (just across the Vermont border) Group Leader Discounts. Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Spring Break '93 Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI 9.

Take it off! Spring Break '93 Jamaica, Cancun, Florida Save $$$ Before Jan. 1 Jesse 546-0980

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers typed – free cover page, spell check. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing. By Pro Writer. Fast. 253-9123

Typing; Fast, accurate and conveniently located to serve your needs. No job too small. Reasonable rates. Contact Donna/Dianne 542-2313

Typing/Wordprocessing, Resumes, reports, theses Laser printing. Campus pick up and delivery Call Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

I need a car. Do you want to sell yours? If it hasn't been around since WWII, isn't threatening to explode, and is in good working shape (I don't care about outer beauty) CALL ME. Brooke @ The Collegian 545-0719

Tutor for Econ 104 Will pay $ Call Tim 549-8177

Sports

UMass returns to Albany to face Siena

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Losers remember, while winners go on. This adage applies to the two teams squaring off at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Knickerbocker Arena in Albany, New York: the University of Massachusetts and Siena College.

The two teams have squared off three times before, but the most storied game occurred two years ago in the Knick in the 1990 NIT quarterfinal game. Siena was leading UMass 80-77 with 1.3 seconds left in the game when the Minutemen called time out for one final play. It appeared to most that UMass' pretty good season was about to end inauspiciously, and Siena would advance to the NIT Final Four in Madison Square Garden.

The public address system announced "Siena students can pick up their Final Four tickets tomorrow at. . .," but the Minutemen had different ideas. The inbounds pass went to Tony Barbee, who, to the shock of everyone in the building, calmly drilled a trey at the buzzer to send the game into overtime, where UMass would win.

Siena has never been the same since. The Saints were 19-10 last year, but were pasted by UMass 92-49 in the Cage on opening night on ESPN. The Minutemen, on the other hand, have gone far since that fateful March night.

UMass has jumped to national prominence, while Siena has fought for regional recognition. This year is no different. The Minutemen (1-1) are 23nd in the new Associated Press poll, while Siena (1-2) has struggled early. The Saints lost to Florida State 89-80 in the first round of the Preseason NIT, then fell to Holy Cross, 96-95 in overtime after beating Marist by two points.

Guard Mike Brown (21.3 points per game) and forward Lee Matthews (20.3 points, 11.3 rebounds) are the top scorers on a team that has shown no problem in putting points on the board. The problem is, Siena's defense has allowed of 81.7 points per game.

Other probable starters include Doremus Bennerman (14.3 ppg, 6 assists per game), Brian Bidlingmeyer and Matt Gras.

For UMass, Mike Williams (bruised hip) is probable, but if he plays it will be as the team's sixth man. Derek Kellogg, Jerome Malloy, Lou Roe, Harper Williams, and Barbee are the probable starters for the Minutemen.

Calipari has said he is worried about the game, but Siena has not played up to their standards so far. Still, the Saints' seniors will have the NIT game in the back of their minds when they hit the court tonight.

JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN
Harper Williams, shown here against Central Connecticut, and the UMass basketball team travel to face Siena.

Men's swimming captures second in A-10s

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming team finished second in the Atlantic 10 Championships over the weekend at Rutgers University.

"Second place?" you may ask. Yes, second place.

But make no mistake about it—this was a big showing for the Minutemen.

Because the tournament hasn't been held for the past six years, UMass head coach Russ Yarworth knew he would be facing the West Virginias and George Washingtons of the world, schools that traditionally have been well-funded scholarship-wise.

When all was said and done it was Saint Bonaventure that claimed the top spot with 758 points, a whopping 190 points ahead of UMass. Having eleven full scholarships can do that to a team. The second place Minutemen had 568 points, a whopping one-half point ahead of WV and one-and-a-half points ahead of GW.

The whole ball of wax boiled down to the weekend's last event, the 400 meter freestyle relay. To claim second place for the championship, UMass had to finish second, W.V. had to finish fourth, and G.W. had to finish fifth. With some help from host school Rutgers, which played the role of spoiler by finishing third, and a strong anchor leg by UMass sophomore Adam Reich, everything fell into place.

"We certainly were doing it against teams with better resources than us," Yarworth said. "It just shows that these kids are tough. Tough as nails."

Junior Aaron Osborne, senior Jay Peluso and senior Chris Barrett swam the other legs of the meet-ending event. UMass' time of 3:07.10 was easily a season best. Rutgers' time was 3:07.17, and W.V.'s was 3:07.36.

"It was a great confidence meet," Yarworth said, "and it was fun to be competitive. We're so high now and so confident that we just want to work hard for the rest of the year and get ready to win those New England Championships.

"Those kids didn't get second place handed to them. They took it from GW and WV. That's called swimming. And that's why I'm rubbing this plaque and they're not," Yarworth said as he wiped a smudge off his latest addition to the wall of fame in his office.

While the placings were eventually determined by the last race, there were plenty of fine swimming performances turned in before that.

Sophomore Tim Milbert finished second in the 100 and 200 meter breaststrokes, with his time in the latter event a UMass varsity record and New England's best time this season.

Sophomore Jeff Wicklund posted personal best times in all three of his events—the 200, 500, and 1650 meter freestyle.

Hoop guru's college basketball notebook

College basketball has officially begun and here is the first installment of the College Basketball Notebook:

Last week I said Kansas would beat Indiana, Duke would beat Michigan, Kentucky would beat Georgia Tech, and Louisville would beat Michigan State. Well, B-I-N-G-O was her name-o. Every game was right on the money.

After watching the Kansas-Indiana clash I have found new respect for anyone who has to guard Calbert Cheaney. Jayhawk forward Darrin Hancock had to fight his way through so many picks and screens just to stay with Cheaney it was ridiculous. If Cheaney moves well without the ball consistently, he could very easily average 25 a night for Bobby Knight.

Jeff
CROFTS

Back to Hancock for a moment, so he did not explode the way I predicted. He looked nervous, and in his first big collegiate contest that is understandable. Hancock will shine before the year is through, no question about that.

No more Todd Day. No more Oliver Miller. No more Lee Mayberry. No more Isiah Morris. So what does Nolan Richardson do? Does the "40 Minutes of Hell" get scrapped? Hell, no! Richardson gets himself a highly touted frosh in forward Corliss Williamson and his returnees were so overshadowed last year it was silly.

They Razorbacks beat then-No.8 Memphis State by five and follow that up with an 86-80 defeat of then-No.9 Arizona. Arkansas basketball is alive, kicking and giving opponents hell.

It is good to see John Thompson and his Hoyas have their usual tough early season schedule. The Hoyas opened up with a beating (88-49) of St. Leo's (is that a prep school?) and then a romp over Southern, 96-57. It really is too bad Thompson will not play anyone tough out of his conference. It would be nice to see how good Othella Harrington really is.

Notes on A-10: A key for the Minutemen will to get their fast break reestablished this year. That is where the loss of Will Herndon and Anton Brown really hurts them, the running game. Nice to see the return of the "Human Eraser," Jeff Meyer.

Either Meyer, Kennard Robinson, or Ted Cottrell is going to have to really step up off the bench to give the starting frontline a break when the Minutemen play teams with tough frontcourts like George Washington, Oklahoma, and West Virginia.

Speaking of GW, Yinka Dare of George Washington was named Atlantic 10 Rookie of The Week. Dare, at 7-1 265 lbs., is a big boy and if Mike Jarvis molds him the way he has molded big men in the past (Patrick Ewing), than Dare could be a sight to behold in the future.

Nice treat tonight for A-10 fans when Temple visits BC and Rhode Island visits Providence. BC opened up with a 96-57 shellacking of Harvard. Let's hope they do not follow the route of BC football and win all the little ones and get crushed in the big ones. On second thought, let's hope they do. I hate BC. I hate BC. I hate BC. There I got my quota in.

No I didn't. I hate BC. Now I'm done.

Right now the best third guard in the A-10 could be sophomore Jason Alexander of URI. He can really shoot the ball. Mike Williams, if he settles down and shows the raw ability he did against Florida State, could push Alexander for that honor. Soon.

Temple lacks size up front unless you count freshmen, but John Chaney has a stable of midsized athletes that can play the one, two, or three slots. Sophomore Rick Brunson, who was going to transfer to BC, got a job at the Heights over the summer and worked for a month before telling BC he changed his mind and was headed back to Philly. You have got to love him. That is great.

One name to look for on the Owls is Eddie Jones. He can shoot the ball and his huge dunk last year versus the Minutemen showed that he is an acrobatic talent when taking the ball to the hole.

Wonder how many new UMass recruits will be in Boston Shootout in six months. The trip in June to Beantown is a must.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian Columnist

Defunct men's sport negotiates for return

By ERIC STEINHILBER
Collegian Correspondent

With the recent reinstatement of three sports, including women's tennis, a spokesman for the men's tennis team said he is now negotiating with the university to bring his sport back.

"We are working with the university to see if this issue can be resolved and if there's a possibility for us to be reinstated," said Bill Bochnak, spokesman for the varsity men's tennis team.

Last spring, the men's tennis team was cut due to financial reasons. In order to be reinstated, the tennis courts at Boyden had to be resurfaced to accommodate Division I competition and the team would have to raise its own money to operate.

However, with the reinstatement of the women's team and the resurfacing of the courts, the men's team is now asking for their reinstatement.

"Part of the agreement with the reinstatement of the women's team was that the courts were going to be resurfaced. That was a main reason why the men's team was cut—because the courts were not Division I facilities," said Bochnak.

"The other reason the university said we were cut was for financial reasons. But, as a team we feel that that is rather unbelievable, because our season runs at about $20,000. The operating budgets of the majority of teams at the university are much, much higher."

At this point in time the university seems willing to negotiate with the men's team, and so far both sides have been very professional in presenting their cases.

"We are going to review their requests and we can certainly sympathize with their situation," said interim athletic director Glenn Wong. "But we must consider two things, one is the financial ramifications and the second is the legal ramifications.

"We're taking three courses of action," said Bochnak. "Basically pressure within the administration by focusing on legal aspects of our being reinstated, the ability to put legislative pressure on the university and the ability to put media pressure on the university."

Bochnak said that the team felt the main issue was whether it was right to have a women's team and not a men's team. "If the university continues this policy, they are setting up a case for discrimination."

Wong said that due to Title IX ramifications, a reinstatement of a men's team would call for an increase in a women's sport.

"We had a potential Title IX problem in which it was pointed out to us that we did not have enough athletic opportunities for females or enough of our funding going to females," Wong said.

SPORTS NOTICE

Spring Intramural Basketball entries still being accepted, and female teams are needed. Bring completed rosters to 215 Boyden.

BOX SCORE

Women's fencing team weekend results:
vs. Brandeis, 10 wins, 6 losses
vs. Tufts, 12 wins, 4 losses
vs. BC, 11 wins, 5 losses
vs. Wellesley, 0 wins, 16 losses

Men's fencing team weekend results:
vs. MIT, 15 wins, 12 losses
vs. BC, 16 wins, 11 losses
vs. Tufts, 15 wins 12 losses
vs. Brandeis, 12 wins, 15 losses
vs. Brown, 11 wins, 16 losses

Wednesday December 9, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 61

Mostly sunny today, highs in the 30s! Sunny on Thursday.

Arts & Living:
The Indigo Girls rocked the FAC Sunday night. See what Jon Lupo has to say about the show. . Page 10.

Sports:
Calipari's Minutemen broke away in the second half to beat Siena by 12 points at Knickerbocker Arena. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Many concerned over sale of campus stores

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
Miles Seaver, far left, gives details to student empolyees about the possible sale of the campus stores to Barnes & Noble Book Store Inc.

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Students and full time University of Massachusetts Store employees gathered in the Campus Center store to discuss their reactions to the prospect of the University Store, Textbook Annex, and Munch Stores being sold to Barnes & Noble Book Store Inc.

"We had meeting to make employees informed," said Assistant Text Manager Scott Cashman.

University of Massachusetts administration have been negotiating with Barnes & Noble Book Store Inc. Despite rumors of the University Store being already sold to Barnes & Noble's, Cashman said a deal has not been made.

But although the proposal is not decided on, many students and employees said they feel the uneasy about the new proposal.

University Store's Operation Manager Miles Seaver has lived in Amherst since 1939. He said he is worried about outside corporations coming in to make a profit at the students' expense.

"I hate to see outside firms come in detecting how to run our campus and taking away control of the students. [We will] continually have different firms coming in. Students are a captive audience and a great business," Seaver said.

Seaver said he wonders if the University succeeds in selling the stores to Barnes & Nobles, they try to sell off the Top of the Campus Restaurant, Food Services, and the Campus Center. And with this, Seaver said outside corporations would be less likely to hire students.

Cashman said although auxiliary

Turn to STORE, page 4

33 new scholarships for women athletes

BY MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is increasing gender equity in athletic programs, as it plans to add 33 scholarships to women's athletic programs throughout the next five years, officials announced Monday.

"We're very pleased to announce what we consider the second phase in looking at the long-term structure and viability of the athletic program," said Athletic Director Glenn Wong.

The additional scholarships make the new number of scholarships for women 80. Estimated cost of the scholarships is more than $500,000.

"This gives us a broad-based program across the country," Wong said. "We offer a broad range of 26 sports. It's a tremendous opportunity for students."

Field hockey, women's soccer and softball, three teams which have achieved national success, will receive 100 percent funding as allowed by NCAA rules. The UMass women's basketball team has been operating with full scholarships.

Women's cross country and track, gymnastics and swimming will all receive scholarship funding which will allow them to compete in the upper one-third of the Atlantic 10 Conference and maintain regional recognition, Wong said.

"It's a tremendous recognition to have the teams do so well," Wong said. "Just increasing the number of scholarships will give them the ability and opportunity to compete a national level."

The women's scholarships will be divided among the field hockey, soccer and softball teams. These three teams will receive an increase of 5.3 scholarships to share. Women's gymnastics, cross-country, track and swimming will receive 14 additional scholarships. The recently reinstated women's tennis, lacrosse and volleyball teams will receive 13.5 new scholarships.

Wong stressed that these numbers and scholarship increases are goals only, subject to change.

Field hockey, women's soccer and softball have been ranked in the top 19 of the nation and often compete in NCAA tournaments. The added scholarships put these three sports at the maximum scholarship aid level allowed by the NCAA.

The women's basketball team is already at the maximum with the number of scholarships allowed by the NCAA.

"I'm very pleased with the women's basketball team," Wong said. "It's really encouraging for the women's program to have them be so successful."

The reinstatement of women's tennis, lacrosse and volleyball teams and the increase in scholarships are major pieces of an agreement recently reached between the University and a lawyer representing women athletes.

Members of these three teams sought legal assistance and threatened the University with a lawsuit charging discrimination, when the teams they played on were eliminated over the last three years.

The University will also support its I-AA football program by increasing scholarship support to the Yankee Conference maximum allowable number of 63 scholarships. This year's team had 51 scholarships, which is 80 percent of the Yankee Conference guideline.

Somalia is preparing for troops

By TINA SUSMAN
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — With U.S. ships on the horizon, Somalia's chief warlords ordered their teen-age gunmen to steer clear of a Marine force preparing to take over Mogadishu's port and airport to speed food to the starving.

The announcements, from Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid and his chief rival in the north, Ali Mahdi Mohamed, raised hopes that the 1,800 Marines would meet no resistance upon landing on Somali beaches early today.

But relief agencies, wary of violence, ordered most employees to stay home for two days.

After separate meetings with U.S. special envoy Robert Oakley, Aidid and Ali Mahdi said they had advised their militiamen to avoid confrontations with the Americans.

"We welcome the American mission and the U.S. troops to Somalia," Aidid told reporters.

On the eve of the U.S. intervention, clansmen in jeeps and pickups mounted with machine guns and cannons sped through Mogadishu's hot, muddy streets, which reeked of bodies exposed in shallow graves by torrential rains.

The gunmen are blamed for the looting and extortion that has stripped relief agencies of half their food and crippled efforts to save Somalia's starving millions.

At least 300,000 Somalis have died of famine caused by war and drought, and 2 million are at risk.

Despite sporadic bursts of gunfire and the omnipresent children toting AK-47 assault rifles, however, the battered capital was mostly calm Tuesday, with no reports of clan battles or looting.

"The steam seems to have gone out of the fight," said Rick Grant of the international relief agency CARE. "The average Mogadishu resident has got to be sick of living in this bombed-out rubble of a city."

More than 40 trucks loaded with wheat, rice and beans completed a treacherous journey from the port into north Mogadishu with 400 metric tons of aid — enough to feed about 150,000 people for a week.

For more than a month, looters had made it impossible for the trucks to pass unscathed, depriving the Northerners their fair share of goods.

Eleven U.S. ships cruised offshore in the Indian Ocean; three amphibious ships carrying the Marines, the aircraft carrier USS Ranger, a cruiser, two tankers, and four floating warehouses.

After night fell, the lights of two ships twinkled on the horizon above a halo of light from foreign television crews filming at the airport, said Grant, the CARE spokesman.

"This whole thing is grand theater," he said, noting that the rest of the city was blacked out.

The commander of the Marine strike force said he had

Turn to SOMALIA, page 4

Marines are going by land and by sea

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Marines who launched history's most advertised amphibious landing Tuesday hope to "restore a level of sanity" to Somalia but may not disarm its roving clans, officials said.

Frogmen were spotted coming ashore in Somalia during the night, preparing the way for a spearhead unit of 1,800 Marines afloat off the coastline. The Marines were planning to seize control of the airport and seaport so additional U.S. and allied forces could join the unconventional mercy mission.

The Marines were preparing to land by amphibious craft and assault helicopters. It was unclear whether their intervention would provoke resistance from ragtag Somalis armed with antiquated guns and artillery, but statements from rival warlords raised hopes the landing would be uncontested.

Pete Williams, the chief Pentagon spokesman, said four Navy supply ships were arranging in the area Tuesday with provisions for the U.S. landing force. He said the mission, authorized by the United Nations, was

Turn to MARINES, page 4

Olver wins seat in influential House comm.

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

U.S. Rep. John W. Olver, D-Amherst, Monday night, won a seat on the House Appropriations Committee, which has been instrumental in bringing funds to the western part of the state.

"It's extraordinary that a member of congress that's been there for only 16 months gets appointed to such a powerful committee," said Olver's Communication Director Michael Meehan.

Olver is the only Massachusetts member to serve on this committee, which is the only committee in the House that oversees all federal spending.

Last year, he won his first congressional term in a special election after U.S. Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Pittsfield died in January. Last month Olver was elected to his first complete term.

Olver must mow forgo his membership on the Committee on Education and Labor and the Committee on Science, Space and Technology. Meehan said Olver sees this appointment as an extension of the work he has done on the labor committee.

The Appropriations Committee funds projects for western Massachusetts like fuel assistance, Head Start and job training programs.

Olver said he is committed to ensuring that the federal government spends its money wisely and that particularly western and central parts of the state get their fair share.

Meehan said Olver helped the Center for Manufacturing Productivity, a coalition of engineers who help small manufacturers, obtain one-half million dollars to start a program.

Turn to OLVER, page 6

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003

phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

The Collegian–
What a party.
If you would like to come and have some fun stop by the Campus Center, room 113 and find out more about it.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.
To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, December 9, 1992

Special Event — UMass Pagan Students celebrate their fifth birthday this semester. The religious RSO for neo-Pagans has been in existence for five years. To learn more about the group's history and join in celebrating the group's birthday, stop by the table in the campus center today.

Chanukah — Chabad House has menorahs and Chanukah candles for yor convenience for a very small price. Stop by the Chabad House any time, 30 North Hadley Rd., in Amherst.

Thursday, December 10, 1992

Special Event — Join Chabad House for Sufganiot (Israeli Donut) making in honor of Chanukah at 8pm at the Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst. There will be no charge, though contributions are encouraged.

Film — The Haitian American Student Association presents the film "Killing the Dream", a movie about the struggle of the Haitian people and the American Government involvement in their oppression, at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center basement, room 164-171. A panel discussion by visiting Haitian journalists will follow.

Discussion — A discussion on "Reclaiming Joy in Dark December" will take place at 3:30 p.m. in the Hillel House Lounge, 388 North Pleasant St., Amherst. The discussion will focus on sharing feelings about being Jewish at this time of year and exploring ways to celebrate Chanukah.

Lecture — The Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns presents a lecture, "Sex, Drugs and Coming Out" by representatives of the Regent Hospital in New York City at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center room 101.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Jason George
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• A man in Field Residence Hall reported Tuesday morning that an unknown person entered and then exited his room while he was lying on his bed. Police said they are reporting alleged harassment to Housing Staff.

• A driver accidently hit the accelerator instead of the brake on his vehicle Tuesday morning. Police said the driver struck a parked vehicle and ended up on the embankment in front of the Cottages. Police said damages were extensive, with both vehicles being towed.

LARCENY

• Residence hall staff in Mackimmie Residence Hall reported to police the theft of a bulletin board from a hallway. The item was recovered in a dorm room and a man will be summonsed to a show cause hearing, police said. Police report the value of the board at $110.

• A man in Brown Residence Hall reported the theft of the climbing bars and the seat of his bicycle. Police valued the stolen goods at $70.

Student Senate Update

The Student Senate Update is a service of the Collegian and the Student Government Association to inform students about items on the SGA agenda.

The Undergraduate Student Senate meets Wednesday, Dec. 9 at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 101. As the Student Senate is the representative body of all UMass undergraduates, the University community is encouraged to attend and be aware of the motions and opinions it passes. All members of the University community are invited to attend and speak.

The following motions are on the agenda for Dec. 9:

The revised SGA constitution will come up for final approval by the Senate. There is a motion for the Senate to support changes in General Education requirements, such as a mandatory course for all first year students, to help fight discrimination on campus and foster multiculturalism. Another motion is to loan $8,000 to the Afro-American Department to fund a speaker to appear on campus next semester.

In addition, there is a new chapter to be added to the SGA by-laws which will guarantee the Senate seats of the Third World Caucus and the Area Governments under the new SGA Constitution if it is passed.

Lastly, there is a motion for the Senate to officially oppose the current Housing Services bathroom policy and for Housing to sit down with student leaders to negotiate a change in this policy.

Mass. press prints for president

NORTH ADAMS (AP) — Printing invitations for Bill Clinton's inauguration would seem like a rare honor for any company.

But it's almost a routine task for one firm in this northern industrial town whose clientele has included the Queen of England and the Olympic Games.

"Small Town, America, has been struggling," said Mayor John Barrett III. "It's very symbolic for the inauguration committee to select a company that's been in a small city like North Adams that's been struggling for a long time."

The Presidential Inaugural Committee has given the job of printing the 710,000 invitations to Excelsior Processing and Engraving Co. About 400,000 of the invitations are suitable-for-framing commemoratives.

The plant has put 35 of its 250 workers on the job, which it started Nov. 27. The work should be done by Dec. 15, plant processing manager John Black said Tuesday.

The Inaugural Committee will then send out the coveted invitations for Clinton's Jan. 20 inauguration in Washington to politicians, political contributors, activists, and others around the country.

Joyce Kravitz, a committee spokeswoman in Washington, said the group picked Excelsior because "we wanted the best: we wanted somebody to meet our deadline."

Excelsior, which specializes in high-quality work for the upper end of the market, is familiar with high-profile jobs. "We're used to handling quality jobs for important clients," Black said.

Those customers have included not only Queen Elizabeth and the Olympic Committee, but also entertainment celebrities and top-of-the-line jewelers in New York.

However, one worker said the inaugural job means more than just another day and another dollar. "This is real important," said John Neville, a press operator. "It makes me feel proud to know this is for the president."

The 5-by-7 inch inaugural invitations, printed on recycled paper for the first time, carry a gold-etched presidential seal and cursive lettering with the names of William Jefferson Clinton and Albert Gore Jr., the new vice president.

Excelsior snared the job through contacts at another one of its plants in Baltimore, company officials said. The North Adams company is a division of Crane & Co. in nearby Dalton.

Company officials declined to say how much the Inaugural Committee is paying for the job. Kravitz of the Inaugural Committee said she could not immediately say what the work cost.

She said the committee, which is chaired by Democratic Party Chairman Ron Brown, raises money with contributions, the sale of commemorative pins and other items, and television rights. It receives no federal funds, she said.

SATURDAY!

CARROT TOP
"The Hottest Young Comic in AMERICA"
Two All Ages Shows
Coming in January
• The Amazing Jonathan
• Jeff Foxworthy
• Dom Ivvera
comedy connection · Hu Ke Lau · CHICOPEE
413-593-5222
FRIDAY DECEMBER 11
The Tonight Show with Jay Leno 22 Challenge
Admission - 1 Can of Food per person. To benefit THE OPEN PANTRY
COME HELP US CELEBRATE 1993 ANNUAL NEW YEARS EVE CELEBRATION
10 PM Seating 11 PM Show
Make Reservations Now
Make Reservations For Xmas Partys Now
Hu-Ke-Lau
705 Memorial Dr., Chicopee 593-5222

The Collegian.
113 Campus Ctr.
545-3500

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip · One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia.
Customs-immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

TONIGHT
KARAOKE
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00
9:30-10:30
THE 24 HR PUB
CELEBRATES 25 YRS 1968-1993
IN AMHERST
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET

SKI
3RD ANNUAL
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging
(Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsored by Labatt's, Mt. Sutton and Molson
Group Leader Discounts
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 & Springbreak '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

Local News

Third World Affairs Office helps students

By CHRISTOPHER ROGERS
Collegian Staff

Despite its name, the University of Massachusetts Office of Third World Affairs seeks to provide advocacy and assistance for all students on campus, according to the organization's director.

Nelson Acosta said the Third World Affairs office was established out of the concerns of minority students, using funds provided by the Student Government Association. The office was officially founded in 1976 with the intent of addressing issues concerning the quality of life for students of color and minorities.

"We advocate for institutional change," Acosta said.

Acosta said he believes the foresight of the students in 1976 was much greater than of the University administration — and in many cases that is still true.

"We have a mission of advocacy and building bridges to represent the four main ethnic groups — Native Americans, Latinos, African Americans and Asians," Acosta said.

Acosta became director of the Office of Third World Affairs last August.

Acosta said the office does not work directly with students from the Third World, since the office is really guided toward minorities, but acts as a referral system for any student.

"I can refer students to many organizations on campus, depending on the problems they are having," Acosta said. "AHORA, the bilingual office, or maybe some counselor, if the student is having problems."

Acosta said the majority of the students who take advantage of the services of the Third World Affairs office are from the United States.

"We deal with issues concerning mostly undergraduates, and since I'm the only professional staff person with so many issues to be addressed, this office must be focused on the quality of life of the students," Acosta said. "We are not here to cater to the Third World students."

Acosta said he feels the name of the office often leads to misinformation, and students who are unfamiliar with the function of this service may be mislead to think the office is geared solely toward providing services for students from Third World countries. Acosta said the phrase "Third World" was chosen because it was "politically correct. . . back in the 70s."

"Students and I hate the word 'minorities,' so that will never be used," Acosta said. "It looks like ALANA is the new PC word."

The Office of Third World Affairs, according to Acosta provides UMass students of color to deal with issues affecting their lives on this campus. Acosta said the first issue to be addressed is the curriculum of this institution,

Turn to OFFICE, page 7

HANGING OUT– Ben Sumneo and Cailin Gibbons fromEngland wait for the bus in front of the Herter Hall reflection pool.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

'Toys for Tots' drive under way

ROTC provides holiday gifts to needy children

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

"'Tis the season for giving, so give what you can," is the slogan for the sixth annual "Toys for Tots" fund-raiser, which is organized by the Army ROTC's national military honor society, Scabbard and Blade.

"Many children wouldn't have a Christmas if not for the 'Toys for Tots' fund-raiser," said David Kobs, the head of the Scabbard and Blade honor society.

Kobs said the Marine Corps Reserve has sponsored this program since 1947. He said this year the Reserves hopes to distribute 3.5 million presents to children nationwide.

Captain Kelly Hoskins said this program gives children who have no families or who come from families unable to afford Christmas presents the benefit of receiving a gift.

"My philosophy is to treat others as you want to be treated. I'm sure if some people were put into the shoes of the needy little boys or girls, they would want to be on the benefiting end too," Hoskins said.

Kobs said the monetary goal is to raise more than $1,648 which is the amount they raised last year. "Every year we raise more money than the last year, even with the economy getting worse," Kobs said.

Sarah Albrycht, a member of the Scabbard and Blade honor society, said the program gives students a chance to make a difference in the life of a child. "I've noticed from past years donations from students that students really care about the community they live in," she said.

Chris David, a ROTC cadet, said he believed the generosity and kindness of the students has increased over the years. "If everyone on campus just gives a penny, it would make a big difference," he said.

Kobs said the Army ROTC will be collecting money or unwrapped toys until 3 p.m. on Thursday. He said the cadets will buy toys with the donated money and then give the toys to the Marine Reserve headquarters at Westover Air Force Base.

"Last year we had a great time going crazy in the toy store," Kobs said. He said the cadets bought big stuffed animals, baby toys and games.

Bill Amrhein, a ROTC cadet, said he hopes the program reminds students of their moral obligation to help the needy.

"This program is a positive effort to give everyone the chance to have a happy holiday season," Amrhein said.

Shakespeare was ahead of feminists, prof. says

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

William Shakespeare presented women as they were in real life and helped pave the way for the rise of feminism, said a visiting professor yesterday, in a lecture in Herter Hall.

Ann Thompson, an English professor at the University of Liverpool in England, highlighted early interpretations of Shakespeare's work before a group of about 30 faculty and students. Her lecture was titled "Pre-Feminism or Proto-Feminism?: Early Women Readers of Shakespeare."

"Many have wondered why Shakespeare's portrayal of women is so powerful, successful, and memorable and modern approaches so hostile to it," Thompson said.

Thompson quoted works by women authors, dating from 1664-1924, in her analysis.

"One would think he had been metamorphized from a man to a woman, for who could describe Cleopatra better than he could?" said Mary Cavendish, Dutchess of Newcastle, in Sociable Letters, the first critical essay ever published on Shakespeare, in 1664.

Shakespeare's knowledge of the female psyche was also marveled by Anna Jameson in 1833. Jameson said analyzing Shakespeare's work was better for her purposes of studying the psychology of women than analyzing real women, since he describes women's motives and characters in great detail.

Jameson went on to say, in her 1833 work, Characteristics of Women — Moral, Poetical, and Historical (Shakespeare's Heroines), that, although Shakespeare's portrayal of women is real, it shows them as clearly inferior to men.

Women were sometimes silent, a result of the delicacy and lack of competition among women that Shakespeare maintained, Jameson said. In his work The Winter's Tale, two female characters are not in conversation together until the very end. "It would be a fault in taste. One spirit would have to overtake the other," Jameson said.

Thompson said that Shakespeare's treatment of women's sexuality, although not explicit, received criticism and, even, censorship in earlier times. Henrietta Bowdler, in her book The Family Shakespeare, in 1807, removed some references to Desdemona's feelings for Othello.

Thompson said even today two versions of Othello are available and she encourages professors to present both of the texts and point out the differences in their treatment of women's sexuality.

Understanding cultures

Famous scientist says the West is best

By GEORGE ZHU
Collegian Staff

The modern science, technology and freedom the West has invented, pursued and enjoyed are what makes Western culture superior to others, a prominent scientist said Thursday.

Amherst College biology professor Richard A. Goldsby made these remarks as part of his inaugural address as the tenth John Woodruff Simpson Lecturer at Amherst College.

"What science provides is the possibility for increasing the understanding of nature —including ourselves," Goldsby said. "For some time now the modern world beyond the West has appreciated the power and prowess of science and developments of Western civilization."

Goldsby said there were three criteria on which to compare different cultures. These include the ability to provide the material necessities of life, the ability to exercise control over infectious and other diseases, and the degree to which the culture protects individual liberties.

"Only with the culture able to do so can anyone expect an opportunity to achieve his full potentials," Goldsby said.

While acknowledging that he believes the natural superiority of Western civilization, Goldsby pointed out this culture also brought the Holocaust and the invention of atomic weapons.

Turn to CULTURES, page 7

Fraternity brother injured

A member of Alpha Chi Ro fraternity fell from the roof of the fraternity's house last Sunday morning and sustained serious head and lower back injuries, according to Danny Chun, a University news office spokesperson.

Chun said Micheal Haddad, a first year student, was in critical condition at Bay State Medical hospital as of Tuesday afternoon.

Eric Weinstein, the president of the Alpha Chi Ro alumni chapter, said Haddad was climbing the fire escape when he slipped and fell while trying to get onto the roof of the house.

Weinstein said the fraternity does not physically or mentally abuse its pledges.

"There was no fraternity party going on, initiation was completed and most of the brothers were sleeping when the accident occured," Weinstein said.

Ed Korza, the University Greek affairs director, said that at this point in the investigation, there was no evidence indicating the involvement of hazing or initiation rights.

—MICHELLE ROBBINS

Mather Career Center offers job experience

By JENNIFER L. PRESS
Collegian Correspondent

A college degree used to be all that was necessary to land a good job after graduation, but a tough economy and job market are changing all of that. Now employers demand something that may even be more important than a degree — experience.

"It is foolish to graduate without experience in today's job market," said Jeff Silver, associate director of the Mather Career Center.

Silver urges students to use the Mather Career Center to get experience through on-the-job training with a co-operative or internship, which are collectively called field experience.

A field experience is an entry-level position at an organization that can last anywhere from a semester or summer to a year. Co-operatives, or co-ops, are always paid while internships are done for course credit. Some internships are also paid.

Field experience not only provides students with job training, but also allows them to explore another field risk-free. Students are not limited and can choose a position that relates to their major or something completely different.

"I've had students who have done an internship or co-op come to me and tell me how much they loved it and they plan to pursue a career in that field after graduation," Silver said. "On the other hand, I've also heard students say how much they hated the job and have changed their career plans because of it."

Silver said another reason field experience is so valuable is students can make important contacts, while on the job.

"Contacts are important because after a field experience is over, that person can often help students get a job in that company or let them know of other opportunities," Silver said.

Justin Peavey, a fifth-year computer systems engineering major, has done two co-ops in the engineering field.

"I would not want to graduate without experience," Peavey said.

Peavey said his on-the-job training was important because he was able to apply what he learned in the classroom to a real work environment.

"I was able to learn the difference between college and reality, because I could apply the theory and problem-solving techniques I learned in school," Peavey said. "I learned more in nine months of a co-op than I did in two years of school."

With a wide range of internship and co-op positions available through the Mather Career Center, it is easy for a student to find a field experience in any career.

Silver said he believes college students cannot afford to enter the job search without field experience. "I can't stress enough the importance of the money, experience and contacts that you gain from doing a co-op or internship."

"Anyone graduating from college without any real job experience is putting themselves at a disadvantage," Peavey said. "I encourage anyone from any major to apply for a field experience."

Field experience positions with employers ranging from IBM to Disneyworld are still available for spring semester and the summer. Students can find out how to apply for co-ops and internships at the Mather Career Center's main office or stop by the satellite office, 5 Curry Hicks.

■ store

continued from page 1

services has been running on a deficit, it is not because of the way the University Store is being run. Rather it is because auxiliary services get no state monies and have to pay the state fees. This is the reason as to why they are running up short, Cashman said. And even if the University has sells the Campus Store, Text Book Annex, and Munchy Stores to Barnes & Nobles there will still be a problem with a deficit, Seaver said. The University Store gives back its profits to a trust fund, said junior nursing major Erica McConnell, who works as an administrative aid in the book store. She added Barnes & Nobles would be keeping a part of the profit, instead of giving it back to University.

"It would seem like [the University] would be losing money," McConnell said.

Marcy Schwartz, the University Store Trade Book Manager, said she wonders if Barnes & Noble Book stores would shut down the Munchy Stores. Administrators have said the Munchy Stores are running at a deficit.

But freshman pre-psychology major Ita Rivera, working at the Student Union Munchy Store, said the store was always busy with students.

"This store makes lots of money," Rivera said. "Every class shift this store is filled with people buying."

Vilmarie Sanchez, a hotel, restaurant and travel administration major, works 40 hours a week at the Student Union Munchy Store, in addition to taking 12 credits.

Because Sanchez is a full time state employee, her tuition is waved. But if the deal goes through, Sanchez said she is sure she will lose her job, and again she will have to drop out of school.

■ marines

continued from page 1

strictly humanitarian.

"They need somebody to restore a level of sanity," he said. At the White House, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said President Bush would be kept abreast of developments in Somalia by his national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, "throughout the evening and tonight as necessary."

Armed bandits and looters have paralyzed international relief agencies' efforts to feed the hundreds of thousands of starving Somalis. Tons of donated food are already in Somalia but cannot be distributed because of the threat of violence.

Williams said some to the U.S. forces would drop leaflets and broadcast messages explaining why the Marines have intervened.

"The Americans are coming and they're here to help; they're here to feed," Williams said. "They're not here to obstruct; they're not here to cause violence. They're here to bring a sense of order so that humanitarian relief can get going again."

Williams said it had not yet been determined whether the U.S. forces would attempt to disarm the armed clans

"Disarmament is not an end in itself," he said. "It's a means to an end to provide for a secure atmosphere in which the relief workers can do the job to get the food to the people."

Besides the four Navy supply ships and the three ships carrying the 1,800 Marines, the Navy had the aircraft carrier USS Ranger and three of its escort vessels off the Somali coast.

Williams said 10,000 soldiers of the Army's 10th Mountain Division, a light infantry unit based at Ft. Drum, N.Y., continued to get ready for deployment to Somalia, but had not yet been given the formal order to head out.

Also, 16,000 members of the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force, based at Camp Pendleton, Calif., were preparing to join Operation Restore Hope.

■ Somalia

continued from page 1

no instructions to disarm the Somali factions unless they posed a danger. Col. Greg Newbold described his mission as having "a human face on it."

"Somebody dialed 911 and we came," Newbold said aboard the USS Tripoli.

These troops are the advance party for an eventual deployment of 28,000 U.S. troops, who will be joined by soldiers from France, Turkey and Canada, among other nations.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Pete Williams said the U.S. forces would drop leaflets and broadcast messages in the capital to explain their mission.

Generic Collegian Filler™ Pat. 3423861

LSAT
MCAT
GMAT
GRE

SAVE $150 on MCAT!
SAVE $100 on LSAT, GMAT & GRE!
• Place a deposit by December 15th •
CANNOT BE APPLIED RETROACTIVELY OR IN COMBINATION WITH ANY OTHER OFFER.
AMHERST OFFICE ONLY.

KAPLAN 549-5780
The answer to the test question

TELEVISION
K I L L S .
Read the Collegian for all the news that's worth your time. We're more healthy.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

A woman's concern should not be valued by her color

Equality of, and for, the sexes has been one of the most important battles in my life. I take deep pride in the fact that I am a woman. In my eyes, women are of the most beautiful and brilliant creatures that walk the earth. The oppression that all women have faced courageously throughout time is an evil that I have focused many of my goals around defeating.

So when I sat in a room, where the majority of people were women, I felt confident and comfortable within our discussion of whether or not the women's issues page should be re-established. I thought that being a woman, my beliefs and opinions on the subject would be listened to and taken into consideration. But above all, if I disagreed with another viewpoint, my difference would be respected. And then I disagreed with a woman of color and within three seconds judgment was passed: I was a racist.

I walked out of that meeting angry, frustrated and appalled that someone who claimed she was fighting for equality would turn around and form an opinion solely based on the color of my skin. To me that has always been the definition of racism.

Over the next few weeks, more meetings and more judgments came and went. Each time I'd leave feeling half a person, but that didn't seem to be a concern for the "crusaders of equality." I felt I was being looked down upon with disdainful eyes, as people's characters were torn apart with stereotypes and generalizations — two factors we were supposedly fighting against. I sat there and watched my heritage, beliefs and concerns be dismembered and devalued, simply because I was a White woman.

E.C.
THOMAS

I am not ashamed of being White. I don't believe in the ideologies of some of my ancestors, just as those in the colored community won't necessarily agree with all of their ancestors. However, there are many roots in my life that I am proud of. The utter disrespect of tearing apart someone's heritage, on both sides of the coin, is inexcusable, especially when you are trying to obtain equality. I am not to blame for things that happened in the past. They are not my fault, and I refuse to answer for something out of my control or feel ashamed for it. If I am to be judged, I am to be judged upon me as a person — not on where I come from.

Furthermore, my beliefs and values concerning women are not based on the fact that I am White; they are based on the fact that I am a woman. When these crusaders attacked my beliefs, they attacked them on the basis of color, not on their merit or relevancy. My journalistic work concerning women, some of which I am very proud of, was stripped of any value it had had — because I am White, what I write doesn't mean anything.

Now that I look back on it all, I don't know what angers me more: the entire hypocrisy of it all, or the fact that the crusaders would return to their respected communities and pass on blatantly false information.

You see, the truth of the matter is we're not talking about a "Women's Issues" page, where women's views could be objectively and equally expressed; we're talking about a "Women of Color Issues" page. This distinction has to be made, since the page has been falsely represented by these crusaders to the women's community. In their eyes White women don't need a voice, within this paper and within this community — we're all racist. Our views and opinions on women are worthless. Because we are White, we are not oppressed. The fact that women of all colors are the majority of the paper's staff bears no importance on their claims of discrimination. We are but mere tokens.

I wish I had enough time to explain the dynamics of reinstating the page, for there are two very relevant and meaningful sides, but both need to be addressed and respected. The fact of the matter is we all want the same thing — equality. Fighting for equality by passing judgments on people based on their color, is an impossible no less ridiculous, logic. Yes, there are two sides of the coin — but the two sides are of ONE coin.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Columnist's final appearance

PRESS RELEASE —

Moose Hill (AP) – A small handful of reporters and well wishers gathered yesterday at Moose Hill, the between-semester resting place of Chris J. Petropoulos, just north of Wormtown, for the bi-annual press conference and rally detailing the ongoing war between UMass and the columnist.

Paul F. "Murph the Surf" Murphy, spokesman for Mr. Petropoulos, leaned wearily on the podium and confirmed that despite reports to the contrary, the campaign had not gone well this semester. "The updates I received during the semester seemed to fluctuate between euphoria and intense frustration. He was drinking heavily, but for a while it seemed this only helped."

Chris J.
PETROPOULOS

Supporters mumbled, reporters made notes, and a light cold drizzle began to fall as Murphy moved away from the podium, lit a Chesterfield and shrugged in despair. "Maybe Ray can explain it to you," he said.

"Shameful" Ray Carville approached the podium and wiped the vodka from his beard. "No one here can take anything away from Petro, as he is known at UMass. He fought hard with all the tricks and maneuvers at his disposal. If anything did him in it was the Konopin shortage, which is partly my fault because I needed a boatload down for the Texas campaign. But if he's still alive and next semester, or maybe the one after that, he'll be back and he'll me more cynical than ever, and he'll ram it right down those paper-pushing squirming rancid fishhead's salivating little maws!"

The crowd surged forward, chanting. "Punish them! Tear their flesh!"

"Now, now, easy does it there," continued Carville, "such time will come. We know who they are. The last letter I received from him detailed unmarked cars from various semi-official state and federal agencies circling UMass, whispering his name."

"Damn them! Damn them!" shouted the crowd. Hired guards forced back the crowd which had nearly swamped the podium.

Emil "Ohknod" Busi approached the podium. "Before we let Chris speak to you, one last thing. I saw him often, and this fascination with Fred Exely was getting very unhealthy towards the end. That, and with George Chidi refusing to bring him that whiskey he owed him, and of course. . . something else happened. Something evil, creepy, frightening, and bloodthirsty managed to scale his defensive wall and really got to him, the poor guy."

Two handlers led a disheveled Mr. Petropoulos to the podium. The crowd hushed.

"Nimbus. . ." he said,". . . Cechre. I guess you could say the factory is still open but we're making different stuff now. I guess you could say we're buying low and selling high. I guess you could say she's built like a brick shi-"

Handlers pulled Mr. Petropoulos away, thrusting cigarettes and booze into his hands. The crowd cheered, broke into a chorus of "Freakscene," and Mr. Petropoulos was led away for a long mid-winter rest.

The crowd began to dissipate.

The following people came to my aid when mindless scum tried to take away my whiskey and make me smile: Emil, Murph, Ray. Daniel, Amy, North. Slampuppy, Don, MattandSean. The Doctor, Beckster, Jessica. Polly and Sara. Joel and the Bots. Tom Waits. Ray Carver, John Gardner, Hunter S. Thompson, Fred Exely. Bronwyn, Paquini and Andrea Holland. Lou Reed. Rush Limbaugh. Zenon. Darienne, for putting up with this. And you, you know who you are, for pushing the smile quota way the hell out of whack.

Chris J. Petropoulos may not be back but look for "The Adventures of Piggy and Zack" on next semester's comics page.

Vague column has blind view

In response to Yatisha Bothwell's article [Collegian, Dec. 2], "The Black Experience," I have a few words. I support Bothwell on certain points. Our society is dominated by White males, and I'd have to be insane to not see the oppression of Blacks.

I find it interesting to read that Bothwell feels she cannot completely conceive each Black person; but, she can assume that she cannot comprehend one single White person in the entire world. I'm sorry that anger and frustration can blind people so severely.

When someone believes all Blacks came to the U.S. by the same means, I'm ashamed of how inadequate our education of history has become. My main problem with most of Bothwell's statements is that they were so vague and general. I'm amazed she could state, "We've had to pay in order to fuel their livelihood, all at the expense of Black people (non-Whites)." Is she claiming she now knows the Native American experience? I agree Blacks aren't the only minority being oppressed — I question her use of parenthesis.

In her concluding words, Bothwell asked Blacks to unite and protest. I ask you, Yatisha Bothwell, are you trying to protest the principle of oppression or are you just protesting that you are the one being oppressed?

Phaedra Pezzullo
Southwest

Students must overcome racism

We are a group of six White students in an AWARE colloquial (Allies Working Against Racism Everywhere), for White students to address issues of racism and White awareness. We were asked to respond to the statement, "All Whites are racist." After discussion, we answered, "Yes, if you were raised in American society and are White, you are a racist." Consider this issue of White privilege: a White person can feel free to live, go and work anywhere without the possibility of being harassed, stared at, or plagued with racial slurs. Compliance with this privilege contributes to the perpetuation of racism.

Each one of us does have some aspect of racism within us. Although we are the majority in this country, we are a minority in the world. We live in a predominantly White, male, heterosexual based society that teaches us that anything that is not like us is not right. Although we cannot identify with other races or groups, we need to accept their culture, feelings and differences.

We discovered an underlying element of guilt, which is a product of our racial identity and its connection with our ancestors' actions. To fight our own personal racism we must overcome our own guilt. The problems dealing with racism are not being dealt with adequately by the administration at this university. How can a board of trustees, seating only Whites, understand and meet the needs of targeted groups such as ALANA, GLB, women and physically and mentally disadvantaged students? This university, supposedly a center of diversity, has proven to be far from that. If college writing can be made a requirement, why can't a social diversity class that really deals with multiculturalism?

As White students, we challenge all White students to observe how you are benefiting from racism and how ignorance is hurting us. The closer we come to accepting multiculturalism, the better off we will be as a society. Furthermore, we challenge all students to recognize that we need to overcome stereotypes, work together and understand that we cannot change history but we can positively affect the future.

Stacey Marriott
Central

This letter was signed by six students.

Native American corridor not a form of segregation

This is in response to an editorial about the Native American corridor [Collegian, Dec. 8]. I am not a "Native American Indian." We people are not Indians; Indians are in India. We are Native American or indigenous people. That's the generalized version of over 700 different nations of people. You are forgetting our customs, language and people are very different from you.

You mentioned, "They are segregating ethnic communities by boundaries and territories." I'm a Native American (Onkwehonkwe) and I don't feel segregated at all, since we asked for the floor. Is asking an educational institution to fit a bit of our needs so much to do? We are faced with extinction and genocide and you think we are being segregated. We are asking for a home, which 87 percent of the White minority of this University already has (according to world population Whites are the minority).

You stated, "This takes away from the diversity of the campus and adds to the high level of racial tension." We're usually the ones being racially attacked. Instead of our people being destroyed by non-Native values, we keep out culture to share with you all. I'd rather be Onkwehonkwe, think like one, act like one than not be one at all. What's the point of saying we were Native 100 years from now if our culture is gone?

"If a group wished to be together, a cultural or resource center should be established in a common place to where the members live." It's in the process of being done. My question is, who gives the University or non-Native students the right to tell us what we need? Five hundred years we've been told what we need. Now it's our turn to recover the damage done to us.

At the end you stated, "People should wake up and see these floors for what they are and what they could do to this campus." Before you worry Native Americans are causing racial problems, why not worry about all the ignorant people who start these problems? I'm not ignorant to the racial problems, because I face them every day. Yet I still remain ignorant along with everybody else.

This I hope is not taken personally but as a reflection of my opinion to someone else's statements. Skennen (peace).

Kahon:wes
Central

Patrols needed

I wanted to express how happy I am to see the formation of the "Rainbow Patrol," a nighttime student security group that protects minorities on campus. After speaking at several rallies against racism last semester as an out lesbian I experienced some scary nighttime harassment and I know these patrols are needed at UMass. I'm happy to see the presence of Whites in the patrol. It means we must be willing to take risks and sometimes even place ourselves in danger in the fight to end racism.

Trystan Skeigh
Montague

Porter accused of sexually abusing baby-sitter

By MARY R. SANDOK
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — A former Roman Catholic priest accused of sexually abusing a girl baby-sitting his children five years ago also molested the girl's older sister when she baby-sat for him 11 years ago, according to testimony Tuesday.

The older sister, now 26, took the stand a day after her sister, now 21, told the jury about alleged abuse by James R. Porter in 1987. The younger woman's allegations led to Porter's trial on six counts of fourth-degree criminal sexual conduct.

Charges could not be filed in connection with the older sister's allegations because the statute of limitations had run out.

Porter, married and the father of four children, also is accused of sexually assaulting dozens of children in Minnesota, Massachusetts and New Mexico before he left the priesthood in 1974.

The prosecution rested its case Tuesday after also calling Porter's 16-year-old daughter and a child psychologist to the stand. The defense began calling witnesses in the afternoon.

The older sister testified that she baby-sat for the Porters in the late 1970s, and early 1980s at their home in the St. Paul suburb of Oakdale. She said that on one occasion in late 1980 or early 1981, Porter called her to the bedroom door. She said she asked him what he needed.

"He told me to come to the edge of the bed," she said. "When I got there, he took my hand and placed it on his groin area."

She said Porter then put his hand under her shirt and touched her bra.

"I pretty much stood there in shock," she said.

The woman said she then left for home and did not baby-sit for the Porters again. She said she did not tell her parents or anyone else about the incident until May of this year.

"I was afraid of what my dad would do," she said. "We didn't talk about things much at my house."

The woman, who once choked back tears during her testimony, said the incident that led her to quit baby-sitting for the Porters was preceded by several others.

She said Porter told her he could help her relieve a backache by having her kneel facing the couch and bending from her waist over the couch. When she did so, Porter punched his groin area into her from behind, the woman said. She said that happened on about six occasions and stopped when she began making up excuses or telling Porter her back was fine.

The woman said she began telling her story earlier this year because she heard about other allegations against Porter.

But Porter's 16-year-old daughter testified that her father was never home when the family had baby-sitters.

Porter's daughter also testified that the 21-year-old woman baby-sat alone only once or twice and that she usually was accompanied by a younger sister.

On Monday, the alleged victim testified that Porter "more often than not" was home when she baby-sat and that it was "very rare" that her younger sister accompanied her when she baby-sat.

CIRCULATION DRIVERS AND ASSISTANT CIRCULATION MANAGER ARE NEEDED

$7 - $10/HR.
Must Have Mornings Free till 11:00
Must Be Reliable and have a car.

Apply in person at the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center

You love us. You hate us.
But you always read us.
Collegian

CopyCat PRINT SHOP
RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992.
Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)
228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

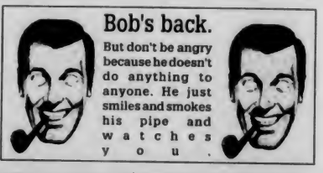
■ Olver

continued from page 1

In January, the full Appropriations Committee will decide on its subcommittee assignments. Each member of the Appropriations Committee serves on at least two subcommittees and no more than three.

The appointment was made at a closed caucus meeting of the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee.

The subcommittees Olver sits on for the Appropriations Committee will be determined sometime today.



Bob's back.
But don't be angry because he doesn't do anything to anyone. He just smiles and smokes his pipe and watches you.

HANDEL'S
MESSIAH
Springfield Symphony Orchestra
&
University of Massachusetts Chamber Choir
Raymond Harvey, conducting
Wednesday, December 9, 8:00 p.m.
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMass, Amherst
Tickets $12/$8 Students, Elders & Children
Available at Fine Arts Center Box Office 545-2511 or at the door
Co-sponsored by WFCR 88.5 FM

Concerned About Your Relationship with Food?

A Peer Support Group will be held weekly for those struggling with anorexia, bulimia or compulsive overeating.

Time: Mondays 4:30 - 6:00
Place: Campus Center

check daily schedule by the elevator for room number.

Confidentiality Respected

THIS WEEK AT THE HATCH

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 9th
Tona Johra
(Rock and Roll)
9 pm

THURSDAY, DEC. 10th
Stone Soup
(Rock and Roll)
9 pm

FRIDAY, DEC. 11th
Toy Box
(Alternative Rock)
9 pm

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Famous New Yorker editor dies at age of 85

NEW YORK (AP)— William Shawn, the editor whose graceful pen shepherd the works of John Updike, James Thurber, E.B. White and others through the pages of the New Yorker for more than half a century, died Tuesday. He was 85.

The cause and place of death were not immediately known. Roger Angell said "He was the greatest editor of our time."

For decades Shawn was the shy, retiring heart of the nation's best known literary magazine. He commissioned every article, approved every word on every page, stroked every writer and artist.

He changed an institution that never seemed to change : New contributors were brought in; the New Yorker became a strong voice against the Vietnam War; the magazine's fiction and reporting became more "serious," though humor remained a mainstay. And Shawn himself became a legendary editor.

Shawn was forced to retire in 1987, two years after the magazine was sold.

Born in Chicago on Aug. 31, 1907, Shawn dropped out of the University of Michigan after two years, then worked as a reporter for small newspapers and as a composer for ballet and theater companies.

He joined the New Yorker in 1933, eight years after it was founded. He was a reporter for the "Talk of the Town" section, turning in notes that were then rewritten into finished articles. He was paid $2 an inch.

In all his years at the New Yorker, Shawn wrote just one signed piece, a brief story that described the destruction of New York City by a meteor. It carried only the initials, "W.S."; Shawn never liked it.

He became managing editor in 1939 and in 1952, upon the death of Harold Ross, the magazine's roughen founding editor, Shawn became editor.

Shawn already had been responsible for one of the magazine's major coups: John Hersey's book "Hiroshima," published in a single issue in 1946. Writer Bruce Bliven Jr., a friend and colleague of Shawn's for 40 years, said Shawn also was largely responsible for the magazine's coverage of World War II.

For a long time Shawn shied away from taking strong political stands in the magazine, but the New Yorker opposed the president on Vietnam.

In 1985, when it was announced that the magazine had been sold to S.I. Newhouse, the new owner said he intended to maintain the magazine's traditional independence, and hoped to retain Shawn as the editor.

Two years later, without any warning, Newhouse announced that Shawn had decided to retire and would be replaced by Robert Gottlieb, the president and editor in chief of Alfred A. Knopf. Shawn told staff members that he had, in effect, been forced to retire.

More than 170 staff members and contributors wrote to Gottlieb, objecting to the way Shawn had been treated and asking that he turn down the position. Gottlieb refused and a number of New Yorker editors and writers quit.

In June 1992, it was announced that Gottlieb had differences with Newhouse over the direction the magazine should take. He was replaced by Tina Brown, editor of Vanity Fair, another, more flashy Newhouse publication.

After leaving the New Yorker, Shawn went to work as an editor at Farrar, Straus & Giroux, a publishing house that often works with New Yorker writers.

Shawn, in a farewell memo to New Yorker staffers, said: "We have built something quite wonderful together. Love has been the controlling emotion, and love is the essential word."

Conditions for Chinese prisoners worsening

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press

BEIJING (AP)— Torture of Chinese prisoners has become more widespread and brutal over the past decade as a result of repeated anti-crime campaigns, the human rights group Amnesty International said in a report issued Wednesday.

Assault with stun guns, shackling in uncomfortable positions, suspension in the air by the arms or feet, confinement in tiny, unlit cells, sleep deprivation and exposure to extreme cold or heat were among some of the torture methods the London-based group described in its report.

"We believe the law enforcement and justice system in China actually fosters torture," the organization said, citing the emphasis on extracting confessions and prisoners' lack of access to lawyers.

The Chinese government acknowledges police sometimes use torture to extract confessions, but it is infrequent and torturers are punished when reported. In a report on the prison system in August, the government said prisoners "receive fully humane treatment."

However, Amnesty International said torture in endemic in many Chinese jails.

"One of the reasons for the increased use of torture during the past 10 years appears to have been the continuous anti-crime campaigns launched by the authorities since 1983," its report said.

"During such campaigns, police are under instructions and often under pressure to find potential or real offenders and many arbitrary arrests are carried out. The police then often resort to torture to produce faster results and force confessions."

Those most likely to be ill-treated are uneducated, poor prisoners, the report said. However, Amnesty said some student participants in the 1989 Tianamen Square democracy movement also have been severely abused.

Among them are Liu Gang, a former Beijing University physics student, who is serving a six-year term for his role in the protests. the report said he was at various times made to wear leg irons, forced to sit on a bench motionless for up to 12 hours and repeatedly beaten about the head by fellow prisoners.

Tang Yuanjuan, a prisoner in the same jail in Northeast China, was repeatedly shocked with an electric baton and kicked by a guard, breaking two ribs, the report said. Tang, an assistant engineer at an auto factory, was sentenced to 20 years for trying to organize a strike during the 1989 movement.

Both cases also have been reported by other human rights groups and Chinese sources.

The report also cited several cases of Christians, arrested for holding private prayer services, who were beaten badly in prison, and of Tibetan separatists who died after severe beating by guards.

Stopping carjacking

Rep. said state must declare the crime

By ROBERT TROTT
Associated Press

BOSTON — Although carjacking has not been as widespread in Massachusetts as in other urban areas, a lawmaker said Tuesday the state needs to formally declare it a crime before it gains popularity here.

"It's like a wave that's coming this way, and I'd like to be prepared before it gets here," said Rep. Thomas Walsh, D-Peabody.

Walsh's bill would make it a crime punishable by five years to life in prison for stealing a vehicle while driver is inside, or putting someone "in fear for the purpose of stealing a motor vehicle."

"Carjacking," a play on "hijacking," is usually defined as the stealing of a car by force while the auto is occupied. Walsh said assailants usually carjack to take an "easy joyride" and sell it later.

"There's nothing more frightening than when you stop at a traffic light or are in a minor accident . . . and you all of a sudden are in danger," he said.

Another lawmaker, Rep. Francis Mara, D-Brockton, suggested taking the law a step further — equating carjacking with breaking and entering a home, and allowing drivers to "use deadly force" to protect themselves and passengers.

Replied Walsh: "I'm not sure anybody should be using deadly force inside their car."

In addition to punishing the criminals, Walsh said, making carjacking a specific crime would allow law enforcement officials to track the trend. Now, such violations can be classified as assault, armed robbery, auto theft or kidnapping.

The Sept. 8 case of Pamela Basu, a 34-year-old Maryland woman, pushed the phenomenon into the national spotlight. Basu was dragged to her death when she tried to save her 22-month-old daughter as two men seized her car. The child was left alive by the road.

In October, President Bush signed a law making carjacking a federal offense, if the attacker uses a firearm.

Sporadic reports of carjacking have surfaced across the state in recent months.

At a Criminal Justice Committee hearing, Arthur Kinsman of the American Automobile Association said his group supports Walsh's bill.

"Let's not wait until it becomes a true epidemic, or an imagined one," Kinsman said.

"It's also a perfect opportunity to educate motorists on ways to reduce their chances of becoming a carjack victim in a sensible way, apart from the hysteria of a sensational, front-page carjacking case," he said. "With a better handle on where and when carjackings occur, we can provide people with better information on how best to protect themselves."

■ office

continued from page 3

and the changes that must occur in order to improve the situation.

"A curriculum that addresses the accomplishments of people of color in History, Economics and other fields. A more balanced curriculum that includes all groups and their accomplishments— students should challenge what they're taught," Acosta said.

Germany is defended Official said foreignors

BOSTON (AP) — Germany's ambassador to the United States defended his nation Tuesday as being open to foreigners despite the nationalistic violence that has erupted in cities across the country.

Germany "will not allow a small band of young, right wing extremists to disrupt all German society," Immo Stabreit told about 60 faculty and students at Boston University.

"The fact of the matter simply is that no other Western country has been more affected by the upheavals of our times than Germany," he said.

Right-wing extremists have carried out nearly 2,000 attacks against foreigners and Jews this year, killing 16 people. The government hopes to remove a rallying point for Neo-Nazis by tightening Germany's liberal asylum policies and cutting the number of foreigners in the country.

Stabreit was in Boston to discuss the world's economic problems, which he said could be solved only through sweeping international pacts such as the Maastricht Treaty and other market agreements.

However, Stabreit said, European nations need to work harder to align their tax systems and economies.

"It is worrisome if you tie together an elephant and a hare to tow the cart," he said. "The hare will risk getting stepped upon."

■ cultures

continued from page 3

Goldsby said while it is possible to examine association between races and particular cultures, it is still unclear whether there is any deterministic relation between them.

"Because race is purely a genetic term, the belief that there is deterministic relation between race and culture is just another way of saying particular cultures are not merely accidents or circumstances of history, but particular cultures are reflections of particular genes," Goldsby said.

Goldsby said while, narrowly speaking, some races excel at some behaviors more than others, "if you look at a wider variety of skills, no races have been demonstrated to be genetically and therefore inheritably superior to any others."

We are all professionals here at the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.
We work long hours, put up with crabby people and even get paid.
An honest way to make a living, if I do say so myself.
As honest as good Ranch dressing.

COLLEGIAN

■ We are liked, disliked, but never ignored! ■

Did you know . . . Recent campus statistics show that alcohol is involved in: • About one-third of all emotional difficulties among students. • 35-40% of all suicides • Approximately 35% of revenues for college newspapers come from alcohol advertisements.

Sponsored by Health Education University Health Services

WHY ASK WHY ?

Sexuality

SEXUAL AMNESIA

Drunk again
It's a Saturday night and I've followed the routine of pouring this rancid liquid rapidly down my throat
My mind wanders...
It seems as soon as this liquid blinds my senses
I want sex
NOW
Immediately
I scan the room for my partner
"Let's leave now" I slobber seductively
"I want you"
We stumble home
Minds rampantly running over all the fantasies
we're about to explore...
The shock of bright afternoon sunshine burns my hungover eyes
I try to crawl out of my partners heavy embrace
"Wow, the sex last night was incredible" mumbled in a post-drunken haze Embarrassment pounds through my brain
as I bolt to the bathroom
"I wish I could remember what happened..." I ponder briefly
But something tells me - I don't want to know.

Can you relate?

The hardest thing for me was getting caught up in the denial of my boyfriend's excessive drinking. We met at a dance club. We both were drinking. Since I am a light drinker, I assumed he also was just drinking to be socialable. When he told me he had only had three drinks and that he did not drink that much, I believed him. There was chemistry when we met. He seemed to be "the one" I had been waiting for, so I didn't want to even think that he could have a problem with alcohol, even when he looked a bit tipsy.

The more time we spent together, the more I could see that alcohol was a major part of his life. All of our "dates" centered around his drinking. Still, I stayed with him, because I had fallen for him. He denied his dependency on alcohol to himself and to me. At first, I also denied his drinking. There's a name for my role in his alcoholism - it's called codependency. By being codependent, I stood by while he got so drunk that he passed out. It is frightening to find someone you love lying on the floor, having fallen. It is hard to stand by and watch someone you care about spit up blood in the bathroom every morning because his stomach is so irritated from alcohol. Yet, he wouldn't stop drinking.

I finally left the relationship, after great emotional pain and difficulty. I found help by seeing a counselor and attending Al-Anon meetings (for people involved with alcoholics). The alcohol was an unhealthy factor in our relationship, destroying it. Because of alcoholism, we never had a chance.

UMASS STUDENTS SPEAK OUT:

Beer and sex seem to go together
Every student knows this fact

Cuz drinking and sex are both fun
Acting responsible sometimes is not.
Realize what can happen - Think!
Each of us can get HIV & STD's
For none of us is immune
Use your senses and have fun.
Love yourself and your body!

She was my best friend and had an alcohol problem that stemmed from home and carried on to her. She thought that coming to college would change things. No one knew of her family except her. She tried to act like nothing was wrong and to keep her problems inside. It worked for a while, but like everyone and everything she had a bursting point. It happened one night when we were out at a party. She was quiet while we were out and when we got home she just started breaking down and said that she couldn't handle it anymore. She wanted everything to end, including her life. Alcohol does not only hurt the drinker, but everyone around the drinker.

It wasn't that she was vain, beauty was as natural as breathing. She had always been beautiful, like a perfect pastel present just begging to be opened. She liked it when her looks took peoples' breath away. It almost made her forget what she was inside: just worms and dust and a soul that was nearly dead.

Home. The word never really had much meaning to her. Crammed full till bursting with memories that make no sense, of worlds, and times that can't possibly, and never will exist.

It was killing her slowly and painfully. Sooner or later she had to face the inevitable. There is no place on the planet where she would be safe. That's where I come in. If she has got to die, she wants to die in my arms. She wants me to do it. She tells me if I ever loved her I would spare her the torture. If I loved her that I would end it now. She's my best friend. I love her very much. I want to say good bye, say anything, but instead I just hold her tight and tell her that the pain will go away. It will go away.

Telling someone about your problem is as hard as dealing with it. Trying to hide or to run from a problem does no one any good. You cannot run from yourself.

What happens to me when I drink?

I start to mumble.....
I start to fumble.....
I start to stumble.....
Soon I will crumble.....

The lights are dim and the people are moving rhythmically to the music. My head is woozy, but I'm not at the sick point, in fact I'm having a lot of fun. I see him walk over in my direction. He's looking at me, I think! Yes, it's me because he asks me to dance and before I know it, we are on the dance floor. Then suddenly, the jello shots hit me. I want to sit down but he can't hear me over the loud music. He starts to kiss me. I hate it, but the strength in me is gone, I can't talk and can't pull away. I am scared. I feel caught in my body - the thoughts are racing, but I can't make my body defend his persistence. He stops his attacks for a moment and pulls me away into another room. I can't say no because I can't talk. Doesn't he know something is wrong. Oh God, please don't let me pass out. This is not what I want. But the alcohol is in my way. Finally I manage to say "No" - softly, but I know he can hear me. Does he stop? NO! That's too bad because then I got sick.

This is what happens to me when I drink:

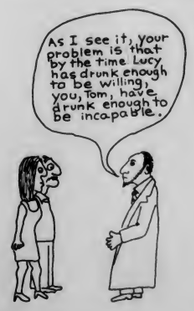
I become really horny and my decision-making abilities go completely out the window

You do the math.....

It really hit me the other day when a woman my age told me she had never gotten drunk before. It really shocked me and made me think if I knew anyone else my age who had never gotten drunk. It took me a while, then I realized there was only one other person I know and hang around with who has never gotten drunk. I couldn't believe it.

This is what happens to me when I drink:

I cry. Plain and simple as that I cry. At first everything is great. I have a few beers, laugh a little, smile a lot...for a short while.....while the buzz is in my head. In fact, the more I drink, the more everything is just one big buzz. Conversation is just one big meshed buzz of words. I see hair flipping, big obnoxious grins, all flashes, just quick passing flashes. Alcohol plays with my emotions, makes me feel good, for a while., makes me feel silly, for a while, makes me feel (dare I say) confident, for a while , makes me cocky, for a while, makes me feel really miserable, angry, sad, tired, fat, ugly, annoyed., for a while. Is the possibility of adding HIV positive or contracted STD worth adding to the list? I don't think so. Protect yourself. Feeling good, silly, happy, confident isn't worth a lifetime of misery.



The room was spinning really fast.
The man I was with was holding on to me.
Really, really tight.
We were outside on a little balcony thing with the keg.
I said I wanted to go home.
I was tired.
We walked back to my dorm.
He was holding me up cuz the road wouldn't stay still.
He thought I was funny.
I remember him laughing.
I remember wondering who was kissing me.
I remember remembering who he was.
I remember telling him secrets.
I remember forgetting who I was while he touched me all over and kissed me and held me and the room spun in rings around us and then I forget.
It is all blackness.
I still don't know.
I never asked.
He never said.

Cartoons taken from J. Kinney and G. Leaton (1991), Loosening the Grip, Mosby Year Book. Reproduced with permission of illustrator, Dr. Stuart Copans, Associate Professor of Child Psychiatry, Dartmouth Medical School and Director of Adolescent Division and Adolescent Addiction Team, Brattleboro Retreat, Brattleboro, VT. If you or someone you know needs help with substance abuse, you can contact Brattleboro Retreat at 1/800-345-5550.

Where to Go FOR HELP OR INFORMATION ABOUT A DRINKING OR DRUG PROBLEM

(Yours or someone else's)

If you have questions or concerns about your drinking you can get confidential help and/or information from:

On-Campus Help

Alcohol and Drug Education Program [Ask for the Alcohol/Drug Educator] — 549-2671 x181, University Health Services

Mental Health Services [Make an appointment with a counselor] — 545-2337, 127 Hills North, 24 Hour Emergency coverage, M-F Walk-In Clinic 1-3 p.m.

Res. Ed. Alcohol Program [REAP] [Ask for the Alcohol/Drug Educator] — 545-0137, JQA Lobby

Support Groups

AA - Alcoholics Anonymous — Confidential help for students — Newman Center—UMass: Monday 11:15 a.m., Wednesday 11:15 a.m., Friday 11:15 a.m.

AA 24 Hour Phone 538-5822 — Campus Center [rooms posted]: Tuesday 11:15 a.m., Thursday 11:15 a.m.

ALANON [Support group for friends and relatives of Alcoholics] — Campus Center, Thursday 12 Noon

Adult Children of Alcoholics [ACOA] [Support group] — 545-2337, Call Mental Health Services for group times

Off-Campus Help: Support Groups

AA — Alcoholics Anonymous

North Amherst Congregational Church, North Amherst Center, Parish Hall (next to church), Thursday 8:30 p.m. (open meeting)

Kaiser Permanente Administrative Office, 170 University Dr., Amherst, Friday 8:00 p.m. (open meeting)

Grace Episcopal, 16 Spring St. Amherst, Beginner's meeting: Monday 7:00 p.m., Open meeting: Monday 8:30 p.m (public invited)

First Congregational Church, 165 Main St. Amherst, Wednesday 8:30 p.m. (alcoholics only), Saturday 8:30 p.m. (alcoholics only), Sunday 8:30 p.m. (step discussion)

N.A. — Narcotics Anonymous — First Baptist Church, N. Pleasant St. Amherst, Thurs. 8:30 p.m.

Source: American College Health Association

Alcohol related traffic accidents are the #1 killer of people 25 and younger. • About two-thirds of all violent behavior. • Just under 30% of all academic problems.

Arts & Living

Indigo Girls have an impromptu feel

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Indigo Girls
Fine Arts Center
Dec. 6, 1992

Christmas, for many, came a little early Sunday evening.

With stellar performances all around, Indigo Girls proved they were a musical force to be reckoned with in a show stopping concert that virtually ignited the FAC concert hall with contagious excitement and genuine emotion.

Over an eclectic 19-song, one hour and 45 minute set, the Amy Ray-Emily Saliers duo sang heavily from their latest album, Rites of Passage, as well as performing hits from previous albums. The evening's seemingly impromptu air allowed for two marvelous covers, a special surprise guest and a haunting a capella climax.

The Roches opened the show with their trademark, lighthearted folk-pop efforts. The Roches' music simply swung with the casualness of a lazy Sunday morning — complete with the comics section.

Dipping into a comical vein more than once, the highlight was a catchy rendition of "Ing," a sweet diatribe on love lyrics always ending up with -ing.'

Then, with the fanfare and screams worthy of say, The Beatles, Indigo Girls took the stage. Opening with "Three Hits," Amy's vocals were top form, one could see she was aching to her voice. Following up with "Galileo," Emily's laid-back attitude made a perfect counterpart to her partner's jagged edges.

Complete with Sara Lee on bass, Budgie (from Siouxsie & the Banshees) on drums and a backup violin and cello, the band played with unmitigated vigor; each song was a winner.

Highlights of the highlights included a great "World Falls," a somber "Love's Recovery" and two blistering renditions of "Pushing the Needle Too Far" and "Chickenman."

The Roches joined the Indigos for three songs: "Airplane," "Virginia Woolf" and a rollicking cover of Joni Mitchell's "Down by the River." There was also a sly guest appearance by Siouxsie Sioux, who, in a slinky black outfit, added to the evening's lively, anything goes feel.

Yet it was a magnificent cover of Bob Dylan's "Tangled Up in Blue" that captured the audience. Cool, crisp and downright kick a—, "Tangled" nearly outdid the group's signature anthem, "Closer to Fine" for the evening's most potent jam.

But it is the Indigo Girls, Amy and Emily, who made the show. Looking and sounding like they were really and truly having a great time, their enthusiasm was equal to the audience. Between songs Emily quipped "This is fun. Y'all are nice."

Well, Emily and Amy, so are you.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

Indigo Girls at the press conference.

Folk artists Amy Ray, Emily Saliers open up

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Staff

The Indigo Girls made clear, in a press conference on Sunday in the campus center, their views on many different topics, including the role of women in society today, their musical influences and sexual preference.

Emily Saliers and Amy Ray, the members of the folk duo turned rock stars who performed last night in the Fine Arts Center, were cool, calm and collective, even though the attending members of the press continuously asked extremely personal questions.

When asked how she perceives the role of a woman in the music business, Saliers explained how she feels that some media organizations exploit women and subtly discriminate against them, mistreating them and "talking down to them."

The pair went on to describe how they met in elementary school and have been together since. Saliers and Ray, for the most part, have each other to thank for constant musical influence, although their musical styles are relatively different.

In addition to personally interactive influence, the pair mentioned that they have been greatly influenced by such immortals as Bob Dylan, Joni Mitchell and Neil Young.

When asked about their collaboration with Joan Baez and Mary Chapin Carpenter, Saliers said that they might tour together, but she doesn't see a group released album in the near future.

"She has shoulder length blonde hair," said Saliers, of Stephanie, a Greenpiece representative who travels on tours with the Indigo Girls. "We've been with them playing benefits since before we were signed...back when they were for whales."

When asked what the future holds, Saliers replied "We're going to take a LONG BREAK!...it's very intense. After that, we might make another album with Peter Collins, the producer of our last album."

The Indigo Girls have been playing music since before their ages hit double digits. Decades later, they are pumping out the music like no other group around. They have an international reputation, including a large following in the Alpine regions of France and Switzerland, even though the "tiring language barriers and cultural differences" hinder their marketing abilities.

The families of both Saliers and Ray have been extremely supportive, bringing camcorders to all the concerts and showing their genuine excitement.

When asked about their feelings on sexual preferences, Ray said, "I like men and women equally. We play music as musicians, not as people on a soapbox for a cause. There should be no alienation, and anyone who doesn't feel the same way, doesn't really care."

"We have never been afraid to write about our feelings," said Ray, "people can relate without alienating the world."

In terms of what the future holds for these two genuine crowd pleasers, they are both unsure, but whatever it is won't be happening soon. "No jazz, no rap," said Saliers. "We'll stick to the white girl thing."

"I'd probably do something with animals," said Ray, when asked what she'd do if they were forced to stop playing music. "Something with nature, living in the woods."

"I'd be a high school English teacher," said Saliers, when asked the same question. "Just kidding."

Outside Views returns with the letter ZZZZZ

By MARK K. ANDERSON
Collegian Staff

This story is the second of a two-part series.

Thumbing through numerous phone books at the library turned up, as indicated two weeks ago, many individuals with a suspicious amount of Z's to their last names. And as far as I can tell, the North American continent is the only place where such pastimes are practiced.

Not one phone book from outside our shores turned up names close to that of John Zzytecy (Washington, DC), Zolsana Zzzski (Miami), Vladimir Zzzyd (Miami), Z. Zzylch (New Orleans), Aaron Zzyzzy (Boston), A.B. Zzyzy (Denver), Zoltan Zzytwitz (Denver), Zzzzz (Denver), Michael Zzzypp (Queens, NY), Andrew Zzzup (Los Angeles), Walt Zzyzuski (Philadelphia), Isidore Zzyzx (Chicago), Zeke Zzzzzzzyzuss (Montreal) or my favorite selection: Zyzzyva, Zzyzx, Z. Zzzzonzo, Zzzzzyzux, Otto Zzzzzzorf and Axis Zzzzzzz (all from San Francisco). Have we stumbled upon an alphabetic frontier mentality here?

It should be noted that most conspicuously bogus directory listings only remain for a year due to the bevy of crank phone calls that come with the turf. The above, largely taken from 1991 phone books, has proven to be no exception.

Evidently, some cities have multiple residential or business listings vying for the checkered flag. The Manhattan directory lists three multiple-Z last names: Archimedes I. Zzzyandottie, A. Zzzyrmidgeon and Zelmo Zzzzzip.

A few calls to Prof. Zzzyandottie, who didn't win top honors but did take home some lovely parting gifts, revealed that his directory placement actually came by birth and not by choice. (Although the Professor could not be reached directly because he was in South America's Amazon Basin collecting herbal and mushroom samples and speaking with Jordan's King Hussein on the shortwave radio when I phoned his residence. Or so Admiral Spanides of the Rockefeller Institute claimed. I'd try for a joke here, but I really doubt that any lame attempts I could make at hyperbole would even come close to the frightening fact that every last word in these parenthesis is absolutely, entirely and positively true.)

Mr. Zzzzzip, on the other hand, only had himself or at least one very mean dose of illicit chemicals to blame. Yet Zelmo, like many of his multi-Z colleagues, has reacted to the deluge of curious inquisitors by letting his answering machine handle the calls and apparently not speaking to journalists. So be it.

Axis Zzzzzzz of San Francisco proved a more forthcoming subject. Mr. Zzzzzzz, with his seven Z's, came very close to out-distancing every last entry. Yet, it appears the U.S. of A. will have to console itself with another silver medal. (The Canadians will be taking home the gold in this competition. Look for Zeke Zzzzzzzyzuss of Montreal on your Wheaties boxes soon.)

When I spoke with him last week, Axis offered the perspective of a man who has changed names several times in his career. (Fancy that.) Starting off as Z. Zzzonzo he faced stiff competition from six or seven others making 415 by far the toughest area code to play the Z game. Only within the last year has he acquired the Axis Zzzzzzz name.

"I've never had any trouble establishing my bogus listing." Axis encouraged. "It's as simple as calling the phone company and asking for the phone book entry to be your name of choice. What the phone company cares most about is the name on the bill."

Zoltan Zzytwitz of Denver, a private investigator by trade, concurred. "Anyone in my profession doesn't even consider the phone book as a believable source. Hell, Richard Nixon is listed as Gavin Herbert in the San Clemente directory."

Taking a more relaxed attitude about his alias, Mr. Zzytwitz has not been religious about maintaining his status. "I think I'm third to last as of the '92-'93 Denver book."

The Zoltan persona's genesis actually carries back to a party one evening at his alma mater Ohio State. "We just decided that as we dispersed into the world, we would get the last listing in

Turn to VIEWS, page 12

An Irish band full o' rhythm

By ROMIN THOMSON
Collegian Correspondent

Another Love Song
The Frames
Island

After completing a starring role as guitarist Outspan Foster in the hit movie, The Commitments, Glen Hansard has found himself turning down a screen career and instead opting to join a group of talented young musicians and pursue his lifelong dream of playing rock n' roll.

The Frames debut album, Another Love Song, is driven by an explosion of youthful energy that surprisingly maintains the patient texture one would expect to find in more experienced bands.

The popularity of their first single, "The Dancer," allowed the band members to leave their roots in Ireland, where they were becoming a favorite on the Dublin club circuit. As the band toured Europe and America they received acclaim from the music world including being highlighted in Rolling Stone.

Song has been most noted for its innovative and diverse styles. At times, the recording comes across powerfully by delivering high-paced emotion surrounding layers of cutting edge rock. Quite surprising, then, is the richness and depth found on some of the softer tracks.

The Frames, themselves, come from assorted musical backgrounds. They employ a funk bassist (John Carney), a heavy metal drummer (Binzer) and then rely on a "dyed-in-the-wool" Irish fiddler (Colm Mac Con Iomaire) to bring in extra confusion.

Turn to THE FRAMES, page 12

Gornstein's Greats: 20 all-time favorite flicks

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Hey there, movie lovers, and welcome to the final HSCN column ever in publication (save this copy! It'll be a collector's item someday.) However, I'm not reviewing the movies on HSCN this week. Since this is my "Farewell to UMass — I'm Graduating and Outta Here," it was suggested to me that I do a final column on my favorite films. These are not necessarily all four star movies, these are my top 20 choices of movies that I would pop in a VCR at a moment's notice. Pick any of these flicks and you can't go wrong, TRUST ME!!! Have I ever steered you wrong?

SOMETIMES YOU GOTTA LAUGH. . .

National Lampoon's Animal House— John Belushi, Tim Matheson, John Vernon. A prerequisite for any college student, especially on the UMass campus. Well, what the heck, we can pretend we can still have kegs in the fraternity houses, right? As a sorority woman, I know what kind of negative image this movie gives to the Greek area, but you really just gotta laugh anyway!

National Lampoon's Vacation— Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo, Anthony Michael Hall. My God, I have never laughed so hard in a movie as I did when the cop pulled over Chevy Chase and gave him the leash. I'm laughing right now as a matter of fact. Too many classic scenes to mention, but this cross country family vacation will bring a smile to anyone's face.

It Came From Hollywood— Dan Aykroyd, John Candy, Cheech and Chong, Gilda Radner. If you have never seen this one, rent it. My brother and I have seen this movie over 20 times, and we still laugh at the same things over and over again. The comedians narrate and host this tribute to all of the worst 40s and 50s movies ever to come out of Hollywood. Special features include a tribute to Edward Wood, Jr., who gave us such classics as Plane 9 From Outer Space and Glen or Glenda, Hollywood's first look at transvestites.

Airplane!— Robert Hays, Julie Hagerty, Robert Stack. Ah, of course, my favorite Zucker brothers film that you really have to watch a few times to catch every joke. Every scene is a classic, especially Johnny who can make a hat, or a broach, or a pteradactyl. . .

When Harry Met Sally— Billy Crystal, Meg Ryan, Bruno Kirby. Happy love story, amusing comedy, tearjerker, orgasm scene; this one's got it all. I especially love the little anecdotes throughout the movie, and my sorority sister Jen just gets the biggest kick out of the little old Chinese man who talks about his wife.

SOMETIMES YOU GOTTA WATCH A GOOD HORROR MOVIE. . .

The Shining—Jack Nicholson, Shelley Duvall, Danny Lloyd. Very few book-based movies can hold a candle to their books of origin, but this one does a good job, thanks mainly to Jack Nicholson. I don't know about you, but I really think Duvall looks like she's had a face lift pulled way too tight. Sweetie, pop those eyes back in your skull and take an acting lesson or two.

The Exorcist— Linda Blair, Ellen Burstyn, Max von Sydow. Forget the sequels, nothing can come close to the original. Another successful screen adaptation of a novel — this flick will really freak you out. My parents are ultra-liberal, and I wasn't allowed to watch this movie until last week! No, just kidding, but it is a stomach-turner. Guaranteed you'll never eat split-pea soup again.

Halloween— Jamie Lee Curtis, Donald Pleasance, Nancy Loomis. Ah, yes, another one where the sequels are pieces of garbage and should be treated that way. The original is brilliant and very scary. Pleasance has the tendency to overact, but it's a great movie on the whole.

Alien— Sigourney Weaver, Tom Skerrit, John Hurt. It's kind of apt that John's last name is Hurt, because he was doing some major hurting when he gave birth to the baby alien on the kitchenette! Well, I got my wish. . .I always wanted to see a man go through labor, and look! He died. Sheesh.

SOMETIMES YOU GOTTA WATCH A MAFIA MOVIE. . .I DON'T KNOW WHY BUT YOU DO. . .

The Godfather & Godfather II— All the greats, DeNiro, Caan, Pacino. . .need I say more? You can't have one without the other, but forget that piece of crap third one. These two are unbelievable with respect to acting, sceen adaptation of Puzo's novel, cinematography. . .I'm really getting FAHKLEMPT, here! Talk amongst yourselves, please, whilst I make you an offah you can't refuse.

Goodfellas— Ray Liotta, Robert DeNiro, Joe Pesci. Another Mafia film that is absolutely unbelievable with respect to superior acting and plot. The music is superb, the directing is fantastic, Joe Pesci is unreal. It's just an amazing film all around.

SOMETIMES YOU GOTTA WATCH A FILM YOU KNOW IS GOING TO REQUIRE BOXES OF KLEENEX. . .

The Pride of the Yankees— Gary Cooper, Teresa Wright, Babe Ruth. I went over all of these movies that I picked with my dad, King Movie Buff, and he asked me what I was going to say in my review of this one. "Uh. . .best movie ever made about a sports guy." He laughed, but hey, it's true! Lou Gehrig IS dead, and this is the best sports tribute movie I have ever seen. And yes, I cry every time.

The Elephant Man— Anthony Hopkins, John Hurt, Anne Bancroft. I had no idea that this movie was made in 1980 since I saw it in black and white. Director David Lynch has made a touching movie about the horribly deformed John Merrick who is mistreated all his life until a kind doctor takes care of him.

Movies adored by Jamie but not reviewed are Escape from Alcatraz, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, Who Framed Roger Rabbit?, and Gulag under the heading "Sometimes you gotta watch movies with some substance so you can impress people." Other Gornstein greats include Blazing Saddles and Silence of the Lambs.

PERSONAL PROTECTION
NO GUNS! NO MACE!
NO LICENSE!
$29.95
A & C SERVICES
1-800-945-4939
2141 BOSTON RD. WILBRAHAM, MA

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
236 WHITMORE

Is there something you would like to say before graduating?

You are invited to submit proposals for consideration as the

STUDENT COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Eligibility:	Graduating UMass-Amherst senior.
Format:	Submit not more than three word-processed or typewritten pages, double spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Subject Matter:	Text should concern higher education, and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Director, Disability Services, (non-voting Committee Chair), 231 Whitmore, 545-0892
Selection Process:	A committee of students (majority), faculty, and staff, will review proposals. Authors' names will have been deleted to ensure objectivity. Ratings will be assigned. Selected authors will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March). A final selection will then be made by the committee.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 17, 1993, 4:30 p.m.
For additional information:	Paul R. Appleby, Selection Committee Chair, 231 Whitmore, 5-0892.

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
236 WHITMORE

Undergraduate Commencement
Bachelor's Degree Candidates
Preliminary Information

The Commencement ceremony for Bachelor's Degree candidates will be on Sunday, May 23, 1993, 10:30 a.m., at Alumni Stadium, rain or shine. It will end at approximately 11:45 a.m.

Undergraduates who will complete their degree requirements in February, 1993, and those who anticipate completing them by May or September, 1993, are eligible to participate.

If you are unsure of your academic status or have questions in this regard, please immediately contact a member of the "Senior Staff," Records Office, 207 Whitmore.

Further details about the ceremony and related activities will be provided in a brochure to be mailed to you and your parents in February or early March. Included, among other things, will be information about:

- Caps, gowns, tassels, and announcement cards
- Disability Services
- Parking and shuttle services
- Recommended routes to campus
- Seating for graduates
- Seating for guests
- Where to assemble on Commencement day

Please note that invitations and tickets are not required.

The last issue of the "Collegian" in May will provide further, important details. It will be especially important that you obtain this edition since there is no rehearsal prior to the ceremony.

Information about the speaker and honorary degree recipients will be available in May.

For further information, please contact the Visitors Center, 545-0306, or Student Affairs Special Services, 545-3480. Commencement updates will be posted on the bulletin board outside 236 Whitmore.

Congratulations to all concerned

■ The Frames

continued from page 10

As vocalist Glen Hansard puts it, "The great thing about this band is that we're all so different (and) somehow when we all get together it sounds amazing."

The Frames are at their best when producing intimate moments of weightlessness. Hansard vocals are thoughtful and he is able to display his thoughts in a loosely bound way. The greatest example of this is found in the albums most honest effort, "Downhill From Here," in which Hansard promotes a playful sense of irresponsibility. ("We'll throw our thoughts over the pier/and send it all into the mire/ and wait there till it all disappears.")

Throughout the recording Hansard uses his forceful voice to take control of the tracks. He sings nervously, like a mumbling soap box preacher who will emphasize his recurring theme and ramble loosely through the filler.

He uses no subtlety in his approach, but then subtlety has never been a prominent characteristic of Irish music. He does rely on his roots to promote emotional screams which reflect his Irish culture's virtue of everlasting pride that has survived through generations despite impossible odds.

The same can be said of the entire band. On some songs such as "Before You Go," the group buries its straightforward rhythms behind a soft opening that creates ominous mood. Then, following the building strength from the vocalist, they release a full range of energy that reflects their restlessness.

The album overall, is excellent. The band is not afraid at any point to let pure emotion flow through the rhythms. It was this power that lead the Melody Maker, an English music weekly to proclaim that the "Frames have the charm, the songs and star quality to win the most indifferent heart."

The Frames show great promise for the future if they can maintain the delicate balance that spawns from their diversity.

COURTESY ISLAND RECORDS

THE FRAMES — Promising new band elicits emotional Irish rhythms on their latest compact disc from Polygram's Island Records.

■ Views

continued from page 10

our local directories so it would be easy to keep track of each other. For a while, whenever I'd go to another city, I'd call up the last person in the book and usually we'd have something in common even if they weren't from Ohio State."

As a P.I., he's benefited from the anonymous curtain that the name provides. "The only callers who ask to speak with [real name] are clients and friends." Noted a confident James Howard. . .er. . . Zzytwitz.

Since he's also had experience with scams and con jobs, he's been known to play games with sleazy telemarketing firms trying to elbow their way into the public's wallet. "Every now and then, I'll get a call asking to speak with Mrs. Zzytwitz. I always order lots of everything they're selling and ask them to send a bill along with the shipment. Unless they can get your signature or credit card number, you see, you have no legal obligation to pay for anything. When they call back asking for money, I just say something like, 'Well, Jesus told Mrs. Zzytwitz not to pay up.'"

I asked Zoltan for any advice he might have for young telephone mischief-makers. He replied, "First of all the Eden Press Catalog— out of San Diego I believe— has literally volumes of tips on the workings of Ma Bell's networks as well as tales of the many cons that have been pulled in the 100-year history of the telephone. Although," He hastened to add, "Once a con has made it into print, most of the pros have dropped it and moved on to something else."

The Collegian's got guts.

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton • Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Now Renting for January
Spacious Two Bedroom
Apartments on Bus Line
$400/Month
Call KAMINS REAL ESTATE
at 253-2515

It's time for...
ACRONYMBLE
Don't forget to submit your creative entries. 113 C. C.
This week's precious letters:
E - M - I - L - Y

$44.
ts silk shirts silk
★ 100% silk shirts from BASIX in 15 HOT COLORS
★ Machine wash & dry
J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-2013
22 Masonic St., Northampton 586-6336
Open seven days & many nights

Winter Session 1993
January 4-25
Yes, you can!
REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.
SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.
SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.
OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.
EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!
REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.
CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.
Division of Continuing Education

COMING OUT
December 10
7:00 - 9:00
at
The U. Mass. Campus Center, Room 101
Amherst, MA
Coming Out is developing a positive identity as a lesbian or gay man. The crises of each stage of coming out are complicated by chemical dependency. Gays addicted to alcohol or drugs confront the double stigma of addictions and sexual identity.
For more information please call
Program for Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Concerns, U. Mass. 413/545-4824
The Regent Hospital (800) 8-REGENT

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

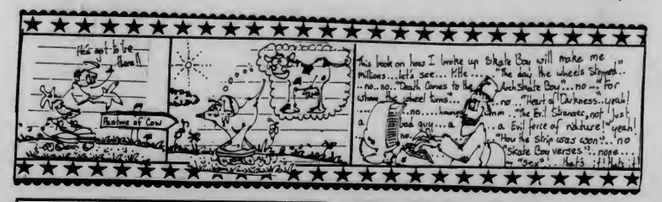
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY & RURU By PITT



"In this dramatic turn of events, testimony against Mr. Pumpkineater is about to be given by his sister, Jeannie Jeannie Eatszucchini."

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Quote of the Day

"I like people who refuse to speak until they are ready to speak."

–Lillian Hellman

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 20-April 19): Someone you you did not wish to see could suddenly appear. If you invest on always having your own way, look out. Your phenomenal memory can be a real asset in business negotiations.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A conflict or interest could arise on the career front. Work things out peacefully, avoiding direct confrontation. Take whatever steps you think necessary to protect an important relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your hunches are right on target. Avoid pressing on a philosophical issue. A friend gives you valuable insights. If traveling today, anticipate delays.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hidden job hardships may surface now to challenge you. You can work things through if you stay calm. Read about natural foods and alternative medicine.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Extra legwork or research will bring you closer to an important goal. Trust your feelings; they guide you in beneficial directions at opportune times.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You radiate confidence and charm today. Reach out to someone who appears shy or ill at ease. An influential person is in your corner. Roadblocks disappear; you are given the "all clear" sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your sixth sense points to higher business profits today. Gifts to a favorite older sibling have special meaning. Get plenty of rest and you'll feel better soon.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your ESP is the beacon to follow today. With alluring vibes you are emitting, you will have more admirers than you thought possible. For extra income, look into a home-based business.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your private plans progress quickly. Keep your financial dealings confidential. Domestic harmony is easier to maintain if you do not insist on being right all the time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your keen insights can enrich your relationship with a key person now. You know the right words to say and when to act. A financial agreement favors you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not let groundless fears run your life. A positive, confident manner will take you where you want to go. Stop living by the clock and allow spontaneity a place on your agenda.

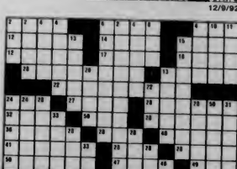
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could be planning on making this an unusually productive day. Seek your associate's cooperation early on. You may need to make special preparations.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Featured character in work by 6 Down
5 German river
9 See 1 Across
12 Love, to Miterand
14 — contendere
15 Charles Lamb
16 Westminster Abbey headdress
17 Sir, in Malaysia
18 Gumshoe
19 Hold back
21 Locations
22 Church part
24 Before DEF
27 Gymnast Korbut
28 Kept poker hand going
32 Assistance
34 Main Street tree
35 Nap
36 "Butterfield 8" author
38 Muscality
40 Trap
41 Quiz show participants
43 Desire
45 Small nail
46 Sword-shaped
47 Book of the Bible
49 Drell org.
50 Stone columns
53 Croats' foes
56 Like blackbirds or larks
59 Catch-all abbr.
60 Device for 6 Down
61 Ham it up
63 "Rule Britannia" composer
64 Place for a beret
65 1, 9 and 66 Across were little ones
66 See 1 Across
67 Commedia dell'—
68 Tanager's home

DOWN
1 Comic strip sound
2 Mideast ruler
3 Carryall
4 Author Fanny
5 Snarl
6 Subject of this puzzle
7 Mont —
8 A long time
9 Came to earth
10 Cheese lovers
11 Siberian sources of butter
13 Type of rocket
15 Issues
20 Breathing sound
21 Bridge parts
23 Hesitant sounds
24 "Hasn't —" lutile
25 Playwright Brendan
26 Tartan wearers
29 Afternoon entertainments
30 Pound and Stone
31 Legal documents
33 Constitution part
37 Choir section members
39 Check receiver
42 D.C. VIP
44 Renown
48 Petrucho's Kate
51 SS Valdez, e.g.
52 Paul or Carly
53 Garmoni part
54 To be, in Paris
55 Pealed
57 Alaskan city
58 Nice summers
60 School gp.
62 Tolksen being

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



12/9/92

©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 12/9/92

Today's Staff
Night Editrix ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Christina Rothwell
PhotoTechnician ..... Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor ..... Alan Blagg
Production ..... Mike Carvalho, Jim Ganley, Lisa Jezowski

Menu
LUNCH
Tuna Noodle Casserole
Hamburger
BASICS LUNCH
Tuna Noodle Casserole
"Golden" Burger
HOLIDAY DINNER
Breaded Chicken Breast
Supreme or Cranberry
Rib Roast of Beef Au Jus
BASICS
Stuffed Baked Eggplant

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Women swimmers show improvement at A10s

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Staff

After four challenging days of A-10 competition, the UMass women's swimming and diving team returned early Monday morning from Rutgers University fatigued...but smiling.

Despite their final 5th place finish out of 6 teams, great swimming was achieved by all as the team proved to show its strength in many events. Virtually every swimmer landed a season best and the team was able to defeat URI, the only team in the A-10 conference that the Minutewomen will meet with again.

This was the first time the A-10 offered a conference meet. After a blind entrance into the meet and without knowing what to expect except fast paced competition from such powerhouses as West Virginia, St. Bonaventure, George Washington and Rutgers, the Minutewomen surfaced with new found confidence and strength.

The A-10 conference gave head coach Bob Newcomb a chance to see how the Minutewomen would hold up to first rate teams over a weekend of strenuous, double session competition. This provided Newcomb insight on how the team may respond to the end of the season New England meet.

"They decided they were going to swim well this weekend and they did," said Newcomb. "A majority of our swims were faster at night than in the morning. This shows that our team can get back up after a strenuous day."

Brown University transfer Julie Veremey had an explosive weekend, placing 3rd in the 200-yard butterfly (2:08.51), and 6th in the 400-yard individual medley. Her 200 fly not only won her a medal but a new UMass record.

"This is one of the best groups I've swam with," said Veremey. "The team has a lot of great personality. Everyone is there for you so you get psyched up to swim."

Junior Kim Broad and freshman Jessica Griffith also made it to the finals. Broad landed 8th place in the 500-yard freestyle and the 400-yard individual medley, while Griffith took 8th place in the 200-yard breastroke.

Freshman Sarah Baker continued to sprint towards improvement pulling off three lifetime bests in the 50, 100 and 200-yard freestyles. Junior Kate Riddell also achieved her lifetime bests in the 400-yard individual medley and 100-yard backstroke, accomplishing both bests within the same day.

The Minutewomen dominated to squeeze out both GWU and URI in the 200-yard freestyle relay, courtesy of sophomore Jenn Sheehan, Griffith, junior Amy Lewis and Baker.

The team's 400-yard medley relay (4:08.73), swam by co-captain Edwardsen, Griffith, Veremey and Baker, stretched within less than one second of claiming a new UMass meet record. "That was the first time we've been under a 4:11 since we set the record in '89," said Newcomb.

Commitment and hard work also paid off for juniors Michelle Munyon, Amy Lewis, Stefanie Souto and Carolyn Curran. All accomplished lifetime and season bests in their corresponding events.

The diving squad, led by junior Allison White, soared to the finals, landing 3rd, 6th and 7th places on the 1-meter springboard by White, sophomore Deirdre May and freshman Amanda Moynihan respectively. White received her second medal when she again placed 3rd on the 3-meter board.

"The A-10s were a good test for us," says co-captain Edwardsen. "It was the first time we tapered during mid-season and the meet showed us what we need to work on for New Englands."

"It was good for us to see teams outside of the New England area," said co-captain Teresa Konieczny. "I think we saw somewhat of a glimpse of what we'll see at

■ goalies

continued from page 16

and nerves of steel and rise up through the juniors or the colleges to become the next Ken Dryden.

The fates have to be smiling pretty wide and pretty long to make a legend like Dryden, or Bernie Parent or Gerry Cheevers. Fact is, most goalies have only one or two "great" years before succumbing to mediocrity. Others are competent with a good team in front of them, but put them behind a lousy defense and you get a sieve so wide you could strain spaghetti with it.

With that in mind, let's separate the great goalies from the mediocre as we go traipsing around the NHL this week.

Patrick Roy, Montreal. a couple bad playoffs do not a career ruin, and if Roy can continue on the same pace for another four or five years he could be mentioned in the same breath as Dryden, a Canadien legend in his own right. Roy's current stats include a scant 2.80 goals against average. That's not bad by itself; considering Roy has faced 1,327 shots in 22 games, that's amazing.

Ed Belfour, Chicago. Rule one: a hot goaltender can take a team far in the Stanley Cup playoffs. Belfour was in one of those zones last spring — the kind legends are made of — and a Chicago team which sleptwalked through much of the regular season landed in the Cup final against Pittsburgh.

Belfour has remarkable reflexes, especially for a "butterfly" goalie (so named because he falls to his knees on saves, then returns to a standing position). In previous years, Belfour played virtually all the time. Now that he has a backup in Jimmy Waite, Belfour can get some much-needed rest and have the long career that could make him a legend.

Grant Fuhr, Toronto. Fuhr was one of the most dominating goaltenders of the 1980s. But drug problems and run-ins with Edmonton Oilers management sent him packing to Toronto. A fate worse than death.

Injuries and time have slowed Fuhr down. He used to dominate from the net in Edmonton, but age and a lesser team took a potential legend and made him a has-been. He's not even the number one goalie in Toronto. That distinction belongs to Felix Potvin (7-6-3, 2.79 GAA).

Which brings us to Fuhr's former back-up, Boston's own Andy Moog. Dandy Andy pulled out a mini-slide this past week with a 4-0-0 record, bringing him into last night's tumble at Buffalo with a 13-4-2 record and a 3.27 goals-against average. Moog has proved himself, with Edmonton and with Boston. Like Roy and Belfour, Moog could become a legend.

Greg Sukiennik wishes you a happy hockey holiday.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 15

against Northeastern.

For the Wildcats, it all starts with junior guard Marcie Lane. Lane averages 17 points a game, including a scorching 7 for 10 from three point land. O'Brien said Lane is someone UMass has to deal with.

"She [Lane] is a great penetrator, she gets to the basket," she said. "So we're going to have to pay a lot of attention to her.

Up front senior Deb Russell is the main contributor for UNH. Russell averages 15 points and 7.7 rebounds a game. The other frontcourt stalwart for UNH is senior Kendall Daly. Daly is a jack-of-all trades who averages 13.3 points, 5.7 rebounds, and 4.3 assists a game. For someone who handles the ball a lot Daly rarely turns the ball over (.7 turnovers a game).

O'Brien said she thinks that the UMass-UNH game will be a good one.

"They are a veteran team, they are a real solid ballclub," O'Brien said. "I think it will be a good matchup."

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

FOR ALL UNDERGRADUATE & GRADUATE STUDENTS

1993-94 FINANCIAL AID APPLICATION PROCESS

The Federal government has mandated several changes which impact upon the 1993-1994 financial aid application process. THE APPLICATION PROCESS HAS CHANGED. The University of Massachusetts at Amherst will ONLY require the "Free Application for Federal Student Aid" (FAFSA). This application is FREE and will be available in late December or early January. A supplemental form WILL NOT be required by the University. The FAFSA cannot be filed before January 1 and MUST be filed BEFORE March 1, 1993 to receive priority consideration for financial aid at UMASS/Amherst. When completing this form, please be certain to indicate the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA in Section G to ensure that the University receives your information.

Please retain copies of 1992 federal tax returns because you may be asked to submit them to support your application. Do not submit tax returns or any other documents until you are specifically requested to do so.

Provided your application is filed on time (before March 1, 1993) and your file is complete, you should receive a response from Financial Aid Services by June, 1993.

Minutewomen hit road looking for second win

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Youth vs. experience.

That is the matchup tonight at 6:30 p.m. when the University of Massachusetts (1-2) women's basketball team travels to Durham, New Hampshire to meet the University of New Hampshire Wildcats.

The Minutewomen represent the youth in the above equation as three of the five starters for UMass are freshmen. UNH (1-2), on the other hand, has experience galore with three seniors and two juniors in the lineup.

For UMass the key could be poise and execution. Head coach Joannie O'Brien said she hopes that the Minutewomen can control the game.

"I think most of our problems have come with execution," she said. "We're going to have to come down (the court) and execute and do what we can do, then we will have a shot to vin."

"We've got to be able, right now, to start putting people away," O'Brien said. "That has been the problem so far [this season]."

The strength of the UMass team lies in its frontcourt. Freshman center Melissa Gurile leads the squad in scoring and rebounding with 20.7 points and 8.3 rebounds a game. Senior power forward Kim Kristofik came on strong in the PALS tournament over the past weekend and is currently averaging 16.7 points and 6.0 rebounds a game.

The other starter up front for the Minutewomen is freshman Octavia Thomas. Thomas is the third leading scorer on the team and the only other one in double figures. Thomas is averaging 12.3 points and 7.3 rebounds a game. O'Brien said Thomas is getting better acclimated to the college game.

"I think Octavia is starting to feel her way into it," she said. "She [Octavia] is starting to get more involved with the offense, and that is what I am looking for."

In the backcourt junior Laurie Dondarski will be back at the point guard position. Dondarski is averaging six assists a game. Freshman Kim Gregory is starting at the off-guard spot for UMass. O'Brien said Gregory could be a key for the Minutewomen.

"Kim has got to step up and shoot the ball," she said. "That will allow us to keep them [the UNH defense] spread out."

UMass will be without valuable swingman Maleeka Valentine, who suffered a bad ankle sprain in the opener

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 14

All I Want For Christmas Is A SPRING BREAK VACATION
1-800-2-CANCUN
$75 Deposit Will Hold Your Seat
from $449
Book Now!!
CAMPUS GET-AWAYS

QUIET
If you're tired of yelling this, Come and see us
The Brook
253-2834

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

D.P. Dough
Delivers Calzones
call 256-1616
Now Open at 11:30 A.M.
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones

NORTHAMPTON BOWL
Thursday Night College Special
3 Games for $5.00
Offer Valid with College I.D.
525 Pleasant St, Northampton, MA 01060 • (413) 584-2491

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Need a locker? We have them at OCHO 428 Student Union

100% Recycled wrapping paper and holiday cards. Dec. 7,8, + 9th Campers Center Concourse.

PVOC Oil Coop Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. Register at OCHO 428 Student Union or call 545-0865 Save money and stay warm Come join now

Student Renters and landlords should stop by the off campus housing office to pick up the latest landlord/tenant guide, its free and an absolute must. For all your housing questions call 5-0865 or stop by

Subletting over Wintersession? The off-campus Housing Office at 428 Student Union offers a great way to find subletting or sublet e property over wintersession. All leasing questions answered with a smile. Call 5-0865 or stop by

AUTO FOR SALE

Nissen 83 runs good
Needs some work $750
Call 665-4655 Leave Message

TRADE 83 Nissen pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fell Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.00
1 or 2 toppings add $1.00
Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098
549-6073
MUST MENTION THIS SPECIAL

FOR RENT

Amherst Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes call 586-4270

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. Room avail. $275+ 1 bedroom apartment avail.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

Leverett – close to campus – room in sunny home in exchange for 12 hours of childcare per week plus some light housekeeping duties. Must be available for early morning (7 am–8:30 am) and some afternoons (3:30–5 pm) Car essential some transporting of children. 548-9366

New York City – Furnished rooms and apartments for intersession and weekend stays. Upper West side. Reasonable rates. 212-662-1358 Save this ad!

NORTHAMPTON – two 4 room houses avail. Dec. – Jan. $775-800. Skibiski Realators No Pets. 584-3428

One bedroom apt.
Southwood
362/month
256-4977

One big bedroom in Suderland house take over my lease Available now 230.00 month + 665-4348 or 968-4323
On bus line

Single room for rent – Half mile to campus, on bus line, for 260/mo incl. utils. Jan. rent free – call 549-6114

Single room Phillips St. $185+
Call 549-1458

Take over Brendywine lease 2 bedrooms incs. heat and hot water, great location $750/month starts end of Jan.1 Call Lori or Laura 549-4816

2 rooms available in 2bed in Amherst 220/clean/bus/ASAP call Holly 549-4289

3 bedrooms available in a spacious house in Suderland Spring Semester on bus route Call 665-0265 190.00/mo.+

FOR SALE

Amiga 52 MB HD, 4 MB fast IMB Chip RAM, W/ECS $599 w/out $499 /B.O. Raymund 367-9269

Fish–African Cichlid
And Accessories
Call Tim
546-5361
Price Negotiable

LOLLIPOPS FOR HOLIDAY GIVING
Inexpensive hard candy pops!
You choose color, flavor, shape
863-2126

Neon light for sale! Great Xmas gift. 100 dollars or B.O. call Jay 546-0890

Rhygin MTB Frame
19" True Temper OX2
Super-light fast handling
Custom Handbuilt in USA
New Cond. CHEAP
Pete 253-2154

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 5450 O.B.O

HAPPYANNIVERSARYLOVE

Heppy one year anniversary!
I love you very, very, very much
We have many more years ahead
J

HELP!

Desperately need PHISH tix for New Year's.
Call Eric 546-0279

HELP WANTED

Babysitter – Afternoons, January-June need car and references. 548-9096

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.Call 1-800-351-ESTA ask for Bonnie

Would you like to work? At Hampshire county transit part time drivers will train for evenings and weekends earn up to $10.05 per hour starting rate $8.50 have company paid insurance, paid holidays, paid vacations, paid sick days paid funeral leave. Apply to: Hampshire County Transit 54 Industrial Drive Northampton, MA 01060

HOLIDAY GIFTS

Go to Basho's bargain basement. They have oriental rugs, clothing, and also great jewelry. As an added feature, their jewelry is half off, that's right, half off! Go down and pick out your gift for the holidays, everything is priced just right. 241 Main St. Northampton, MA Their stuff is good – Thank you

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

LOST

Keys, campus center concourse 12/5/92 Blue Keyring "Windener University" Big bucks reward call 545-0008

Lost watch with braided leather band 12/7 between NE and Mahar. Sentimental Value. Reward 546-1171

MUSICIANS

Drummer needed: Phish, creative Improv 256-8115

Keyboardist Wanted: Yes, Phish, etc. 586-8377

PERSONALS

Dan–
Congratulations on your job!
Guess you'll have to work on the Driban Control now
We're going to miss you!
Love, 315

Dori, Lisa, and Daryl, thanks for my B-day. Most important though, thanks for being such wonderful friends. Love, Tammy Fear, fear fear! The eve of our doom has arrived. The walrus was Paul Pon for your life. Don't ask me why, I don't know. Senseless lives will end in abrupt fassion. My head is stuck in a p lus bowl and I can't breathe. Thank you DP Dough, can I have another. No you may not. Suffer.

Gorman Hall houses magnificent strangers, lost in the early morning

Hey Brian C. of Crabtree
The bubble bath was fun!!! Let's do it again soon !! I really miss you!
Misty

Jen Phillips
M-I-C See ya later
K-E-Y Why? Because you're great!!
M-O-U-S-E Have fun!
Love, Donna

To Rich who works at the Collegian: Buy your own damn gas and while you're at it, take some bowling lessons!
He-He-He

To Mark or Marc who helped me with my car on Friday: You saved my life – I can't thank you enough! You are definitely an angel! Thanks again – Kathy Welcome to sisterhood Jenn C. You finished the first steps and now you are here. You deserve this. I am proud of you.

Sigma Love
Marny

PETE'S DRIVE IN

Pete's Drive In
December Special
2 burgers for 2 bucks
you.

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back bit considerate individuals. Please call 508 228-6265

Female nonsmoker looking for a rm to sublet during intersession please call Nancy 546-0256

ROOMATES WANTED

Amherst 2 bedroom apt f room for rent 2 bitl baths w/heat and hot water included on bus route available immediately. Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Apt room for rent
Uptown – 2 minutes from bus stop m/f $200+ 549-2810
A stumble home from bars

Female Housemate Wanted
To share a large house in Amherst many extras- Washer & Dryer, porch +++ more Close to town and campus
Call Scott at 253-3815 after 3 pm

Female nonsmoker wanted to share bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Cheap rent 2 minute walk to town (on bus rt) walking distance to campus 253-5219

Fun but serious fem student looking for roomate Amherst house 195+ starts Spring sem & 1642 for details

Housemates needed male, female. Great house across street from campus. Many great features. Call Jason, 549-8341

Male roomate needed to share large bedroom. 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

One female
Brandywine apts
Start Jan 93
$190 inc. Heat/water
Jen 549-7845

Roomates needed call Mill Valley estates 253-7377Single or double for 1 bedroom

Single room avail. in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo.+

Single room available in 3 bedroom townhouse apartments. Call 549-3523.

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The legal services center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center 545-1995

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 256-8393

TO SUBLET

1 bdrm. apt Brandywine move in now $475 (includes heat) mins from campus 548-1368 545-3018

Two rooms for winter sublet in Amherst house. $250. 256-6367

Wintersession room South Amherst $220 inclusive 256-0034

TRAVEL

SKI-Intercollegiate Ski weeks, ONLY $209 Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDO)/5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Molson and MT. SUTTON, CANADA (just across the Vermont border) Group Leader Discounts Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Spring Break '93 Call Ski Travel Unlimited
1-800-999-SKI-9

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $$$ Before Jan. 1
Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers typed – free cover page, spell check $1.50/page Brian 546-1795

Typing. By Pro Writer. Fast. 253-9123

Typing: Fast, accurate – and conveniently located to serve your needs. No job too small. Reasonable rates. Contact Donna/Dianne 542-2313

Typing/Wordprocessing,
Resumes, reports, theses
Laser printing. Campus pick-up and delivery
Call Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

I need a car. Do you want to sell yours? If it hasn't been around since WWII, isn't threatening to explode, and is in good working shape (I don't care about outer beauty) CALL ME. Brooke @ The Collegian 545-0719

Tutor for Econ 104
Will pay $ Call Tim 549-8177

Sports

Minutemen down Saints, 70-58

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

ALBANY, N.Y. — The University of Massachusetts basketball team broke the .500 mark for the first time this season by breaking free from a pesky Siena College squad with eight minutes left and winning 70-58 last night in Albany.

UMass (2-1) was able to take care of business down the stretch by turning a close game into a blow-out. Up by four points with less than eight minutes left, the Minutemen sealed things with a 19-4 run. Tony Barbee (15 points, eight rebounds) stepped up big for the first time all year, both on offense and defense.

After forward Lee Matthews (14 points, 17 rebounds) beat Lou Roe for a lay-in and foul shot to cut the UMass lead to 48-44 with 7:53 left, Barbee went to work down low.

"I've been playing good on the wing, but I think the strength of my game is my post play," Barbee said. "And when they started doubling on Harper [Williams] and Lou, the coaches put me back down low."

Barbee made two great moves with his face to his defender, the first of which was complemented with a foul shot that made the game 51-44 in UMass' favor. Barbee's second inside move upped the game to 53-46 after a Doremus Bennerman up-and-under score, and Siena had to regroup.

After the Saints took time-out UMass got inside production from Roe, Jerome Malloy, Malloy again (plus a foul shot), and Barbee with two clutch foul shots. The free throws put UMass up 62-48 with 3:04 left.

Where was Siena's offense now? It was stifled by Barbee and company on defense. The Saints were forced to take bad shots down 14 points with time running out, because Barbee was guarding mad bomber Mike Brown too effectively.

"I think I played a real good game, especially on defense," Barbee said. "I did something I've been working on, which is stopping the small guards, and I was also able to bang with the big guys down low."

With yet another strong defensive effort, UMass ran the clock down to 2:04 before Roe laid in Harper Williams' miss. A missed 3-point attempt by Siena (1-3) sent Mike Williams down the floor, open to hit the 3-pointer which would end the incredible run and give the Minutemen a 67-48 lead with 1:15 left.

"I told you I would be happy if we won by two points and a half-court shot," said UMass coach John Calipari. "Other than that big run we had, this game was even. Credit Siena, they played a great game, and Mike Deane outcoached me."

What made the finish even more remarkable was that Harper Williams, who had 21 points, was sitting on the bench during the run. UMass did it without the 6-foot-6 forward, who had 15 points after the first half. Williams' patented left hook worked again and again down low early in the game, but Siena charged back with Matthews and Bennerman leading the way, and UMass had a scant 29-28 lead at the half.

Williams was done scoring with 14:59 left, but his dunk capped a prolific output. Williams was not a factor down the stretch because he sat down with four fouls with 8:36 still remaining.

It was lucky thing the team broke through when they did. Siena gave UMass fits with runs of 12-6 and 8-3 of their own. Siena coach Deane said he was proud of his team's ability to stay close.

"We have nothing to be ashamed of," he said. "UMass is a better team than Florida State. They're tougher to score on, they play tougher defense. Florida State plays just hard enough defense to get by. Against UMass, every shot today was a labor."

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN

Sophomore guard Mike Williams, shown earlier in the season, scored eight points last night as the University of Massachusetts basketball team downed Siena 70-58.

The WHMP-FM Game Summary

Massachusetts 29 - 41 70
Siena 28 - 30 58

Massachusetts (70)
Barbee 3-10 9-12 15, H. Williams 7-14 7-7 21, Malloy 4-5 1-2 10, Kellogg 2-3 0-0 5, Roe 3-7 2-2 8, M. Williams 3-11 0-0 8, K. Robinson 1-3 0-0 2, Dingle 0-0 1-2 1, Totals: 23-53 20-25 70.

Siena (58)
Bennerman 5-13 3-5 15, Matthews 6-10 2-5 14, Brown 4-12 2-2 11, McKinney 2-4 0-0 4, Bidlingmyer 1-1 0-0 2, Graf 0-0 2-2 2, White 2-2 0-0 6 Downing 2-6 0-1 4, Ryder 0-1 0-0 0, Totals: 22-51 9-15 58.

Three-Point Goals: UMass 4-10 (Barbee 0-2, Malloy 1-2, Kellogg 1-2, M. Williams 2-4). Siena 5-11 (Bennerman 2-4, Brown 1-3, White 2-2, Downing 0-2). Rebounds: UMass 34 (Roe 13). Siena 33 (Matthews 17). Assists: UMass 9 (Kellogg 4). Siena 10 (Bennerman 5). Attendance: 8,218.

Player of the Game

Harper Williams, 6-7 Sr. Forward

University of Massachusetts forward Harper Williams scored a team-high 21 points, 15 of them in the first half. Williams, last season's Atlantic 10 Player-of-the-Year grabbed two rebounds and played tough defense in helping the Minutemen record the season's second win.

Why UMass won

A late second half run of 19-4 put the game safely in the UMass win column. The Minutemen played tenacious defense down the stretch and recieved some big hoops from Tony Barbee and Jerome Malloy.

UMass' next opponent

The Oklahoma Sooners are up next for John Calipari and company on Saturday night at 8:30 p.m. in Norman, OK. The Sooners will be out to exact revenge on UMass, as it was last year that the Minutemen stunned Oklahoma 86-73 in front of a national ESPN audience. The win vaulted UMass into the Top 25 and came in front of 8,469 at the sold-out Springfield Civic Center. The Sooners are presently ranked 11th in the country and sport a 2-0 record on the still-young 1992-93 campaign.

Catch all the Minutemen's Basketball Games – Home and Away – on the New 99.3 WHMP-FM!
99 POINT 3
WHMP-FM
Join us live from Rafters each Wednesday from 6-7 p.m. for the John Calipari Radio Show.

Williams drops 21, still displeased

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

ALBANY, N.Y. — For most of the preseason University of Massachusetts basketball coach John Calipari said his center, Harper Williams, was playing with neither the heart nor the passion he did last season.

Calipari said if Williams did not find the drive which made him the Atlantic 10 Player of the Year last year, he would not be much of a help to the Minutemen.

Last night, Williams made a step in the proper direction by burning Siena for 21 points but he admits he still has a long way to go.

"The points don't really matter to me," Williams said. "I did not rebound well tonight. If I rebound well than I play well. If not I'm not doing my job. The scoring is secondary."

Williams ended the night with only two rebounds while his Siena counterpart, 6-foot-7 Lee Matthews grabbed 17.

"Harper had only two rebounds while Matthews had 17," Calipari said. "That's not good."

"We are supposed to be one of the best rebounding teams in the nation. So what does that make Siena?"

Siena coach Mike Deane said Williams played a solid game but Matthews was up to the challenge.

"Harper had 21 but he wasn't the difference tonight," Deane said. "He's a real good player, definitely the A-10 player of the year, but Lee steps up against top competition."

Despite the rebounding differential, Williams carried the Umass offense in the first half, scoring six of the team's first eight and ending the half with fifteen.

His offense was highlighted by a baseline drive which he finished with a thunderous, double pump jam giving UMass a 40-34 lead.

Williams, coming off an 18-point, 11-rebound performance against Central Connecticut, still does not think he has reached mid-season form.

"I just have to keep working hard and the play will come," Williams said. "I definitely have to start taking charge of the team, offensively, rebounding wise, and as a leader."

Calipari said, "Harper is only good if he works hard. If he's battling and diving for loose balls he's a very good player. If not he's just an average guy."

Williams points to Saturday's game against No. 11 Oklahoma as a possible breaking out date.

"I have to redeem myself for not rebounding well tonight," Willaims said. "I feel I can do that against Oklahoma.

"Oklahoma is definitely going to be a battle, and I have to perform. It will be a good challenge for me."

NHL's best: Netminders

Greg SUKIENNIK

You're stuck in front of a net, covered head to toe in cumbersome pads, with only an oversized stick to protect you. It's your job to stop every three-inch piece of hard rubber that comes your way, some of it at speeds nearing 100 MPH. Half the time you can't see it until it's right in front of your face.

What's more, if you can't do this, they get someone else. Such is the life of the NHL goaltender.

In youth hockey leagues, coaches put the chubby kid who can't skate between the pipes. If the fates are smiling, the chubby kid who can't skate will grow out of the baby fat, develop cat-like reflexes

Turn to GOALIES, page 14

Thursday December 10, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 62

Highs in the frigid 30s. Strong chance of snow later.

This Weekend:
The event of the semester FINALly comes to Amherst. The long awaited return of FINALS, playing at the UMass campus. Shows run from Dec. 16 through Dec. 22. Page W1.

Sports:
Despite the coming of winter, thoughts of baseball should warm fans. The Red Sox sign slugger Andre Dawson for two years. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

U.S. forces stay course in Somalia

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. commanders in Somalia are monitoring intelligence reports of fighting among rival clans in outlying areas but expect no delay in expanding operations beyond Mogadishu, senior Pentagon officers said yesterday.

Lt. Gen. Martin L. Brandtner, who is overseeing the operation in the office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told reporters at the Pentagon that the 1,700 Marines in Mogadishu were preparing to seize their next objective: Baidoa, an outpost in the center of the famine zone 200 miles northwest of the capital.

The chief of intelligence for the Joint Chiefs, Rear Adm. Michael W. Cramer, said there had been factional fighting in recent days in several towns where U.S. troops are headed later in the operation to provide security for relief supplies.

Cramer estimated that the four major factions in Somalia have between 12,000 and 28,000 men under arms. Their weapons include mortars, 107mm recoilless guns, rocket launchers, 7.62mm machine guns, 105mm artillery pieces, anti-aircraft missiles and many smaller arms such as AK-47s and grenades.

"Our assessment of no organized resistance in Mogadishu is holding," he said, adding that it was too early to know whether there would be opposition elsewhere.

Brandtner said that by Thursday, the commander of Operation Restore Hope, Marine Corps Lt. Gen. Robert Johnston, would arrive with his support staff in Mogadishu.

He said elements of the Army's 10th Mountain Division, a light infantry unit based at Ft. Drum, New York, would begin arriving in Somalia "very soon." He wouldn't say exactly when.

Cramer said U.S. intelligence sources had reported shooting in "inter-clan" clashes in Baidoa as rival factions contest for territorial advantage.

"That... seems to have subsided," he said, adding that security conditions in Kismayo, a seaport in the extreme south of Somalia, were "not as good" as elsewhere.

Cramer and Brandtner said the Marine-led operation is proceeding as planned. Brandtner said there had been no American casualties and no shots by U.S. forces other than warning shots fired toward a few Somalis running in the harbor area.

Earlier Wednesday, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney said the landing of American troops in Somalia was going "very well, very smoothly," and suggested that the withdrawal could begin by Inauguration Day.

"We're very pleased with the results," of the first hours of the operation, during which U.S. Marines quickly and without resistance secured the airport and seaport of Mogadishu, Cheney said in interviews with television networks and the Associated Press.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

TIMBERRR . . . — Doug Johnson, a senior philosophy major, watches as two dead trees are removed from the banks of the Campus Pond. Johnson said he is concerned about the trees' replacements. Maintenance workers told him they would not be replaced due to lack of funding.

Arachnophobia strikes Tower

Officials deny infestation of 'little yellow spiders'

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Rumors of an infestation of poisonous "little yellow spiders" have swept Washington Residence Hall after recent claims by students that they had been bitten by the antagonistic arachnids.

Although students have been treated at Health Services for skin inflammations, and residence hall staff say nearly all residents have heard tales of the spiders, there is no concrete evidence of any such invasion, an Environmental Health and Safety official said yesterday.

George Reed, head of the University's Environmental Health Program, said that an investigator from Environmental Health and Safety went to Washington Tower and found no signs of an infestation.

"I am very skeptical that spiders have been biting these people," he said.

Reed added even if there were large numbers of spiders in the building, he would be skeptical of the rumors, because "spiders just aren't aggressive."

Nonetheless, building residents have claimed they were bitten by spiders, and according to a Health Services physician who treated one of the cases, they may be right.

"It's perfectly plausible that it was a spider bite," said Dr. Russell Lane of University Health Services, referring to a female student who said she had been bitten.

Lane said the patient came in with an inflamed carbuncle, or boil, on the side of her face. Although now fully recovered, she had a serious infection which had to be treated with intravenous antibiotics, he said.

Southwest Area Coordinator Linda Keith said while Housing officials are aware of the reports, they do not believe there is a serious problem with spiders in Washington Tower.

"I don't think there's any major infestation or anything," she said.

Marc Bacon, a resident assistant in Washington, echoed this sentiment.

"I've never seen the spiders, and I don't know anyone who says they've seen the spiders. If you listen to the rumors, it's like a bad B-movie, but that's all it is — rumors," Bacon said. "The most I've heard is one guy who said he stomped a yellow spider in his room a month ago."

Bacon said he attended a staff meeting in Washington last night, at which the various stories were discussed, and that he thought "the whole thing was ridiculous."

Nevertheless, Housing officials encourage anyone who believes they were bitten to seek medical attention and to notify Environmental Health and Safety.

Refugee action sought

Groups call on U.S. to open borders

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — Calling the situation "chillingly familiar," 20 religious and human rights organizations are appealing to the U.S. government to admit more refugees from detention camps inside the former Yugoslavia.

"In the past, the world has failed to act in similar circumstances, with tragic results," said the statement, to be released on Monday by the American Jewish Committee, U.S. Catholic Conference, Lawyers Committee for Human Rights and 17 other organizations.

An estimated three million people have been driven from their homes in ethnic unrest, according to the International Committee of the Red Cross. The organization says about 10,000 are in detention centers, although "the word concentration camp is much more accurate," said Ralston Deffenbaugh, executive director of the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service.

The groups appeal in their statement for the United States to take in up to 25,000 refugees from the area.

"The United States is a country of resettlement for refugees, and it's been traditionally part of being Americans to offer shelter to those who are fleeing persecution," Deffenbaugh said.

Talk of concentration camps and borders closed to refugees "sounds chillingly familiar," DeVecchi said, in a reference to the world's reaction to the Nazi roundup of Jews before and during World War II.

Mayors back Clinton's urban rebuilding plans

By SONYA ROSS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The mayors of eight U.S. cities endorsed President-elect Clinton's $20 billion urban-revitalization plan Wednesday and made it clear to Clinton's transition chairman they expect an important role in guiding the changes.

"For so long, we in the cities have been closed out of everything," said New York Mayor David Dinkins after meeting with Vernon Jordan. "I'm looking forward to a fruitful relationship."

The eight met with Jordan on behalf of the United States Conference of Mayors.

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson said there are about 7,000 "ready-to-go" infrastructure projects that could give cities an economic boost early in Clinton's administration, if financed. The projects would generate more than 400,000 jobs in 500 cities, Jackson said, and workers could be in place within three months.

"With the election of Clinton. . . hope has been reborn in America," Jackson said. "Now, we have to be sure we back up the hope. Without question, a comprehensive, national urban policy is going to be a key. We believe that will be given serious consideration."

"Starting from day one, implementing his own program on which he ran and he won, that's our plan," Jackson said.

Dinkins discounted any concerns that the plan floated by Jackson could add to the nation's budget deficit.

"If we fail to grab this program Maynard Jackson has described. . . and we fail to

Turn to MAYORS, page 6

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• A woman reported disturbing activity in the University Library to police on Tuesday afternoon. The woman was reportedly studying on the 21st floor in a carrel when she watched a man enter the area and then begin to masturbate, according to police.

• University police are investigating the burglary of a man's car on Fearing Street on Tuesday. The car's lock was broken, and stereo speakers, a leather jacket and a radar detector were stolen, according to police. The damage and stolen goods are estimated at $1000, police said.

• A man reported the theft of his wallet from the Campus Center on Tuesday. Police value the wallet, which contained personal items and cash, at $70.

• Police issued a motorist a criminal citation for operating an uninsured and unregistered vehicle in Lot 50 on Tuesday evening at 10:30 p.m.

Court hears sides in labor case

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court heard arguments Wednesday in a dispute over a labor contract governing the nation's largest harbor cleanup project.

A decision in the case, expected by next June, could alter the cost and duration of the 10-year, $6.1 billion Boston Harbor cleanup and could also have wide-ranging implications for other public works projects across the country.

Wednesday's hour-long exchange before the nine justices hinged on a 1989 labor agreement reached on behalf of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority with an organization representing 34 trade unions.

A non-union contractor's group challenged the agreement on the grounds that it violated federal laws allowing workers to bargain separately.

The MWRA argues that the decision last May by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals could prevent government agencies from reaching long-term labor agreements for major construction projects. California, Minnesota, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Wyoming all submitted briefs to the court supporting Massachusetts.

The Boston Harbor cleanup involves the construction of a new sewage treatment plant for the Boston area and of a rock tunnel 26 feet in diameter and beneath the sea floor to carry treated wastewater 9.5 miles out into the deeper waters of Massachusetts Bay. As many as 2,500 workers involved in various construction trades will be on the site at various times.

The labor agreement at issue was reached by Kaiser Engineers Inc., working on behalf of the MWRA, and the Building and Construction Trades Council of the Metropolitan district, a local association of labor unions in the Boston area. In the spring of 1990 the Associated Builders and Contractors of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, a group of nonunion contractors, sued the trades council, launching the case.

The labor agreement established that all trade unions working on the project would adhere to a single collective bargaining pact setting labor terms and union recognition for the entire project. Among other things, the agreement included a 10-year no-strike clause and a requirement that union halls manage the hiring of all union and nonunion workers on the project.

"What we have is a blanket exclusion of nonunion," attorney Maurice Baskin, representing the nonunion contractors, told the court.

The MWRA, on the other hand, says the labor agreement is the only way to ensure timely completion of the cleanup while controlling costs.

Because private property owners are allowed to insist on this kind of all-encompassing labor agreement to avoid labor troubles and work delays, the only issue in dispute is whether a public agency — the MWRA, in this case — is allowed to do so.

Attorney Charles Fried, a Harvard Law School professor and former U.S. Solicitor General, represented the MWRA and the trades council.

The Deadline is January 5

for all Amherst Town offices

January 5 is the deadline to submit nomination papers for Town Meeting and the Selectboard. All persons registered to vote in Amherst are eligible to run and hold office. Many UMASS students have been members of Town Meeting over the years. To run you must pick up a nomination petition and return it with 10 signatures (50 for Selectboard) by January 5. Petitions are available at the Town Clerk's office in the Bangs Community Center (behind Bart's). For more information call SGA President Jen Wood at 545-0341. If you are concerned about what is going on then get involved because Democracy is not a spectator sport.

Sponsored by the Commuter Area Government and the UMASS Off Campus Housing Office

SAVE OUR STORE

The University of Massachusetts Board of Governors strongly opposes leasing the University Store to a private company as the administration has suggested. The following are just a few reasons how privatization would be detrimental to University students and faculty.

1) Higher textbook prices – Barnes & Noble may not offer the same 5% discount that we currently have.

2) Less student employees – Less part-time student staff jobs would be available.

3) Less selection – Barnes & Noble's primary concern would be profit, unlike the current store that values service and a large selection which caters to the diverse needs of all the students and faculty on campus.

4) Temporary Solution – Auxilliary Services are financially troubled, so rather than addressing their financial problems, they are going to sell the only money-making enterprise in the Campus Center in a last-ditch effort to acquire much needed funds.

5) Administration has Avoided Students – The Auxilliary Services has avoided talking to any student groups about privatization. A Request for Proposal is likely to be issued while students and faculty are off campus, allowing the administration to do what they want without student input.

6) Our Store Is One of the Best – The University of Massachusetts University Bookstore is recognized nationally as one of the best campus bookstores in the country – don't let Auxilliary Services jeopardize the quality of our bookstore because of losses in other parts of their budget.

DON'T PRIVATIZE – IT'S NOT A SOLUTION!

– provided by the University of Massachusetts Board of Governors (545-0198) –

SHOP SCOTT'S FOR HOLIDAY SAVINGS!!
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692
PRICES GOOD THRU 12/13/92
OPEN SUNDAYS 12-6 PM
WINE TASTEING EVERY FRIDAY!
We Now Take Discover Card
MANY GREAT HOLIDAY GIFT IDEAS
NATURAL LIGHT $8.99 +DEP. 24-12 OZ. CANS
RICASOLI CHIANTI 750 ML. $4.79
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT 12 PK. BOTTLES $6.99 +DEP.
GORDON'S GIN FINAL COST $5.99 750 ML. SALE PRICE 7.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00
GLEN ELLEN CABERNET SAUVIGNON & CHARDONNAY 2 FOR $8.99 750 ML.
GORDON'S VODKA FINAL COST $9.99 1.75 L. SALE PRICE 11.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS
Play all Mass Lottery games here!

The Collegian.
113 Campus Ctr.
545-3500

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN

Local News

And the winner is . . .

Following the lead of the Collegian's finest columnist, the Pulitzer-bound David Scott of "Scott Shots," this space will hand out its year end awards.

So here are the top three "News from other U's" of 1992:

No. 1 — Door to door service

In Richmond, Texas a funeral home dumped the body of a man on his son's doorstep after the son was unable to pay the full price of cremation, according to the Associated Press.

The body of George Bojarski, covered only with a sheet, was found Monday evening at the door of his son's apartment. Bojarski, 66, had died of cancer a few days earlier.

The body had been picked up by Evans Mortuary, but when the son, Larry Bojarski, paid only $299 of the $683 bill, the funeral home returned the body.

"I saw his head come out of the sheet," said the son. "I called the police and they said 'How do you know it's your father?' And I told them 'I see his face. I know what he looks like!' What am I supposed to do with the body? He's my father."

Newell Evans, owner of the mortuary, admitted he returned the body but said it was not done maliciously.

"Who says I dumped him there? I left him there," said Evans. Asked if he thought the practice was unethical, Evans replied: "Who defines ethical?" When told other funeral homes considered it unethical, Evans responded. "They can run their establishments as they see fit and I'll run mine my way."

Another local funeral home agreed to provide the service free of charge.

Police are uncertain whether charges will be pressed or if the act was even criminal.

No. 2 — Tequila or to-kill-ya

A jury in texas found a tequila maker partly responsible for the death of a Texas Agricultural and Industrial University student, according to The Daily Texan, the student newspaper of the University of Texas.

The jury found the Brown-Forman Co. guilty for one-third of the death of Marie Brinkman. Brinkman, 18, had died as a result of alcohol poisoning after consuming some 20 shots of Pepe Lopez tequila at a party.

Brinkman's family was awarded $1.5 million despite the fact the jury found Brinkman two-thirds responsible for her death. Brown-Forman officials issued a statement disagreeing with the verdict and saying the company planned to appeal.

"This case is a tragic accident, but we believe the young women was responsible for it," the statement said.

The suit contended Brown-Forman was negligent because it failed to warn consumers that drinking to much alcohol too quickly could be fatal.

No. 3 — Road Trip

PHILADELPHIA — For the first time in the history of this space, your faithful correspondent and two esteemed colleagues went on location, to the University of Pennslyvania, to dig up the news.

What we found was Smokey's Bar, which boasts itself as a "Penn-stitution" and according to one regular customer Smokey's was once mentioned in a speech by former President Gerald Ford.

The real drawing card to Smokey's was the Wednesday night special of all-you-can-eat-and-drink for $6.

Smokey's provided its patrons with an open bar consisting of Lite, Budweiser and Bass Ale and "lower shelf liquors." Some of the lower shelf stuff probably should have been buried under the shelf, but we managed.

The victuals part of the deal left much to be desired (a few Subway subs) but we managed to wash our sorrows away with a few extra pitchers.

It is a great disappointment that in Amherst, the town's well-to-do shuts down bars for more than one person every 24-square feet of space, while Smokey's is allowed to provide such a service for the Penn students.

Maybe there is something to this Ivy League education hype.

Twisters owner to fight closure by Select Board

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Twisters owner Mark Forsyth is appealing the Amherst Select Board's discussion to revoke his liquor license for two days later in the month.

Twisters has decided to appeal the Dec. 17-19 closure to the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission in Boston, Forsyth said.

If the appeal is pending at the time of the revocation, Twisters will still be open, Forsyth said.

On Monday night, Amherst Select Board suspended Twisters' liquor license for two violations of overcrowding. Twisters is licensed to hold 120 patrons. The Amherst Fire Department reported 180 people on the premise on Sept. 25 and 141 patrons on Oct. 30.

Twisters alcohol license has been not only suspended for overcrowding Nov. 15-21, but also for three days over the summer, according to Amherst Select Board Member Carolyn Holstein. But Forsyth said the Amherst Select Board is being unfair by picking Twisters' best days for business to revoke their license.

"[The Select Board] wanted to make it as hard as possible," Forsyth said.

In addition to appealing Monday night's ruling, Forsyth will go before the Amherst Select Board Dec. 17 to appeal their patron limit of 120.

Forsyth said he would like to have a two-tiered capacity permit. During the day the capacity would be 120 for

Turn to TWISTERS, page 6

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

DEAR SANTA — All I want for Christmas is passing grades, snow, tuition, no cavities, world peace and a job when I graduate.

Legal Services gains new lawyer

Attorney hopes to work toward student 'empowerment'

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Legal Services Center recently hired a new attorney who said she hopes to put her legal experience with both students and the town of Amherst to good use.

"My goal is to help empower students by teaching them what protection law offers them and how they can use the law to their advantage," said Michele L. Leaf, who recently came to work for Legal Services.

Leaf was a staff attorney at Legal Services from 1976 to 1979, and again from 1983 to 1984. She was also the counsel for a number of local towns and worked as assistant to the Amherst counsel.

Charles J. DiMare, Legal Services' directing attorney, said Leaf was selected from an applicant pool of 68 people. "The University is very lucky to have her here and I look forward to many, many years of working with her," he said.

"Michele was by far the most qualified candidate, mostly due to her several years of experience, and previous experience as a town counsel," said Marc Kenen, president of the Graduate Student Senate and former chair of the Legal Services board.

"Students are enormously lucky to have someone with the skills and experience of Michele working for Legal Services," Kenen said.

"I've done a considerable amount of work with student and community groups so I am familiar with the group decision- making process," Leaf said.

Leaf said she would like to create an opportunity for town officials and students to air their concerns and work towards creative and constructive solutions for their differences.

"It is important to try and bridge the gap between students and town officials," Leaf said.

Leaf said most of her energy will be devoted to informing students about their legal rights and responsibilities so they won't be taken advantage of.

"Many students don't have the resources to hire private attorneys, but Legal Services enables students to obtain legal advice without paying," Leaf said.

Leaf said she will be working in consumer law and University-related issues. She said she deals with issues of sexual discrimination, immigration, helping students enforce their rights under the Consumer Protection Act and the rights of students in University disciplinary proceedings.

"I like the excitement and challenge of dealing with so many different issues and I like working with such a diverse population," Leaf said.

Red Cross calls UM blood drive shot in the arm

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

Students at the University of Massachusetts continue to be the largest donors of blood in the state of Massachusetts, according to Red Cross officials.

The American Red Cross on campus hosts an average of twenty drives a semester and collects approximately 1,500 units of blood. The donors, whether as individuals or as part of a group, sacrifice their time and help others in need, said Red Cross officials.

Nancy Marion, a recruiter for the Red Cross for the past six years, said the participation and effort by members of the campus community has been overwhelming.

"UMass donors are the tops! The American Red Cross really appreciates the opportunity of being welcomed at the Amherst campus," Marion said.

"It is heart-warming and we would like to thank all those who have generously supported our community blood programs this semester," Marion said.

Marion said the Red Cross thanks to all the UMass sponsors who have helped them reach their goal this semester.

Marion identified the following groups as having been

Turn to BLOOD DRIVE, page 8

Program increases research goals for women engineers

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

Undergraduate women in the college of engineering are being encouraged to pursue graduate degrees and teach engineering through a new program at the University of Massachusetts, according to the assistant dean of engineering.

Assistant Dean Nancy Hellman said the Women in Engineering program seeks to give women a broad-based introduction to the importance of research in engineering.

"What we're trying to do is build confidence," Hellman said. "We're identifying a group of women students in whom we can develop an understanding of what research is, since that's a big part of what it is to be a professor."

The Women in Engineering Summer Internship Program, funded by United Technologies, began last summer, offering three paid internships to undergraduate women. Each woman worked with an engineering faculty member on a 10-week research project. Two civil and one mechanical engineering projects were the result.

Hellman said the research projects are meant to

Turn to ENGINEERS, page 8

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Twisters: the tavern vs. the town

Once again, the Amherst Select Board met to decide the fate of Twisters Tavern regarding overcrowding violations. Once again Zilma Mayawtz has left the privacy of her home to speak in favor of homeowners who reside near the tavern and wish to shut it down. Once again Twisters has had its liquor license revoked. Once again city officials have completely ignored factual evidence and given in to personal biases against students who frequent the bar to engage in the sins of drinking. And once again in a misguided struggle for power, we have lost and they have won.

To Zilma I offer this, in my most sincere voice: you have become quite a legend here at UMass. I've read more than one article about you and your efforts to close Twisters. For this reason I was not surprised to see your photo [Collegian, Dec. 8]. I do not deny that present an argument worth considering.

Unfortunately your home is located near a business district. And that district needs to grow. When it grows it will need to expand. If it does not grow it will simply disappear. This has happened to thousands of small towns throughout the country that simply did not adapt to incoming people's needs. It will eventually happen to Amherst unless local residents loosen their grip on a city council which has completely discounted the practices of free enterprise.

There are thousands of students and businesses who would like to see Amherst grow. They would like to see Amherst reach its potential of becoming a thriving community successfully maintaining a quaint atmosphere. They would like to see more shops, restaurants and yes, bars.

And then there is you and a few of your neighbors who wish to see Amherst today as it will always be. In fact, you not only seem to disapprove of Amherst's possibilities of growth, you wish to see it shrink — by one bar. Your Amherst of the future seems to be a ghost town.

To the Amherst Select Board I offer this: who has corrupted you? Why haven't you been impartial in discussion of this matter? You are all aware of the fact that while Twisters is twice the size of other bars in Amherst, it boasts an equal capacity limit. Twisters' attorney has said the company is willing to add the additional public facilities the city has demanded to increase the limit. Why do you still resist?

Recently, the Amherst Zoning Board has proposed that the capacity limit even be dropped to 63 to punish the organization. Punish them for what? Twisters is a large place with a lot of square footage. A lot of people can fit in there — more than the allotted 120, in fact probably more than 200, some say even 300.

As a student of UMass and a patron of the town of Amherst, I submit that this issue needs to be investigated. The city needs to find out how many people can fit safely into Twisters Tavern. Then, it needs to weigh the needs of the city as a whole, against the needs of those residing near the establishment. Then it can set a fair capacity limit and make whatever necessary adjustments to restore a reasonable level of peace into the local neighborhood. Only then, will the Select Board have handled the problem objectively without impeding on the rights granted to businesses through the free-enterprise system.

Romin Thomson
Southwest

A gleeful good-bye to '92

"If we couldn't laugh, we would all go insane." — from "Changes in Latitudes, Changes in Attitudes" by Jimmy Buffett.

Jimmy Buffett is no fool.

Looking back at 1992, the only thing we can do is laugh. It wasn't exactly a nice year.

Indeed, 1992 was the year the skeletons came rushing out of the closet with wide grins, shouting "surprise!" They weren't exactly holding a birthday cake, complete with candles and cream cheese frosting. Not unless those chainsaws they were wielding looked suspiciously like they were made out of cake.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

The heck with 1992. Let's have some fun with 1993. Can it possibly be a worse year? Shouldn't you be asking Nostradamus instead of me? The answers are: a) it could be worse and b) go ahead and ask Nostradamus, but you'll have a hard time getting an answer out of him since he's sort of dead.

1993 will be the year the Red Sox win the World Series. Call me crazy, but I think Scott Bankhead is the answer. Oh, excuse me, I thought this was the sports page. However, a Red Sox-like event will occur early in the new year. Namely, a Democrat will be sworn in as the 42nd President of the United States. I'll be so proud when Hillary takes the oath — did I say Hillary?

The following words will definitely appear in the Collegian next year (in alphabetical order): appalled, basketball, Calipari, denounced, Emily, f — I think I'd better stop at f.

1993 will be an important year for me. I'm supposed to be graduating from this fine institution of (chuckle, chuckle) higher learning, so there are some things I have to do before I graduate. "Pass my classes" is the obvious task before me, but there are some other important things I must do. Things like:

• Wear face paint to a UMass hoop game. Sorry Cal, I've been at every game but a maroon UM has yet to grace my profile. Could be the West Virginia game Feb. 4.

• Speak at a Student Union Steps rally. Look for me at the "Polish-Americans for Beer, Stogies and Twizzlers" (PABST) rally on Groundhog Day. I'll be the one in drag.

• Run a lap around the Tower Library — nude. Don't try to stop me. You can't even slow me down.

• Get arrested by UMass police. See the entry preceding this one. If not then, there's always the pond concert, Jell-O and a hot-air balloon. Don't ask.

Then again, I might just graduate and forget it.

1993 will be a good year for household pets. You may not have noticed that 1993 has been named the International Year of the Domestic Animal by the UN. If so, don't fret. It hasn't. But you should brush your dog's coat every week anyway.

In 1993, people will be nicer to one another. People will be kind, understanding and fall in love with greater frequency than ever before in the history of civilization.

However, they will also exact crueler punishments, commit more atrocities in the name of God and law and litter on roadsides. If you're looking for "A Perfect World," try NBC. You won't find it anywhere between Ware and Goshen. Brooklyn, maybe. The unhappy valley, no way.

So bid 1992 good-bye and good riddance. Smile a lot. Drink lots of coffee and eat as many doughnuts as possible. We'll see you next year.

Greg Sukiennik has the rare privilege of writing, uncensored, his own taglines for columns.

A tale of misery and a Microfridge

Let me tell you a story about Brian and his Microfridge.

During the summer, Brian received a letter from Housing Services which said if he wanted a Microfridge, he would have to pay in advance. But Brian didn't know what would happen to his money if his roommate also paid for a Microfridge. So he called the school, and they said one of them would lose their deposit. Brian was sad, and decided to wait until school started before deciding. When Brian got to school, he was put in a single. He immediately went to Housing to put down his deposit.

For the first three weeks, Brian waited patiently, and finally his Microfridge arrived. Brian was so happy, he immediately went grocery shopping. But a couple days later, his food had spoiled. Brian turned up the setting in his Microfridge, and again went shopping. but this time, after a couple days, his food was frozen solid. Brian became sad. Finally, near the end of the semester, Brian got a letter from Housing. They said they were going to take back the Microfridge on the last day of classes. That meant Brian couldn't use his fridge during finals week, the one week he needs it most. That made Brian sad. He had paid for an entire semester, but didn't actually have the unit for a total of one month.

The moral: Housing doesn't feel as though they should treat the Microfridge rental contracts with the common, businesslike attitude that usually encompasses any rental agreement.

If this story sounds familiar, I would urge you to write a letter of complaint to the Housing Director. We as students pay a lot of money for such things as Microfridges, and there is no reason why we should receive second rate treatment.

Brian Fakharzadeh
Sylvan

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

So, here's the semester's last installment of "Notes from the Campus Center Basement." My humor's running a little low this week, so this'll be more of an historical (or at least histrionic) piece. Judging from the responses my last column got, a lot of you (veterans in particular) didn't understand my proposal anyway.

Collegian Irony of the Week, Part One: We misspelled "siege" in Monday's lead story. Admittedly, misspellings in the Collegian are nothing special, but this is different. After all the experience we've had with large groups of uninvited, less-than-cordial guests, you'd think we'd know how to spell it by now.

I've got mixed feelings about leasing the University Store to outside concerns. While sitting in an attempt to protect student jobs makes a little more sense than holding Memorial Hall (sorry, I just had to get in one last jab before finals), I'm not sure that makes up for the shameless price gouging and the infusion of student funds it takes to keep them afloat. B.O.G. head Ben Preston calls it a convenience, but perhaps he doesn't mind shelling out $2.79 for a pair of AA's. Convenience is in the eye (or wallet) of the consumer.

Last April or so the doorknob leading into our darkroom fell off, stranding more than a few unwary photographers. Since we rent the office space from Auxiliary Services, I mentioned it to Bill Harris. I told him again in September. I told Ben Preston sometime at the beginning of the semester. It was fixed last week.

Josh
REYNOLDS

Why are things in the Campus Center such a mess? Because a bloated bureaucracy has slowly taken over the functions originally allocated to student bodies. This happened while B.O.G. members were busy fighting amongst themselves over whether to say the pledge of allegiance before meetings and ousting GLB seats instead of doing their jobs. While Young Republicans were fighting with their board members, administrators stepped in, installing a system of de facto non-student control and state employee patronage. Now the administrators run the show, and student government asks permission instead of vice versa.

The same petty whining in the SGA led to frustrated members voting to disband the body. That left the student trustee as the only student office with any degree of practical power. This year's student trustee likes to wear a conehead to basketball games. Is there any wonder it's the SGA has risen from the ashes and held the SAO, its administrative, counterpart at bay.

Contrary to Alex Nguyen's cultural center closing strategy, conceding what little power you have as a publicity stunt is not protest, it is concession.

Collegian Irony of the Week, Part Two: Tuesday's story on the Rainbow Patrols was written by the photographer. The assigned reporter was attending to a friend who had been beaten up earlier that evening.

So, Twisters has again become the focus of the Amherst Selectboard. It's a measure of the town's cowardly and punitive mindset that noise complaints are dealt with by tightening fire codes. The actions of the euphemistically titled "Peace and Quiet Commission" are preferable to the crusades of vigilante "Stepford Wife" Margot Parot. Secondly, it is a measure of the owner's shortsightedness (and lack of imagination) that the jock-ish sports bar was built next to an elderly housing project.

It seems that after a decade of draconian campus alcohol policies and semi-enforcable keg laws, the problem has migrated to downtown bars, or worse for Amherst tax base and businesses, to Northampton. It is time for the the University and the town to admit that they are powerless to stop underage drinking and come up with a more realistic and equitable way of dealing with it.

That's it for my final, long-winded tirade of the semester. Happy finals, good luck on your holidays. So long, and thank you for your support.

Josh Reynolds is a Collegian columnist.

Driving away to escape from this thing we call society

There comes a time when you just want to jump in a car and drive. Drive away from the preachers who talk down to you like you are children eager to be molded into a new image. Drive away from the annoying people who sit next to you at lunch and talk about how wasted they got the night before. Drive away from brain-numbing shows about Barbie doll rich kids and their success in achieving racial harmony at a high school dances. Drive away from 12 years of ignorance and elitism which we allowed ourselves to be lulled into with an actor's smile and the American flag. Drive away from the feelings of resignation when you drive home and find nothing has changed, including your old friends who still hang out at McDonalds. And for many of us, drive away from the fleeting glances and the blatant disdain brought on by nothing more than our shadows.

Just drive away from everything that makes you believe that your life is going to be nothing more than that which you see around you every day. That makes you want to believe you are somehow not a part of it all.

I wonder if we can really ever escape those feelings of being trapped in a cage we cannot see. A cage that we sometimes can feel all around us like it is ready to smother you if you dare confront it. It doesn't matter where you travel, the walls will always follow you if you let them. Scenery changes and people come and go, but somehow the scenery really doesn't change and the faces you see are but reproductions of those you knew before and thought you were free of once and for all. I swear I have seen that obnoxious guy in high school around; you know, the one who used to brag about how many girls he had in the back of his beat up silver station wagon. I'm sure he must have an IROC now.

Nathan
CRICK

I wish I could say I knew how to escape it, but I'm afraid I don't. Running away and living out in the woods to write a book is a lonely life. And to see that once secluded haven called Walden Pond turned into some kind of theme park is evidence to me that wherever you go, you eventually are going to have to deal with this thing we call Society. We are a part of it, or a product of it, like it or not. And maybe it really isn't so bad. Humans are such interesting creatures that to dismiss our species as completely stupid and ignorant is to be so ourselves. Even if most of us would so much like to do so and be done with it.

Of course, that's much easier said than done. You see so many people acting like sheep while you go through school, listening to the right music and wearing the right clothes and saying the right things. You'd think you were in high school with the crew from a Kriss Kross video. Or maybe you'd fall in with the other crew who wear lots of black and think they are It because they are as alternative as one can get. Originality is just a matter of which group happens to be in the minority at a given time. But we're here at college now. Things are different. Well, maybe not. There are just more minorities here who think they are It. So it goes.

In a sense though, I think we all believe that. That the way we think and what we believe is something for everyone to admire if they could only understand. It is part of the great American mindset, that we can all be kings if we only try hard enough. Am I Willie Loman? I don't know, but I hope not.

So maybe it is when we come to an end of our quest to be the Great Individual that we might actually succeed in finding a way out of the cage. Or maybe it is when we stop trying to satisfy the various molds our society has silently approved as acceptable lifestyles. Or if all of that is just a rehash of all the How to be Happy slogans, you could just get in your car and drive.

So maybe I will. I could follow my father to Arizona or my friend to California or my brother to Colorado and discover what they did. That it's hot out west and sometimes on a clear day in Phoenix you can fry an egg on the sidewalk.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Honor struggle against oppression

In celebration of the fifth anniversary of the brutally repressed uprising of the Palestinians, I need to present the common awareness they express in talks, interviews, in literature — their consciousness of being Palestinian. A people who are very clear about their identity in both nationalistic and nativistic ways, yet a people with serious cultural, traditional and moral concerns. A proud people who have endured five years of their own popular rebellion — the intifada — against the 25-year-old repressive and degrading policy of the Israeli government.

For Palestinian youth, life under military rule has become a thing in itself, the only reality they know and the only means to generate a worldview from. It has defined their limitations and has inhibited their natural urge to exert ethics unto others. In other words, the truth of reality matters more than the ethics of morality. They deny what they really want, and that is mutual recognition of social justice, equality and freedom between the Israeli Jews and the Palestinians.

They deny this for obvious reasons, namely that they live under totalitarian rule. Therefore, these people rely on the postulations they know are the only things Israeli repression cannot repress. They can't posit healthy relations with Israelis because the daily routine of curfew and military oppression deflates any such postulation. What is left is the positing of a forceful solution, equating to stone-throwing, protest and obvious defiance.

The land of Israel is admirable as a refuge for any Jew who wishes or needs one. Yet the fact that Zionism was to create a new Jewish society based on justice, equality and freedom promotes antithetical evaluations about current military policy and its effect on the Palestinians. Let us honor the struggles that will continue against the oppressions that many brothers and sisters throughout the world have engaged in. Since such conflicts as the question of Palestine are conflicts of national movements, they become conflicts between consciousness, and only through mutual recognition can they be solved.

Micah Nassar
South Deerfield

I'm disgusted, but not phobic!

I am a gay man concerned about the ever-rising tide of heterosexuality upon the horizon. And before I am called heterophobic, I have no problem with heterosexuality so long as it is kept far from me. If I don't have to see it, I'm fine. I am usually subdued concerning my sexual orientation in public. And I don't carry around a sign saying I'm a homo.

My straight friends carry around their girlfriends on their arms in disgusting public displays of affection, buy only products intended for heterosexuals, listen to music about heterosexuality, grope like idiots at drunken parties for the nearest member of the opposite sex, and parade flamboyantly in church weddings in a blatant display of their life style — all to show the world they are straight.

Heck, some people, not satisfied with these methods, write articles in newspapers baring their boring mainstream life style to the public, proclaiming loud and clear that they are straight. All of this is a waste of time and effort that could be put to better use. The money poured into these self-indulgent wedding orgies each year could feed Somalia for a decade.

Of course I have nothing against breeders! But occasionally they just go too far!

One such traumatic incident recently occurred for which I've had to seek psychological care. This involved one of those card-carrying, flag-waving flamboyant anal retentive hets who refuses to believe that a man would not want to copulate with her. She demands a lot of attention but I'm usually patient with her.

One day she asked if I found her skimpy outfit to be sexually arousing. I said, "No, you look like a slut!" Furious, she insisted she was not trying to come on to me. Then, she spilled foundation and liquid eyeliner all over my rug! Next thing you know, she slinked over, pinned me against the wall with her bulging mammary glands and kissed me! Ew! I was disgusted, so I slugged her because she was bigger than me. Adding insult to injury, she spilt my lubricant all over my porno tapes. They're ruined! How someone could betray a friendship like that is beyond me! I don't go up to the men I'm staring at in the bathroom and kiss them!

Thank goodness we have gender-specific bathrooms to keep those breeders from their animalistic urges to procreate in a bestial frenzy! I prefer dinner and a movie first. It's very upsetting for me to think that some of these breeders might be allowed to teach my children someday! Beware, this has been a very difficult experience for me. It's the type of thing I expected to happen to other people but never to me!

Keith Kirkness
Central

This letter was signed by four students.

The silent victim: Mr. Mailbox

I live on North Pleasant St. It seems like almost every Friday or Saturday night our normally quiet section becomes the gateway to drunkenness. Truly, I can put up with the yelling and screaming, the beer cans and keg cups on our lawn, but do our elderly neighbors who go to bed at nine o'clock have to?

Now to the reason which made me sit down to a computer and star henpecking: in the last year, our mailbox was assaulted and dissected twice. The other night, many mailboxes were victims of aggression, and a full trashcan was placed in the road (it was eventually hit by a car and garbage spewed all over). Does alcohol really bring about this stroke of genius in that many people? Whoever you are, please stop because mailbox bashing is like prejudice; it is learned. Please stop the cycle.

Peter S. Carris
North Amherst

The many faces of AIDS

The number of persons contracting HIV is growing at an alarming rate. Pick up any newspaper or magazine and see for yourself. Entertainment Weekly recently published their 1992 "Faces of Aids" report on the entertainment industry's loss to AIDS to hype awareness of the Fourth Annual Day Without Art. This "day of action and mourning" was held Dec. 1, coinciding with the World Health Organization's World AIDS Day. AIDS has robbed the entertainment world of so much talent. The trade magazines are crowded with obituaries — pretty soon these deaths may not command the headlines they deserve. As I looked at the 102 faces in Entertainment Weekly, I was disturbed by these unnecessary deaths. I asked myself who will make next year's "Faces of AIDS" article.

Adam Scott
ROBERTS

There are so many lives being claimed, and the victims and their families extend far beyond that of Hollywood. People always believe it can't happen to them. It's always someone else's story on Oprah. Well, the people on Oprah are saying "It can happen to you!" We're all vulnerable, no one is invincible. AIDS and HIV are not confined to the entertainment industry. These epidemics affect everyone: gay, bisexual and heterosexual. HIV is present on our college and university campuses.

The Center for Disease Control conducted a blind study to estimate the magnitude of HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) among university students. Blood samples were taken from 17 state and two private university health centers. The University of Massachusettes at Amherst was one of the schools included. A total of 16,863 specimens were collected from students whose median age was 21. Female students predominated, composing 64.3 percent of the sample. The majority — 74 percent — of students were white.

Thirty specimens tested positive for HIV antibodies — one positive result per 500 students. The results of the study demonstrate that HIV infection and the potential for its transmission are present on many college campuses.

HIV causes AIDS. It is spread by direct contact with infected blood, semen or vaginal secretions. Principal methods for spreading infection include having anal or vaginal intercourse, being born to an infected woman, receiving infected blood or blood products, or sharing needles and syringes with someone infected with the HIV virus. It is still unknown if HIV can be transmitted through oral sex, but precautions should be taken.

Most people develop antibodies to HIV within six months from the last possible exposure to the virus. There is no time limit for a person to show symptoms of AIDS after exposure. People can be carriers of the HIV virus for years, never showing symptoms but still capable of transmitting the virus to others. Although there are drugs that are effective in slowing the course of the disease, AIDS is fatal.

Be honest to your partner about past sexual relationships — it's not fair to jeopardize anyone's life. If you're not going to abstain from sex, take precautions; use more than one form of protection. A partner not willing to use a condom doesn't care about their health or yours.

HIV antibody testing can be done anonymously and without cost at the UMass Health Center. To make an appointment, call the UMass test site at 549-2671, ext. 126. Remember, having careless sex is potentially deadly. Be smarter than that. You owe it to yourself and the person you're with. In closing, there is no "safe" sex — there can only be safer sex.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian staff member.

Media censors issues of activists

Many of us are ignorant of injustices Native Americans face every day. The media's coverage of these issues is inadequate or inaccurate. We want to focus on three women who have confronted corporations and the government.

JoAnn Tall is a Lakota Sioux activist. She has worked against water contamination caused by corporations drilling for uranium on her reservation in South Dakota. Mining caused an increase in cancer and miscarriages. Her persistence turned away the AMCOR corporation, who wanted to dump nuclear waste on the Pine Ridge reservation, and stopped Smith, Klein and Beecham from testing an anti-hepatitis vaccine on children.

Jessie DeerInWater formed Native Americans for a Clean Environment (NACE) in Oklahoma. NACE battled the company Kerr-McGee because they were planning to inject its nuclear waste into the ground. NACE feared ground water supplies would be contaminated and Kerr-McGee was not allowed to dispose of its waste in this manner. The nuclear waste is now manufactured into fertilizer. This fertilizer, raffinate, is being used on hay fed to cattle. The cattle is sold as meat and dairy products while a long term study has not been conducted on raffinate.

Phillis Young, Lakota Sioux, was a founder of Women of All Red Nations (WARN). WARN investigated the involuntary sterilization of Native American women, a practice carried out by the Indian Health Service during the late '60s and early '70s. A WARN study concluded up to 42 percent of all Indian women of child-bearing age were sterilized without their consent. As a result of WARN's publicity, the Indian Health Services was transferred to the Department of Health and Human Services in 1978 to be better regulated.

The issues these activists deal with are not accurately presented by the media. Corporations threaten to pull advertising and the government fabricates information and withholds the truth. The media choose not to print anything or print a lighter version of the situation to protect themselves.

Kristen Lans
Erin Welch
Amherst

mayors

continued from page 1

produce jobs, we're going to increase the deficit," Dinkins said.

In June, Clinton outlined his $20 billion "Rebuild America" plan before the mayor's conference. It calls for, among other things, revitalizing urban areas with economic incentives and community block grants, expanded education, job training and child care, stepped-up crime-fighting efforts and devotion of a portion of government-controlled housing for homeless people.

Twisters

continued from page 3

dining, and at night because the tables and chairs would be cleared from the floor, Forsyth said he would like to see the capacity raised to 300.

But Holstein said she wonders if it is going to pass because there have been so many complaints of the loud noise and drunken students urinating on the lawns. A large number of elderly people live near Twisters. Holstein said if Twisters is found guilty again, the Select Board is seriously considering revoking the liquor license permanently.

Forsyth said he believes many of those complaints are unfounded.

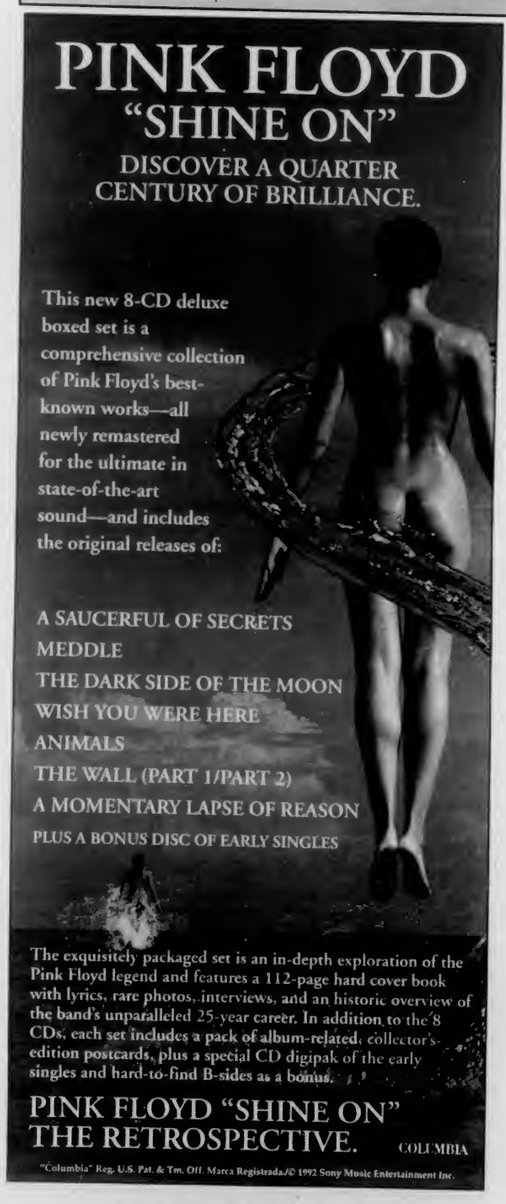
"[The neighbors] associate anything with us because we are in the limelight. Neighbors complain of noise at 3 or 4 in the morning. We close at 1 a.m.," Forsyth said. "It is ridiculous. We don't let people walk outside."

Amherst Building Commissioner Chester Penza said part of the problem with Twisters overcrowding was that the zoning laws which were originally submitted in 1988 were for a formal restaurant.

"It was going to be for business and lunch-ins. It changed because it didn't have customers, so it changed into a nightclub," Penza said.

STRESS
COLLEGIAN

PINK FLOYD
"SHINE ON"
DISCOVER A QUARTER CENTURY OF BRILLIANCE.



This new 8-CD deluxe boxed set is a comprehensive collection of Pink Floyd's best-known works—all newly remastered for the ultimate in state-of-the-art sound—and includes the original releases of:

A SAUCERFUL OF SECRETS MEDDLE
THE DARK SIDE OF THE MOON
WISH YOU WERE HERE ANIMALS
THE WALL (PART 1/PART 2)
A MOMENTARY LAPSE OF REASON
PLUS A BONUS DISC OF EARLY SINGLES

The exquisitely packaged set is an in-depth exploration of the Pink Floyd legend and features a 112-page hard cover book with lyrics, rare photos, interviews, and an historic overview of the band's unparalleled 25-year career. In addition to the 8 CDs, each set includes a pack of album-related, collector's-edition postcards, plus a special CD digipak of the early singles and hard-to-find B-sides as a bonus.

PINK FLOYD "SHINE ON" THE RETROSPECTIVE. COLUMBIA

"Columbia" Reg. U.S. Pat. & Tm. Off. Marca Registrada./© 1992 Sony Music Entertainment Inc.

Available at Strawberries
$129.99 (CD)

Grand Opening
November 1, 1992
THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741

FOUR (4) Bedroom Apartments!
$899 (utilities included! wow!)

RENT FREE !
Move in now- no rent until January 1,1993 !
Move in January 93' and receive it FREE!
*Promotion & prices subject to change without notice

TOP TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD LIVE HERE:
1. Your PARENTS don't!
2. YOU pick your roommates!
3. PRIVACY- Spacious Four (4) Bedrooms!
4. TWO (2) Bathrooms- no waiting in the shower line!
5. UTILITIES included $$$!
6. Directly on BUSLINE- minutes from campus & downtown Amherst!
7. It's FREE public transportation!
8. INCLUDES major appliances & w/w carpeting!
9. QUIET forest setting - for your peace of mind.

Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!

Don't wait another day, call today!

CUT THIS AD & USE IT TO LIVE "RENT FREE!" AT ALPINE COMMONS!

256-0741

Reebok honors four human rights activists

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — Four young human rights activists, including one who sent a message from his prison cell in East Timor, received the Reebok Human Rights Awards on Wednesday.

But one speaker blasted Reebok and other U.S. corporations he said benefit from low labor costs because of human rights repression in the countries where they manufacture sneakers and apparel.

Indonesia, whose government imprisoned human rights award recipient Fernando de Araujo, strictly controls union organizing and does not enforce its own mimimum wage requirements, said journalist Allan Nairn.

"That helps Reebok, Nike and others make huge profits in Indonesia," Nairn told an audience that included Reebok's chairman and top executives.

Reebok officials quickly circulated new production standards, drafted earlier this year, which limit the company to hiring subcontractors who pay fair wages, allow unions to be organized, provide safe work environments and do not use child or forced labor.

"We're proud that we're a catalyst for change," Reebok Chairman Paul Fireman said when asked to respond to Nairn's remarks. "The issue is to make sure you have standards that are impeccable."

But Ferris Harvey, director of the independent International Labor Rights Education and Research Fund, said, "There is as yet no indictation from Reebok that this corporate code of conduct will cause it to disassociate with any of its producers in Indonesia."

Harvey said the company adopted its new workplace policies because of pressure from his group and others.

"When a company sets out a human rights standard as a hallmark of the company's name and image, it subjects itself to a certain standard of behavior," Harvey said.

Reebok honored Araujo in his absence: he is serving a nine-year sentence in his country on subversion charges for campaigning for the independence of East Timor from Indonesia, which has occupied the island since 1975.

"I think the world will not keep quiet," the 26-year-old activist said in a message from his prison cell.

Also honored: Floribert Chebeya Bahizire, 29, a student leader form Zaire; Martin O'Brien, 28, coordinator of the Committee on Administration of Justice in Northern Ireland; and Stacey Kabat, 29, of Boston, director of a group called Battered Women Fighting Back.

Each received a check for $25,000 to be given to a human rights group they select. The prizes were presented by Nairn, the actress Cybill Shepherd, MTV newswoman Tabitha Soren, and musicians Michael Stipe of REM and Lou Reed in an event with the production values of a Hollywood awards show.

Bahizire, speaking in French, appealed for medical aid and humanitarian assistance to his countrymen injured in confrontations with government forces.

COLLEGIAN

SOME READ FOR INSIGHT, SOME READ FOR THOUGHT, SOME READ FOR COMICS, SOME READ FOR SPORTS, SOME READ FOR THE HOROSCOPE, SOME READ FOR MENU, SOME READ FOR FILLERS, SOME READ FOR INSIDE JOKES, SOME READ FOR SOME, SOME READ FOR

WE'RE COOKIN' NOW.

The Collegian.

The only recyclable home entertainment system that fits in a backpack.

In Your Rush To Leave For Break
PLEASE DON'T FORGET TO RECYCLE

HAPPY HOLIDAYS
Housing Services
Recycling Program
545-1153

NEW POSITIONS AVAILABLE FOR SECOND SEMESTER
ASSISTANT RESIDENCE DIRECTOR
RESIDENTIAL EDUCATION/HOUSING SERVICES

The Assistant Resident Director (ARD) position is a live-in graduate staff position, approximately 30 hours per week. The position includes the following responsibilities:

- Assist with supervision of Resident Assistants
- Active involvement with programing efforts in the halls
- Assist with policy enforcement and implementation of Judicial systems
- Implementation of administrative systems regarding maintenance and operations; housing assignments; and other related areas
- Other student development efforts as assigned by Residence Director

Qualifications: Enrollment in the UMASS graduate degree-granting program throughout appointment. Demonstrated organizational skills; ability to interact with diverse student population; Familiarity with university residence hall systems and/or related management experience.

Compensation: The salary is $212.00 per week plus housing.

Application Process: For priority consideration, send letter of interest and resume by December 18th to: ARD SELECTION COMMITTEE c/o Gay Douglas, Thoreau Area Office, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003

Combat Boots
$49.99
Cross Creek Turtlenecks
100% cotton
$9.99
RICH'S
RICH'S ARMY/NAVY & CASUAL CLOTHES
24 Center St., Northampton
586-0275
(Next to the Iron Horse)

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful Newly remodeled Facility • Sunny Greenhouse • Sushi Bar • Beautiful Lounge with Big Screen TV.
Serving Lunch & Dinner 7 days a week • Lunch Specials served daily
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30AM-10PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11PM
WITH COUPON 10% OFF DINING ROOM OR CARRY OUT • DINNER • ONLY
EVERY MONDAY THROUGH THURSDAY IN OUR LOUNGE 4PM-7PM, ENJOY Happy Hour $2.00 Appetizers from our special menu • $1.00 Draft Beer
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Dr. • 256-8800

Pearl Street Nightclub

DANCE CLUB
Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R.
Thursday- WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R WHMP BROADCASTING LIVE
Friday- Dancing with DJ Dennis Playing The Best Dance Music of Today ♦♦Free Admission Before 10:00pm♦♦ ♦Free All Night with College I.D.♦ Promotion Prizes & Giveaways All Night
Saturday - Disco 2000 THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ DAVE Featuring The Best Dance Hits From The 70's, 80's & 90's.

Thurs., Dec. 31-8:00pm/21+/
NEW YEARS EVE BASH
Dancing Upstairs with DJ Dennis...Live Music Downstairs with RIPPOPOTAMUS...Champagne Toast...Continental Breakfast...Prizes, Party Favors...Two Floors of Fun...Advance tickets Available

LIVE MUSIC
Thurs., Dec. 10-8:30pm/18+/
Grateful Dead Tribute
THE ZEN TRICKSTERS

Fri., Dec. 11-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
Tribute to the DOORS
RIDERS ON THE STORM

Free Admission Before 10:00pm
Free All Night w/ College I.D

Sat., Dec. 12-8:30pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND

Stuart Getz Band

Tues., Dec. 15-8:00pm
ARC ANGELS

Featuring:
Doyle Bramhall II
Charlie Sexton
Tommy Shannon*
Chris Layton*
(*Formerly of Stevie Ray Vaughn & Double Trouble)
The Poorboys

Thurs., Dec. 17-8:30pm/18+/
AC/DC Tribute
BACK IN BLACK

Fri., Dec. 18-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
Rush Tribute
MOVING PICTURES

Sat., Dec. 19-8:30pm
POP BLACK with Michael Gregory

Sat., Dec. 26-8:30pm
LOBSTERZ FROM MARS

Thurs., Jan. 7-7:00pm/18+/
MARKY MARK

Sat., Jan. 9-8:30pm
WHO'S KIDDIN' WHO

Thur., Jan. 21-8:30pm/18+/
THE MACHINE

Sat., Jan. 23-8:30pm
MAX CREEK

Tickets Available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Records, For The Record in Amherst. Ticket Pro (800) 426-7600
10 Pearl Street, Northampton • 584-7771

■ blood drive

continued from page 3

instrumental in helping organize the successful blood drives: Melville and Thoreau, Kappa Kappa Psi, Tau Beta Sigma, Alpha Epilson Pi, Alpha Delta Phi and the School of Nursing.

Marion also thanked Iota Phi Theta, Tae Kwon Do, Army ROTC, Human Kindness Project, Sigma Delta Tau, Pi Kappa Alpha, Tau Beta Pi, VIBES, EMT, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Kappa, Delta Upsilon, Phi Mu Delta, Alpha Phi Omega and the Collegian.

"On behalf of the many patients who have benefited from your generosity. . . thank you for helping us in making this holiday meaningful for others," stated an advertisement from the American Red Cross.

The last drive of this semester is Tuesday, Dec. 15 in Campus Center room 163 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

■ engineers

continued from page 3

be empowering for the students. "It helps them realize what's possible and how to make it happen."

This is very valuable to women in engineering, some of whom doubt their abilities to do research or teach at the college level, Hellman said.

"It's a learning situation in many, many ways," she said.

A series of weekly seminars is also part of the internship program. The participants meet with Hellman to discuss issues of importance to women in engineering, such as assertiveness and sexism in the workplace.

Hellman said she felt discussions about sexism in the field are particularly beneficial to students. "Most women don't want to believe it exists. If they're prepared, they won't be so shaken."

The Women in Engineering Program also sponsors a student chapter of the Society of Women Engineers, a national professional society for women. The organization's activities include a Big-Little Sister Network, a student mentor program which pairs upper-class students with first-year students, and "Shadow An Engineer," a program in which working women engineers sponsor student visits to the workplace.

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413 253 2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

CAFE DICARLO
5-College Student Dinner Special
Choice of:
• Lasagna Verde
• Classic Pesto with Linguine
• Veal Parmigiana
• Cozze Aglio Olio e Pepperoncini (mussels with spicy olive oil and pasta)
Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.
Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Dec. 30, 1992
71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

BASHA'S BARGAIN BASEMENT
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
That Includes Elegant Silver Jewellery, Richly Colored Hand Embroidered Ladies Dresses & Exquisite Hand-Crafted Gifts.
241 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 413-586-6030

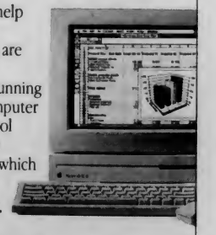
Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:
The holiday gift you can really use.

Tell your folks a new Macintosh will help you succeed today as well as tomorrow. It shows you're thinking ahead.

An Apple® Macintosh® computer is the one holiday gift that will help you work better and faster from one new year to the next. Because Macintosh is so easy to use. And thousands of software applications are available to help you with any course you'll ever take. There's even software that allows you to exchange information with computers running MS-DOS or Windows. In fact, Macintosh is the most compatible computer you can buy. And the advantages of Macintosh don't end when school does — the majority of Fortune 1000 companies now use Macintosh computers. So ask your Apple Campus Reseller to help you choose which Macintosh to put at the top of your holiday gift list.



Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619
MONDAY-FRIDAY 9-5 SATURDAY 11-3

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. MS-DOS is a registered trademark, and Windows a trademark, of Microsoft Corporation. *Based on a survey conducted by Computer Intelligence, 1991

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

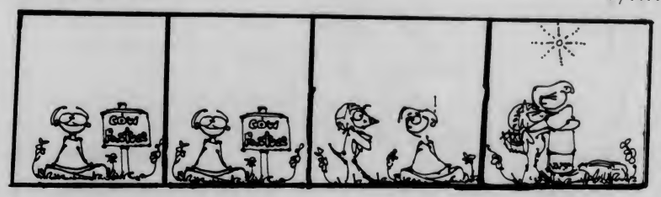
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY & RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Origin of the expression, "Putting on the dog."

ALL STAFF ELECTIONS TODAY UNTIL 8PM

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unexpected news could spoil your plans. Frustration will get you down if you sit around and stew. Lighten up! A delay or schedule change could work to your advantage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Exciting events are unfolding behind the scenes. An invitation could prove irresistible. Check transportation arrangements for this evening. Turn on the charm at business functions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): True friends are a tremendous resource. Count on them to be there when needed. Mix and mingle, make important phone calls and perform introductions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Partnerships hold great promise — you can talk out your concerns with close allies. If your job list is overwhelming, tackle the most important task first.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your sixth sense will tell you what is hot and what is not in business. A partner who is sensitive to your needs appears right on time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Once you set your mind to something, you can accomplish miracles. You reap rich rewards from turning a strained relationship into a comfortable one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Have the courage to make your own decisions today. Your hunch about distant affairs or a legal matter gives you the edge. In romance, trust your heart. Give partner another chance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make a commitment to higher goals today. Think big and you will achieve great things. Friends are a source of inspiration. Don't keep your dreams — in time, they can become a reality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could get a unique opportunity to make life easier for others today. Act on this to create warm feelings and win lasting regard.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Partnerships thrive when there is spontaneous sharing. Get out of a rut exchange bad habits for healthy new ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An unexpected introduction could prove memorable. A budding alliance will flourish if you exchange secrets. Do your holiday shopping by telephone or mail to save time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Steer clear of those spreading gossip. A gentle approach works best if loved ones are acting moody. Optimism and joy are essential.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

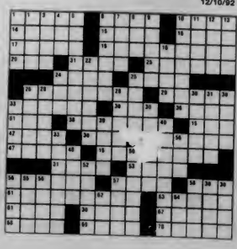
ACROSS
1 Imprint
6 Comoa participant
10 Cook book
14 Therefore: in a sense
15 Norse god
16 Above
17 Chosen: today
18 One of four at 26 Across
20 Greek letter
21 Flanders river
23 Incidents
24 Anagram for 25 Across
25 Deneb, for one
26 Black Hills memorial Mount
29 Stitched
33 Engraved gems
34 Leprechaun
36 Cupola
37 Attorney's deg
38 Creator of 26 Across
41 — Tin Tin
42 Waugh or Gunness
44 — de pluma
45 Property
47 Entertainer Cohen
49 Area east of 26 Across
51 Thespian's goal
53 Let
54 Acting Plummer
57 City SE of Milan
58 Janny
61 Saa 18 Across
63 Group of nine
65 To — precisely
66 Containment
67 Solemn
68 Anagram for deer
69 Units at Wimbledon
70 Overfeeds

DOWN
1 Benefit
2 Hamblatonian gait
3 Taj Mahal site
4 Daisy or West
5 Creates mischief with "with"
6 Foe of 6 Across
7 Redolence
8 The Grande, for one
9 Beginning
10 Like old New England bridges
11 Hot spot
12 Liquefy
13 Liberal or fine
19 Gabor and Peron
22 Hic locks gave him might
24 Monogram of 1948 Nobel poet
25 Convince
26 Political gathering
27 Moderate brown
28 Dry fruit of the sandbox tree
30 Word with weary or wide
31 Exudes
32 Contradict
33 Person of few words
35 Gathered in the sails
39 Court attire
40 Interpretations
43 Fattened on grain
46 Tiny colonizer
48 Protuberance
50 Talks monotonously
52 Household gods
54 Slightly open
55 Dole with "out"
56 For —
57 Hilton's "— Horizon"
58 Med. study
59 Banisteros of golf
60 Fr. holy women
62 Frat letters
64 — pro nobis

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

B	E	T	H		E	L	B	E		A	M	Y
A	M	O	U	R		N	O	L	L		A
M	I	T	R	E		T	U	A	N		D	I	C	K
	R	E	S	T	R	A	I	N	I	N	G	S
			T	R	A	M	S		C	E	P	T
A	B	C		O	L	G	A		R	A	I	S	E	D
H	E	L	P		E	L	I	A		S	N	O	Z	E
O	H	A	R	A		E	A	R		S	H	A	R	E
P	A	N	E	L	S		Y	E	N		S	P	A	D
E	N	S	A	T	E		A	M	O	S	S
		M	O	N	O	L	I	T	H	S
S	E	R	B	S		T	I	C	K	E	R	T	A	P	E
E	T	A	L		P	I	L	O	T		E	M	O	T	E
A	R	N	E		T	I	E	T	E		N	O	M	E	N
M	E	G			A	I	L	E			N	E	I	S	I	T

12/10/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Mike Webber
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Janet Riley, Michele Bakis, David Marykahin, J.R. Dobbs

Menu

LUNCH
Fishburger
Grilled Cheez
BASICS LUNCH
Hearty Latin Stew
Grilled Cheez

DINNER
Glazed Harvest Ham
Chicken Stew & a Biscut
BASICS DINNER
Roman Rice & Beans
Chicken Stew & a Biscut

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Men's swimming on road

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team hopes to continue its winning ways this afternoon in a dual meet with Springfield College in Springfield.

Fresh from last weekend's inspiring second place finish in the Atlantic 10 Championships, the Minutemen, 2-0 in the New England Conference and 3-0 overall, face a 4-3 (5-3) Springfield squad that lost to UMass 188-106 last year.

"Historically, they've been a real good rival," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth. "In the last few years, they've been a little weaker than in the past, but they have a very good coach in John Taffe, who is working very hard to build the program back up."

The meet will be the last of the in-school semester for the Minutemen as they prepare, with the rest of the school, for final exams. They will spend the days around and including the New Year's Day holiday at the Lake Worth Invitational in Florida.

Springfield should pose no threat to the Minutemen, as Yarworth will be racing his swimmers in their off-events, planning his strategy for later in the year.

"There are certain things I know about the swimmers now," Yarworth said. "It tells me what I am going to do with them for the next 12 weeks."

The highlight of the meet, Yarworth said, will be the swimmers who didn't make the travel squad to last week's A-10 championships, shaved and trying to set personal bests. When the New England Championship rolls around in February, Yarworth can only have 18 swimmers on the squad. His list of 18 is still up in the air, so this handful of swimmers will be battling for roster spots.

Springfield has two swimmers who Yarworth said are excellent swimmers. Chris Parent in the butterfly and individual medley races, while Brian Grey is a middle-distance and sprint-freestyle swimmer.

"We're trying to get in as much work as we can before finals," Yarworth said. "Our goal is to get our training base built up before finals and Christmas and be ready to go when we get to Florida."

■ fencing

continued from page 12

"It was no easy feat and frankly if I hadn't been working on the dust floors [of Totman], who knows what I could have done?" Roaf says.

While fencing might not be a mainstream sport, it shares some of the same problems that many high visibility sports encounter, as Santala, a senior art history major from Attleboro, Mass. can attest to. The idea of gender equity in fencing is becoming more prevalent.

"Traditionally the women just compete in foil," Santala said. "Last year they added eppe, and next year there will be sabre."

"Sometimes women will fence on the men's side and they get looks and things as if it's shocking to lose to a woman," she said.

There will be no Sweet Sixteen for this team and Bob Costas isn't likely to host the Fencing Halftime Report, but in some way these athletes are receiving more than all that recognition.

"It's given me the opportunity to learn that if you work hard, you will succeed," Roaf said. "You work hard and you see the results and it's a terrific feeling. No matter what I try, I know I can do it because of what fencing has shown me."

And it's sexy too.

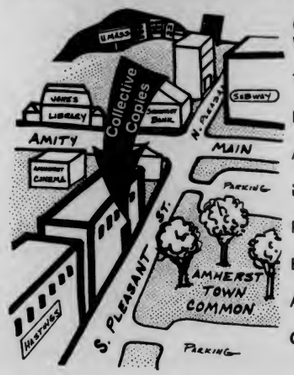
AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN
QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE
253-3834

TEXTNET™
The Students Used Book Exchange

Make up to 300% more by selling your books directly to your classmates through the directory listing for used texts!
Call or write for free information: P.O. Box 459, Sunderland, MA 01375
(413) 665-R471 or 800-949-TEXT (8398)

GOTTA ROCK
Rock with Boston's Hottest Bands!
8 Nights • 8 Bands
January 4-8 & January 11-15, 1993
PLUS: $25 Lift Tickets
Ski: $25 with valid College ID
Stay: $22 per night in Snow Cap Ski Dorm
Sunday river MAINE
Reservations: 1-800-543-2SKI

COLLECTIVE COPIES
29 South Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-6425 FAX: 253-7475



Check out What We have to offer!
Thesis Copying
Dissertations
Acid Free Paper
Laminating
Recycled Paper
Binding
AND,
GREAT PRICES
10% OFF ANY ORDER with this coupon
COLLECTIVE COPIES
expires 1/1/93

■ Scott's

continued from page 12

Past: The Boston Red Sox let Wade Boggs go and the New York Yankees are supposedly interested. They're not over the Curse of the Bambino, now they'll have to deal with the Curse of the Chickenman?

Most Knowledgeable Mother in the Area of Sports: Hands down, The Shirl. She called Bird's retirement, Canseco's trade and UMass' Sweet Sixteen appearance. All this and she makes a hot and sour soup that'll leave you gasping.

The Shirl, she's got the Scotty — now all she needs is The Nobel.

The Lifetime Achievement Award a.k.a the "It's Nice to Have You Back Where You Belong" Award: Just back from a journey through the jungle, Dan Wetzel returns in earnest to the sports desk, a place he never should have left.

Best Use of the Media to Motivate a Squad: It didn't work for Butch Hobson but it just might for Coach Cal. It's bad enough reading and listening to what the Fourth Estate has to say, then to realize you're not one of Cal's Pals — well, they seem to be responding.

Remember, there are no losers at The Scotty's, in fact there was no one at The Scotty's — the invitations never went out.

Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on the new quarterback for the Patriots, Santa Claus.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

■ Minutemen

continued from page 12

• Six-foot-eight Minutemen signee Tyrone Weeks of Philadelphia's Franklin Learning Center, ranked No. 20 in USA Today, chalked up 21 points, 20 rebounds and seven blocks in a victory over West Philadelphia High School.

Franklin Learning Center may not be able to compete in the state championships this year because the team was caught scrimmaging with a local community college team, an apparent no-no with the state board of athletics.

The competition will heat up for Weeks Saturday when he faces former UMass recruit Mark Jackson (6-foot-10, 250) of No. 22 Philadelphia Roman Catholic.

• Massachusetts-bound Carmelo Travieso, a 6-foot-3 guard from Braintree (MA) Thayer Academy, ranked No. 24 in USA Today, pumped in 18 points and recorded five steals in a 71-46 victory over Concord (N.H.) St. Paul's.

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

Check It Out!

★100% cotton
★ 3 colors to choose from ★Made in the U.S., eh?
Holiday FUN!
at J★RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-2013
22 Masonic St., Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton

SUBWAY®
of Amherst
$1.00 OFF any FOOTLONG SUB
(With This Coupon)
Not Good With Any Other Offer
Offer Expires 12/22/92
4 Main Street• Amherst • 256-1919
Open Til 2am, Thurs. Fri & Sat #3

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

PERSONALS

ACTIVITIES

Free in January – Lridge lessons. M-W-F, 4-6 pm 1/8 to 1/J5. Campus Center outside the coffee shop. RSVP 865-7877

AMAZING ATARI

1040 ST FOR SALE! IT FEATURES 1M RAM, 30 M HARD DRIVE, B/W MONITOR AND SOME FREE SOFTWARE. ONLY $500 OR BEST OFFER CALL GEO IMMEDIATELY AT 546-5317

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Commuter area government Vice presidential elections Monday, Dec. 14 10-4 pm outside of Munchy Store Student Union

Need a locker? We have them at OCHOI 428 Student Union

New Years in Montreal $79 per person. Price includes round trip motor coach 3 days 2 nights hotel first class hotel downtown, 1 dinner at Peel Pub free admission to Metropolis
Call Reliable Tours
365 Broadway Rt. 1
Lynnfield, MA 01940
617 598 9930
617 592-0640

PVOC Oil Coop Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. Register at OCHO 428 Student Union or call 545-0865. Save money and stay warm Come join now

Student Renters and landlords should stop by the off-campus housing office to pick up the latest landlord/tenant guide, its free and an absolute must. For all your housing questions call 5-0865 or stop by

Subletting over Wintersession? The off-campus Housing Office at 428 Student Union offers a great way to find subletting or sublet a property over wintersession. All leasing questions answered with a smile. Call 5 0865 or stop by

AUTO FOR SALE

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

BILLY BOARD

Oh my God you guys will never believe what happened today! Queen Billy lost her purse, Billy #1 got stage fright Billy #2 saw William at the FLRC, Billy #3 lost her bun end Billy #9 got e call from No. No. Donna Billy went to the Bread & Breakfast, and nobody knows where Alf is! Crawl like un gato
Love, Billy

FOR RENT

Amherst Bolchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes call 686-4270

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. Room avail. $275+ 1 bedroom apartment avail.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

January only: Student in family home, one mile from UM, on bus route 250 all incl. 253-2037

Leverett – close to campus – room in sunny home in exchange for 12 hours of childcare per week plus some light housekeeping duties. Must be available for early morning (7 am -8:30 am) and some afternoons (3:30 - 5 pm) Car essential some transporting of children. 548-9395

New York City – Furnished rooms and apartments for intersession and weekend stays. Upper West side. Reasonable rates. 212-662-1358 Save this ad!

NORTHAMPTON – two 4 room houses avail. Dec. – Jan. $775-800. Skibiski Realators No Pets. 584-3428

One bedroom apt.
Southwood
362/month
256-4977

One big bedroom in Sunderland house take over my lease Available now 230.00 month + 665-4348 or 568-4323
On bus line

Single room for rent – Half mile to campus, on bus line, for 260/mo incl. utils. Jan. rent free – call 549-8114

Single room Phillips St. $185+ Call 549-1458

2 rooms available in 2bed in Amherst 220/clean/bus/ASAP call Holly 549-4259

3 bedrooms available in a spacious house in Sunderland Spring Semester on bus route Call 665-0265 190.00/mo +

FOR SALE

Amiga 52 MB HD, 4 MB fast IMB Chip RAM, WECS $599 w/out $499 /B.O Raymund 367-9269

LOLLIPOPS FOR HOLIDAY GIVING Inexpensive hard candy pops!
You choose color, flavor, shape
883-2126

Neon light for sale! Great Xmas gift. 100 dollars or B.O. call Jay 548-0890

Rhygin MTB Frame
19" True Temper OX2
Super light fast handling
Custom Hendbuilt in USA
New Cond. CHEAP
Pete 253-2154

Super 8 Camera and projector perfect working order, $30 546-7363

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP!

Desperately need PHISH tix for New Year's.
Call Eric 546-0279

HELP WANTED

Babysitter – Afternoons, January June need car and references. 548-9096

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SI-ESTA ask for Bonnie

Would you like to work? At Hampshire county transit part time drivers will train for evenings and weekends earn up to $10.05 per hour starting rate $6.50 have company paid insurance, paid holidays, paid vacations, paid sick days paid funeral leave. Apply to: Hampshire County Transit 54 Industrial Drive Northampton, MA 01060

HOLIDAY GIFTS

Go to Basha's bargain basement. They have oriental rugs, clothing, and also great jewelry. As an added feature, their jewelry is half off, that's right, half off! Go down and pick out your gift for the holidays, everything is priced just right. 241 Main St. Northampton, MA Their stuff is good Thank you

INSTRUCTION

Voice lessons – all levels
Learn to sing through instruction and application to music. Start over Jan. term anytime. Call Laura 253-2884

LOST

Keys, campus center concourse 12/5/92 Blue Keyring "Windener University" Big bucks reward call 546-0008

Lost watch with braided leather band 12/7 between NE and Mahar. Sentimental Value. Reward 546-1171

MUSICIANS

Drummer needed: Phish, creative Improv 256-8115

Keyboardist Wanted: Yes, Phish, etc. 586-9377

PERSONALS

Always bite the hend that feeds you my friends. Take them for all they have. Never look back and don't ask questions. What comes around will go once again. 6402373 is leaveing for a place he remembers as home. Thanks for the ride #178 UMASS. I mean it in the best of terms. Numbers take over.
Get your hands out of my pocket

Dear JV
Congrats! Graduating a semester early! I'm so proud of you. Just remember, we'll always be the wonder twins!
Ans

Dear Tai,
I love you honey!
Happy Birthday!
Love,
Guenevere

JDE- Happy two year enniversary! Many more to come!
Love, JTF

Julie T.
Thanks for everything!
You've been a great R.A. and a good friend to many of us!
We will miss you!
Love
Washington's 18th floor

Kerry, Suzanne, Becky Kimberly, Kristina, Congratulations!
We'll all miss you next semester
I love you!
Lisa C.

Mark, Steve, Jeff, Josh +2, F.H.J...
Ed, Matt, Sean, Paul, Marco, Shawn, Tom, Bob, Brian, Paul, Roberto, Luiz...poor Mike ... to be continued (on the second hand)
E.C.B

Susan Bernegger's 22
on this December 10,
so happy birthday to our Sue
From all her fun cool friends

Suzanne, Kerry, Kimberly & Kristina sledding, cooking, HRTA, and the price is right! What am I going to do next semester without you guys. Congratulations graduates! I love you tons – Jill

W.C.B.
Let's go to Fitchburg for some breakfast – powerbars w/lots of calories!

PETE'S DRIVE IN

Pete's Drive In
December Special
2 burgers for 2 bucks

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508 228-6265

ROOMATES WANTED

Fun, friendly female needed to share 2 bedroom Brandywine apt. Interested? Call 549-3785 and ask for Kim or Leura

Roomate Needed!
For a large bedroom in Puffton ASAP
Only 178.50/Mo.
Heat and Hot H20 incl.
Please call 549-1172
& ask for Nora

We need a Housemate!!!
Large bedroom open in five bedroom house. 187/mo +util. Jan-May. Call Chris or just ask! This means you!
549-3525

Amherst 2 bedroom apt 1 room for rent 2 full baths w/heat and hot water included on bus route available immediately. Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Apt room for rent
Uptown – 2 minutes from bus stop m/f $200+ 549-2810
A stumble home from bars

Female Housemate Wanted
To share a large house in Amherst many extras: Washer & Dryer, porch +++ more
Close to town and campus
Call Scott at 253-3876 after 7 pm

Female nonsmoker wanted to share bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Cheap rent 2 minute walk to town (on bus rt) walking distance to campus 253-5219

Fun but serious fem student looking for roomies Amherst house 195+ starts Spring sem 6-1642 for details

Housemates needed male, female. Great house across street from campus. Many great features. Call Jason, 549-8341

Male roomate needed to share large bedroom, 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

One female
Brandywine apts
Start Jan 93
$190 inc. Heat/water
Jen 549-7845

Roomates needed call Mill Valley estates 253-7377 Single or double for 1 bedroom

Single room avail. in spacious house spng sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo+.

Single room available in 3 bedroom townhouse apartments. Call 549-3523.

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The legal services center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center 545-1995

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 256-8383

TO SUBLET

1 responsible female for single sublet $195 + 549-7619

Need extra cash? I need to sublet a room during intersession. Please call Nancy at 546-0256

Wintersession room South Amherst $220 inclusive 256-0034

TRAVEL

New Years in Montreal! $79 per person price includes round trip motor coach 3 days 2 nights hotel first class hotel downtown 1 dinner at Peel Pub free admission to Metropolis
Call Reliable Tours
365 Broadway Rt. 1
Lynnfield, MA 01940
617 598 9930
617 592 0640

SKI-Intercollegiate Ski weeks, ONLY $209 Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING IMOUNTAINSIDE CONDO/5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Molson and MT. SUTTON, CANADA (just across the Vermont border) Group Leader Discounts. Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Spring Break '93 Call Ski Travel Unlimited
1 800 999 SKI 9.

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $55 Before Jan. 1
Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers typed – free cover page, spell check, $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing. By Pro Writer. Fast. 253-9123

Typing: Fast, accurate and conveniently located to serve your needs. No job too small. Reasonable rates. Contact Donna/Dianne 542-2313

Typing/Wordprocessing,
Resumes, reports, theses
Laser printing. Campus pick up and delivery
Call Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

Social Distortions
First Album
Mommys Little Monster
Can you help?
Call Amy 549-8870

Tutor for Econ 104
Will pay $ Call Tim 549-8177

Sports

Red Sox sign ex-Cub Dawson to contract

By RONALD BLUM
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Boston has a new big bopper, a bat to put dents in The Wall and maybe a couple over it, too.

The Red Sox decided Wednesday that Mark McGwire was too expensive, so they agreed to a $9.3 million, two-year contract with outfielder Andre Dawson.

Dawson, 38, was turned down by the Chicago Cubs in his bid for a multi-year contract.

Combined with Tuesday's acquisition of outfielder Ivan Calderon, he should give Boston's batting order a lot more punch.

"The character of the ballclub had changed dramatically with these guys," Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman said.

Gorman said he wasn't done yet.

The Red Sox were said to be close to signing reliever Tom Henke, but their roster was full at 40 so no additions were possible for now.

Boston was also talking trade with San Diego about left-hander Bruce Hurst, a former Red Sox.

"We're still negotiating," Gorman said.

Dawson hit .277 for the Cubs last season with 22 homers and 90 RBIs and his first choice had been to return to Chicago.

Soon after Monday's deadline to re-sign passed, Dawson's agent, Richard Moss, and Gorman began talking.

"We talked one or two times yesterday and twice again today," Gorman said. "It came together rather quickly."

Dawson has 399 homers in his big league career, which began in 1976, along with 1,425 RBI and a .282 lifetime average.

He spent 11 seasons in Montreal, then signed with Chicago before the 1987 season, shaming the Cubs into taking him by signing a blank contract and letting them fill in the salary.

In 1992, he made $3.3 million in the second season of a $6,625,000, two-year deal. He gets a $350,000 signing bonus from the Red Sox, $4.7 million next season and $4.25 million in 1994.

"It's a deal that makes sense for them and the size was OK," Moss said. "There was a moment of hesitation. It's a city he doesn't know and a new league. Those are adjustments he has to make."

Dawson played 139 games in the outfield last season. But he may see some time as a designated hitter for Boston.

Gorman said he didn't think Dawson had any significant health problems.

"He plays the same number of games every year, but everyone wonders about his knee," Gorman said.

Boston has been searching for an outfielder with power after an anemic offense produced just 84 home runs last season and scored 599 runs.

Gorman had talked with the agents for Barry Bonds, Dave Winfield and Ruben Sierra, but McGwire, a first baseman, had been his first choice.

"We just couldn't get together money-wise," Gorman said, saying talks continued as late as Wednesday morning.

Gorman said he was talking with the agent for a reliever to replace Jeff Reardon, and agents said it was Henke and the deal was close to being done.

Henke, 35 on Dec. 21, was 3-2 with 34 saves and a 2.26 ERA for the Toronto Blue Jays in 1992. He was 220 saves in 11 major league seasons.

For now, though, the big news was Dawson. Although he has 310 career steals, he has just 10 combined in the last two seasons. Boston had just 44 steals last season, easily the fewest in the majors.

"The Red Sox are the only team Andre Dawson can go to and add speed," joked Alan Hendricks, the agent for Roger Clemens.

Scott's Shots

Live from the world-renowned UMass Fine Arts Center, it's the 103rd annual Scotty's Award Show, brought to you in part by no one in particular.

Recognizing the creme de la creme in the sports world and beyond, this year's recipients will receive the coveted Golden Scotty in addition to a night of pool and merriment at the Montague Inn.

Without further delay, the envelopes please:

David
SCOTT

Best Quotes by a Coach Named Jim: With the departure of Jim Reid, we are left with women's soccer coach Jim Rudy as this year's winner. Rudy lived up to his advance billing with his postgame soliloquies, a.k.a. ramblings. For convenience we've combined the season highlights into one sentence.

"The Kiddie Korps showed some quite nice things up front with Sa-Lad and Nutmeg even against a quite capable, solid performer in what was a great day for college soccer."

Best New Minds in Boyden Building: Even though I lost a good ten lines of cheap shots per week when David Bischoff and Frank McInerney took their show on the road, it's nice to see the likes of Glenn Wong and Margaret Driscoll enter the Athletic Department picture.

Both Wong and Driscoll represent the innovative type of people vital to the emergence of UMass Athletics on the national scene. They see the potential and know the importance of the '90s buzzword "marketing." (Cases in point — the new Minuteman Mascot and the sponsorship deal with Spalding.)

Best Supplier of Sweets on the UMass Campus: Another two-time winner, the glue that holds the Sports Information Office together, Ruthie Drew. Ruthie's round tin of sweet treats has brought many of us through what otherwise would have been dreadful days. This semester's best offering were the soft, high-sugar Frooties. Rootie's Frooties, what could be more appropriate?

Best Use of "Let the Action Speak for Itself": The UMass football team and their first-year coach Mike Hodges. Picked to finish somewhere between Barbazon Beauty School and Mind Extension University, Hodges' boys made a great run at the playoffs and brought a sense of pride to a community lacking the Pigskin Religion. Let's not forget the reinstatement of tailgating as a significant correlation to the Minutemen's success.

Best Neckwear in a Supporting Role: Not to be confused with the prestigious Cravat King award, this is awarded to the 458 assistants, trainers, trainers assistants, assistant trainers, trainers to the assistants and so on, who sit along side John Calipari on the UMass bench. Accepting the bronze statue will be slicksters Bill Bayno and Bryan Gorman, either of whom could very well be returning to the podium in April to assume the role of Cravat King.

The Distinguished Teachers Award: Usually awarded to a University professor, this year it goes to The Gang at the Montague Inn. My lessons around the pool table have been more valuable than anything I could've learned from Puddin' Head Wilson. Ed and Tina run a fine institution of higher learning.

Best Way to Show You Didn't Learn from the

Turn to SCOTT'S, page 11

Calhoun quiet on UMass rivalry

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

If you think the University of Connecticut men's basketball team is running from the University of Massachusetts, you may be correct.

UConn is so interested in shying away from a controversy with UMass that Tim Tolokan, the sports information director at Connecticut, will not allow basketball coach Jim Calhoun to be interviewed by the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

"To tell you the truth, I will not recommend Coach Calhoun call you or anyone from UMass back," Tolokan said. "I know you have a job to do, but I have to make sure UConn stays away from a controversy. We do not need to answer questions concerning UMass-UConn."

Tolokan also said Calhoun was busy with the Big East press and he would not have time to be questioned about a possible UMass-UConn game, the Atlantic 10-Big East rivalry or New England basketball in general.

"We are marching on playing the best schedule we can," Tolokan said. "We have 18 Big East games, Florida State and Purdue. We don't have to apologize for our schedule."

Looks like a Husky-Minutemen match-up is a long way from happening.

• The Minuteman who made the biggest impression on Florida State coach Pat Kennedy during last week's UMass-Florida State game was reportedly sophomore forward Lou Roe. Kennedy was surprised by Roe's strength in the post against Douglas Edwards.

• UMass recruit Marcus Camby, a 6-foot-10 center from Hartford Public High School, in Hartford, Conn., has reportedly passed his SATs. Camby took the test in late October and scored over the NCAA minimum 700, ensuring he will be in uniform next season for John Calipari.

• Two A-10 teams scored important victories on Tuesday night, both on national television.

First, Temple downed Boston College in a half-empty Conte Forum 79-72, on the strength of guard Rick Brunson's 17 points. Brunson was planning on transferring to BC after last season but changed his mind and returned to John Chaney's team during the summer.

In the other A-10-Big East battle on ESPN, Rhode Island defeated intra-state rival Providence 81-79 in overtime.

Turn to Minutemen, page 11

Fencing tries to make its point

Despite being overshadowed, sport finds some success

By DAVID SCOTT
Collegian Staff

In New York City, fencing is associated with back alley deals and illegal activity, but in Amherst fencing is a sport, plain and simple.

Now before you jump to another story, lend an ear to some University of Massachusetts fencing team members.

"Fencing is so sexy," says Melissa Santala, the UMass women's captain for epee and foil (two fencing "divisions").

Got your attention? How about this?

"It's really one of the last pure amateur sports," says Ed Roaf, Chief Executive Officer of sorts and member of Umass fencing. "We raised about $30,000 on our own this year."

Okay, it's a sport that's both sexy and seemingly immune to the corruption of big-time athletics, and yet very people have any knowledge of the sport. The Umass team would like to change that, and if winning is the way to attract a following in sports, then this squad is on the verge of something big.

Continuing a tradition begun in 1931, (making it what is believed to be the oldest continuous sports club on campus) the UMFT has compiled an impressive record again this season. Competing against some teams that field fully-funded varsity teams (Boston College for instance), UMass' club team has compiled a 190-124 (.605) record in men's and a 79-49 (.617) in women's competition, through last weekend. Those are some impressive numbers, but like many of the under-funded, under-noticed club sports, fencing is struggling for identity.

"Sure, a little more support from Athletics would be nice," says Roaf, a senior history major from Hamilton. "Over the last few years, they would just give us what they felt like."

The rest of the team's money comes from fundraising and $200 in dues each member pays. While the athletic department's contribution did increase somewhat, the team still practices in the lobby of Totman Gymnasium and they have trouble paying for and reserving time in the gym to host meets, Roaf said.

"The Athletic Department acknowledges us, but they keep us at arms length," Roaf says. "Our money has to come from somewhere. We're competing against teams that are operating at budgets two to three times the size of ours. Fundraising [presently t-shirt sales] is our best way."

The team has coaches who are paid, but Roaf and his fellow team members suggest that "it's a tremendous sacrifice of time" and the coaches' dedication is more a reflection of their love of the sport more than anything else.

"I never thought I'd play a sport in college," said team member R.J. Ferullo. "It's given me a sense of team and family, and being a captain [for men's sabre] has given me a great sense of responsibility. It's an inner feeling."

Ferullo, a junior history and political science major from Middleton, Mass. conceded that only his friends know he fences.

"No one else understands — they ask 'We have a fencing team?'" Ferullo says.

The bouts, in each of the three divisions — epee, foil and sabre — are very competitive, according to Roaf. The action is fast-paced and electronic devices are used to record "hits" on an opponent. Five points wins a match and bouts can be as quick as 20 seconds or as long as six minutes. The divisions are classified both by the type of weapon used and where an opponent can be attacked, whether it be a limited target area or a full one.

The team has close to 60 members and the more advanced fencers help those less proficient, each member is rated on a "ladder" by ability and whom they've beaten. Practices allow for the chance to overtake someone on the rung above you in a duel.

"I was a good example of what happens when you get lazy," said Roaf. "I got lazy and was 'offed' very quickly. The competitive nature prevents helps to prevent laziness."

Training entails long runs, and six-day practice weeks that include bladework, footwork and actual fencing.

"We'll practice up to four hours a day and no less than two," Roaf says. "There's a lot of drilling done to refine techniques."

So where exactly does one get involved in this somewhat obscure sport? Many team members first take it up as a gym class at the University, but Roaf's roots go much deeper.

"My dad was a big-time fencer at Tufts in the 1950's" Roaf said.

Roaf's dad can now lay claim to a "big-time" fencer of his own, for Ed qualified for the US National Team Olympic Trials last year, a gathering of the country's top 100 fencers. It was an accomplishment Roaf and his teammates are clearly proud of, but one that is somewhat overshadowed by the "What if . . .?" question.

Turn to FENCING, page 10

Just When You Thought The Semester Was Over...

Revenge of the FINALS!

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

Once again, final exams are upon us, likening our existence with regard to Winter break to that of a cat waiting for tweety-bird to come out of his cage.

Alas, how bad can a few tests be? After all, its not as though finals determine entire grades, nor should they be impossible. I mean, you have supposedly been looking at the material all semester, right? These are your courses, the ones you have been going to every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The finals should be breeze.

According to Linda Scott, Ph.D. and University Mental Health Services staff member, final exams tend to be anything but easy, and hit students pretty hard. Scott asserts that due to poor time-management throughout the semester, final exams push students over their usual stress limit, causing many to "freak out." The result, she observes, represents the first time in many students' careers that they do not do well academically.

Senior Finance major Egemen Erden affirms Scott's observations. Erden describes finals as being "intense," and as allowing no room for failure. For the past three years, Erden has gotten the same nerve-driven will to study non-stop for his finals, with the justification that "you just have to finish what you start."

Will Martin, a Senior majoring in Marketing agrees. "The way college is structured, it all comes down to one exam. The final can either pull you out of a hole or blow your average."

However, Dr. Scott contests that students need not experience such high levels of anxiety due to the fear of failing their finals. With improved time-management skills, we can all get a better perspective on the importance of these tests.

"People fail all the time," she proposes, "and sometimes you actually learn more from failing. It's not the end of the world."

Fifth year student Eric Bibeault agrees to the philosophy that stress is unnecessary and most of all, unproductive. "It [stress] is just one more thing you have to worry about, and takes your mind off what you have to do."

Tadesse Eshetu also supports the notion that anxiety and success do not mix. The sophomore Biochemistry major says that panicked cramming two nights before the exam is ineffective and avoidable. He feels that even someone who is really behind has a good chance of doing fairly well on the test if s/he outlines main points and studies as far in advance as possible.

"Talk to people who know the stuff," he offers, "that way they can summarize."

Likewise, Dr. Jerry Davoli of the Public Health Department suggests effective ways of utilizing however much (or little) time left to study. First, Davoli espouses the need to realize that all the stress in the world cannot make up for a semester's work, and

TURN TO FINALS, PAGE 4

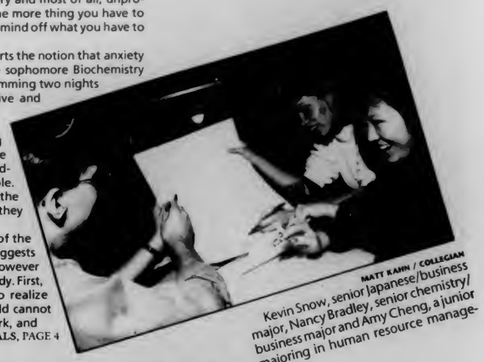
Usha Pitts, BDIC senior, and HRTA junior Alexia Marin.
JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Fitzpatrick Estripiel, legal studies freshman.
ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

Matthew Davison, sophomore forestry major.
JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Michael Watte, economics/psychology senior.
JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Harry T. KcKinnon, electrical engineering junior.
ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN



Kevin Snow, senior Japanese/business major, Nancy Bradley, senior chemistry/business major and Amy Cheng, a junior majoring in human resource management.
MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

THIS WEEKEND

LSAT
MCAT
GMAT
GRE

SAVE $150 on MCAT!
SAVE $100 on LSAT, GMAT & GRE!
• Place a deposit by December 15th •
CANNOT BE APPLIED RETROACTIVELY OR IN COMBINATION WITH ANY OTHER OFFER.
AMHERST OFFICE ONLY.

KAPLAN 549-5780
The answer to the test question

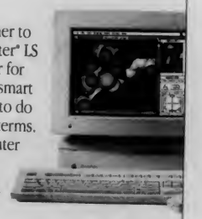
Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:
The Apple Computer Loan.

"I expected to pay a lot more than $35 a month for a new Macintosh IIsi and a printer."

Jennifer Minaya
Nursing Major

Jennifer obtained an Apple Computer Loan* that allowed her to buy her Apple® Macintosh® IIsi and an Apple Personal LaserWriter® LS printer. She knew that owning a powerful Macintosh computer for her full course load and her work as a doctor's assistant was a smart thing to do. And the Apple Computer Loan was the smart way to do it: easy application, fast turnaround and low, flexible payment terms. So Jennifer went to the only place that offers the Apple Computer Loan, her Apple Campus Reseller.

Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.



UNIVERSITY STORE

MONDAY - FRIDAY
9AM-5 PM
SATURDAY
11AM-3PM

© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, and LaserWriter are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.
*Based on Jennifer Minaya's Apple Computer Loan of $3,077.76, her monthly payment was $35 (interest only) as of 10/7/92. Principal payments may be deferred up to 4 years. The interest rate is variable, and is based on the average of the higher of the 30-day or 90-day commercial paper rates as reported in the Wall Street Journal, plus a spread of 5.35% (not to exceed 5.6%). The term of the loan is 8 years with no pre-payment penalty. The total finance charge on every $1,000 borrowed will be $543.38. Each applicant pays a $35.00 non-refundable application fee. Approved borrowers will be charged a 4% loan origination fee. The loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount and repaid over the life of the loan. For the month of October 1992, the interest rate was 7.6% with an APR of 8.8%.

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

COURTESY BEVERLY PARKER

Max Roach will entertain with other jazz luminaries tonight at the F.A.C.

THURSDAY

READING—Student Valley Productions presents readings from Works in Progress tonight and tomorrow from 7-10 p.m. in the Campus Center. Richard Greenberg's "Life Under Water" will be directed by Dan Blumenthal, as well as Susan De Blasio's "Working Title." Free.

IN CONCERT— Rock Gods from Chicopee will perform tonight at Sheehan's Cafe In Northampton, with special guest "The Tommy Twilight Revue." Call 586-4238 for showtime and ticket info.

THEATRE— Don't miss the outrageously "fresh and funny" look at feminism, The F Word. Northampton-based Sleeveless Theatre will put those who think of feminism as a dirty word in their place. Call 545-2511 to snag some tickets. Hampden Theatre, $5 general/$3 with ID.

IN CONCERT— Smith College hosts a Departmental Concert tonight through Saturday, from 1-4 p.m. Call 585-3220 for more info and tickets.

FILM— "My Beautiful Launderette" tells the tale of an interracial male couple that deals with issues of race, class and sexuality in modern day Britain. 7 p.m. Campus Center, Room 903. For more info call 545-2632.

IN CONCERT— The Zen Tricksters tribute the all-mighty Grateful Dead tonight at Pearl Street. The 18+ show kicks off at 8:30 p.m. Tie-dyes welcome. Call 584-7771 for more/ticket info.

THEATRE— The Chrysalis Theatre in Northampton presents Andrea Hairston's "Vision of Fire" as part of the Northampton '93 Eliminating Racism - Building Community project. Show begins at 8 p.m. at Thorne's Market, tickets $8. Reservations necessary, call 586-5553.

IN CONCERT— Max Roach will perform in an annual UMass December evening of jazz. Proceeds benefit the Fletcher Henderson Memorial Scholarship Fund, which enables students from the UMass Afro-American Music and Jazz Program to continue their studies. Don't miss this lively event. Tickets $18, $16 & $14 general/half-price for students. 8 p.m. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

LECTURE— "Sex, Drugs and Coming Out" will be presented at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, Room 101. A discussion of coming out as a process of adopting and developing a positive and mature identity as a lesbian or gay man. Free, and sponsored by the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns as well as The Regent Hospital of New York City.

IN CONCERT— The Iron Horse Music Hall proudly presents local musician Erica Wheeler. Don't miss this Hampshire College grad displaying home-grown folk talent. Call 584-0610 for more info/tickets.

THEATRE— "Big Tim and Fanny," tells of the relationship of a man and woman amid the poverty of New York's Lower East Side, and of the historically famous Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire of 1911. MHC Lab Theatre, 8 p.m. Shows through Sunday. Call 585-2406 for info and tickets, $4 general/$2 with ID.

IN CONCERT— Kenneth Fearn masters the piano in Debussy's Images, Books I and II. Part of the Music in the Noon Hour Series at SC's Sweeney Concert Hall, to begin at 12:30 p.m. 585-3150 for more info.

THEATRE— Carol S. Lashof's Medusa's Tale to be performed today and Saturday at SC's Theatre 14, Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts. This play tells the story of Perseus who pursues Medusa to prove himself a hero. 8 p.m. Reserved seating, $1. 585-3220.

IN CONCERT— Rent Party and Eve Was Right will join forces tonight at the Baystate Hotel to celebrate the Northampton music scene.. Recession price, $3. Call 253-7155 for more info.

THEATRE— "The Sound of a Voice" - David Henry Hwang's allegory of a woman and the man who visits her magical world will be presented by Smith College Theatre. 8 p.m., tonight and Saturday. Call 585-3220 for ticket and location info.

DANCE— The University Dancers will present a splendor of ballet, modern dance and jazz works. Faculty, students, graduate students, director Kathy Jennings and producer Andrea Watkins work together to achieve a show of varied entertainment. Rand Theatre, 8 p.m. $7 general/$4 students. 545-2511 for more info and tickets.

CRAFT FAIR— Check out the pottery, jewelry, wreaths, clothing, cards and other festive goodies today and tomorrow on the Campus Center Concourse, 9a.m.-4p.m. This annual event affords everyone the opportunity to see and purchase beautifully crafted items.

IN CONCERT— If you are in Worcester tonight, check out The Vienna Boys Choir, considered to be "the most popular choir ever to tour America" as they perform a holiday program of costumed operetta, sacred and secular songs, and folk music. 8 p.m., Mechanics Hall. Call 508-752-0888 or 617-931-2000 for tickets.

FRIDAY

IN CONCERT— Wildcat O'Halloran jams the night away at Sheehan's Cafe tonight. Call 586-4238 for gobs of details and tickets.

THEATRE— The magnificent 22nd Annual Madrigal Dinners will run only two more performances tonight and tomorrow. Don't miss this festive holiday concert, drama and bounty of gourmet food. Campus Center Auditorium, doors open at 6 p.m., seats to be taken by 7 p.m. $23 general/$18 students. Call 545-0418 for tickets.

EXHIBIT— The Student Union Art Gallery proudly presents a BFA Thesis show by Kathy Wallace, Julie Bianculli, and Traci Noone to include black and white photography and watercolor works. Reception tonight 5-7 p.m. Exhibit runs through Dec. 18.

IN CONCERT— The Flirtations, the world's most famous openly gay, politically active, multi-cultural, a-cappella singing group combines rock, doo-wop, salsa, gospel and madrigals at the Iron Horse. Topics range from AIDS to abortion rights to apartheid. Shows at 7 & 10 p.m. For tickets call 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK.

THEATRE— The Moveable Feast Theatre presents The Wilder Show, an event consisting of three short plays by Thornton Wilder. Works to be presented include "Pullman Car Hiawatha," "Infancy" and "The Long Christmas Dinner." Belchertown High School, tonight and tomorrow 8 p.m. Also Sunday at 2:30 p.m. $5. Call 323-7181 for tix & info.

IN CONCERT— Ponald Perera, the Elsie I. Sweeney Professor of Music at Smith College will be in New York through Sunday to see the performance of his own chamber opera, "The Yellow Wallpaper." Perera's chamber opera will be directed by Mark Harrison at the Manhattan School of Music. A $25 fee will buy you a ticket to the show and a seat on the bus that leaves SC's Sage Hall today at 3 p.m. and will return around 1 a.m. 585-3150 for more info.

THEATRE— Smith College Theatre presents two one-act plays tonight, featuring student directors Lisa Inman and Laura Brown. Inman will present her interpretation of The Trip, a comic tale of four women on a cross-country journey and test of their friendship. Brown will direct her own original piece, Unfinished Business, the story of a woman struggling with past and present relationships. Evening events start at 8 p.m., in Theatre 14 of the Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts. $1, reservations necessary. 585-3220 for more info and tix.

SATURDAY

IN CONCERT— John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band come to Pearl Street tonight. The 8:30 p.m. show promises to be a crowd-pleaser, so call 584-7771 for tix and additional info.

DANCE— Amherst College students enrolled in Th/DA 53 will present original dance/theatre and performance pieces tonight and tomorrow. AC Kirby Theatre, 8 p.m. Free, but reservations suggested. 542-2277.

HOLIDAY CLASSES— The Guild Studio School offers "Beads, Magnets & Ornaments" with Kat England today from 1-4. Children ages 5-12 welcome. $7 fee, call Julie Held at 584-3299 for more info.

IN CONCERT— Charlie Schmidt rocks the Coolidge Park Cafe tonight from 8:30p.m. - 12:30a.m. The Cafe at The Hotel Northampton will wine, dine and musically thrill you, so stop by. Wiggin's Tavern, also at the hotel, will feature Chalyce Blair from 6:30 - 10:30 p.m. Call 584-6324 for more info.

EXHIBIT— Artist Michael Phillips will give a lecture and opening reception today in honor of his new exhibit, "New Large Scale Paintings" on exhibit through Jan. 15 at the Mu Gallery in Boston. Lecture at 5 p.m., reception from 6-8 p.m. 617-451-9528 for more info.

COMEDY— Carrot Top, labeled the "hottest young comic in America" is performing at the Comedy Connection in The Hu Ke Lau for two all-ages shows. 8 p.m. & 10:15 p.m. Tix are $12.50. Call 593-5222 for info.

IN CONCERT— Violinist extraordinaire Charles Treger will perform with the University of Massachusetts Orchestra tonight at 8 p.m. in the FAC Concert Hall. Thomas Elefant will conduct. Tickets $8 general/$4 students. Call 545-2511 for tix or grab them at the door.

EXHIBIT— Sargert Galleries of Springfield will open their winter season with a champagne reception featuring works by well known "island" artist Preston Sloane. Exhibit through Jan. 15, call 732-3030 for more info.

FILM— Who Framed Roger Rabbit will be shown tonight at MHC. Gamble Auditorium, 7 & 9 p.m. $2.50.

SUNDAY

IN CONCERT— Poet, author, musician, composer, storyteller, cultural guardian and humanitarian Robin Williamson to perform a Winter Solstice Concert at the Iron Horse Music Hall. Call 586-8686 for info and tix.

FILM— "On the Waterfront," starring Marlon Brando shows today at SC Wright Hall Auditorium, 2 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT— Bela Fleck and the Flecktones will do their thing at AC Buckley Recital Hall. Tix $12/$5 with ID. Stop by the box office or For The Record in Amherst.

LECTURE— "Media Sunday: Marketing Misery: The Selling of Addictions to Women" will be presented by Jean Kilbourne, a visiting scholar of Wellesley College . SC McConnell Hall Auditorium, 2 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT— Richard du Bois will direct the UMass Chorale in a holiday concert today at 3 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $6 general/$3 for students. 545-2511 for tix and info.

FILM— "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory" will be shown at AC's Campus Center Theatre, 7:30 and 10 p.m. $1.75.

IN CONCERT— The University of Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble to perform with the Pioneer Valley Wind Symphony in concert today at 3 p.m. in the FAC Concert Hall. Admission is free, all welcome.

COURTESY GENE BAGNATO

The Flirtations will be at the Iron Horse Friday for two shows.

SVP offers Working Titles

By SHAWN McDONNELL
Collegian Staff

For many years now, the people of Student Valley Productions have offered encouragement and experience to budding student artists. SVP has given birth to many well-received student productions, including the recent hits "Bill and Karen" and "The Abyss" (both written by UMass students).

One of the ways in which SVP assists undergraduate playwrights or directors is through their "Working Titles" program, which allows students to work on no-frills productions of non-traditional plays, or original works-in-progress. The program encourages students to experiment with new types of texts or approaches to direction, while removing the pressures of a mainstage production.

The first Working Title of this semester is a production of "Life Under Water," directed by UMass student Dan Blumenthal. Written by dramatist Richard Greenberg, "Life" is an exploration of relationships, on those occassions when they do work. The production will be presented as a reading, attempting to interpret the text in a new fashion.

Undergraduate playwright Susan DeBiasio and director Rachel Reinheimer ("A Midsummer Night's Dream") will present a production addressing women's issues. A collaboration between the writer, director and cast, the play (known only as "Working Title") will be presented as a series of short pieces.

"Life Under Water" will be presented on December 10th, in Campus Center room 905. "Working Title" will be presented December 11th, in Campus Center room 911. Both performances

■ finals

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

realistic study goals should be set accordingly.

Davoli recommends 1 1/2 to 2 hour study increments with short breaks in between to fully relax. Good lighting, a comfortable chair, and an atmosphere allowing for complete concentration are important. He promulgates walking around, stretching, resting by closing your eyes, lying on the floor, laughing and having fun to constitute rest and relaxation.

With adequate rest, lost sleep during this time of year, which is typical, will not take as much of a toll on the body and mind.

Diet is another factor that can significantly effect mental and physical well-being during exam time. Sophomore undeclared major Ngan-Binh Nguyen admits that due to her nervous stomach because of exams, she eats very little at this time of year. Davoli warns Nguyen and others of the importance of eating well at this time when much is being demanded of the body and mind. He advises students to eat many light, small meals throughout the day consisting of a variety of nutrients. Eating only a couple of large meals will leave you feeling sleepy and drained.

Also, while snacks are high on many students' study agendas, Davoli tells students to avoid unhealthy foods which are common choices for students, such as sweets and caffeine. He maintains that munchies such as fruits and complex carbohydrates (pasta, whole-grain crackers) will give you "quick and long lasting energy" without the ugly side-effects of caffeine and sugar.

Bibeault agrees, "nothing should effect your eating and sleeping." Although the industrial engineering major rarely takes breaks and sees them leading to time-consuming socializing, he does not believe in pulling all-nighters.

Dr. Scott suggests that, as far as time-management goes, organization is the key. Dividing work into smaller tasks helps to put things into perspective. By setting goals to finish parts of an assignment by realistic deadlines, students not only make progress in their studies, but get a sense of being in control of their lives.

Scott also recommends that study locations be chosen wisely.

"I was taught that you shouldn't study, sleep and play all in the same place," she says.

According to Scott, studying in the library, an empty classroom or dorm lounge cuts down on the distractions students may find in their rooms, such as televisions, music, phone calls or visits from friends.

So that's the scoop on exams, and the final analysis seems to promote different strokes for different folks. Also, the experts agree that, very simply, stress does not pay.

If you do feel decidedly stressed, however, there are measures you can take to reduce and prevent more anxiety. On-campus resources include Health Services Mental Health Division at 127 Hills North, 545-2337; the Health Education Division at 549-2671 ext. 181; and the Center for Counseling and Academic Development at Berskshire House, 545-0333.

SATURDAY!

All ages all shows!

"The hottest young comedian in the country"

CARROT TOP

COMING SOON

DAVID ALLEN GRIER · JAMIE FOX · THE AMAZING JONATHAN · JEFF FOXWORTHY · DOM IRRERA

comedy CONNECTION AT THE HuKeLau

CALL 413-593-5222

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

Drink Special $1.50 SPICED RUM & COKE

Thursday Night is PARTY NIGHT At Mike's

THURSDAY NIGHT APPETIZERS 9:00-10:30

WINGS • POTATO SKINS • CHICKEN FINGERS • ETC.

T-SHIRTS & PRIZES!!!

Drink Special $1.00 SHOTS OF PEACH SCHNAPPS

Always Something For Everyone!

Drink Special $3.00 MIKE'S PITCHERS

RUSSELL'S

Discount LIQUORS Discount

18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

This Week Only! American Beer $6.99 case cans From Case #1.

OPEN SUNDAYS 12:00-6:00 PM

SS Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L

BUSCH bar bots. $9.99 case

J. Roget Champagne $2.49 750ml $26.00 case (12 bots.)

FOSTERS LAGER $7.99 12/PK Bots.

Rolling Rock $6.99 12PK Bots.

Amstel Light or Post Road $8.99 12PK Bots.

Bacardi $7.99 750mL Baileys $14.99 750ml

Fetzer Sundial Chardonnay $4.99 750 ml

Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits

Many More In-Store Specials

All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

Now Renting for January

Spacious Two Bedroom Apartments on Bus Line

$400/Month

Call KAMINS REAL ESTATE at 253-2515

CHINA GARDEN

"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"

$2.50 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon

MSG

Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food

Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00 pm

Friday - Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm

Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week

FREE Delivery Service • BYOB

The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch

• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)

Every Day 11:30-3:30

Sample our New Vegetarian Menu

13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

Mac awards highlight best of UMass theater

By SHAWN McDONNELL
Collegian Staff

As another semester of UMass Theatre draws to a close, it is time once again for the biannual Mac Awards - those arbitrary prizes named in honor of myself, and a Collegian tradition since the end of last semester. Always the cultural watchdog, I will now spotlight my insights into the highlights and lowlights of four months behind the footlights.

With the polls closed, New World Theatre's "Coming Into Passion" nets my award for Outstanding Play. Jude Narita's riveting one-woman drama carried the audience through the dark psyche of a Saigon prostitute, the cultural isolation of an americanized Sansei, and a half dozen more keenly-etched portraits of women on the fringes of our understanding. Passion was also that rare piece of political theatre which didn't sink into a mire of rhetoric—it exulted in humanity and compassion.

My Mac Award for Outstanding Star Turn goes to "Reckless" wonderful leading lady, Lynda Newton. It has been said that the greatest actors are those who bring a bit of themselves into the roles, and Newton's trademark buoyancy and brightness have a way of making the most distant or unfamiliar characters seem achingly real. In Reckless, Newton played the naive (and frequently unstable) heroine as an unflappable optimist—constantly beaten, but never suffering from an excess of sentiment or schtick. The production was all the better for her unlikely characterization.

Behind the scenes, my award for Outstanding Director goes to the wonderful Alan White—who turned the Theatre Guild production of "Hair" into a wild ride of evocative, eye-filling images. The directorial coup: turning a potentially pious finale into a brilliantly staged vision of the individual, being drowned out and swallowed by a sea of former friends. The rest is silence.

My Diamond in the Rough award also goes to "Hair," for the welcome performance of Michelle Wynn. In a cast of bad

TURN TO THEATER, PAGE 8

MISS YOUR SHOT AT FAME THIS SEMESTER? DON'T DESPAIR. THERE'S ALWAYS A CHANCE YOU'LL GET TO SPOUT IRREVERENCIES AT THE COLLEGIAN IN A MONTH OR SO.

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA

If you are over 18, and would like to earn Full Time Income Working Part Time Be a Bartender

•Spend Winter Break With Us!

•Day/Evening 3 Week

•Local/National Placement

•Make Your Move Today and Receive Additional Savings on Tuition Fees

Call Today! 747-9888 • 1655 Main St., Suite 202 • Springfield MC/VISA/AE

END OF THE SEMESTER BLUES? READ A COLLEGIAN. EAT A COLLEGIAN.

$79 Per Person - New Years Only - $30.00 Deposit Due

Celebrate New Years in MONTREAL

Price Includes:

- Round Trip Transportation via Temperature Control Luxury Motor Coach
- 2 Nights Hotel Deluxe Accommodations at Hotel Furama in the heart of downtown, or similar accommodations.
- Free Admission to Club Metropolis, the most famous night club in North America
- 2 Complimentary Dinners at the World Famous Peel Pub
- Includes All Taxes
- Social Opportunity age 18

$79.00 New Years Only
Other Weekends $99.00

Right in the heart of Montreal, a few steps away from the city's activity centers, the Furama Hotel offers you a unique and original form of hospitality, mostly inspired by the century old traditions of the Far East.
Furama means wealth, beauty and pleasure. The Hotel rooms reflect this hymn to comfort, which will make your stay so pleasant.
The Hotel provides 107 rooms, of which 72 have two double beds and 35 are mini-suites and executive rooms with queen size beds, hide a bed and kitchenette. All rooms are designed to be functional, providing individually controlled air conditioning units, a double closet, a desk, a table and chairs, a telephone, a color television with remote control, a highly confortable bed, a modern bathroom, pastel shaded decoration which invites peacefulness and relaxation.
To enhance the Hotel's exceptional location, the architectural design of the building includes large bay windows.

DEPARTURE DATES
Dec. 30 - Jan. 1
Every Weekend in January, February, March & April

RELIABLE TOURS
365 BROADWAY • ROUTE 1 • LYNNFIELD, MA 01940
(617) 598-9930

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

TOP RANK, INC.

presents WORLD LIGHT FLYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP

"DUEL IN THE DESERT"

AT PHOENIX'S NEW AMERICA WEST ARENA

THIRD FEATURE BOUT:
SCOTTY 'BULLDOG' OLSON vs. JOSE LUIS ZEPEDA

LIVE! $3.00 - Fight Only
$5.00 - Fight and Buffet
Tickets on sale NOW!!
SAT. DEC. 12, 9PM ET/ 6PM PT

© 1992 DISTRIBUTED BY TOP RANK INC. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. FIGHTERS SUBJECT TO CHANGE

University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

STEVE MARTIN DEBRA WINGER

Leap of Faith

PARAMOUNT PICTURES presents a MICHAEL MANHEIM/DAVID V. PICKER production a RICHARD PEARCE film
STEVE MARTIN DEBRA WINGER
LEAP OF FAITH LOLITA DAVIDOVICH LIAM NEESON TUKASA BANA CLIFF EIDELMAN RUBEN SINGLETON
JAMES CERCONE MICHAEL MANHEIM AND DAVID V. PICKER RICHARD PEARCE
PG-13 PARENTS STRONGLY CAUTIONED
A PARAMOUNT - OMNIMAX - IMAX COMPANY

DECEMBER 18

FEATURING MUSIC FROM
ANGELS OF MERCY • DON HENLEY • PATTI LABELLE • KYLE LOVETT and GEORGE DUKE • MEAT LOAF • JOHN PAGANO
ALBERTINA WALKER and WYNONNA

Pigpile: independent legacy from Big Black

By AUSTIN RUTLEDGE
Collegian Correspondent

Pigpile
Big Black
Touch and Go Records

There once was a band from Chicago. It featured an energetic bass player named Dave and two young guitar players named Santiago and Steve. The three of them decided to form a band that would play very fast songs but they couldn't find a drummer fast enough, so they found a Roland drum machine to use instead. It was a reliable time-keeper and it seemed to fit their sound.

With Roland's help, the band wrote music with precise stops and starts, and Steve sang songs about his most hated enemies. The band recorded three full length LPs, three EPs and numerous 7-inches from 1982 until 1987. Together they formed one of the best bands of the Eighties, combining an orlginal sound with raw energy. The band was called Big Black.

Recently, Touch and Go Records has made a new Big Black release available. It's a live recording from Big Black's 1987 European tour while they were promoting their final album. This new release is called Pigpile and on it they perform a ripping, fourteen-song set at a theater in London. If there were doubts about the ability of Big Black to carry their intensity-driven studio efforts over to a live habitat, Pigpile serves as a testament to their musical strength, and should crush that myth. Big Black was an excellent band live.

So if Pigpile is a recording of a gig played five years ago it should be a stale and outdated effort, right? Wrong. Big Black was a band ahead of their time. They wrote songs about self-immolation, the horrors of child molestation and the power of independent trucking while cock-rockers like Pearl Jam were still in high school chorus.

Unbeknownst to many, Big Black paved the way for a good portion of the independent label bands flourishing today. Big Black was a band who proved that they could be successful on their own terms. They publicized themselves, booked their own gigs, paid for their own studio-time and remained completely self-managed.

Big Black showed that independent label bands can indeed make it without any "help" from a major record company whose only interests are profits. It's only through these 'Indies' that we can get any new music worth giving two wipes about. It's where we get our Dinosaur Jr. and our Mudhoney from, and if it weren't for independent label bands, we'd all be stuck listening to Michael Bolton.

Big Black was an important band to the Eighties because they didn't care about how much money they'd earn. They were a band who scoffed at all of the major record company executives, refusing to yield any of their creative freedom in order to make a buck. Big Black worked to prove that you can be successful playing whatever type of

TURN TO BLACK, PAGE 7

OPEN SUNDAYS! NOW THRU DEC. 31ST FROM 12-5
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEER WINE LIQUORS

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT $9.99 + DEP. SUITCASE CANS
CATAMOUNT $4.99 + DEP. CHRISTMAS ALE 6 PACK BOTTLES
NATURAL LIGHT $8.49 + DEP. CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS
FOSTERS LAGER $7.99 + DEP. 12 PACK BOTTLES
MEISTER BRAU CASE OF 24 12 OZ. CANS $7.49 + DEP.
SHARPS NON ALCOHOL $12.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES
FRANZIA WINES 5.0 LITER BAG-IN-A-BOX CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, BLUSH, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE SALE 8.49 MAIL IN REBATE 1.50 $6.99 AFTER REBATE
COLUMBIA CREST CHARDONNAY $4.99 750 ML
RENE JUNOT RED & WHITE FRENCH TABLE WINE $4.99 1.5 L
SUTTER HOME RED ZINFANDEL $3.49 750 ML
GALLO WHITE ZINFANDEL $2.99 750 ML
MANISCHEWITZ WINES ALL FLAVORS $4.79 1.5 L
COOK'S CHAMPAGNE EXTRA DRY & BRUT $3.49 750 ML
SEAGRAMS V.O. CANADIAN WHISKEY $16.49 1.75L
GORDON'S VODKA SALE 11.49 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 AFTER REBATE $9.49 1.75L
BALLANTINE SCOTCH $20.99 1.75L
GILBEY'S GIN SALE 11.49 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 $8.49 1.75L AFTER REBATE
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY SALE 11.99 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 $8.99 1.75L AFTER REBATE
FRANGELICO LIQUEUR $13.99 750 ML
SAMBUCA ROMANA $12.49 750 ML
not responsible for typographical errors
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 12.10.92 THRU WEDS. 12.16.92
Full Redemption Center

fight the blah feel ing that weighs you down
COLLEGIAN

BABY TIE-DYES • OVERALLS • MUGS • TEA POTS • JERRY BEARS
THE MERCANTILE HAS TONS OF COOL GIFTS!
T-SHIRTS CANDLES $5 GLOVES SWEATERS SLIPPER SOCKS HATS INCENSE TOYS POSTERS CALENDARS EARRINGS BOXES PENDANTS BLANK BOOKS CARDS
SKIRTS • DRESSES • SHIRTS • FANCY PANTS • TIGHTS
DATE BOOKS • BAGS & POUCHES • BASKETS • TINS
BRASS GODS • STONE BUDDHAS • WOOD FERTILITY FIGURES
THE MERCANTILE AMHERST & NORTHAMPTON WEEKNIGHTS TO 9

INTERSESSION SPECIAL
AEROBICS Step Lo Impact Slide/sculpt Funk
$39 Now - 1 Feb 93
KEISER NAUTILUS Olympic Weights Stairmasters, Lifecycles Biocycles, NordicTrack TREADWALL
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 460 West St. S. Amherst 256-0080

The Area's BEST CHINESE FOOD & SUSHI BAR
Enjoy the finest, freshest sushi, sashimi, tempura teriyaki and more at Panda East's new Sushi Bar. Also enjoy the finest Chinese Cuisine — Fresh, local specialties, low-priced luncheon specials and banquet facilties for your group or large party.
PANDA EAST
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
256-8923 • 256-8924

Malcolm X' tops annual year-end ten best list

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Along with Chia Pets, breast implants and, say, "The Bodyguard," ten best lists are outwardly interesting but ultimately silly things, don't you agree?

But amid such a year of mind-numbing hype and ensuing mediocrity, these lists seem to gain more resonance. After all, if critics defined a good movie by good box office, we'd have such unoriginal, mindless and all-around lame-o flicks like Basic Instinct ("yee-hee, Sharon Stone isn't wearing any pantiesl"), Batman Returns (Keep the cat, dump the bat, drown the penguin), A League of Their Own (Overused baseball cliches + manipulative, smug sentiment = big hit) and Lethal Weapon 3 ("where's Mel's butt? phew, now I see it — what a good movie!") among the high rankers.

But even entertaining, but forgettable box office winners like Sister Act (I couldn't slam a movie about nuns, for God's sake) and Wayne's World already got their financial recognition, so now it's time for some lesser-known, but really, really, really great movies to get their due.

One more note about the list: due to publishing restrictions, the list must be drawn up in the first week of December. Now everyone knows most of the Oscar-caliber films come out sometime during December, (last year both JFK and Bugsy missed the list), so consider the following a work in progress.

For what it's worth:

1. Malcolm X — The true triumph of Spike Lee's literal and stirring saga is its exquisite, explosive marriage of knock-out visuals with a powder-keg subject. Especially in a year where eye-popping visuals took precedence over everything else (see 1492, Bram Stoker's Dracula), Malcolm X tells a stirring story behind its imaginative illustrations. Denzel Washington is untouchable as the black leader throughout his evolving consciousness. From the intriguing decision to shoot Malcolm's life in four different film styles to the stirring prologue and masterful epilogue, Malcolm X is a genuine epic. Unlike, say, "Dances With Wolves," Malcolm X doesn't spoon feed the audience pretty sunsets and political correctness. Every frame is loaded, compelling cinema. A

2. Glengarry Glen Ross — Brutal comedic-drama never looked so desperately beautiful. A tense and maze-like script by David Mamet anchors James Foley's wonderfully nihilistic, but ultimately tragic tale of four salesmen — con men, really — and their reckless attempt to hold onto their dignity. Jack Lemmon and Al Pacino lead a tight ensemble cast and Alec Baldwin shines as a harsh v.p. from downtown. "Glengarry's" profanity sings, its rhythm rings superb. A

3. The Player — Robert Altman concocts a cynical valentine for movie makers and lovers alike in this witty, biting satire/mystery of studio mogul-wannabe Griffin Mill (Tim Robbins, in a career-defining performance). From its marvelous opening uninterrupted shot, as the camera swirls around the cul de sac of a studio to its purposely excessive number of cameos to the hilarious prison sequence at the end, "The Player" works on a number of levels, but at its (icy) heart, the film is just plain hilarious. Altman bends a mystery, romance, satirical swipes and deft comedy in this terrific piece of American cinema. A

4. Heart of Darkness: A Filmmaker's Apocalypse — If the player is a cynical valentine, this is the nightmare. Released in 1990 on Showtime and in 1991 in the theaters, it nevertheless captures a spot on this year's list. This is an engrossing, even scary documentary on the filming of "Apocalypse Now," made with footage supplied by director Francis Ford Coppola's wife, Eleanor. The filmmaker battles torrential rains, an incomplete script, Martin Sheen's heart attack, an expensive and moody Marlon Brando and most critically, himself. This is unlike any other "making of" you'll ever see. In fact, "Heart of Darkness" is so powerful that it could be argued that it's better than Apocalypse Now. A

5. The Crying Game — Irish filmmaker Neil Jordan writes and directs this challenging, wonderfully acted romantic thriller. An IRA terrorist (a great Stephen Rea) is paired with his prisoner's girlfriend (a breakthrough Jaye Davidson performance) in a clever, haunting film. The Crying Game works best when it is one step ahead of the audience — especially in a kicker of a twist that spins the film into a whole different vein. More than just a cryptically complex thriller, it is also a concentrated character study of conscience, desire and protection. Sterling performances all around propel this textured and atmospheric wonder. A

6. Howards End — The most fluid and resonant of the Merchant-Ivory productions of E.M. Forster's novels. "A Room With a View" and "Maurice" were mere dress rehearsals for this beautiful story of sisters, lovers and a lovely country estate known as Howards End. Emma Thomson shines and Anthony Hopkins turns in a droll yet complicated performance. Helena Bonham Carter phones in her token Forster role (though she does it with her trademark bohemian flair) and Vanessa Redgrave gives an Oscar-worthy supporting performance. Sumptuously filmed, effectively sentimental without being manipulative, "Howards End" is a paramount telling of a classic novel. A

7. Reservoir Dogs — Quentin Tarantino's explosively violent, searingly comical 'poetry of expletives' is an unmitigated showcase for the actors. Yet another intricate performance by Harvey Keitel highlights this enthralling, sometimes funny portrait of a motley crew of crooks holed up in a warehouse trying to figure out who is the double-crosser in their midst. The exceptional cast, which includes Lawrence Tierney, Christopher Penn and Tim Roth, all get a chance to strut their acting muscles. Similar to "Glengarry Glen Ross," only "Reservoir Dogs" goes for the sometimes uncomfortable jugular. A-

8. Edward II — Christopher Marlowe's histrionic and scandalous 1594 play gets the avant garde treatment in director Derek Jarman's (Caravaggio) tantalizing mix of rich allegory, teeming homoeroticism and esoteric imagery (got that?). The true story of King Edward's (Steven Waddington) blatant affair with Gaveston (Andrew Tieman) and Queen Isabella's (Tilda Swinton) spiteful retaliation mixes Elizabethan dialogue with contemporary clothes. Full of political parables and even Annie Lennox crooning Cole Porter, "Edward II" isn't easy — but for those lucky enough to get it — it's an illustrious winner. A-

9. A Midnight Clear — Keith Gordon's wondrous tale of World War II disillusionment, acted with brewing intensity by a smart cast of young actors (Ethan Hawke, Kevin Dillon, Arye Gross and Gary Sinise). From a novel by William Wharton, Clear tells the unfolding story of a platoon of American GI's on a snow-drenched French-German border who must deal with a neighboring enemy platoon that apparently wants to surrender. Filled with small, detailed moments — a snow ball fight between enemy troops; a tense plan to concede — Clear is intelligently acted (especially Hawke and Sinise), mindfully directed and filled with intriguing levels to explore. A probing and entertaining sleeper. A-

10. Of Mice and Men — Gary Sinise again, this time directing this obviously lovingly crafted and wisely austere version of John Steinbeck's great American novel. Horton Foote's careful and faithful screenplay mixes honest sentiment without reaching for Hollywood theatrics. Both John Malkovich, as Lenny, and Sinise, as George work together like patient clockwork; each performance is commendable. The story itself may not be entirely fresh nor surprising, but it's Sinise's crisp adaptation and tender direction that makes this Men something to marvel. A-

So there you have it. As with any list, there are numerous runners up and worthy honorable mentions. They go to Disney's nifty Aladdin (B+), the cynical liberal political fantasy Bob Roberts (B+), Woody Allen's telling Husbands and Wives (A-), Robert Redford's graceful A River Runs Through It (B), Tom Kalin's anachronistic, stylish study of the Leopold-Loeb mystery, Swoon (B+), Clint Eastwood's fine morality play-western Unforgiven (B+)and the other E.M. Forster adaptation, Charles Sturridge's Where Angels Fear to Tread (B+).

For the years' two most Guilty Pleasures, the distinctions go to Melanie Griffith's "I'm a spy in Nazi Germany" Shining Through (B) and, what one critic called "cinemasturbation," Brian DePalma's gonzo, homage-filled Raising Cain (B).

On that note, have a nice holiday and be sure to see lots of movies, 'cuz if you don't, Hollywood will be real sad and be forced to be (oh no!) creative.

■ Black

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6

music you want to, as long as it's real. Why else are they applauded by the people who run Sub-Pop, the members of The Pixies, or celebrated by such tribute bands as Ministry and Nine Inch nails?

Pigpile isn't a punchline to a joke about Wilson-Phillips. It's a drum-machine driven, aggressive therapy session that would love to break your nose. Steve screams lines about sleeping sickness in the second track, "L-Dopa", and from there the show gets carried into a relentless onslaught of spastic fury.

On "Pavement Saw" Big Black is as tight as a Champion sweatshirt washed a thousand times, as Steve chokes "She smokes herself to death/ It makes me sick/ She's so pretty I don't give a shit/ She went through me like a pavement saw and I feel stupid for something so stupid."

"Fish Fry", "Dead Billy" and "Pigeon Kill" all find their way into the set and onto Pigpile, but the show's closer "Jordan Minnesota" grabs the most attention. Its length (including feedback) is somewhere around 13 minutes long and its message is clear: Parents who abuse their children are the scum of the earth. It's an effective closer to an excellent record and to an excellent band, Big Black R.I.P.

If you missed any of Big Black's records from the Eighties, now would be a good time to go and pick some up. Touch and Go Records has made it very easy for you: they've recently re-released all of the major Big Black material and made it available on tape and CD. I'm not partial to any one release in particular - they're all excellent. If you've enjoyed Big Black and want to add a live recording to your collection, pick up Pigpile. It's a fitting epitaph for Big Black and a nice tape for finals week.

Acronymble Winners

But everyone who submits is a winner to us.
By J-DOG and THE BIRTHDAY GIRL (SEND GIFTS TO LISA)Collegian Arts and Living

This, the final Acronymble Announcement of Winners, brings tears to the arts staffers' eyes. We have thoroughly enjoyed reading your submissions from the raunchy (you all know who you are) to the romantic.

The point of this whole thing was to make you read the arts section, and we hope you will continue to do so, or else. I mean, if you've just been reading to get your prize you cheap son-of-a-. . . you have really lost our respect and that's a lot to lose.

We're rambling. Here are the winners: George F. LaCroix wins Third Prize for his noodle, Electric Mammals Imitate Live Yaks. Come immediately for your prize because after, like, Friday we are outta heeeeeere. Oh, and your prize is a posta. Well, the esteemed, official Acronymble poster, not just an arts staffer poster. Though you should consider yourself lucky to have one of our grinning, glorious countenances on your wall, buddy.

Second Prize goes to Eric Nixon for Evacuate My Incessantly Leaking Yacht. Yes. Imagination. Ingenuity. Creativity. Heck you can learn more from a Collegian than one of your Gen Eds. Big surprise there, folks. And Eric wins an Acronymble T-shirt.

Drum roll, please. Yah, you sleepyhead the one with the fuzzy pom pom sticks in your hand, Jennifer Welty. Wanted to see if you were reading. Anyway, First Prize the Acronymble Game goes to Michele Laramie for Even Murderous Inmates Like Yo-Yos. But she also gets a pat on the back for Elongated Members Induce Loud Yodels. Like you know, Michele.

The whole purpose of EMILY is to type our calendars and make grievous mistakes. "The Hadley Pub located in Northampton" and "Grease is an 80s disco flick." The list goes on. Thanks for the laughs. Ciao! Emily!

QUIET
If you're tired of yelling this, Come and see us
The Brook
253-2834

AIDS
AIDS is everyone's problem and everyone must educate themselves now! Donate $5 or more and receive our publications. Send name, address, and enclosed donation: $_____
MAIL TO:
THE RUBBERS BROS.™
AIDS Education Publications
P.O. Box 431 - UMC, Wilbraham, MA 01095-0431
AIDS Information - Tel. 1-800-745-1057

ALLEY OOPS & Miller Lite Live Concert Series present: Bear Mountain
Backlash
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON
584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

CopyCat PRINT SHOP
RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE
Valid until the end of 1992.
Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)
228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868

4 Seasons
Rte. 9 • Hadley • 586-5
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

Fosters Lager 24/12 oz. bottles $15.99 + dep.	Andrea Champagnes 750 ml $2.99
Gator Florida Beer 24/12 oz. botts. $17.49 + dep	M.D. 20/20 all flavors 750 ml $2.00
Michelob & Mich Lt. 12/pk bott $6.69 + dep	J. Roget Champagnes 750 ml $2.49
Rolling Rock 24 bar bottles $12.99 + dep.	ICE!! 10 lbs. $1.00 50 lbs. $4.50 1/2 bbl KEGS!! Natural Lt ....$32.90 +dep. Busch .....$38.99 + dep. Miller, MGD & Lt. $38.90 + dep
Black Label 24 bar bottles $8.99 + dep.	Plus Many More!! Nobody Beats Our Prices!
Coors Gold 24 bar botts. $11.99 + dep	Emetts Irish Cream 750 ml $9.99
UMASS Basketball Fever!!!	Southern Comfort 750 ml $7.99
Busch bar bott $9.49 + dep	4 Seasons Vodka 1.75 L $8.99
Narragansett 24/12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep	J&B Scotch 750 ml $12.99
Tired of stores with BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons you'll be treated with gratitude! And . . .	Jim Beam 750 ml $7.99
WE DELIVER	Bailey's Irish Cream 750 ml $14.69

HOURS Mon.-Sat. 9-11 • 10% Senior Discount Everyday Keg Deposits Held Up to 30 Days on VISA, MASTERCARD, CHECK, CASH

■ Theater

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5

to mediocre singers, Wynn's full-throttle, kick-ass vocals brought welcome life to the great Rado/Ragni/MacDermott score.

Best Spontaneous Theatre: the players of "Mission Improvable," who relied on wits and inspiration to extricate themselves from a variety of absurd theatrical tasks, assigned to them by the audience.

Best Excuse For Seeing A Greek Tragedy: professor Robert Bagg's lyrical, beautiful translation of Sophocles' "Women of Trachis," and Edward M. Jewett's virtuoso performance in this translation's stage debut. Together with ace director Keith Oliver, the two men showed us how much life and emotion can still be found in those ancient texts.

On the darker side, my award for Biggest Waste goes to the Theatre Department's poverty-stricken production of "Reckless." Director Edward Golden's penchant for minimal stage design can be just keen in some cases ("Playboy of the Western World," "A Shepard Show"), but his fear of scenery was out of place this semester. "Reckless" should have possessed a visual intensity to match its action , but Golden's barren production left the eye hungry for more.

My Cojones Award, for outstanding courage, goes to those various castmembers of "Hair" who had the where-with-all to bare it all in the play's controversial nude scene.

Finally, my Fall 1992 Consolation Prize goes to those wonderful performers Rob ("Cat on a Hot Tin Roof") Corddry, and Michelle CT ("Mothers and Others") Hendrick. Both have proven themselves to be gifted lead actors, and it was a shame to see their talent squandered in the scene-change chorus of "Reckless."

STUDENT FITNESS MEMBERSHIPS!!!!!
One Easy Payment! No Gimmicks!
$119.00 * SPECIAL RATE! December to May
MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES*:
• Tennis • Racquetball • Massage Therapy
• Nautilis • Aerobics(includes step)
• Free Weights • Fitness testing • Sauna
• Basketball • Cardiovascular (Stairmaster", LifeCycles")
*Not all clubs feature all amenities Nominal Fee
Comparable Value $400 if paid monthly! You save nearly 50% by paying for your membership on the day you join! Hurry! Act right now & Save!
ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

SKI
3RD ANNUAL
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging
(Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsored By Lobdell's, Mt. Sutton and Molson
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Group Leader Discounts
Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 & Springbreak '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

FOR ALL UNDERGRADUATE & GRADUATE STUDENTS

1993-94 FINANCIAL AID APPLICATION PROCESS

The Federal government has mandated several changes which impact upon the 1993-1994 financial aid application process. THE APPLICATION PROCESS HAS CHANGED. The University of Massachusetts at Amherst will ONLY require the "Free Application for Federal Student Aid" (FAFSA). This application is FREE and will be available in late December or early January. A supplemental form WILL NOT be required by the University. The FAFSA cannot be filed before January 1 and MUST be filed BEFORE March 1, 1993 to receive priority consideration for financial aid at UMASS/Amherst. When completing this form, please be certain to indicate the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA in Section G to ensure that the University receives your information.

Please retain copies of 1992 federal tax returns because you may be asked to submit them to support your application. Do not submit tax returns or any other documents until you are specifically requested to do so.

Provided your application is filed on time (before March 1, 1993) and your file is complete, you should receive a response from Financial Aid Services by June, 1993.

Friday December 11, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 63

Winter storm watch. Snow throughout the day.

Arts & Living:
A sour note didn't hamper an otherwise delightful performance of Handel's Messiah at the FAC Thursday night. Page 7.

Sports:
University of Massachusetts men's basketball team travels to Norman Oklahoma to take on the Sooners this weekend. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Troops fend off gunfire in Somalia

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press

MAGADISHU, Somalia — Elusive gunmen fired on Marine helicopters buzzing the rooftops of this tense, divided city, a U.S. officer reported today, and French soldiers squared off with a gunman at a road checkpoint.

The isolated incidents marred an otherwise trouble-free Operation Restore Hope, as a American French force took command in the Somali capital and prepared for its main mission, protecting food shipments to starving Somalia.

A global air bridge, meanwhile, funneled hundreds more Marines toward Somalia.

In a possible first step toward political reconciliation in this violence-racekd land, warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid announced he would meet Friday with is chief rival. Ali Mahdi Mohamed. Ismat Kittani, special U.N. envoy, was mediating between the two factional leaders.

The U.S. advance guard here was ready to leapfrog into the famine belt of southern Somalia and what could be its toughest job, taking control of strife-torn inland city of Baidoa. The Marines on Saturday will escort a convoy of food trucks from Mogadishu 200 miles northwest to Baidoa.

Relief officials reported today that large convoy of "technicals" — the armed vehicles favored by Somali gunmen — was spotted headed west from the Baidoa area toward the Ethiopian border.

The emergency food airlift to Mogadishu resumed Wednesday just hours after 1,700 Marines came ashore and seized the airport and seaport, the first steps in an unprecedented, U.N.-sponsored campaign to deliver aid through armed force. More than 30,000 Marines, Army troops and soldiers of other nations will be deployed in this crippled east African land.

Until now, relief shipments have been routinely looted by armed bands of youths set loose by two years of clan conflict. Some 300,000 people have died of starvation, disease or warfare. U.N. officials estimate, and hundreds of thousands more are at risk of starvation, especially in the interior.

Turn to SOMALIA, page 2

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
DUCK SKATING– With the campus pond partially frozen the ducks are using their feet as skates rather than paddles.

Twisters owner to run for board

Forsyth to advocate for students and businesses

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

An Amherst business owner yesterday announced he will run on a pro-student and pro-business platform this winter for election to the Amherst Select Board.

Mark Forsyth, 29, who owns Twisters Tavern, says students and local businesses have lacked representation on the board in the past.

"I will represent what has been the silent majority of Amherst," Forsyth said. "Businesses and students have been treated unfairly by the town.

"The select board has not been sensitive to these groups," he said. "They have only been responsive to a few vocal residents."

Forsyth criticized the select board for "bogging down" the businesses in the town with unnecessary fees and regulations and its anti-student reforms.

He also said the select board lacks the leadership to make important decisions.

"There is a complete lack of decision making on the board," Forsyth said. "There are basically no business people on the town boards and that makes it difficult to do business in Amherst."

Forsyth said he would work to repel the town's keg licensing laws and improve the town's housing regulations. He cites student concerns as a priority in his campaign.

"I would make sure student issues are looked at again and this time students would be involved in the decision making," Forsyth said.

Twisters has had its liquor license suspended three times this year by the select board for overcrowding and noise violations. Forsyth says the experience furthered his opinion that the select board needed to change.

Some of Forsyth's other proposals include streamlining the permit process for businesses, creating a downtown economic plan to spur economic growth and examine a new parking policy for Amherst center.

Forsyth says he will need a strong student turn out to win a seat on the select board.

"I will be very aggressive in trying to garner the student vote," Forsyth said. "There is also a lot of local interest and business support."

Jennifer Wood, president of the University of Massachusetts student government, said Forsyth stand on issues such as keg laws should help mobilize the student vote.

Turn to FORSYTH, page 10

Filmmaker Spike Lee to speak at the FAC

By MICHAEL B. PIERCE
Collegian Correspondent

The Afrik-Am Society is planning to sponsor a lecture by director Spike Lee, whose film Malcolm X is currently playing in theaters.

The lecture is scheduled for Feb. 3, at 8 p.m. for Black history month.

Mike Poster, speaker of student senate, said he was looking forward to hearing Lee's perspectives on racial strife.

The Afrik-Am Society petitioned the SGA treasure and tax account for $9,620 to cover expenses which include an honorarium, publicity, hospitality, security and hotel accommodations.

Kay West, Afrik-Am Society president, said she wrote Lee a letter and he agreed to come.

"This is great because he draws Black and White audiences," she said.

Emily Rose, SGA treasurer, said West wrote to Lee during the racial strife earlier this semester and asked him if he could speak at the University.

"Spike Lee's usual honorarium fee is $16,000," Rose said. "But because of the problems here, he said he would come for $8,000.

She also said Lee would address racial problems on campus and in general.

Now that the Afrik-Am society has been granted the money for the lecture, it still needs to confirm the lecture with Lee's agent.

The lecture is scheduled to take place in the Fine Arts Center Auditorium, and tickets will cost $7.00 for the public, $5.00 UMass students with an ID, and $3.00 for senior citizens.

Wednesday night, the SGA also passed a new version of its constitution, and Poster said it would affect every undergraduate on campus. The new constitution, however, still needs to be approved by the board of trustees.

"This would be a whole new power of control for governance," Poster said. "The voice of the students will be a lot more powerful."

Kevin Newnan, student trustee, said the new constitution was based on the old one, and isn't drastically different.

He also said the old constitution was never approved by the board of trustees, and this one would not be adopted until it was approved.

"As far as getting this one approved, we don't see any stumbling blocks," he said.

The SGA also passed chapter 6 of its bylaws which guarantees Third World caucus and area government senate seats.

Poster said this would maintain the voice of historically oppressed students.

Reports of spiders rise

Housing accused of webbed cover-up

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Concerned by skin-crawling reports of spider bites and sightings, residents of Washington tower said they are frustrated with what they feel is an inadequate response from Housing officials, and accused Housing of attempting to cover up the problem until everyone goes home for the holidays.

"We shouldn't have to live like this, especially with finals going on," said Washington resident Brian MacDonald, who said he spent yesterday making phone calls to Housing and Environmental Health and Safety officials in an attempt to get something done about what many residents believe is an infestation of small yellow spiders.

Last night, MacDonald said he had been promised a meeting with Washington's Residence Director Norman Hiza to discuss the problem. Although MacDonald showed up at the appointed time with approximately 12 other concerned residents, Hiza did not appear.

"[Housing officials] are just dragging their feet on this and trying to keep it quiet until we all leave," said MacDonald, who has spent the last two nights sleeping at a friend's apartment because he fears being bitten.

"I'm really pissed off," said fourth floor resident Jon Adam, who says Housing has refused to act. "It just shows you how much they care."

Whether or not reports of an infestation are exaggerated, several students do claim to have been bitten, and many more say they have seen the spiders, turning the high-rise dorm into an anxious rumor mill where students have been leaving their lights on at night and jumping at the slightest itch.

Second floor resident Michelle Morrison claimed she was bitten twice, resulting in two trips to a walk-in health clinic with skin inflammations which were diagnosed as "bug bites." She said the bites resulted in swelling and a feeling of nausea which passed within 24 hours.

Manda Hollender, who lives on the 11th floor of the tower, said she knows four people who were bitten, including one who had a serious infection which had to be treated with intravenous antibiotics.

Second floor resident Candi Masiello said she killed a spider inside of her closet about three weeks ago, and numerous residents said they talked to cleaning personnel who have seen as many as 10 spiders at a time in stairwells.

Last night a spider was captured on the 18th floor after it crawled out of a notebook which was brought up from the 13th floor. Residents plan to use the captive spider as evidence that the rumors are true.

"I'm not crazy," said MacDonald. "These things are out there."

Second floor resident Keith Arbeitman said he saw a yellow spider about the size of a nickel two nights ago on the 17th floor,

Turn to SPIDERS, page 6

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Feliner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Have a nice vacation– We'll see you in the spring!
With love, The Collegian Staff
(By the way, this is the last issue of the semester!)

haircuts always $10!
BUCCI
a hair space
255 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

■ Somalia

continued from page 1

"I've been waiting for this day for so long," Victor Tanner, a UNICEF worker, said after the Americans took charge of the seaside airfield.

Although Marines confiscated some automatic weapons from passing automobiles, it appeared most of the teen-agers who long terrorized Mogadishu from machine gun-mounted vehicles had stowed their weapons or slipped out of town and into the bush.

Some ex-gunmen lined up looking for more peaceful jobs with aid agencies, relief officials said. But not all were taking a low profile.

Several shots were fired at Marine helicopters surveying the city on low-altitude patrols Wednesday, said Capt. Greg Horton, a Marine pilot.

At a checkpoint Thursday, a man in a car raised a gun toward Foreign Legionnaires, and one of the French soldiers fired a burst from his automatic weapon. The man escaped.

SAVE OUR STORE

The University of Massachusetts Board of Governors strongly opposes leasing the University Store to a private company as the administration has suggested. The following are just a few reasons how privatization would be detrimental to University students and faculty.

1) Higher textbook prices – Barnes & Noble may not offer the same 5% discount that we currently have.

2) Less student employees – Less part-time student staff jobs would be available.

3) Less selection – Barnes & Noble's primary concern would be profit, unlike the current store that values service and a large selection which caters to the diverse needs of all the students and faculty on campus.

4) Temporary Solution – Auxilliary Services are financially troubled, so rather than addressing their financial problems, they are going to sell the only money-making enterprise in the Campus Center in a last-ditch effort to acquire much needed funds.

5) Administration has Avoided Students – The Auxilliary Services has avoided talking to any student groups about privatization. A Request for Proposal is likely to be issued while students and faculty are off campus, allowing the administration to do what they want without student input.

6) Our Store is One of the Best – The University of Massachusetts University Bookstore is recognized nationally as one of the best campus bookstores in the country – don't let Auxilliary Services jeopardize the quality of our bookstore because of losses in other parts of their budget.

DON'T PRIVATIZE – IT'S NOT A SOLUTION!

– provided by the University of Massachusetts Board of Governors (545-0198) –

News.
Arts.
Sports.
Ed/Op.
Lunch.
Comics.

The Collegian.

You may not always get what you want, but you'll find you get what you need.

SATURDAY!

All ages all shows!

"The hottest young comedian in the country"

CARROT TOP

COMING SOON

DAVID ALLEN GRIER

JAMIE FOX

THE AMAZING JONATHAN

JEFF FOXWORTHY

DOM IRRERA

comedy CONNECTION AT THE HUKE LAU

CALL 413•593•5222

$44.
ts silk shirts silk

★ 100% silk shirts from BASIX in 15 HOT COLORS

★ Machine wash & dry

J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN

191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-2013
22 Masonic St., Northampton 586-6336
Open seven days & many nights

Local News

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

ANNIVERSARY – Chancellor Richard O'Brien talks to a visitor at the Everywoman's Center's twentieth anniversary celebration.

The naked truth about UMass calendar scam

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

A Worcester-based photography company which announced plans to produce a "Girls of UMass" calendar earlier this semester has disappeared without a trace, leaving at least one student suspicious that the whole thing was "just a scam."

Sophomore communication disorders major Laurie Dingley said a photographer had her come to a preliminary photo shoot for the calendar, told her she would appear in it, and then never got back in touch with her.

Dingley said she responded to a classified advertisement in the Collegian announcing the project at the beginning of the fall semester, and was asked to submit any photos she had of herself.

Dingley filled out a biographical information form and gave the photographer, who claimed to be from "Woods Photography" one picture of herself, but was told the photo, a face shot, was inadequate.

Dingley said the photographer told her more photos were needed before a decision could be made about her possible inclusion in the calendar. She was asked to come to a photo session on the eighth floor of the Campus Center.

She said she was skeptical going to the session, but the photographer displayed an expansive portfolio of pictures of celebrities and semi-nude women, which she said made him seem legitimate.

The photographer took Dingley's picture in a bathing suit and told her he would let her know if she "made the cut," Dingley said.

According to Dingley, the photographer called her a few weeks later and told her she would be appearing in the calendar, and they would be doing a photo session in the near future. She said she was told to start thinking about places on campus she would like to be photographed.

But that was the last she heard.

"I tried calling [Woods Photography] five or six times, but all I got was an answering machine. I started to get really nervous because they had all of my information, as well as pictures of me," she said.

A few weeks later Dingley received a letter from Woods Photography saying that the calendar project had been cancelled due to "production problems." The original photo she submitted was returned.

Public safety officer Richard Besse, who has investigated various scams on campus in the past, said he had heard nothing of the calendar project, and that no formal investigation had been launched, but said he found the episode "interesting." He encourages women who responded to the ad to file formal complaints with the Department of Public Safety.

Woods Photography could not be reached for comment.

Film explores Haitian coup and its aftermath

By TOM KNIGHT
Collegian Correspondent

"Haiti: Killing the Dream", a film detailing the events leading to the September 30, 1991 bloody coup d'etat that toppled the country's first democratically elected government, was presented on campus last night by the University of Massachusetts' Haitian American Student Association.

Although perpetrated by the Haitian military with the financial support of the Haitian aristocracy, the film convincingly portrayed the U.S. government as a behind-the-scenes co-conspirator in the coup.

"In Haiti, the formula for power is 3A plus E: Army times Americans times Argent [money], plus Eglise [church]", according to a journalist from Haiti En Marche, a Haitian weekly published in Miami.

The journalist requested that his name not appear in print. "I am not afraid of what will happen to me. I just want to be able to go back."

Haitian students at the meeting expressed frustration with what they perceived to be a gross lack of awareness and sensitivity to the plight of the Haitian people who, having "briefly experienced democracy, will never accept the military-backed puppet."

According to the Haiti En Marche reporter, "The only battle the Haitian military ever fought was against the masses. The country is like a prison."

The forced return to Haiti of approximately 16,000 refugees by the U.S. government struck a nerve, too. According to one student, "If these people were white and were from Bosnia, they would be accepted."

Haiti was formerly a French colony. The Haitians drove out the French in 1804. In 1915, US troops invaded and installed the military backed puppet government that has dominated Haiti ever since.

O'Brien halts proposal

Smoke-free campus on hold for now

By JOE O'CONNOR
Collegian Staff

Chancellor Richard O'Brien delayed a proposal yesterday to change smoking areas on campus at the 482nd Meeting of the Faculty Senate.

John Cunningham of the University Health Council presented a special report by that group, which proposed that UMass be "smoke-free in all public and individual work areas except for properly ventilated spaces." The concern was over Environmental Tobacco Smoke, or ETS, which the report demonstrates posing a significant health hazard.

Under the guidelines of the report, all individual teachers' offices, entrance ways, waiting rooms, public areas, and business meeting rooms, among other places, would be smoke-free.

A representative of the Senate's Program and Budget Council claimed that they had no business deciding how much money to fund this project. "We classified this as something similar to a project on re-wiring or re-insulating a building. In matters of health codes, the financial responsibility is the administration's."

But Chancellor O'Brien pointed out that the funding for making these changes would come from the general budget. Furthermore, he added that "No one approached me on the financial aspect of this project. If it were to cost five million dollars, that money would come from you." O'Brien then suggested to table the proposal until he knew how much it would cost, and succeeded.

"The report was designed to expand on existed state law," said Mr.

Turn to SMOKE, page 10

Lecture details Latin American media struggles

By KELLY SPANG
Collegian Staff

Luiz Fernando Santoro, of the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil, spoke last night about the struggles of media groups in Latin America to become mainstream with the national communication provided to the population by cable television.

"The only memory they [the public] have is through audio-visual," said Santoro which is why organizations use television and video as a source of communication. "It is easier to see than write," he said.

Since the 1970s, small groups have produced videos about Latin American issues such as "political problems and dictatorships," but few have ever reached the public.

Yet, Santoro said that the television broadcasts in Latin America are controlled by the state and therefore it is very difficult transmit videos that are produced by small groups.

International programming is the main content of what is shown on Latin American television.

"It is easier to know what happened in golf

Turn to BRAZIL, page 10

Panel offers solutions for peace

By MICAH NASSER
Collegian Staff

To mark the fifth anniversary of the Palestinian Intifada, or the popular uprising against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, four panelists presented possible solutions to the conflict.

Professors Max Pepper, Karen Pfeifer, Elise Young and Hagit Borer spoke on "Visions of Peace," at the First Church in Northampton Wednesday. The lecture was sponsored by the Middle East Peace Coalition, the Palestine Solidarity Committee and the American Friends Service Committee.

Max Pepper, professor of Community Medicine at St. Louis University, said he has traveled with his wife through the mid-east for the past twenty-five years, working with the Union of Palestinian Medical Relief Committee (UPMRC).

This group, which began with half a dozen Palestinian physicians and presently numbers over a thousand, voluntarily gives free medical care and has organized twenty clinics in the occupied territories. They advocate Palestinian nationhood, accessible medical care and free public education.

Pepper said the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank applies such large constraints against any organization working to develop universal health care in the Third World. These constraints are imposed to promote capitalism and to encourage the privatization of health care to maintain profits.

"It is an impossible constraint that kills the things we should be nurturing," Pepper said.

Karen Pfeifer, professor of economics at Smith College, shared her vision of solidarity and freedom that both Israeli Jews and Palestinians share.

She said most Palestinians 20 years ago believed the idea that a democratic secular state should be implemented in which the two peoples share a common destiny. This idea is no longer popular, Pfeifer said.

The vision that dominates Palestinian thought now is the two-state solution. "Palestinians have acceded to the realism of Israel," said Pfeifer. "Many progressive Israelis have accepted the recognition of Palestinian rights."

UMass linguistics professor Hagit Borer noted the present situation and mood of the Palestinians in the aftermath of the Israeli elections.

Borer discussed the 'do-nothing' policy of the Israel government since 1967. Borer question with the new Labor government under Yitzhak Rabin will be pursue different policies toward the territories.

Borer cited recent statistics indicating a ten percent increase in settler population and human rights violations in the past year.

"The only guarantee for peace is peace," Borer said. "Peace is in the interest of all parties involved."

Elise Young, author of a recently published book concerning women in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, emphasized the similarities Israeli women share with Palestinian women when dealing with the male dominated Israeli Zionist government.

"We have to shift the focus of political discourse," Young said. "The concepts of equality, peace and justice must be analyzed in terms of women also."

CopyCat PRINT SHOP

RESUME PACKAGE $24.95 RESUME PACKAGE

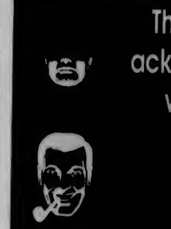
Valid until the end of 1992.

Includes: 1 page resume typesetting
25 copies on resume paper
25 matching blank sheets & envelopes
Storage on disk (min. 1 year)

228 Triangle Street
Amherst, MA 01002
549-3840 • FAX 549-2868



The staff of the Collegian wishes to acknowledge the end of the semester with a brief moment of silence...
Shhhhh!

(See you in the Spring!)

INTERSESSION SPECIAL

AEROBICS
Step
Lo Impact
Slide/sculpt
Funk

$39
Now - 1 Feb 93

KEISER NAUTILUS
Olympic Weights
Stairmasters, Lifecycles
Biocycles, NordicTrack
TREADWALL

AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West St. S. Amherst
256-0080

HEY SPORTS FAN !!

WANTED!!! INTRAMURAL WOMEN'S BASKETBALL TEAMS
WHERE ARE ALL THOSE HIGH SCHOOL STARS? GET TOGETHER AND ENTER YOUR TEAMS TODAY.
FOR MORE INFO STOP BY BOYDEN 215 OR CALL 545-2693

UMASS INTRAMURAL HOOP

INTRAMURAL SPORTS 215 BOYDEN 5-2693/5-0022

ΑΔΛ
ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

OFFERS 15 FELLOWSHIPS FOR GRADUATE OR PROFESSIONAL STUDY DURING 1993-1994

The National Council of Alpha Lambda Delta announces that fellowships for graduate or professional study will be awarded for use during the 1993-1994 academic year. The amount of each fellowship is $3,000. Applicants will be judged on academic record, recommendations submitted, and the soundness of the proposed project and purpose.

Any member of Alpha Lambda Delta graduating with a cumulative average of at least 3.50 is eligible to apply. Any member of ALD who has completed at least the first semester of the senior year is eligible to apply.

For additional information and an application contact
Cynthia George, Dean of Students Office
227 Whitmore

DEADLINE IS DECEMBER 31, 1992

NEW POSITIONS AVAILABLE FOR SECOND SEMESTER
ASSISTANT RESIDENCE DIRECTOR
RESIDENTIAL EDUCATION/HOUSING SERVICES

The Assistant Resident Director (ARD) position is a live-in graduate staff position, approximately 30 hours per week. The position includes the following responsibilities:

- Assist with supervision of Resident Assistants
- Active involvement with programing efforts in the halls
- Assist with policy enforcement and implementation of Judicial systems
- Implementation of administrative systems regarding maintenance and operations; housing assignments; and other related areas
- Other student development efforts as assigned by Residence Director

Qualifications: Enrollment in the UMASS graduate degree-granting program throughout appointment. Demonstrated organizational skills; ability to interact with diverse student population; Familiarity with university residence hall systems and/or related management experience.

Compensation: The salary is $212.00 per week plus housing.

Application Process: For priority consideration, send letter of interest and resume by December 18th to: ARD SELECTION COMMITTEE c/o Gay Douglas, Thoreau Area Office, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Defining the term 'feminist': being a woman is enough

Hurray! I'm an official Collegian columnist — the joy, the pleasure, the POWER! Who knew when I started to write two months ago that I would turn into the raging women's rights advocate that I am now? Lately, I've been discussing everything to politics to pornography, but I think that's a little too deep for this week's column. Today I'm going to air one of my pet peeves.

At this point I would like to hand out my insult of the semester award (this is the first of a bi-annual award that will be issued every semester). This award goes to (drum roll please) all of those people who have suddenly labeled me a feminist. The only reason why I bothered to address this is because the meaning of the word feminist needs to be addressed here.

I have become a feminist because I believe in rights for women. I believe in rights for men too; does that make me a "menist" (or perhaps a menace!)? I believe in people's rights to have sex, does that make me a sexist? (Thanks Janine!) In all honesty I don't even know what the word feminist means — I don't have a clue on the planet as to what it means!

I feel it necessary to express my opinions and dispel that ridiculous word. There is no such thing as a feminist. It is a word created to stereotype and categorize women who believe in equality. This word separates the women from the men, and places them on opposing sides. Can you imagine a male reaction to being called a feminist? He'd probably flip! By continuing to allow the word feminist in our vocabulary we are stating that males cannot support rights for women. Since the struggle for women's rights is difficult enough, I feel I can say we are not improving the situation by eliminating 48 percent of the population.

Stephanie
EISENBERG

Being labeled a feminist is one of my biggest pet peeves, even if it is intended as a compliment. By being labeled as anything, there are suddenly limits placed on my life, limits I don't want. Supposedly as a "feminist" I'm no longer allowed to let males treat me in any way that would demean my new stature. Does this mean that the next time a nice guy holds a door open for me I should slam it in his face and scream, "This is the '90s buddy, I can get my own door!" Or perhaps if a guy asks me to dinner I should throw a bucket of water on him and then claim that he's trying to dominate me. Get real! I like old-fashioned chivalry.

There is no exact definition of a feminist. Even good old Webster's had trouble defining it. I can't even define it. I do know though that it is a derogatory term probably created by some hotheaded male in an effort to placate intelligent women. As a woman, I'm too smart for that! I refuse to allow myself to get into a situation where I'm suddenly labeled and classified. Already this semester, I've had guy friends call me a hypocrite because my beliefs or actions didn't follow suit with their perceptions of my new feminist status. I refuse to become a label, a name with no face, a person with no individual beliefs. I deserve more than that, as all women do. I am rejecting the term feminist, because I believe it is ridiculous and degrading. To me just being a woman is enough.

I'd like to take a moment and thank the people who have either inspired me, or made me feel brave enough to write a column. That's a wrap! Good luck on finals and have a great break! Peace, love, and happiness to all!

Stephanie Eisenberg is a Collegian columnist.

Turkish students express thanks

We wish to express our sincere gratitude toward fellow German students for the anti-racist sentiments they have expressed in their letter (Collegian, Dec. 3). Naturally we are troubled by the violence directed at Turkish nationals living in Germany. We are concerned with the racial violence perpetrated against all the minorities in Germany, as we are concerned about racism taking place anywhere in the world; it is everywhere, if it is anywhere. We believe it is the responsibility of every citizen of the world to fight against racial, religious and ethnic prejudices. The challenge is on all of us!

Sadiye Guler
Amherst

This letter was signed by 11 students.

The night before Finals

'Twas the night before Finals
and what did I fear?
Failing the classes
I'd taken all year!

I sat in my chair
books in my lap,
trying to study
but craving a nap.

Alyssa M.
OWENS

I looked at my roomie
all snuggled in bed
while visions of f-minuses danced in my head.

"I'll rest my eyes
for just a minute;
so I can prepare it
for the stuff I'll shove in it."

Closing my eyes
shifting my seat
I bowed my head
(and went to sleep!)

I dreamed of Santa steering his sleigh
but what was in front
Oh no!! No way!!!

How frightful my face turned how ashen my looks to see the sleigh pulled by my own school books!

Econ. and Trig. whizzed through the sky
with Calc. and Logic
Following close by.

And leading the pack—
the worst of them all physics flew by (defying Newton's Third Law)

Santa grinned evilly laughing with glee
he roared with pleasure that he would flunk me.

Suddenly I awoke trembling, too knowing exactly what I had to do.

So, thinking cap on,
pencil in hand
I picked up my textbooks and, honey, I CRAMMED.

Alyssa M. Owens is a Collegian staff member.

Have a safe and happy holiday vacation
–the Collegian Editoral/Opinion Staff

Morrissey's random babble

As the end of the semester approaches, I have run out of ideas, so the following will be a potpourri of my different opinions on everything that has gone down this semester. After all, I always like to get the last word in.

First things first: Chancellor Richard O'Brien is guilty of a grave error. See, Mr. O'Brien holds a Christmas party every year and invites student leaders from the Board of Governors, the Senate, and other allegedly powerful groups. Every year, the Chancellor has extended an invitation to the editor in chief of the Collegian... until this year.

Michael
MORRISSEY

It seems Mr. O'Brien doesn't like Dan Wetzel too much. Wetzel has openly criticized Mr. O'Brien's running of the University and his obvious lack of respect for the First Amendment. Last year protesters used theft, intimidation, vandalism, assault and battery, and death threats in an attempt to shut down the Collegian. O'Brien never had the backbone to condemn these acts. Wetzel took O'Brien for task for his lack of sense and leadership.

So the editor in chief of the Collegian didn't get invited to a party. It's no big deal, right? Maybe, maybe not. O'Brien has also attacked Wetzel in The Boston Globe, calling him a liar and saying that Wetzel was blaming O'Brien for racial problems at the Collegian to cover up his own "incapable" performance.

O'Brien has failed as an educator. He was unwilling to help a student learn, he was only willing to make pot shots at students and sink his office to a new low. By not trying to bury the hatchet with the Collegian, O'Brien has demonstrated the type of man he is, craven and inadequate. Often it is the little things that contribute to a man's character, and O'Brien has shown he has none. Expect more of this next semester. Merry Christmas, Dick.

Notes from the classroom: I recently had the pleasure of taking the communication course "Language of Current Periodicals" taught by Professor Vincent Bevilacqua. I can honestly say I have learned more in this man's class in three months than I have in three years.

There is absolutely no way to describe Bevilacqua's class, except to say it is a nonstop tirade of the disintegration of our society because of the liberal takeover of our country. The kicker is that Bevilacqua is by far the most intelligent communications professor I have bumped into, and his sardonic wit turns the mundane into the exciting. Plus, he knows talent when he sees it.

Well, I go from possibly being the most recognized citizen, at least in name, in Amherst to one of the least recognized citizens in my hometown. It's a good change of pace to not get verbally assaulted when I pull out my driver's license or credit card, but I'll make sure not to get used to it while I'm in Braintree.

President Michael (T.J.) Hooker is off gallivanting with Governor Weld in the country which is my favorite neighbor, Mexico. I hope old Hooker can live up to his name and get this place some money.

I don't know about you, but I'm getting pretty sick of hearing about how racist this place is. Suffice it to say that I don't believe it is an institutional problem, I think people just have to be more sensitive on the one-on-one level. If you can step back and look at the world in the other kid's shoes, we'll be all right in solving this. Oh, and not every White person is an inherent racist, despite the flyers and letters you may have been reading.

Finally, I just want to thank all of the people who have helped me in my life (boy, am I running out of ideas). You know who you are.

For those wondering what's up next semester for this space, my boss has assured me that I will probably be running only once every two weeks. Personally, it doesn't matter much to me, but if you want to read the lone conservative voice every week, drop a line to the department. Happy holidays.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

Leasing the Store isn't a solution

The news of the possible leasing out of the University Store is extremely disconcerting. It is an illusion that privatization of public services is a fix-all to fiscal problems. The reality is that such an option is merely a one shot deal that will not solve the larger problems of Auxiliary Services.

As a union that represents the directly affected employees, we have taken an official position to oppose privatization of any area within Auxiliary Services, because the leasing option can only be destructive and disruptive to our campus community. In the long term, privatization will most likely mean:

- Higher prices to students.
- A reduction in the full time work force and, consequently, the services provided.
- Profits made by an outside corporation are not reinvested in the campus community, let alone Massachusetts.
- Services currently providedwould be cut back significantly to align with corporate standards.
- There would be a huge reduction in jobs for students of this campus.

A task force has been created to examine the problems of Auxiliary Services with the intent to design a long range proposal to solve the fiscal problems. In generating idea, members of the task force have been soliciting suggestions from their employees. We encourage this type of participatory decision making. We feel this is an important first step in creating plans that will help protect our union members, "Save Our Store" and Auxiliary Services in the long run.

Frank Olbris, President
University Staff Association

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202 Free Parking 北京 on Route 9, Hadley
VISA

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE
Golden Anniversary 12 oz cans Case ..$7.99 (+dep)
Genesee Beer 12 oz cans 12 pk.....$4.99 (+dep)
Dinkel Acker Ocktoberfest 6 pk.....$5.29 (+dep)
Wurzburger Ocktoberfest 6 pk...$5.29 (+dep)
Becks Beer Cans only-6 pk $4.69, Suitcase...$16.79 (+dep)
Fischer Beer Swing top 1/2 Liter.....$1.95 (+dep)
Miller Genuine Draft, G.D. Light 12 pk btls .$6.99 (+dep)
Poland Spring Vodka 80 proof 1.75 L.....$9.99
Fleishmanns Vodka 80 proof 750ml ...$5.49
Leroux Coffee, Blackberry 1.0 L.....$9.99
Martel Cognac V.S. 750 ml.....$15.99
LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
Open 9 am - 11 pm
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

It's A Pajama Party!

4 Hours Only Both Locations!
BYOB (Bring your own Blanky)
When: Thursday, December 17 5-9 p.m.
Where: J•Rich Clothing (Where else)?
Why: To Save, Save, Save ...and have fun, too!
Holiday FUN!
Take 20% Off All:
Robes • PJ's
Niteshirts • Boxers
Flannel Pants
at J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-2013
22 Masons St., Northampton • 586-5336
Open 7 days • Many Nights
Take an additional 10% Off If You Come in Wearing Your Sleep Attire!

■ spiders

continued from page 1

while others reported seeing spiders as small as ticks.

Maintenance personnel have announced plans to fumugate specific rooms and floors within the tower today where spiders have been sighted, but residents say this is too little too late.

"I wish they would fumugate the entire building and be done with it," said MacDonald. "Then we could all sleep in peace."

• MICROFRIDGE •
All In One
Compact Refrigerator, Freezer and Microwave Oven
RENT ONE NOW, PAY FOR IT NEXT SEMESTER
You've probably seen one already, sleek, streamlined, matching top to bottom. You've probably used someone's already, and maybe made floormates shut their doors when they see you and your popcorn coming. You may have wished you had rented one before the supply dwindled away to nothing.
NOW YOU CAN HAVE ONE OF YOUR VERY OWN.
In an effort to meet the needs of our residents who would like to rent a Microfridge but can't afford it right now, Housing Services will allow you to rent a microfridge - and ask you to pay for it, NOT NOW, but during January.
If you would like to take advantage of this offer, stop by the Housing Assignment Office, 235 Whitmore and sign a contract.
P.S. I would hurry.
Remember, it's first come, first served.

LSAT
MCAT
GMAT
GRE
SAVE $150 on MCAT!
SAVE $100 on LSAT, GMAT & GRE!
• Place a deposit by December 15th •
CANNOT BE APPLIED RETROACTIVELY OR IN COMBINATION WITH ANY OTHER OFFER. AMHERST OFFICE ONLY.
KAPLAN
The answer to the test question
549-5780

Arts & Living

Messiah overcomes shaky start to delight all

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

Handel's Messiah
Fine Arts Center
Dec. 9, 1992

The Springfield Symphony Orchestra and the University of Massachusetts Chamber Choir joined forces Wednesday night to present George Frederick Handel's *Messiah.

They filled stage was a sea of black and white attire and finely tuned instruments. The F.A.C. was transformed from a bland, concrete space into an elegant concert hall of almost Carnegie quality.

The Springfield Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Raymond Harvey, played a rich, full Messiah. Harvey's interpretation maintained the spiritual vitality and musical accuracy of Handel's brilliant religious oratorio.

Throughout the piece, the orchestra lifted the audience out of their seats and forcibly captivated their attention by playing sacred airs, recitatives and more lively choruses beautifully. Likewise, the Pastoral Symphony was performed with melodious, soothing ease.

The symphony soloists served Handel's piece well. Tenor Bruce Fithian's hummingbird-like voice made up for in quality what it lacked in loudness. Baritone Stephen Salters' deep, rich voice provided the audience a confident narrative of Handel's story of Christ.

Despite the fact that countertenor Christopher Jenkins' range was impressively high, his voice lacked the fullness that his counterparts mastered. At one point, to the audience's (and I'm sure to his) horror, a note previously unknown to man (and woman) escaped from his mouth. Credit must be given to Jenkins, however, for taking on the usually underrated and often overshadowed part of countertenor.

Soloist Christine Akre did the glorious soprano part more than justice, as her crystal voice rang through the hall, echoing above and cutting through the music of the large symphony.

The University Chamber Choir, under the direction of E. Wayne Abercrombie got off to a slow start. The group initially lacked the cohesiveness and strength required by Messiah to present the four-part choruses with individual definition of each part encompassed by overall unity.

The second half of Messiah was marked by a notable change in the Chorus. I don't what Dr. Abercrombie said to the group, but whatever his measures, they were effective. The chorus took charge of the stage, supported by the strength of each enthusiastic voice. Each part stood on its own and was highlighted triumphantly when Handel so deemed, and blended in harmonious perfection when called for.

The Hallelujah Chorus, the piece that I had longed for since first hearing of this performance, did not disappoint me. The performers raised the ceiling with their heavenly song, their voices and souls opened up and gave with generosity the best and last of their heartfelt praise of Handel.

Let us all learn from these performers, and share and give these precious gifts of the heart during this holiday season and throughout the year.

Rice's books no longer offer a lush escape

By RACHEL D. MEDANIC
Collegian Correspondent

The plot of The Tale of the Body Thief, the newest book in novelist Anne Rice's vampire chronicles, quickly conveys to readers that she is grasping for a good idea, for insight and exploration into the souls and lives of her famous immortals, the vampires.

Bored with being immortal, tired of his loneliness and feeling a little guilty over his addiction to being a jerk, Lestat de Lioncourt (the Vampire Lestat) sets off to end it all and gets thwarted by the nature of the universe.

He is presented with the opportunity of a lifetime, no pun intended. Lestat is propositioned by a "body snatcher" (Raglan James). For a day, James wants to switch bodies with Lestat. Lestat is advised by his fellow immortals and good friend David Talbot, of the Talamasca (a secret organization of scholars of the Occult) not to take the deal.

But being who he is, Lestat takes the gamble and gets himself into a spot which finally forces him to cry wolf for real. He finds genuine loathing for the frailties of mortality. The only one willing to help him is his British friend Talbot. Talamascaman to the rescue!

Rice entranced readers with Lestat when she published the first three chronicles of her vampire series (Interview With A Vampire, The Vampire Lestat, and The Queen of the Damned). Part of Lestat's appeal is that for readers, he is the ideal rebel. He is bold enough to defy anything and everything.

The Tale of the Body Thief truly is, as the reviews say, campy. Rice is writing to the tune of the 90's. Not until 3/4 of the way through does she quench readers' thirst for the pleasure of her long, memorable, adjective-saturated descriptions that permeated her other vampire chronicles, namely, The Vampire Lestat. It's as if Rice allowed the credit card her readers used in the 80's to run out. Now they have to suffer, do without and pay the bill. Her style has taken on a depression/recession edge at a time in history when what we need the most are the lush escapes she used to give us.

What is good about this book is the depth Rice's storytelling lends to the character David Talbot. Perhaps as one of her most interesting ideas, Rice's Talamasca appears not only in her vampire chronicles, but most recently in her superbly done novel, The Witching Hour.

Other works by Rice worth more time than The Tale of the Body Thief, are any of her other vampire chronicles or any of her novels: Cry to Heaven, The Feast of All Saints and The Mummy.

Rice's books have also inspired the graphic novels (similar to a lush comicbook) based on her vampire chronicles and on her book The Mummy. Rice also writes erotica under the names Anne Rampling and A.N. Roquelaure.

The Bobs have fab sound all their own

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

The Bobs
The Iron Horse
Dec. 7, 1992

I remain convinced that The Bobs broke several of Massachusetts' blue laws on Monday night, the ones comprised with how much entertainment can be legally crammed onto such a small stage, and how much fun a group can have while performing before an audience. I haven't had the time to do the necessary research myself — nor do I have a copy of Massachusetts' legal code lying around the apartment, but I'm sure some enterprising law enforcement official could quickly verify whether or not any violations did occur, and take the appropriate steps.

From the moment they bounced on stage and launched their high-energy cover of the Beatles' "We Can Work it Out," it was obvious that this was no ordinary a-capella concert. As the audience tapped their toes and clapped their hands delightedly, the song seamlessly and without warning became the chorus of "Celebration" by Kool and the Gang before ending in a triumphant shout.

As if their irreverent treatment of their covers weren't

Turn to BOBS, page 8

Have a happy holiday season!
–The Collegian Staff

AIDS
AIDS is everyone's problem and everyone must educate themselves now! Donate $5 or more and receive our publications. Send name, address, and enclosed donation: $_____
MAIL TO:
THE RUBBERS BROS.™
AIDS Education Publications
P.O. Box 431 - UMC, Wilbraham, MA 01095-0431
AIDS Information - Tel. 1-800-745-1057

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 4 584-8152
Call Theatre For Showtimes
The Muppet Christmas Carol PG
Dracula R
A Few Good Men R
Forever Young PG
Malcolm X PG13
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7939
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Home Alone 2: Lost in New York PG
The Distinguished Gentleman R
Wait Disney's Aladdin G
The Bodyguard R

ALLEY OOPS &
Miller Lite Live Concert Series
present:
Bear Mountain
Fri., Dec. 11
Backlash
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET
NORTHAMPTON
584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

Study hard! Mom would have wanted it that way.

SKI
3RD ANNUAL
INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging
(Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsored by Lebedi's, Mt. Sutton and Molson
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Group Leader Discounts
Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 & Springbreak '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

PARAMOUNT PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

BAD COMPANY with TATTOO JUNGLE
FRIDAY
DECEMBER 11TH

ALVIN AND A CHIPMUNK CHRISTMAS
SATURDAY
DECEMBER 12TH
EMERSON, LAKE AND PALMER
FEBRUARY 1ST
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874
STRAWBERRY RECORDS; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686; OR TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE AT 1-800-828-7080

In Your Rush To Leave For Break
PLEASE DON'T FORGET TO RECYCLE

HAPPY HOLIDAYS
Housing Services Recycling Program
545-1155

■ Bobs

continued from page 7

enough, there were also their original songs to deal with, most of which were brand new "Sign My Snarling Doggie," about the perils of signing autographs; "Mr. Quality," which was billed as the world's first a-cappella rap song (or "a-crap"); "Shut Upa and Sing," which was inspired by heckling at a previous concert; "Spontaneous Human Combustion," a doo-wop song with a killer chorus - "Poof! There goes another one!"

And then there were the jokes. The four of them were constantly needling each other, the audience, the technical staff, the songs. Mathew Bob Stull had a pathological inability to begin a song without a half-dozen false starts, Richard Bob Greene ogled desserts, Janie Bob Scott engineered an ever-escalating session of hilarious flirting with Matthew Bob during "Share a Load," and Joe Bob Finetti, the perennial freshman, took the time to explain everything for us.

"Careful, Joe Bob," said Richard Bob, "or they'll figure out how we stretch songs into a several hour show."

Though the audience was left helpless by their goofy antics, one only had to look at the sweat to belie the impression that the Bobs weren't giving their all while singing. Songs kicked in almost telepathically, and the audience craned back and forth in amazement — who just made that sound? and how? Richard Bob and Joe Bob broke Johnny Cash's "Ring of Fire" into swirling, never-ending solos on bass and trumpet (yes, trumpet), picking up and discarding snippets of songs before settling on a free jazz "Frosty the Snowman." Janie Bob melded sweetly into harmonies, got down and dirty with "Fever," then belted out the joyous "Bulky Rhythm." Mathew Bob was actually low-key for a moment or two during his lead on "Mr. Duality."

GOOD LUCK
on your final exams!
Study hard!

'I'm a people person.'

What are you going to say at your job interviews?

"I'm a people person" might be funny on T.V., but when you get right down to it, are you prepared to go out and get a job?

The Collegian's Production Department gives you the opportunity to work in a cooperative environment while fine-tuning your skills and expressing your creativity.

Our Advertising Production Department handles the creation of ads from start to finish – concept, graphic design and realization.

And our Night Graphics Department puts together the daily paper – layout, desktop publishing and manual paste-up.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian. It's not just an adventure. It's a job.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
Production • 103 Campus Center • 545-1864

The Collegian's Production Department is accepting applications for Day and Night Graphics positions.

CELEBRATING 25 YEARS • DAILY SINCE 1967

Winter Session 1993
January 4-25

Yes, you can!

REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.

SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.

SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.

OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.

EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.

Division of Continuing Education

Now Renting for January
Spacious Two Bedroom Apartments on Bus Line
$400/Month
Call KAMINS REAL ESTATE at 253-2515

PIZZERIA
Paradiso
TRADITIONAL WOOD-FIRED BRICK OVEN PIZZA
12 CRAFTS AVENUE
NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS
586-1468

BFA THESIS SHOW

Julie Bianculli
Paintings

Traci Noone
Photography

Kathy Wallace
Photography

Student Union Gallery
December 11 - 18
opening reception: December 11, 5-7

This exhibition is sponsored in part by a grant from the UMASS arts council

PIZZA SUBS
Bruno's
363 MAIN ST.
AMHERST
256-0222
SALADS LASAGNA
SPAGHETTI

Winter Specials!
Introducing
Cheeseburger Subs! Real Bacon For Pizza!

Fast Free Delivery for Lunch, Dinner, and Late Night • 256-0222

$2.00 Off Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	$2.00 Off Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	Free Small Cheese When You Purchase a Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92
$1.00 Off Medium Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	$1.00 Off Medium Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	Free Small Cheese When You Purchase a Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92
75¢ Off Small Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	75¢ Off Small Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	2 Large Cheese Pizzas $9.95 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92
2 Spaghetti Dinners For $6.00 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	$1.00 Off Lasagna Dinner Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92	2 Large Cheese Pizzas $9.95 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 12/31/92

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADIOAN

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Quote of the Day

"Money is the root of all good."
–Ayn Rand

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lie low and wait for future developments to furnish the clues you need. Concentrate on your dear ones or a favorite hobby. Playing closer attention to details saves the day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may not be able to put your finger on the cause of a blue mood. Contact old friends. An interest in business is revived.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Going quietly about your business is the surest way to head off interference. Let your imagination roam this afternoon. Prepare for the long climb toward a major objective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Contact with an admirer at a distance could be a sweet surprise. Luck smiles on your long-range plans. A harmonious atmosphere at home allows you to concentrate on business goals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotions may run high today; strive for stability. Make certain higher-ups get what they expect from you. Bargains abound for holiday shoppers. A reunion with an old flame could reignite romantic fires.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An encouraging message or welcome visitor boosts your expectations. You feel much more optimistic! Dining with a favorite companion is the perfect way to unwind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take a chance on love. Plunging into an affair of the heart will recharge your batteries. Spend only what you must, not what you would like to. A holiday message brings wonderful family news.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Kind feelings flourish within the family circle. A joint planning session will produce spectacular results. A new household project has special merit. Persevere!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Even minor career gains could lead to big benefits down the road. You have an innovative way of doing things. Reviewing past mistakes can prevent similar errors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your financial prudence will pay off today. Keep your feet on the ground for snippets of news. An employment situation could annoy you. Advertise your talents.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A partner could prove difficult to please. Business squabbles may have to be ironed out legally. Be adventuresome if you see a way to make more profits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your financial prospects get a dramatic boost. A change in technique or attitude will bring you rich rewards. You meet someone at work who electrifies you. Gasp!

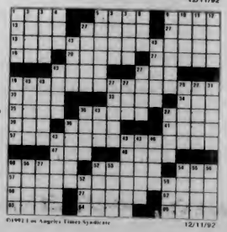
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Highway way off
5 Deli favorite
9 Chaucer's "The Miller's —"
13 Cupid
14 Germ cell
15 "— Arms" D Kaye flick
16 Deal with curtly
19 Palindromic preposition
20 Baked veggies
21 Infiltrate
22 "Kiss Me —"
23 Stage routine
24 Suffer suspense and anxiety
32 Trillion finish
33 — above superior
34 Enemy
35 Weather word
36 Wellen
38 Actor Dillon
39 Author Fleming
40 "... to boil like — ." Job
41 "— like arms...": Hamlet
42 Make an irrevocable decision
47 Ands: Fr
48 Ceremonial vessels
49 Flight phase
52 Stock term
54 Dine
57 Be prudent
60 "Picnic" playwright
61 Pitch variety
62 Water, in Spain
63 Asiatic weight
64 Snake or eel
65 — apparent

DOWN
1 Fury
2 Midwest ruler
3 Change addresses
4 Teen lead-in
5 Uttered
6 Traditional knowledge
7 Lbw eat —
8 Guitarist Montgomery
9 "Who Can I —?" 1964 song hit
10 "Whoso diggeth — shall fall...": Proverbs
11 Strauss' "Artist's —"
12 — acte
14 Novelist Nevil
17 Singing style
18 Ben of "Front Page" fame
22 Was certain
23 — for your money
24 Elementary
25 Norwegian statesman Gerhardsen
26 Bangor's neighbor
27 Discernment
28 Italian novelist Umberto
29 Joan —
30 "Alien" actor Yaphet
31 "Dragonwyck" novelist
36 — out declines
37 The Royal Ballet's theatre Abbr
38 Avril or Mai
40 The Jetsons' pet
43 Beer mug
44 Censured
45 Amherst sch.
46 "The Vamp" 49 Hit hard, old style
50 Actress Louise
51 Seraph, in Avignon
52 Certain tide
53 Norse capital
54 Margin
55 Here, in Granada
56 Peter or Paul
58 CIA kin
59 Bk. of the Bible

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

12/11/92



© 1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 12/11/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Chris Cuddy
Copy Editor ..... Jon Lupo
PhotoTechnician ..... Jacob Adelman
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Mike Carvalho, Todd Elliott

Menu

LUNCH
American Chop Suey
Grilled Chicken
BASICS LUNCH
Macaroni & Tomatoes
Grilled Chicken

DINNER
Tacos
Fried Shrimp
BASICS DINNER
Veggie Taco
Fried Shrimp

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ smoke

continued from page 3

Cunningham, referring to the State Clean Indoor Air Law of 1988. Various members of the Senate agreed with him, one citing that some buildings on campus like Lederle have poor ventilation, which lets in less than five percent of fresh air, in comparison to most others.

Secondly, the report stressed that several agencies have asked that the University develop an all-inclusive policy on smoking, including the Graduate Senate, the Personnel Office, and the Board of Fire Prevention Regulations.

"All we want to do is see a known carcinogen taken off-campus," said Cunningham. Some smoking areas would remain, mainly in the dining commons, and "specifically designated enclosed public areas of campus buildings".

The General Education Council passed a motion that added three gen ed courses to the curriculum,, all of which were cultural diversity classes.

The Academic Priorities Council only passed one motion of four in a plan to investigate faculty's productivity on campus. The proposals were debated for being "vague".

Vincent Ilardi, the chair of the Faculty Senate Library Committee, announced that improvements to the library had been made in the acquisitions department, but said that the staff "may or may not be up to full strength" next semester.

■ Forsyth

continued from page 1

"I think it would be an asset in bringing out the student vote. Students care about that issue."

Some UMass students have already pledged their support for Forsyth.

"This is exactly what we need," senior history major Mark DelCore said. "Amherst treats the college students who spend their money here very badly. The town is run very poorly and a change is needed."

Forsyth is a long time resident of Amherst, who went through the towns public school system and attended the University of Massachusetts for two years before transferring to the University of Southern California.

The Collegian staff hopes everyone has a happy holiday season. See you next semester. Don't forget to recycle this paper.

■ Brazil

continued from page 3

tournaments in Texas than what happened in neighboring [Latin American] countries," Santoro explained.

There is now a video movement in Latin America to reach the people with productions about issues concerning Latin Americans from a Latin American perspective.

With the domination of Northern media and perspectives, Santoro said there is a tendency for the North to ignore the viewpoint of the South.

"We want to show Latin America with our eyes to the North people," Santoro said.

Santoro believes there is a one directional flow to Latin America through media from the North.

"Co-production [with northern countries] requires a change in the way of thinking," Santoro said. "The North doesn't want to know the South in terms of the South's point of view."

The struggle video producers are facing in Latin America is how to reach the "collectivity." Small groups concerned with the present situation of the media want to reach their neighboring countries to show what is happening in Latin America.

Santoro said these groups make a lot of videos. Yet, "Reality for the people is from international programming rather than from neighboring countries."

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY

Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH

Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.

Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm

ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50

Children under 10 - $3.50

Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25

All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU

10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

CA$H FOR YOUR BOOKS!

BRING YOUR BOOKS TO:

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

DECEMBER 14 -17, 23, 28 9 AM - 4 PM

DECEMBER 18, 21, 22 9 AM - 7 PM

DECEMBER 19, 11 AM - 4 PM

DECEMBER 29, 9 AM - 1 PM

HAMPDEN COMMONS

DECEMBER 18, 21, 22 10 AM - 6 PM

WORCESTER COMMONS

DECEMBER 18, 21, 22 10 AM - 6 PM

WE BUY THE WIDEST RANGE OF BOOKS HARD OR SOFT BACK COVERS

SPRING '93 COURSE DESCRIPTION

PolSci 391H / 791A

The following description of the combined honors and graduate course on Environmental Politics and Policy, Political Science 391H/791A, was omitted from the Pre-Registration guide:

The course examines (1) the capacity of the American political system and its political economy in dealing with critical environmental problems; (2) the politics of regulation, environment, and distributional impacts of selected environmental policies, including several impacting on the global environment; (3) the critical interactions of energy and environmental policies; (4) alternative proposals for environmental improvement through economic incentives, including green taxes and environmental mediation; (5) long-term ethically related questions dealing with the nature of economic growth, intergenerational equity factors, and environmental protection; and (6) arguments of those who call for systemic change, including the sustainable society model.

Prerequisites: Permission of the instructor, with a background of upper division courses in political science or upper division courses in environmental studies with at least an introductory course in American national government or public policy.

For more information, contact Associate Professor Robert A. Shanley in the Political Science Department, 202 Thompson Hall.

We interrupt this newspaper to let you know that the Collegian wishes you a happy holiday season and much luck with your final exams. Make your parents proud that they're spending a fortune to send you here!

Legal Problems?

Call UMass Student Legal Services!

Housing • Family • Student Rights

Civil Rights • Workers Rights

Criminal • Consumer Law

Military and Draft Law

922 Campus Center 545-1995

Did you find yourself bored all semester with nothing to do? There is always something to do at the Collegian! Come down first thing next semester and get involved! And, ya know, there aren't any little yellow spiders around HERE. At least, not yet.

WORDS & PICTURES MUSEUM

NOHO'S COMIC ART MUSEUM!

FREE ADMISSION

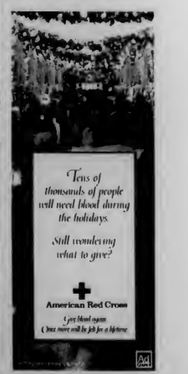
GIFT SHOP FILLED WITH FUN THINGS FOR THE KIDS AND FANTASTIC COLLECTORS ITEMS!

ANY MUSEUM VISITOR WHO SPENDS $50 WILL RECEIVE A LIMITED PRINT RUN T-SHIRT!

WORDS & PICTURES MUSEUM OF FINE SEQUENTIAL ART

244 MAIN STREET THE ROUNDHOUSE NORTHAMPTON MA 01060

413 586 8545 OPEN TUESDAY - SUNDAY 12 - 5



SPORTS NOTICE

The University of Massachusetts basketball team ticket pickup for games over intersession occurs on Thursday, December 17, from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The schedule for intersession is as follows: Vs. Marathon Basketball Dec. 19 at 8 p.m., Abdow's Classic at Springfield Dec. 28 and 29, at New Hampshire Jan. 2 at 1 p.m., vs. Boston University Jan. 5 at 7 p.m., Cincinnati at Springfield Jan. 7 at 9:30 p.m. at Temple Jan. 9 at 2 p.m., at Rutgers Jan. 12 at 8 p.m., vs. George Washington Jan. 16 at Noon, vs. Rhode Island Jan. 19 at 7 p.m., vs. Temple Dec. 21 at 7 p.m., DePaul at Worcester Jan. 24 at 1:30 p.m.

D.P. Dough

Delivers Calzones

call 256-1616

Now Open at 11:30 A.M.

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones

2 FREE COKES WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones

2 FREE COKES WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY 2 CALZONES Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only One coupon per 2 Calzones

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT

Open 7 Days 8am-9pm

Drop-Off or Self Service

Washing Machine Starting at $1

Attendant available all day

326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

QUIET

If you're tired of yelling this, Come and see us

The Brook

253-2834

All I Want For Christmas is A SPRING BREAK VACATION

1-800-2-CANCUN

$75 Deposit Will Hold Your Seat

from $449

Book Now!! CAMPUS GET-AWAYS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE

CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Free in January -- bridge lessons. M-W-F, 4-6 pm 1/6 to 1/25. Campus Center outside the coffee shop. RSVP 865-7877

AMAZING ATARI

1040 ST FOR SALE! IT FEATURES 1M RAM+,30 M HARD DRIVE, B/W MONITOR AND SOME FREE SOFTWARE. ONLY $500 OR BEST OFFER CALL GEO IMMEDIATELY AT 545-9317.

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

Commuter area government Vice presidential electione. Monday, Dec. 14 10-4 pm outside of Munchy Store Student Union

New Years in Montreal $79 per person. Price includes round trip motor coach 3 days 2 nights hotel first class hotel downtown, 1 dinner at Peel Pub free admission to Metropolis

Call Reliable Tours
365 Broadway Rt. 1
Lynnfield, MA 01940
617-598 9930
617-592 0640

Subletting over Wintersession? The off-campus Housing Office at 428 Student Union offers a great way to find subletting or sublet a property over wintersession. All leasing questions answered with a smile. Call 5-0865 or stop by

AUTO FOR SALE

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

FOR RENT

Amherst Belchertown line 3 to 5 bed room new homes call 586 4270

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. Room avail. $275+ 1 bedroom apartment avail.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

January only: Student in family home, one mile from UM, on bus route 250 all incl. 253-2937

New York City -- Furnished rooms and apartments for intersession and weekend stays. Upper West side. Reasonable rates. 212-662-1358 Save this ad!

North Amherst
Looking for 2 people
To share big room
$150 each, 1 mile to Campus, on bus route
Call 549 1354

One big bedroom in Sunderland house take over my lease Available now 230.00 month - 665-4348 or 568- 4323
On bus line

Single room for rent -- Half mile to campus, on bus line, for 260/month, utils. Jan. rent free -- call 549-6114

2 rooms available in 2bed in Amherst 220/clean/bus/ASAP call Holly 549 4259

FOR SALE

Amiga 52 MB HD, 4 MB fast IMB Chip RAM, W/ECS $599 w/out $499 /B.O. Raymund 367 9269

Rhygin MTB Frame
19" True Temper OX2
Super light fast handling
Custom Handbuilt in USA
New Cond. CHEAP
Pete 253-2154

Sale! Everything must go! Bikes & parts, clothes (new Levis) household appliances and furniture freebees. Cheap! 585-0478

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs - case and manuals
Call Miech 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP!

Desperately need PHISH tix for New Year's.
Call Eric 548-0279

HELP WANTED

Babysitter – Afternoons, January-June need car and references. 548-9096

Full time office employee needed for the month of January. Must have excellent general office skills and computer skills, duties will consist of phone reception, filing and parparation of letters using wordperfect 5.1. Please fax or send your resume to ELECTRONIC TIME CO., INC.
45 West Street
Medfield, MA 02052
FAX 508-359-4482
(no phone calls please)

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.Call 1-800 3SI-ESTA ask for Bonnie

Would you like to work? At Hampshire county transit part time drivers will train for evenings and weekends earn up to $10.05 per hour starting rate $6.50 have company paid insurence, paid holidays, paid vacations, paid sick days paid funeral leave. Apply to: Hampshire County Transit 54 Industrial Drive Northampton, MA 01060

HOLIDAY GIFTS

Go to Besha's bargain basement. They have oriental rugs, clothing, and also great jewelry. As an added feature, their jewelry is half off, that's right, half off! Go down and pick out your gift for the holidays, everything is priced just right, 241 Main St. Northampton, MA Their stuff is good -- Thank you

INSTRUCTION

Voice lessons – all levels
Learn to sing through instruction and application to music. Start over Jan. term anytime. Call Laura 253-2884

LOST

Keys, campus center concourse 12/5/ 92 Blue Keyring "Windener University" Big bucks reward call 546-0008

Lost cable bike lock near Franklin Dining Commons call 549-5733 if found

Lost watch with braided leather band 12/7 between NE and Mahar. Sentimental Value. Howard 546-1171

MUSICIANS

Drummer needed: Phish, creative Improv 256-8115

Keyboardist Wanted: Yes, Phish, etc. 586-9377

PERSONALS

Andrea,
Here it is, your very own personal. I have had a great time the last two months. Mike's New Years Eve Party is going to be sick. We are going to have a blast.
Love,
Mike

Dear Lauren and Lara,
Happy Big/little sister day!!
You're great! Can't wait till tonight!
Love,
Heather

Elisa – I'm that tall handsome man you've been waiting for a personal from. Remember the drive from Albany? You're not so-secret admirer

Good luck in Italy
Treehugger #1 (Em)
Love,
Your roomie
Treehugger #2 (GB)
I'll miss you

Happy Birthday Cheryl!!!
This is your last year as a teenager so make it count!
Peace and Love,
Jen

Happy holidays to all my friends. God bless us each and every one. Third floor Kennedy we gotta are the balls.! I'm going to miss you!! Hoops, cheer up! Deb and Sharon thanx 4 an awesome semester. To the guy who sang the Christmas music Merry Christmas!
I love you all --- Karolyn

Heather – Golty Gee
You'll find your logoboo
when you ---
(shut the door)

Hey Sigma Kappa! It's been an awesome semester. Good luck on finals next. We hope everyone has a good winter break! Your loving public relations chairs, Christina and Jan Kelly. PS- Rush is coming!

Hey That Cheritos
S - k it
It's been real
the wallsports, guns ...
Have a great break and lets do it all again & more
Lisa

John A.
Happy Anniversary! I'm truly lucky to have you by my side. I walked in through the out door 4 years ago and I'm happy I've been with you ever since. Good luck with finals. Until the end of time...
Love,
Shell

KENNY,
THANKS FOR BEING
MY BEST FRIEND
LOVE YOU,
TAMMY

Lost your keys? Your boots? You lunch, the last time you drank? Any chance with tha: Redhead, Blonde, Brunette thru your own actions? Are you stuped when you drink whiskey? You are not alone. Join the new special interest lobby PIGs. Pompous Immatura Gearheads

MY DEAREST MISFITS
I'M GOING TO MISS YOU
I LOVE YOU GUYS SO MUCH
YOU GUYS ARE THE BEST
THANKS FOR EVERYTHING, FAMILY
EL RANCHO

Matt, Jon, Bob, and Mike,
You guys are the best roomates a guy could have. Marry Christmas and a happy New Year.
Love,
Welly

Melanie, Robyn and Tanya
Happy big/little day! We have the best family I love you guys
Shari

Steph
You'll never know how happy I am that you're part of my life. Thanks for caring.
Love, Dave

Sureona, Oy Sohniye, Janam Din Dian Bahut Wadaan. Rab Ten Zindaun Khushian Naal par dive -- Tera Bhen K

Suzanne, Kerry, Krisina Kimberly, and Becky, Happy Graduation! Best of luck to each and avery one of you. You will all be missed at Sigma Delta Tau !
Love,
The Sisters and Pledges

Suzanne
The back 8 won't be the same with you gone. SDT will miss you.
Love and Laughter
Always
Your roomies

To the Delta Chi Roomate:
This Monday will be a night to remember and tell your children about. This Tuesday will be a day for pennance and begging for forgiveness. Happy 21!
The Kappy Sig
Roomate from Hell

To my big brother and his twin brother happy 21st Birthday, Gentlemen Have a drink on me!!!
Butch

To all my fellow workers at the Collegian, have a merry holiday - you too S.C.
Sincerely,
The Top Ad Rep

TO MY SPECIAL FRIENDS It has been quite an interessing semester filled with plenty of ups and downs. Thanks for always being there for me and always making me smile. You guys are the best. Happy holidays.
Love,
Sharon

To the Kappa Sigma
It's about time you're 21!
Roadtrip to the city of letters this Monday. Bring a raincoat, you'll need it. Trust me!
A.E.K.D.B.

Ziggy
Mon Dix!!!
I can't believe you're leaving this carzy place. No more lazy Sundays or Tequila hell nights. It won't be the same without you here, thanks for all the love and laughter of the past 5 years. You are simply "remarkable!!!"
Love, Jr.

PETE'S DRIVE IN

Pete's Drive In
December Special
2 burgers for 2 bucks

RIDE WANTED

I need a ride to or from NORTH CAROLINA in Jan Are you driving Rt. 95 over break? I'll help with gas and driving. Please call Merideth 549-6284

ROOM WANTED

Female grad student looking to rent room in house for spring semester. Prefer laid back but considerate individuals. Please call 508 228.8265

ROOMATES WANTED

Fun, friendly female needed to share 2 bedroom Brandywine apt. Interested? Call 549-3785 and ask for Kim or Laura

Roomate Needed!
For a large bedroom in Puffton ASAP
Only 178.50/Mo.
Heat and Hot H20 incl.
Please call 549 1172
& ask for Nora

We need a Housemate!!!
Large bedroom open in five bedroom house 187/mo +util. Jen/May. Call Chris or just ask! This means you!
549-3525

Amherst 2 bedroom apt 1 room for rent 2 full baths w/heat and hot water included on bus route available immediately Call Tom or Stacy 256-0274

Apt room for rent
Uptown - 2 minutes from bus stop m/f $200+ 549 2810
A stumble home from bars

Female Housemate Wanted
To share a large house in Amherst many extras. Washer & Dryer porch +++ more Close to town and campus
Call Scott at 253-3878 after 7 pm

Female nonsmoker wanted to share bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Cheap rent 2 minute walk to town (on bus rt) walking distance to campus 253-5219

Fun but serious fem student looking for roomate Amherst house 195+ starts Spring sem 6-1642 for details

Housemates needed male, female Great house across street from campus. Many great features Call Jason, 549-8341

M/F needed to share a 2 bedroom apartment call Shana 253-2369

Mels roomate needed to share large bedroom. 145.00 plus utilities. 256-3191

One female
Brandywine apts
Start Jan 93
$190 inc. Heat/water
Jen 549-7845

Roomates needed call Mill Valley estates 253-7377 Single or double for 1 bedroom

Single room avelable, in spacious house spring sem call 665-0265 190.00/mo+.

Single room available in 3 bedroom townhouse apartments. Call 549-3523

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The legal services center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center 545-1995

Prognent? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidantial, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops. 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 256-8393

SPORTSCARDS

Sportstop Cards
Mt. Farms Mall
Open weekends & Wednesnights

TO SUBLET

1 responsible female for single sublet $195 + 549-7619

I am looking to sublet for Winter session Call Debby 6-3434

Need extra cash? I need to sublet a room during intersession. Please call Nancy at 546-0256

Wintersession room South Amherst $220 inclusive 256-0034

Wintersession room in Amherst house on Main Street $125 inclusive. Call Ryan 256-1928

TRAVEL

Can you say Tequila?
Cancun, Jamaica, Florida
Springbreak '93
Save $$$ Before Jan 1
Call Merideth 549-6284

New Years in Montreal! $79 per person price includes round trip motor coach 3 days 2 nights hotel first class, hotel downtown 1 dinner at Peel Pub free admission to Metropolis
Call Reliable Tours
365 Broadway Rt. 1
Lynnfield, MA 01940
617-598 9930
617-592 0640

SKI-Intercollegiate Ski weeks, ONLY $299 Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKETS 5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDO) 5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Molson and MT. SUTTON, CANADA (just across the Vermont border) Group Leader Discounts. Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Spring Break '93 Call Ski Travel Unlimited
1 800 999 SKI 9

Take it off!
Spring Break '93
Jamaica, Cancun, Florida
Save $$$ Before Jan. 1
Jesse 546-6866

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers typed free cover page, spell check $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing, By Pre Writer, Fast. 253-9173

Typing/Wordprocessing,
Resumes, reports, theses
Laser printing. Campus pick up and delivery
Call Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

Social Distortions
First Album
Mommys Little Monster
Can you help?
Call Amy 549-6870

Sports

Minutemen looking for instant replay

JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts basketball team will play its toughest game of the year Saturday night at 8:30 p.m. in Norman, Oklahoma against the No. 11 Sooners.

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Last season, the University of Massachusetts basketball team burst onto the national scene with an 86-73 over Oklahoma on national television.

Tomorrow night, the No. 23 Minutemen (2-1) will try to remain in the national spotlight when they face the No. 11 Sooners (5-0) in Norman, Okl.

John Calipari does not like the obvious comparison between the two seasons. UMass will play the same opponent, but Calipari will send out a different team.

"Last season we were one of the top 15 teams in the country, this year we are possible top 50," Calipari said. "This year's team is not as good as last year's. It's obvious by the way we have played so far."

Calipari says last season's contest was a "mission type of game" for his squad. He does not see that same intensity in this years team.

"Last year, we had seven days to prepare, this season we had two days to practice. And today's practice was pitiful," Calipari said. "We are not as prepared and our players are just going through the motions."

In front of a raucous and sold-out Lloyd Noble Center, Oklahoma will be looking to avenge last season's loss.

"Last season they came in and we shocked them, they were stunned," UMass forward Lou Roe said. "They remember the beating. If they can beat us by 50, they will."

Billy Tubbs' team will run the court relentlessly, relying on any number of players to score. In the half court game, 6-8 center Bryan Sallier and 6-8 forward Jeff Webster are dangerous.

"They come at you so many ways," Calipari said. "They got six guys averaging in double figures. Sallier is averaging 17 points a game but the others are doing it also.

"They bring the play at you, they shoot the threes and they can jam it inside. We have to play tough defense and take good shots. We can run with them, but only if we take good shots."

Calipari, who went only eight deep against Siena, said he felt center Kennard Robinson could handle the Sooner's speed and would play.

Calipari said the game was not on ESPN because Oklahoma was unable to work out a deal within the Big Eight conference regulations. The game (tip-off 8:30 EST) can be heard on 99.3 WHMP and 91.1 WMUA.

Women's basketball falls to UNH Wildcats

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

Every basketball coach will tell you that if your team has no defensive intensity, it's going to be very difficult to score many points.

Such was the case for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team (1-3) last night in Durham, New Hampshire as they suffered through foul trouble and an uninspired effort to fall to the University of New Hampshire, 71-49.

Things looked good for the Minutemen after Kim Kristofik opened up the game with a layup but this 2-0 lead would be the only lead they would have all game. The Huskies answered with a 25-6 run and with 10:52 left in the first half, they had a 25-8 lead.

The closest UMass would get the rest of the first half was 14 points - head coach Joanie O'Brien knew it was going to be a long night when two of the first three shots that UNH took were banked in from the top of the key.

"They (UNH) were just too much to handle," said O'Brien. "We dug ourselves a hole early that we couldn't get out of. We had a very uninspired effort and we were on our heels the whole way.

"The intensity of the defense is one thing that we can control and we didn't that yesterday. As long as you're effective on the defensive end, you'll get easy baskets on the offensive end."

Eight minutes into the first half, two of the Minutewomen's top players, Kim Kristofik (12 pts, 5 rebs) and Octavia Thomas (15 pts, 2 rebs) had to sit down with three fouls. It was at this point that the UMass defense really fell apart.

"We can't afford to lose players like that because we don't have enough depth," said O'Brien.

For UMass, although Thomas was on the bench for much of the first half, she came back like wildfire in the second half, playing with the intensity and passion that Coach O'Brien has looked for this season.

"Octavia worked as hard as I've seen her work all year," said O'Brien. "She worked her butt off and posted up very well - I think she was 7-for-9. I think she finally realizes what she can do at this level."

O'Brien is hoping that Thomas will add some leadership to a team that desperately needs some.

"The other freshmen are looking for someone to tell them what to do out there," O'Brien said. "I'm hoping they'll look at this kid (Octavia) and say if she can play hard like this, I can too.

"That's all I want from them - a good effort."

Also playing well for the Minutemen was forward Kristofik, who had an impressive 12 points and five rebounds.

A nemesis for UMass all game long was UNH point guard Meaghan Lane, who fiddled and diddled her way to 11 points and five assists. But it wasn't the points or the assists that hurt UMass, rather Lane's ability to control the tempo of the game.

"She's little, but she's very quick," said O'Brien. "She controlled the game at both ends of the floor."

Forward Kendall Daly was also a force for the Wildcats with 14 points and four rebounds.

"UNH set very good screens for Daly and she hit open shots," said O'Brien. "No one contested her all game."

With 17:40 left in the game, Mass cut the Wildcat lead to 13 at 41-28, but New Hampshire responded with a 10-2 run to push the lead to 51-30.

Game Notes: Junior guard Maleeka Valentine is still out with a severly strained ankle and is a question mark for Saturday's home opener against Harvard . . . The referees were not kind to UMass - case in point is freshman center Melissa Gurile, who was hammered the whole game, but still did not make a trip to the foul line.

UMass faces it's toughest challenge of the year on Monday when non-conference foe Ohio State travels to the Curry Hicks Cage.

MATT KAHN/ COLLEGIAN

The UMass Minutewomen have their home opener Saturday as they host Harvard. Game time at the Curry Hicks Cage is 2:00 p.m.

Pigskin Picks, the last issue

Since this is my last edition of Pigskin Picks, this prognosticator would like to thank the NFL and former Collegian staffer Mark Preston for getting me involved in this paper in the first place. O.K., that's enough praise for one semester.

Winter break is upon us, and before you know it, we'll all be back here in Amherst, anxiously awaiting the Super Bowl. Well, most of us will be back here in January, but soon-to-be fellow columnist Emily Marino, a distant cousin of Miami's Super Dan, has signed a one-semester contract to play hoop for the women's version of Il Messagero in Italy.

Arthur
STAPLETON

What she lacks in height, Em makes up for in ability, agility, and desire. Arrivederla, Emily! Maybe your ARTS column from overseas will make the back page. . . nah.

Speaking of the Super Bowl, my prediction before the season began was Dallas 31, Buffalo 27. The Cowboys (11-2) are one of two favorites, along with the 49ers, to make it to the NFC title game.

Jimmy Johnson and company have the talent to win at Candlestick, which could be renamed Bonds Park by as early as March. Look for the Pokes to go to the big show, possibly taking on Pittsburgh, Buffalo or San Diego.

The Lightning Bolts are the hottest team in football, thanks in part to the running attack of Marion Butts and a strong dominating defense. Can they win in Orchard Park? Sure, but they probably won't have to. Jeff Crofts' pick, the Steelers, have the home field as of right now, along with the most explosive runner this season, Barry Foster.

Cowher's clowns might be there to renew the rivalry with Dallas, but the Bills still have to be considered the favorites. Once again, go with the Cowboys over the Bills, 21-10.

Rodney Dangerfield award for those who seldom get respect: I could lay claim to this award, but I would like to stop my self pity. Bernie Kosar played the Monday night game against Miami earlier in the year on a broken ankle, and got no press. Well, he won't be in the Pro Bowl, but he got this one.

Stud of the Semester: Barry Foster was the first ever Stud of the Week, and he deserves the last one as well. Foster has already broken Franco Harris' single season rushing record, with three games in hand. Yes, there is another Barry in the NFL.

Babe "I'm the loser of the semester" Laufenberg award: After a long period of deliberation, I have decided to give the award to. . . (insert drum roll please). . .Bob "Fish Lips" Sura. He garners this award for his deliberate shove of Mike Williams on his 'way in for the lay in' in the UMass-Florida State game. The play did not truly cost the Minutemen, because Derek Kellogg nailed both freebees, but Williams was the spark late in the game.

It may be tough to say that UMass will beat the Seminoles if we do play again, but I now hate Sura as much as Crofts hates BC.

In closing, I would like to thank the number of people who showed me their support in writing in their ideas for awards: zero. Be sure to watch for this column next semester as I cover the. . .NBA. Yes, I have been delegated to the pros, so until next semester, I'm outta here.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

Hellmuth named an All-American

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts women's soccer forward Holly Hellmuth cemented her image as one of the nation's finest players yesterday, when she was named First Team All-American for the second consecutive year.

Hellmuth, a senior from Fairafax Station, Va., started all 20 games for coach Jim Rudy this year. For the third consecutive year, Hellmuth is a finalist for the Hermann Trophy, awarded to the nations top female soccer player.

"Holly has proven to be one of the finest players ever at UMass," Rudy said. "Every game we assigned her the opponents top scorer and she has shut her down nearly every time."

Hellmuth, considered by many to be the nation's top defender, added three goals and three assists for the No. 10 Minutewomen, who finished the season with a 16-4 record.

"It has been a great feeling the past few years being able to put a Holly Hellmuth out on the field," Rudy said. "You always knew you had a solid defender, a great competitor and a great leader out there."

Hellmuth, who finished her career with 15 goals and 13 assists, is Massachusetts 26th All-America selection.

Cover photo by JOSH REYNOLDS

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY

Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW

BUFFET AND SUNDAY BRUNCH

Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs

Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm

ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.30

Children under 10 - $3.50

Luncheon Specials served 11:30am-3pm - $3.25

All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU

10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

rock bottom prices

YANKEE

DISCOUNT OIL

Northampton/Holyoke

584-4112 • 535-1888

CHINA GARDEN

"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"

$2.00 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon

MSG

Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food

Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00pm

Friday - Saturday, 11:30am - 11:00pm

Lunch Hour: 11:30am - 3:30pm • 7 days a week

FREE Delivery Service • BYOB

Dinner Special Combination Platter

The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch

• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)

Every Day 11:30 - 3:30

Sample our New Vegetarian Menu

13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

Pearl Street Nightclub

The Areas Biggest and Best Dance Club & Live Music Club...Two Clubs In One

Thursday – 18+ Dancing with DJ Dennis R. Downstairs - 18+ Live Music

Friday – Dancing Upstairs with DJ Jeff Live Music Downstairs • Free Admission to Both Before 10:00pm, Free All Night with College I.D •

Saturday – Dancing With DJ Dave Live Music Downstairs

This Semester Look For Techno Raves, Dancehall Reggae Parties, Tie-Dye Nights and Other Special Events.

• Use This Ad For Two For One Admission to the Dance Club any Fri. or Sat. Night • Check the Collegian every Thurs. for upcoming Live Concerts •

10 Pearl Street, Northampton • 584-7771

After the Game the Good Times Continue at the UMASS

Top of the Campus Sports Bar & Lounge

Ideally located where faculty, staff, & students can meet to enjoy the friendly atmosphere. The Lounge offers full cocktail service, weekly drink specials and munchies

Monday-Saturday • 2:00PM-12:30AM

Munchies 'til 11:00PM • Positive I.D. Required

Orchard Hill LOOP 1

From Stadium and Southwest Area to Central, Orchard Hill and Sylvan

MAIN STOPS	→ READ LEFT TO RIGHT →
	E-Lot (Stadium)	South-west	Block-bridge Road	Sylvan	Career Center	Butter-field Dorm
AM and Midday Service 14 minutes between buses	7:24	7:26	7:29	7:33	7:35	7:40
	7:45	7:47	7:50	7:57	7:59	8:04
	7:59	8:01	8:04	8:11	9:13	9:18
	—	—	—	—	—	—
	8:27	8:29	8:32	8:39	8:41	8:46
	8:41	8:43	8:46	8:53	9:55	9:00
	8:56	8:57	9:00	9:07	9:09	9:14
	9:09	9:11	9:14	9:21	9:23	9:28
	9:23	9:25	9:28	9:35	9:37	9:42
	9:37	9:39	9:42	9:49	9:51	9:56
	9:51	9:53	9:56	10:03	10:05	10:10
	10:06	10:07	10:10	10:17	10:19	10:24
	10:19	10:21	10:24	10:31	10:33	10:38
	10:33	10:35	10:38	10:45	10:47	10:52
	10:47	10:49	10:52	10:58	11:01	11:06
	11:01	11:03	11:06	11:13	11:15	11:20
	11:15	11:17	11:20	11:27	11:29	11:34
	11:29	11:31	11:34	11:41	11:43	11:48
	11:43	11:45	11:48	11:55	11:57	12:02
	11:57	11:59	12:02	12:09	12:11	12:16
	12:11	12:13	12:16	12:23	12:25	12:30
	12:25	12:27	12:30	12:37	12:39	12:44
	12:39	12:41	12:44	12:51	12:53	12:58
	12:53	12:55	12:58	1:05	1:07	1:12
	1:07	1:09	1:12	1:19	1:21	1:26
	1:21	1:23	1:26	1:33	1:35	1:40
	1:35	1:37	1:40	1:47	1:49	1:54
PM Service 21 minutes between buses	1:56	1:58	2:01	2:09	2:10	2:15
	2:17	2:18	2:22	2:29	2:31	2:36
	2:38	2:40	2:43	2:50	2:52	2:57
	2:59	3:01	3:04	3:11	3:13	3:18
	3:20	3:22	3:25	3:32	3:34	3:39
	3:41	3:43	3:46	3:53	3:55	4:00
	4:02	4:04	4:07	4:14	4:16	4:21
	4:23	4:25	4:28	4:35	4:37	4:42
	4:44	4:46	4:49	4:56	4:58	5:03
	5:05	5:07	5:10	5:17	5:18	5:24
	5:26	5:28	5:31	5:38	5:40	5:45
	5:47	5:49	5:52	5:58	6:01	6:06
	6:08	6:10	6:13	6:20	6:22	6:27
	6:52	6:54	6:57	7:04	7:06	7:11
	7:36	7:38	7:41	7:48	7:50	7:55

N – ORCHARD HILL 1 travels in a CLOCKWISE direction

Orchard Hill LOOP 2

From Lot 25 and GRC to Central, Orchard Hill and Sylvan

MAIN STOPS	→ READ LEFT TO RIGHT →
	E-Lot & Lot 25	GRC	Bay-Bank	Butter-field Dorm	Career Center	Sylvan	GRC
Early AM Service	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
	5:55	5:58	—	—	—	—	5:58
	8:17	9:20	—	—	—	—	6:20
	9:39	9:42	—	—	—	—	9:42
	7:02	7:04	—	—	—	—	7:04
AM and Midday Service 21 minutes between buses	7:26	7:27	7:32	7:35	7:40	7:43	7:45
	8:08	9:09	8:13	9:17	9:22	8:25	8:27
	—	9:29	8:34	8:38	8:43	8:46	8:48
	8:48	8:50	8:55	8:58	9:04	9:07	9:09
	9:08	9:11	9:16	9:20	9:25	9:28	9:30
	9:30	8:32	9:37	8:41	9:46	9:49	9:51
	9:51	9:53	9:58	10:02	10:07	10:10	10:12
	10:12	10:14	10:19	10:23	10:28	10:31	10:33
	10:33	10:35	10:40	10:44	10:48	10:52	10:54
	10:54	10:56	11:01	11:05	11:10	11:13	11:15
	11:15	11:17	11:22	11:26	11:31	11:34	11:36
	11:36	11:38	11:43	11:47	11:52	11:55	11:57
	11:57	11:58	12:04	12:08	12:13	12:19	12:18
	12:18	12:20	12:25	12:29	12:34	12:37	12:38
	12:36	12:41	12:46	12:50	12:55	12:58	1:00
	1:00	1:02	1:07	1:11	1:16	1:19	1:21
	1:21	1:23	1:28	1:32	1:37	1:40	1:42
PM Service 14 minutes between buses	1:42	1:44	1:49	1:53	1:58	2:01	2:03
	—	1:58	2:03	2:07	2:12	2:15	2:17
	2:10	2:12	2:17	2:21	2:26	2:29	2:31
	2:24	2:26	2:31	2:35	2:40	2:43	2:45
	2:38	2:40	2:45	2:49	2:54	2:57	2:59
	2:52	2:54	2:59	3:03	3:08	3:11	3:13
	3:06	3:08	3:13	3:17	3:22	3:25	3:27
	3:20	3:22	3:27	3:31	3:36	3:39	3:41
	3:34	3:36	3:41	3:45	3:50	3:53	3:55
	3:48	3:50	3:55	3:58	4:04	4:07	4:09
	4:02	4:04	4:09	4:13	4:18	4:21	4:23
	4:18	4:19	4:23	4:27	4:32	4:35	4:37
	4:30	4:32	4:37	4:41	4:46	4:48	4:51
	4:44	4:46	4:51	4:55	5:00	5:03	5:05
	4:58	5:00	5:05	5:09	5:14	5:17	5:19
	5:12	5:14	5:19	5:23	5:28	5:31	5:33
	5:26	5:28	5:33	5:37	5:42	5:45	5:47
	5:40	5:42	5:47	5:51	5:56	5:58	6:01
	5:54	5:56	6:01	6:04	6:09	6:12	6:14
Evening Service 30 minutes between buses	6:34	6:36	6:39	6:41	6:46	6:49	6:51
	7:13	7:15	7:18	7:20	7:25	7:28	7:30
	7:52	7:54	7:57	7:58	8:04	8:07	8:09
	8:31	8:33	9:36	8:38	8:43	8:46	8:48
	9:10	8:12	9:15	8:17	9:22	9:25	9:27
	9:49	9:51	8:54	9:56	10:01	10:04	10:06
	10:28	10:30	10:33	10:35	10:40	10:43	10:45
	11:07	11:09	11:12	11:14	11:19	11:22	11:24
	11:46	11:48	11:51	11:53	11:58	12:01	12:03
	12:25	12:27	12:30	12:32	12:37	12:40	12:42

Note ORCHARD HILL 2 travels in a COUNTER-CLOCKWISE direction

Lost and found, suggestions, and complaints: call the UMTS Business Office at 545-0056.

For schedule changes due to inclement weather, please tune to WMUA 91.1 FM, WRNX 100.9 FM or WTTT 1430 AM or call the UMTS Hotline at 545-1633.

Campus Shuttle LOOP 1

From Central, Orchard Hill, Sylvan to Southwest Area and Stadium

MAIN STOPS	→ READ LEFT TO RIGHT →
	Butter-field Dorm	Block-bridge Road	Eng. Lab	E-Lot & Lot 25	Boyden	E-Lot (Stadium)
AM and Midday Service 14 minutes between buses	7:40	7:44	7:47	7:51	7:53	7:59
	8:04	8:08	8:12	8:17	8:20	8:27
	8:18	8:22	8:26	8:31	8:34	8:41
	—	8:36	8:40	8:45	8:48	8:55
	8:46	8:50	8:54	8:58	9:02	9:09
	9:00	9:04	9:08	9:13	9:16	9:23
	9:14	9:18	9:22	9:27	9:30	9:37
	9:28	9:32	9:36	9:41	9:44	9:51
	9:42	9:46	9:50	9:55	9:58	10:05
	9:56	10:00	10:04	10:09	10:12	10:19
	10:10	10:14	10:18	10:23	10:26	10:33
	10:24	10:28	10:32	10:37	10:40	10:47
	10:38	10:42	10:46	10:51	10:54	11:01
	10:52	10:56	11:00	11:05	11:09	11:15
	11:06	11:10	11:14	11:19	11:22	11:29
	11:20	11:24	11:28	11:33	11:36	11:43
	11:34	11:38	11:42	11:47	11:50	11:57
	11:48	11:52	11:56	12:01	12:04	12:11
	12:02	12:06	12:10	12:15	12:18	12:25
	12:16	12:20	12:24	12:29	12:32	12:39
	12:30	12:34	12:38	12:43	12:46	12:53
	12:44	12:48	12:52	12:57	1:00	1:07
	12:58	1:02	1:06	1:11	1:14	1:21
	1:12	1:16	1:20	1:25	1:28	1:35
	1:26	1:30	1:34	1:39	1:42	1:49
PM Service 21 minutes between buses	1:54	1:44 Out of Service
	1:54	1:58	2:02	2:07	2:10	2:17
	2:15	2:19	2:23	2:28	2:31	2:38
	2:36	2:40	2:44	2:49	2:52	2:59
	2:57	3:01	3:05	3:10	3:13	3:20
	3:18	3:22	3:26	3:31	3:34	3:41
	3:39	3:43	3:47	3:52	3:55	4:02
	4:00	4:04	4:08	4:13	4:16	4:23
	4:21	4:25	4:29	4:34	4:37	4:44
	4:42	4:46	4:50	4:55	4:58	5:05
	5:03	5:07	5:11	5:16	5:19	5:26
	5:24	5:28	5:32	5:37	5:40	5:47
	5:45	5:49	5:53	5:58	6:01	6:08
	6:06	6:10 Out of Service
	6:27	6:31	6:35	6:42	6:45	6:52
	7:11	7:15	7:19	7:26	7:29	7:36
	7:55	7:59 Out of Service

Note CAMPUS SHUTTLE 1 travels in a COUNTER-CLOCKWISE direction

SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806

INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

Campus Shuttle LOOP 2

From Orchard Hill and Sylvan to Southwest and Lot 25

MAIN STOPS	→ READ LEFT TO RIGHT →
	Butter-field Dorm	Career Center	Sylvan Area	GRC	South-west	E-Lot (Stadium)	E-Lot & Lot 25
Early AM Service Shuttle Only	—	—	—	—	—	5:45	5:55
	—	—	—	5:58	6:03	6:07	6:17
	—	—	—	9:20	9:25	6:29	6:39
	—	—	—	6:42	6:47	6:51	7:02
	—	—	—	7:04	7:09	7:13	7:25
AM and Midday Service 21 minutes between buses	7:35	7:40	7:43	7:45	7:50	7:52	8:06
	8:17	9:22	8:25	8:27	8:32	8:36	8:46
	8:38	8:43	8:46	8:48	8:53	8:57	9:09
	8:58	9:04	9:07	9:09	9:14	8:19	9:30
	9:20	9:25	9:28	9:30	9:35	9:39	8:51
	9:41	9:46	9:49	9:51	9:56	10:00	10:12
	10:02	10:07	10:10	10:12	10:17	10:21	10:33
	10:23	10:28	10:31	10:33	10:38	10:42	10:54
	10:44	10:48	10:52	10:54	10:59	11:03	11:15
	11:05	11:10	11:13	11:15	11:20	11:24	11:36
	11:26	11:31	11:34	11:36	11:41	11:45	11:57
	11:47	11:52	11:56	11:57	12:02	12:06	12:18
	12:08	12:13	12:16	12:18	12:23	12:27	12:39
	12:29	12:34	12:37	12:39	12:44	12:46	1:00
	12:50	12:55	12:58	1:00	1:05	1:09	1:21
	1:11	1:16	1:19	1:21	1:26	1:30	1:42
	1:32	1:37	1:40	1:42	1:47	1:51	2:03
PM Service 14 minutes between buses	1:53	1:58	2:01	2:03	2:08	2:12	2:24
	2:07	2:12	2:15	2:17	2:22	2:26	2:38
	2:21	2:26	2:29	2:31	2:36	2:40	2:52
	2:35	2:40	2:43	2:45	2:50	2:54	3:06
	2:49	2:54	2:57	2:59	3:05	3:08	3:20
	3:03	3:08	3:11	3:13	3:18	3:22	3:34
	3:17	3:22	3:25	3:27	3:32	3:36	3:48
	3:31	3:36	3:39	3:41	3:46	3:50	4:02
	3:45	3:50	3:53	3:55	4:00	4:04	4:16
	3:59	4:04	4:07	4:09	4:14	4:18	4:30
	4:13	4:18	4:21	4:23	4:28	4:32	4:44
	4:27	4:32	4:35	4:37	4:42	4:46	4:58
	4:41	4:46	4:49	4:51	4:56	5:00	5:12
	4:55	5:00	5:03	5:05	5:10	5:14	5:26
	5:09	5:14	5:17	5:19	5:24	5:28	5:40
	5:23	5:28	5:31	5:33	5:38	5:42	5:54
	5:37	5:42	5:45	5:47	5:52	5:56	6:08
	5:51	5:56	5:59	6:01	6:06	6:10	6:22
	6:04	6:09	6:12	6:14	6:19	6:22	6:34
Evening Service 30 minutes between buses	6:41	6:46	6:49	6:51	6:56	6:59	7:13
	7:20	7:25	7:28	7:30	7:35	7:38	7:52
	7:59	8:04	8:07	8:09	8:14	8:17	8:31
	8:38	8:43	8:46	8:46	8:53	8:56	9:10
	9:17	9:22	9:25	9:27	9:32	9:35	9:49
	9:56	10:01	10:04	10:06	10:11	10:14	10:28
	10:35	10:40	10:43	10:45	10:50	10:53	11:07
	11:14	11:19	11:22	11:24	11:29	11:32	11:46
	11:53	11:58	12:01	12:03	12:08	12:11	12:25
	12:32	12:37	12:40	12:42	12:47	12:50	1:04

Note CAMPUS SHUTTLE 2 travels in a CLOCKWISE direction

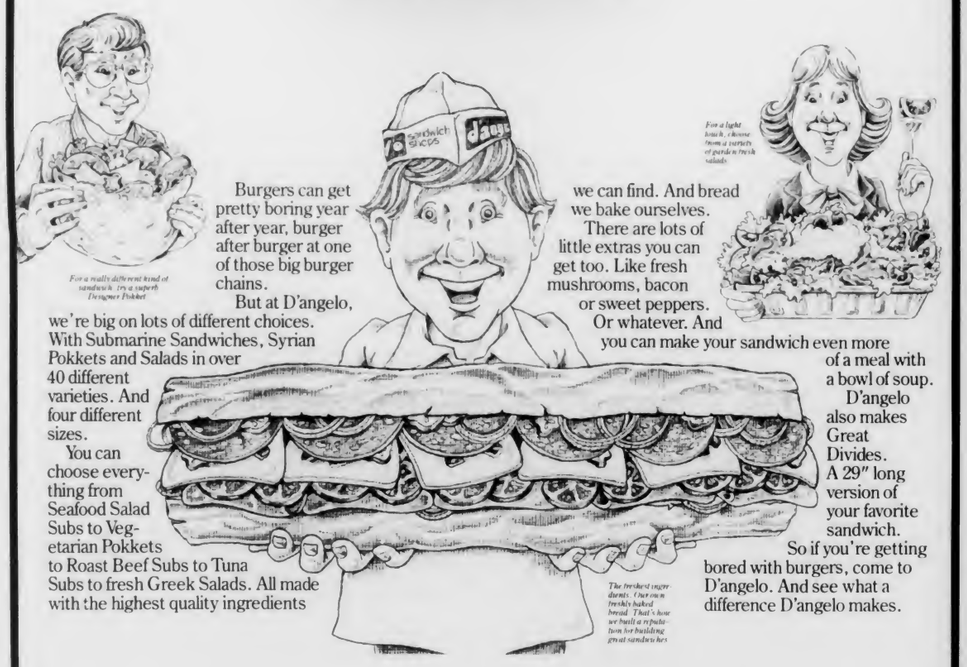
NOT A WEEKEND SCHEDULE

Northbound 360-North Amherst

From Old Belchertown Road to Puffton Village Apts.

MAIN STOPS	→ READ LEFT TO RIGHT →
	Leave Old B'town Rd.	Colonial Village	Amherst Crossing	UMASS CAMPUS Stockbridge Road	Arrive Puffton Village
Early AM Service	7:17	7:23	7:29	7:32	7:36	7:43
	7:37	7:43	7:50	7:52	7:56	8:03
	7:57	8:03	8:10	8:12	8:16	8:23
	8:17	8:23	8:30	8:32	8:36	8:43
	8:37	8:43	8:50	8:52	8:56	9:03
	8:57	9:03	9:10	9:12	9:16	9:23
	9:17	9:23	9:30	9:32	9:36	9:43
	9:37	9:43	9:50	9:52	9:56	10:03
	9:57	10:03	10:10	10:12	10:16	10:23
	10:17	10:23	10:30	10:32	10:36	10:43
	10:37	10:43	10:50	10:52	10:56	11:03
	10:57	11:03	11:10	11:12	11:16	11:23
	11:17	11:23	11:30	11:32	11:36	11:43
	11:37	11:43	11:50	11:52	11:56	12:03
	11:57	12:03	12:10	12:12	12:16	12:23
	12:17	12:23	12:30	12:32	12:36	12:43
	12:37	12:43	12:50	12:52	12:56	1:03
	12:57	1:03	1:10	1:12	1:16	1:23
	1:17	1:23	1:30	1:32	1:36	1:43
	1:37	1:43	1:50	1:52	1:56	2:03
PM Service 20 min. between buses	1:57	2:03	2:10	2:12	2:16	2:23
	2:17	2:23	2:30	2:32	2:36	2:43
	2:37	2:43	2:50	2:52	2:56	3:03
	2:57	3:03	3:10	3:12	3:16	3:23
	3:17	3:23	3:30	3:32	3:36	3:43
	3:37	3:43	3:50	3:52	3:56	4:03
	3:57	4:03	4:10	4:12	4:16	4:23
	4:17	4:23	4:30	4:32	4:36	4:43
	4:37	4:43	4:50	4:52	4:56	5:03
	4:57	5:03	5:10	5:12	5:16	5:23
	5:17	5:23	5:30	5:32	5:36	5:43
	5:37	5:43	5:50	5:52	5:56	6:03
	5:57	6:03	6:10	6:12	6:16	6:23
	6:17	6:23	6:30	6:32	6:36	6:43
	6:37	6:43	6:50	6:52	6:56	7:03
	6:57	7:03	7:10	7:12	7:16	7:23
	7:17	7:23	7:30	7:32	7:36	7:43
	7:37	7:43	7:50	7:52	7:56	8:03
	7:57	8:03	8:10	8:12	8:16	8:23
	8:17	8:23	8:30	8:32	8:36	8:43
	8:37	8:43	8:50	8:52	8:56	9:03
	8:57	9:03	9:10	9:12	9:16	9:23
	9:17	9:23	9:30	9:32	9:36	9:43
	9:37	9:43	9:50	9:52	9:56	10:03
	9:57	10:03	10:10	10:12	10:16	10:23
	10:17	10:23	10:30	10:32	10:36	10:43
	10:37	10:43	10:50	10:52	10:56	11:03
	10:57	11:03	11:10	11:12	11:16	11:23
	11:17	11:23	11:30	11:32	11:36	11:43
	11:37	11:43	11:50	11:52	11:56	12:03
	11:57	12:03	12:10	12:12	12:16	12:23
	12:17	12:23	12:30	12:32	12:36	12:43
	12:37	12:43	12:50	12:52	12:56	1:03
	12:57	1:03	1:10	1:12	1:16	1:23
	1:17	1:23	1:30	1:32	1:36	1:43
	1:37	1:43	1:50	1:52	1:56	2:03

What a difference D'angelo makes



Burgers can get pretty boring year after year, burger after burger at one of those big burger chains.

But at D'angelo, we're big on lots of different choices. With Submarine Sandwiches, Syrian Pokkets and Salads in over 40 different varieties. And four different sizes.

You can choose everything from Seafood Salad Subs to Vegetarian Pokkets to Roast Beef Subs to Tuna Subs to fresh Greek Salads. All made with the highest quality ingredients we can find. And bread we bake ourselves.

There are lots of little extras you can get too. Like fresh mushrooms, bacon or sweet peppers. Or whatever. And you can make your sandwich even more of a meal with a bowl of soup.

D'angelo also makes Great Divides. A 29" long version of your favorite sandwich.

So if you're getting bored with burgers, come to D'angelo. And see what a difference D'angelo makes.

BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
Pita Pockets
Buy any delicious D'angelo Pitta Pocket and get another of the same selection FREE! Choose from fresh meats, cheeses, seafood salad, and vegetables for your own pocket.
Coupon must be presented at time of purchase. One coupon per person per day please. Not valid with delivery or with any other D'angelo promotion. Offer valid from 1/27/93 - 2/5/93
Amherst, MA 48 North Pleasant St. (413) 256-4131 d'angelo sandwich shops #:MISC1

BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
Any Submarine Sandwich
Buy any sub and get another small sub of the same selection FREE! Choose from steak, cold cuts, seafood salad, and top it off with fresh vegetables.
Coupon must be presented at time of purchase. One coupon per person per day please. No t valid with delivery or with any other D'angelo promotion. Offer valid from 2/6/93 - 2/12/93
Amherst, MA 48 North Pleasant St. (413) 256-4131 d'angelo sandwich shops #:MISC1

BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
Pita Pockets
Buy any delicious D'angelo Pitta Pocket and get another of the same selection FREE! Choose from fresh meats, cheeses, seafood salad, and vegetables for your own pocket.
Coupon must be presented at time of purchase. One coupon per person per day please. Not valid with delivery or any other D'angelo promotion. Offer valid from 2/13/93 - 2/19/93
Amherst, MA 48 North Pleasant St. (413) 256-4131 d'angelo sandwich shops #:MISC1

BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
Any Submarine Sandwich
Buy any sub and get another small sub of the same selection FREE! Choose from steak, cold cuts, seafood salad, and top it off with fresh vegetables.
Coupon must be presented at time of purchase. One coupon per person per day please. Not valid with delivery or with any other D'angelo promotion. Offer valid from 2/20/93 - 2/26/93
Amherst, MA 48 North Pleasant St. (413) 256-4131 d'angelo sandwich shops #:MISC1

Wednesday January 27, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 64

Cloudy today with a chance of snow showers, temps 30-35.

Inauguration '93:
Find out how different members of the Five College community reacted to Bill Clinton's inauguration. Reviews for the new administration are mixed. Pages 4-5.

Local News:
Chancellor Richard O'Brien says he is continuing efforts to increase multiculturalism at the University. Page 3.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Suicide letter solves murder of UM student

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Staff
and the Associated Press

NORTHAMPTON — A Granby man confessed to murdering University of Massachusetts student Sharon Galligan in a seven-page suicide note found with his body in a Westfield hotel Jan. 17, police said last Monday.

Sharon Galligan

In a press conference at the Hampshire County Courthouse in Northampton, officials said Kenneth R. Mitchell, 34, who was found dead in the County Court Hotel, admitted in a note to stabbing Galligan to death in the Hampshire Mall parking lot the night of Dec. 18, 1989.

Mitchell became a prime suspect in December 1992, when previously silent sources came forth with information about the murder. Mitchell bled to death after slitting his wrists with a beer bottle in his room at the Country Court Hotel while police searched for him with a warrant for his arrest.

Galligan's murder, which police claim Mitchell committed as a random act of violence brought on by his own mental anguish, shocked UMass students and heightened awareness of safety issues on and around campus.

Turn to GALLIGAN, page 2

New AD's past questioned

NCAA flagged S.C. program during Marcum's tenure

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Despite questions concerning past performances and a last minute coach's petition endorsing Interim Athletic Director Glenn Wong, former South Carolina Athletic Director Robert Marcum was chosen to direct the University's athletic program last week.

Chancellor Richard O'Brien hired Marcum, who was the athletic director at South Carolina from 1982-88 and Kansas from 1978-82, after receiving a letter, signed by 14 of 18 UMass head coaches, urging the hiring of Wong.

In 1987, the NCAA placed South Carolina's men's basketball program on disciplinary probation for a number of wrongdoings from 1982, when Marcum started as athletic director, to 1985. Offenses included providing players with improper financial aid and free use of automobiles.

The NCAA also charged South Carolina with improper recruiting, including providing recruits with the use of automobiles, lodging, employment, entertainment and lodging, providing players with "extra benefits" and engaging in "questionable practices," according to an NCAA report.

The NCAA limited the program's scholarships and recruiting practices for three years and made the team ineligible for postseason play for one season.

"We called the NCAA and asked if the charges implicated Mr. Marcum in any way," said HRTA Professor Stevenson Fletcher, chairman of the athletic director search committee. "They said no. We checked out the whole situation thoroughly and are content with the findings."

The NCAA press release on the infractions, dated March 3, 1987 stated, "the most distressing and serious [infraction] in the view of the committee was the discovery of a well-organized and well-executed scheme for the sale at face value of basketball players' complimentary tickets."

Apparently basketball players were receiving free game tickets, selling them to boosters and pocketing the profits. Fletcher said he was unaware of the ticket sales.

"That's a new one to me," Fletcher said. "I don't know what you're talking about on that. We just dealt with generalities when we called the NCAA."

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
UMass Athletic Director Robert Marcum

Marcum returned to Atlanta on Sunday and was not available for comment. However, the March 4 issue of the Columbia (S.C.) State News, reported Marcum denied awareness of any wrongdoings in the athletic department.

"If we had been aware of the situation, I'm sure we would have dealt with it in a different way," Marcum said in the article. "We were unaware of it going on. We

Turn to MARCUM, page 11

Mullins opening on tap

Center to hold first hoop game Feb. 4

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Six years ago, it was just a dream. Two years ago, it was only a shell. But eight days from today, the William D. Mullins Memorial Center will be the crown jewel of the University of Massachusetts.

When the last bulldozer pulls away from the Mullins Center, and the doors open for the Feb. 4 UMass-West Virginia men's basketball game (televised live on ESPN), it will be the end of a very long process and the beginning of a new era at the University.

The $50 million dollar multi-purpose facility will not only host every men's basketball and eventually, hockey game, it will also be a convention center for exhibitions, banquets and commencement, and a theater for both fine arts and rock concerts.

"It's a beautiful building on the outside, but even more importantly, it's a beautiful building on the inside," men's basketball coach John Calipari said. "It will be the pride of the whole University, not just the basketball team."

The funds to construct the Mullins Center were appropriated in 1986. The state Legislature contributed $25 million toward the project and the University building authority raised the remaining amount by selling tax free bonds.

The Center was designed by Cambridge Seven Associates, designers of the Boston's New England Aquarium. Suffolk Construction Company won the bid for the job and built the facility.

Last summer, the University picked the Turn to MULLINS CENTER, page 14

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
The William D. Mullins Memorial Center is undergoing last-minute preparations for the open house on January 31 and the first men's basketball game on February 4.

German professor, 42, killed during vacation

Sigrid Brauner, an assistant professor of Germanic Languages and Literature at the University of Massachusetts since 1989, died shortly after Christmas while vacationing in Jamaica.

Brauner, a 42-year-old native of Hofheim, Germany, and a resident of Northampton, died in an accidental fall on Dec. 26.

During the 1992-93 academic year, Brauner was a Lilly Teaching Fellow. The program is designed to help enhance the careers of junior faculty by reducing their courseload, thereby allowing them more time to focus on designing or revising courses and enhancing their teaching skills.

Last fall, Brauner taught a new course titled "Witches: Myth and Reality." More than 100 students took the course, which examined the history of witch hunts in German-speaking Europe, colonial New England, and colonial Peru.

In her course, Brauner looked at the history of witch hunts in the context of contemporary attitudes about women and families, showing how sexual, racial and class differences play a role in our imagination of the demonic.

Brauner used sources as varied as contemporary studies in anthropology, theological treatises from the early modern period and witch trial records to show that well over 90 percent of all witch hunt victims were female, and that their moral reputation was the focal point of their persecution.

Brauner was also working on a book manuscript which explored representations of race and gender in early modern Europe.

Brauner was also a member of the executive committee of the Women's Studies Program, a member of the executive board of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, the faculty union at the University, and a junior fellow of the Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities.

Brauner had reportedly been planning the trip to the north shore of Jamaica with several friends and colleagues from Germany for over a year. She had just arrived at her vacation site the day of her death.

After dinner the evening of Dec. 26, Brauner reportedly walked down to the beach from the hilltop vacation house where she was staying to look at the stars. She decided to return to the house by way of a shortcut path rather than the main road. It was a pitch-black, moonless night, and Brauner apparently did not realize that the path crossed a ravine on a narrow, railingless bridge.

She fell from the bridge and was killed instantaneously.

The German department is planning to establish a scholarship in Brauner's memory, as well as create an archive of her published works,

Turn to BRAUNER, page 2

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Eric Beal

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

■ Galligan

continued from page 1

"She did everything right," said Galligan's father Paul in a 1990 Collegian interview. "Unfortunately, there was someone out there who was not right."

Galligan's car was parked in a well-lighted area near the mall entrance at the time of her murder.

According to police, Mitchell, despondent over personal problems, was preparing to kill himself when Galligan returned to her car, which was parked next to his. At approximately 9:45 p.m., he stabbed Galligan 11 times with the kitchen knife he had planned to use on himself, police said.

"She was just in the wrong place at the wrong time," said State Police Sgt. Leonard Von Flatern, who has been investigating the murder for the past three years.

Galligan was a junior majoring in psychology at the time of her murder. She was a member of Psi Chi, the national psychology honor society, as well as a teaching assistant for Psychology 100, and a research assistant studying non-verbal behavior.

Galligan was also a member of Chi Omega Sorority and worked with the Boltwood Project to help the mentally ill, which was run by the former Belchertown State School. She was planning to spend the semester following her death at the University of Seville in Spain.

Mitchell was one of a number of suspects in the investigation into Galligan's death when that probe began in 1989. Two tips received by police suggested Mitchell was a potential suspect. However, three others either failed to come forward or gave false information, leaving police to pursue other leads.

But Mitchell became a prime suspect in December 1992, when another informant came forward. Investigators interviewed Mitchell on Jan. 7 and again Jan. 14., and asked him to provide a hair sample for a potential match with hair found at the murder scene.

The next day, Mitchell checked into the County Court Hotel, wrote a confession and letters to the police, Galligan's family and his own family, and took his own life.

Galligan's friends and professors and mourned her death at a memorial service held Feb. 5, 1990.

"By every indication, she was the kind of person who would make her mark on the world," said Robert Feldman, a UMass psychology professor.

Chi Omega set up a scholarship fund in Galligan's name, placed a stone memorial to her on the Campus Pond Lawn and dedicated its entry in the 1991 Index yearbook to her memory.

Carhart urged citizens who had any information about the case to come forward, noting that authorities "intend to continue with the forensic aspects" of the case.

Collegian staff member Jason George and news services contributed to this report.

■ Brauner

continued from page 1

scholarly papers, and course notes.

Brauner's funeral was held in Hofheim Jan. 11, and was attended by Associate Professor of German Sara Lennox. A campus memorial service is planned for early to mid-February.

— Collegian Staff Reports.

THE MYSTERY OF STDs:
Now you see them - Now you Don't!

Debra Edelman, M.Ed., Health Educator

Sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), once called venereal diseases, are among the most common infectious diseases in the United States today. The STDs that earned notoriety on college campuses across the country are genital warts, genital herpes, and HIV disease. The factors that make these diseases unique are that they are incurable, can be asymptomatic (without symptoms), and subclinical (symptoms exist but are not visible to you under normal circumstances, i.e. on the cervix or inside the opening of the penis).

People sometimes think that when they come to U.H.S. and ask for an "STD Check" their health care provider can check to see if they have been exposed to all the various STDs. Unfortunately this is not the case. There are specific blood tests and cultures available for certain STDs such as chlamydia, gonorrhea, HIV disease and syphilis but for genital herpes and genital warts no reliable blood tests exist. A majority of people, when exposed to genital herpes and genital warts, will have symptoms, but a high percentage of people will not experience "typical" symptoms, if any.

The typical symptoms of genital herpes caused by the herpes simplex virus (HSV), are: itching or burning sensation in the genital area; pain in the legs, buttocks, or genital area; vaginal discharge; and/or a feeling of pressure in the abdominal region. Small red bumps that may develop into blisters or painful open sores will appear. Over a period of days the sores become crusted and then heal without scarring. It's important to note that even when there are symptoms they will vary in severity from extremely mild to severe depending upon the individual.

Genital Warts, caused by the human papillomavirus (HPV), can appear like small bumpy "cauliflower" looking warts that are usually painless and appear on or around the genitals or anus. The warts can also be flat on these areas and not visible to the naked eye but will turn white when acetic acid is placed on them.

So what's the solution to the unsolved mystery of these STDs? If you assume, without judgment, that every partner with whom you're intimate might have an undiagnosed STD that even he or she is not aware of, and you both use proper precautions, by practicing safer sex, you will be minimizing your risk of contracting an STD. Safer sex means using latex barriers (i.e. latex condoms, dental dams or cut-up latex condoms for oral sex with a woman, and condoms with spermicide containing nonoxynol 9, which destroys viruses) when being sexual with a partner. The latex barrier reduces the chances of bodily fluids (blood, semen, vaginal and cervical secretions) from being exchanged.

If you suspect that you might have an STD, call 549-2671 to make an appointment with a health services clinician. Men should not urinate for 4 hours before the examination and women should not douche before the examination. One of the most important factors necessary to insure the accuracy and thoroughness of the STD screening is honesty with your health care provider. All medical records are confidential files.

Being diagnosed with an STD can cause a range of emotions in an individual. Some people might experience guilt, anxiety, isolation or anger and some people might get depressed. Speaking to a counselor about problems that may arise for you regarding your diagnosis is very helpful. To make an appointment for STD counseling call the University Health Center at 549-2671, ext. 233 or 234. For more information about STDs, please contact the Health Education Division at 549-2671 x181.

COLLEGIAN PHOTOGRAPHERS MEETING
CURRENT AND OLD STAFF
SUNDAY, 1/31 2 PM
OTHER INTERESTED PARTIES
SUNDAY, 1/31 3 PM
113 CAMPUS CENTER

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST athletic CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Dancercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

CELERY•COWS•"BOB"
NOW YOU!
THE HISTORY OF THE COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS DEPARTMENT IS THE HISTORY OF THE COLLEGIAN. meeting for all those interested in day and night graphics
TONITE 6 PM
RETURNING STAFF
TONITE 6:30 PM
WANNA BE'S
105 CAMPUS CENTER

Welcome Back Students
Now Open For Lunch
Open for Lunch from 11am–2:30pm
~Special~
Tues•Wed•Thurs•Fri•All Day Sunday
Two Dinners $15
Steak & Chicken Combo
Two Dinner Combo $18
Shrimp & Scallop Combo
Both Include Soup, Salad, Vegetables, Noodles, Steamed Rice, Tea & Ice Cream
Full Bar
Exotic Specialties
Gift Certificates Available
Goten OF JAPAN
Rt. 116, Sunderland 413-665-3628
Open Tues.-Sat. at 5 pm, Sun. at 2
For Reservations call 413-665-3628

Local News

Racial efforts continue

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is continuing efforts to ease racial tensions on campus, using agreements reached last semester between administrators and students as a springboard to improve the general multicultural climate on campus.

"We'll continue to monitor scrupulously the adherence of the [Nov. 8] agreements," Chancellor Richard O'Brien said. "They form a basis for a greatly improved climate of multiculturalism on campus."

After a month of negotiations facilitated by mediators from the U.S. Department of Justice, the two sides agreed on student demands concerning minority programs, safety and representation on campus. In addition, they set forth plans for security and housing program changes.

Since then, O'Brien appointed Elaine Anderson to conduct an inquiry into the loss of the University's Upward Bound Program funding. She is now preparing a report addressing the program's needs and the cause of the funding loss.

Funding was also provided to restore the Advocates Of Women of Color Program at the Everywoman's Center in December. The second escort service van, which O'Brien committed to as part of the agreements, has begun operation. An assessment of training needs for police officers is currently being conducted.

Under the Nov. 8 agreements, University officials agreed to aim for a goal of 20 percent minority freshmen by fall 1995. They also pledged to boost the appointment of minority faculty and staff. Minority hirings have comprised 23 percent of staff and faculty appointments since 1986. Minorities now represent 10 percent of the total faculty.

The administration also agreed to:

• Support partial restoration of the Legal Services Center, relative to litigation involving students and non-university entities.

• Provide funding, which has been set aside as a result of the agreements, for 40 new scholarships for students of color over the next year at a cost of $200,000, covering all tuition and fees.

• Arrange teach-ins on Columbus Day. Students will be submitting a proposed renaming for the holiday.

Racial tensions on campus were sparked in October after an assault on a Black resident assistant student in

Turn to EFFORTS, page 10

Upward Bound inquiry called

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Chancellor Richard O'Brien has asked Elaine H. Anderson of Westfield to conduct an inquiry and prepare a report concerning the University of Massachusetts' Upward Bound Program.

This month Anderson is researching why the program was denied federal funding and addressing ways to get funding back, according to Associate Chancellor Jim Leheny.

Upward Bound, a program for assisting low-income high school students, had been offered at the University for over 20 years until its federal funding was not renewed last spring.

Anderson said she is unable to comment on the progress of her report at this stage, as she is still working on it.

O'Brien said Anderson would

Turn to UPWARD BOUND, page 10

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
ECONOMIC INDICATORS– The economy is still showing signs of trouble. As this sign on route 9 in Amherst shows even engineering majors are finding the job market tough going.

Student dies on Mexico trip

A University of Massachusetts senior died Jan. 14 in a scuba-diving accident in Mexico while on a school-sponsored trip.

According to University officials, Scott J. Aronson, 22, of 8 Eastview Drive, Belchertown, was on an art trip at the time of the accident in Merida, Mexico, on the Yucatan Peninsula.

Details of the accident were unavailable, according to a University spokesperson.

He was majoring in photography and fine arts.

Aronson, a graduate of Longmeadow High School, received an associate's degree in graphic design from Greenfield Community College. Aronson also worked as a lab assistant at the University's Photographic Services lab.

The funeral was held Jan. 18 at the Harold R. Ascher & Son Memorial Chapel in Springfield.

Aronson leaves his parents, Mathew C. and Jean M. (Gabourg); a brother, an aunt, and his grandparents.

Lehigh prof. named head of engineering

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts named Lehigh engineering Professor Joseph Goldstein to be the new dean of the College of Engineering in early January.

Goldstein, who will assume the position Sept. 1, is currently the R.D. Stout Professor of Materials Science and Engineering at Lehigh.

Chancellor Richard O'Brien said in a statement that Goldstein's experience and reputation made him a clear choice for the position.

"Joseph Goldstein. . . has had an exceptional career as a scholar and teacher," O'Brien said. "He has also had many years of very successful administrative experience. He was the clear number one choice of the search committee."

"The appointment of Dr. Goldstein will complement and add to the deeply talented faculty and students in the College of Engineering," said Provost Glen Gordon, the chief academic officer at the University, in a statement. "We look forward to his arrival."

Goldstein is taking over for Keith Carver, who became interim dean in March 1991. Carver will resume his post as head of the department of electrical and computer engineering.

Carver took the post on an interim basis after the former dean, James John, left to become president of the General Motors Incorporated Engineering and Management Institute in Flint, Mich.

Goldstein said in a statement that his decision to come to the University of Massachusetts was based largely on the quality of the engineering department.

"I was attracted to the University of Massachusetts by the quality of its engineering programs and faculty and the potential for developing interdisciplinary programs with other colleges and within the engineering college itself," Goldstein said.

A recent report by the Institute for Scientific information ranked the University's chemical engineering department 19th among the top 25 programs in the world. The ranking was based on the number of times faculty research papers were cited in academic journals.

Turn to GOLDSTEIN, page 10

Rosenberg seeks top level post

Amherst Democrat candidate for State Chairman

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Although the glow has barely faded from President Clinton's inauguration, Massachusetts Democrats are already setting their sites on challenging Gov. William Weld for the 1994 gubnatorial race.

The current focus of these efforts involve choosing a Deomcratic State Committee chairman capable of raising the money and establishing the campaign organization necessary for this challenge.

Among the six candidates for State chairman is state Sen. Stanley Rosenberg, D-Amherst, who represents the Hampshire-Franklin District.

The other candidates for the position are state Rep. Joan Menard of Somerset, the House majority whip; former Methuen state Sen. Sharon Pollard, who has served as state energy secretary; Weston Selectman Joseph Mullin; former state Rep. Philip Johnston; and Lawrence DiCara, a former Boston City Counselor.

The new chair of the state committee will be decided in Boston on Feb. 6 at a meeting of the Democratic State Committee.

The candidates are seeking to fill the position vacated by Newton businessman Steven Grossman, who stepped down from the position late last year.

The candidates presented their visions for the Democratic Party at a forum Jan. 22 at the Hotel Northampton, the first of approximately a half dozen meetings across the state prior to Feb. 6.

Each candidate stressed the fact that the Democratic Party needs to build a campaign organization to help challenge Weld in 1994 and work to regain the two U.S. House seats lost in last November's election.

Although the 1994 election is still far off, many observers are speculating that U.S. Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass., will oppose Weld. Other names that have been considered on the Democratic side are Boston Mayor Ray Flynn, and former state Sen. Patricia McGovern of Lawrence.

Rosenberg said he wants the position because of his belief in the importance of political parties.

"I am passionate about political parties and their role in people's lives," Rosenberg said. "They're a place where people can come together to work toward realizing the vision they have."

"I have the experience, the energy, and I've proven I can do every part of the Democratic State Chair's job, because I've done it," Rosenberg said.

Rosenberg said he feels the Chair of the State Committee has a responsibility to serve as a spokesperson for the party in conjunction with Democratic officials at the town and ward level.

"I have the experience, the energy, and I've proven I can do every part of the Democratic State Chair's job"

Stan Rosenberg

"People relate more to local officials than to someone who is 100 miles away," Rosenberg said. "The Chair's responsibility is to speak out loudly and clearly on issues, and people on the local level should echo those themes."

In his official announcement, Rosenberg noted that as executive director for the party in 1984, the party raised an all-time record of $750,000.

Rosenberg has also said he feels the Democrats need to return to the concept of the "coordinated campaign," where candidates for different offices work together to pool their resources and stress similar messages.

State Rep. Ellen Story, who won a March 1992 special election to fill Rosenberg's seat in the House of Representatives, said she believes a Rosenberg victory would help Western Massachusetts.

"Western Massachusetts always tends to be overlooked," Story said. "Stan has put in his time — he deserves it."

Although the position is a part-time one which would be added to Rosenberg's duties as a state Senator, Story said she believes Rosenberg knows what is in store for him.

"Stan is such a hard worker — he's not going in with a naive sense of what he's going into," Story said. "When he told me he was running for the position, I said, 'Now you can work 90 hours a week instead of 70 hours.'"

Inauguration '93

Clinton faces real problems, professors say

By TOM KNIGHT
Collegian Correspondent

"To renew America, we must be bold. It will not be easy — it will require sacrifice." So spoke William Jefferson Clinton upon being sworn in as this country's 42nd president last Wednesday in the nation's capital.

Several University of Massachusetts professors offered their impressions on the inauguration and the Clinton presidency.

On the theme of sacrifice, Afro-American Studies Professor William Strickland said that "most Americans have been sacrificing the last 12 years. We've become more polarized along class lines."

"The economy is in profound crisis and can't be fixed with mere symbols."
Professor William Strickland

Strickland said he wishes the new president well but finds he has inherited a "gargantuan task."

"The economy is in profound crisis and can't be fixed with mere symbols," Strickland said.

Communications Department Chairperson Jarice Hanson said she was "very excited" by the inauguration because it "united the country, at least for a short time."

Hanson said that election reform should be high on Clinton's list of priorities, alluding to the disturbing statistic that "every senator has to raise $16,000 a day, every day of their term to be reelected. That needs to be corrected."

According to Afro-American Studies Professor Michael Thelwell, Clinton "is faced with two incompatible things — trying to restore the economy with no money with which to do it."

Thelwell said Clinton's presidency should be judged by whether he is willing "to spend his political capital early on and use his four years to act in the country's long-term interest regardless of whatever short-term pain it causes."

Associate History Professor David Glassberg said he believed the inaugural "was OK as a ceremony, but I found it a little strange to see a president 'party hearty' like that. It took me by surprise."

Glassberg said Clinton needs to tackle the health care issue, predicting that "it will take an enormous amount of political energy to get anything accomplished in that area."

History Professor Joseph Hernon said he drove down to Washington to participate in the festivities.

"I was in my Plymouth Reliant K car and was battling all of the stretch limos," Hernon said. "Being a native Washingtonian, I knew where all the great parking spaces were."

Hernon said he came away most impressed by the inaugural poem of Maya Angelou. "She stole the show. Her poem expressed all that this country should be — that we should be proud of our diversity and not exploit it."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

THE FIRST FELINE? – No, this isn't the new White House pet, it's a look-alike housecat wishing he were in Socks' shoes.

UDems journey to Washington, praise Clinton

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Elvis didn't show, but just about everyone else who's anyone in this country was at the Clinton inauguration, including five members of the University Democrats.

"It was just so beautiful being there."
Neil Carpenter, University Democrats

Connections with John Olver's office and the College Democrats of America netted the campus Dems tickets to the swearing-in, Youth Ball, American Gala and other festivities surrounding the presidential changing of the guard.

"It was just so beautiful being there," said Neil Carpenter, former president of the UMass Democrats. "We had something major to do every day."

Democrats Carpenter, Nathan Guerrero, George Fitzgerald, Debra Drake and Matt Malone crammed into a Volkswagen Fox last Saturday for the ride down to Turn to UNIVERSITY DEMOCRATS, page 5

'Fat Cats' not purring in D.C.

Group calls Clinton 'best president money can buy'

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Although "Socks," the nation's first cat, has grabbed her share of attention during the inauguration, some cats of a different type were also around Washington, D.C. for the inauguration.

Members of the Pioneer Valley Pro-Democracy campaign traveled to Washington last week to protest what they perceive as President-elect Bill Clinton's ties to special interests.

Group members said they emphasized the idea of "fat cats" by wearing cat ears, tails and whiskers, plus extra stuffing. The group's press statement called Clinton "the best president money can buy."

Adam Keats, a senior communications major and one of the four "fat cats," said the highlight of the group's efforts was their performance outside the Mayflower Hotel, where a group of California legislators were meeting for an event.

Keats said the meeting attracted a large amount of media attention both from the California press and other national newspapers. The group was featured on the McNeil-Lehrer Report on PBS, according to members.

"We got great press," Keats said. "A lot of people told us we were the most happening thing there in terms of protests."

James Karis, an organizer for the group, said the fat-cat image represents a "powerful symbol" of the need for political reform in the United States.

"Clinton got into to office because of his ability to raise money," Karis said. "What we have today is the result of a system run by money — and those who have the money have a tremendous say in who we get to vote for."

Besides performing outside the Mayflower Hotel, the group also performed outside hotels and other locations "where the real fat cats were," Keats said.

Keats said he believes Clinton will not be able to make far-reaching changes toward reforming campaign finance.

"While Clinton has promised action on campaign finance reform, I don't see any real action coming from his administration," Keats said. "I don't think he can do anything on his own — action has to come from outside the political system."

Karis said he believes the best solution is to have 100 percent public financing of elections. Public funding will allow more people to become involved by running for office, Karis said.

Although Karis said some people may complain about using tax dollars to finance elections, he said he believes taxpayers will save money in the end.

"People will be just paying a few dollars to safeguard a fair political process," Karis said, noting that events like the Savings and Loan scandal have caused taxpayers

Turn to FAT CATS, page 5

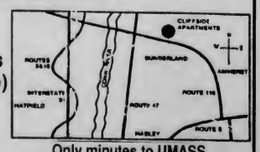
CLIFFSIDE APARTMENTS
248 Amherst Rd.
Sunderland, MA 01375
(413)665-3958
office hours M-FD 9-5 Sat. 10-2

- 1 & 2 Bedroom units
- Rents from $410 includes all utilities
- Flexible lease terms
- W/W carpeting
- On site laundry facilities
- On Bus Route (free fare)
- 28 acres of wooded hiking trails
- Pool and Tennis Courts



Only minutes to UMASS, shopping, and Rte. 91

Professionally managed by TFG Management

Mental Health Groups Spring 1993

Groups that will be offered this spring are:

- Adult Children of Alcoholics Wednesday 3:30-5
  (Process group for students with prior ACOA group experience)
- Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families
  Group I - Mondays, 3:30-5 (in Spanish)
  Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30
- Eating Disorder Group Tuesdays 4-5:30
- Self-Exploration Groups
  Group I - Tuesdays, 3-4:30 (for students over 21)
  Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30

Registration and pre-group interview required for all groups. Groups will begin in late February. For information and registration call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North during the month of February.

The Clinton Presidency

ASSOCIATED PRESS

THINKING ABOUT TOMORROW – William Jefferson Clinton, the 42nd President of the United States, now faces the task of meeting the expectations of optimistic citizens.

Ringing of bells marks new era

'Bells for Hope' a celebration of nation's diversity

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Those within earshot of the Old Chapel two Sundays ago were witnesses to an historic event — the simultaneous ringing of bells across the country to celebration the inauguration of President-elect Clinton.

Both members of the UMass Quasimodo Club, Ken Samonds, associate professor of nutrition, and senior HRTA major Jim Olson ascended the rickety ladders of the chapel's bell tower Jan. 17, took hold of the bell's aged wooden levers and gnarled ropes, and at 6 p.m. let loose a "grand peal" in harmony with bell-ringers throughout the nation.

The event, conceived by Clinton's inauguration committee, was called "Bells for Hope," and was intended to "celebrate the diversity of our beautiful country," organizers said.

"It's nice to think you're part of a nationwide ringing of bells," said Samonds, who along with Olson celebrates UMass men's basketball victories, holidays, graduation and "just about any other occasion" by playing the chapel's 60-year-old bells.

"Both of us are bell nuts," Samonds said. "I love to ring bells, and use any excuse to ring them. But the last time I participated in anything like this was back in 1976 for the bicentennial."

After chaotically crashing all of the chapel's bells for over a minute, Samonds and Olson took turns playing "My Country 'tis of Thee," "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean" and other patriotic songs. They also played "Lift Up Your Voice and Sing," in honor of Martin Luther King Day, and closed with "Twilight Shadows," the school's alma mater.

"It's nice to think you're part of a nationwide ringing of bells."
Ken Samonds, UMass Quasimodo Club

Samonds said he heard about the event on television, and called Clinton's inauguration committee for more information. He then sent a letter to the committee announcing his attention to ring the chapel bells "as a symbol of the hope and optimism of the college-age people in Massachusetts."

Other Massachusetts participants included Boston's Old North Church, Park St. Church and King's Chapel, the Boston College Chapel, and the Berkshire Community College Chapel.

Olson and Samonds describe the UMass Quasimodo Club as "a company of clandestine campanologists." Campanology is the art of bell casting and ringing. The Quasimodo Club was organized to maintain and operate the Old Chapel bells and the Tower Library chimes — a set of electronically amplified chimes in the top of the library.

■ University Democrats

continued from page 4

Washington, where they spent the next five days celebrating the victory of the team they'd been rooting for through the entire campaign.

"This is my last hurrah," said Carpenter, who coordinated the Clinton campaign on campus, and is handing over the reigns of the University Democrats to Guerrero this semester.

The party began Sunday for the celebrants at the "Call to Reunion" bash at the Lincoln Memorial, where stars such as Jack Nicholson and James Earl Jones read quotes about America and called for harmony in the new administration.

Tuesday night the College Democrats of America rented out Washington's posh "Fifth Column" nightclub for a Democratic student blowout, which the crew from UMass also attended.

Wednesday was the swearing-in, for which the University Dems had standing-room tickets, followed by the parade — the only event for which they didn't have tickets.

"We basically ran from our swearing-in place to an intersection where they didn't have any bleachers set up to watch the parade," Guerrero said.

That night they attended the Youth Ball, where Clinton and Gore both made cameo appearances, although Carpenter said they missed seeing Gore because they were in another room at the time.

"Like at every other ball, Clinton pointed to Hillary and said 'doesn't she look great tonight?' People were shouting 'Hil-la-ry! Hil-la-ry!'" said Guerrero.

The group returned Thursday night.

Now that the party is over, group members said the most exciting thing for the Democrats is hearing Clinton referred to as "President Clinton" on the news.

"As long as I've been conscious of anything in the world, it's been Reagan/Bush in there," said Guerrero. "For me it's going to take a while for the novelty to wear off."

■ fat cats

continued from page 4

a great deal more.

The idea of creating a fair political process is something that people should be able to agree on regardless of their ideology, Karis said.

"Democracy — government for the people, by the people, of the people — is one thing people can get together on," Karis said. "The last thing you want to do is to exclude anyone. Let everyone be a part of things."

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

A Graduate Degree . . . A Year Abroad
A Global Perspective!

Would you benefit from the experience of studying abroad?
Is your graduate major international business or international relations?
If so, then consider Boston University's Overseas Graduate Centers!

The Master of Science in Management (MSM) is offered in Belgium, England, France, Israel, Italy, and Spain

The Master of Arts (MA) in International Relations is offered in Belgium, England, and France

Courses have an international emphasis and are taught in English.
Classes meet evenings/weekends. Admission in January, April or September.

For brochure and application, please call or write:
BOSTON UNIVERSITY OVERSEAS PROGRAMS
143 Bay State Road, Boston, MA, USA 02215-1783
Tel: 617-353-2982 Fax: 617-353-7120

Boston University is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges
An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution.

Hope you enjoyed your break, had plenty of home-cooked meals and took in some cable television. But now you've really got to hit the books... the D.C.'s are beckoning to you with scrod... and the Collegian is the closest thing you've got to CNN. Stay happy. Stay cool. Stay informed. Read the Collegian.

SUBWAY®
of Amherst
$1.00 OFF
any FOOTLONG SUB
(With This Coupon)
Not Good With Any Other Offer
Offer Expires 4/30/93
4 Main Street • Amherst • 256-1919
Open Til 2am; Fri. & Sat. #5

OLYMPIC
世運 麵包
CHINESE BAKERY & CAFE

Grand Opening
Free Drink With Any Purchase
Downtown Amherst
17 Kellogg Ave., Amherst
256-8705

- Pastries
- Breads
- Tarts
- Birthday Cakes
- Croissants
- All Occasion Cakes
- Coffee and Teas
- Wedding Cakes

OPEN:
Sun.-Thurs. 7:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 7:30 a.m.-12:00 mid.

Story, Rosenberg appointed to Ed. Committee

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Both state Sen. Stanley Rosenberg and state Rep. Ellen Story will be serving this term on the legislature's Joint Education Committee following their recent appointments.

The 17-member Committee, composed of 11 House members and six senators, is headed by state Sen. David Magnante of Framingham, a graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Story said she was surprised House Speaker Charles Flaherty named her to the committee, in light of the fact that it is the most popular committee in the state legislature.

Rosenberg was appointed to the committee by Senate President William Bulger. Rosenberg, a former state representative from the Amherst-Pelham District, is beginning his second full term in the Senate after winning a special election to fill the seat vacated by U.S. Rep. John Olver in September 1991.

Rosenberg said Gov. Weld is due to announce his budget proposal almost immediately, and that he anticipates Weld will propose a "substantial increase," for higher education in the budget.

However, the Commonwealth faces a deficit of between $500 million and $1 billion and Weld's budget proposal presents no new sources of revenue, Rosenberg said.

"If there is an increase for education, it will come at the expense of other things, which may raise some opposition among legislators," Rosenberg said.

Story also said the main issue she would work on in the committee was to increase state appropriations for the University.

"There are enough people making an effective argument that the success of the economy is tied to the state university system," Story said, noting that Weld recently highlighted the importance of the developing "young minds" in his State of the State address.

Story praised the work UMass President Michael Hooker has done in working to convince business and civic leaders throughout the state of the importance of public higher education.

She also said it is "very heartening" that a number of new representatives in the legislature are either UMass graduates or have strong ties with the University.

SGA President Jen Wood said it is important for Rosenberg and Story to look at other issues besides increased appropriations, noting that a proposal to restore litigation rights to the University's Legal Services Office is likely to appear before the committee during the coming term.

"We got an increase in state appropriations last year — if that trend can continue, it will be very positive," Wood said. "[Appropriations] are only one issue, though — we hope they'll listen to all our issues."

Story is beginning her first full term in the House, after winning the March 1992 special election to fill the vacancy created by Rosenberg's election to the Senate.

Story was also reassigned to the Criminal Justice Committee and got a new assignment to the Ethics Committee.

BROKE AFTER BREAK?
TELEFUND
IS HIRING
Articulate, knowledgeable UMass students who have good communication skills.
☆ $5.25/Hour ☆
☆ Flexible Evening Hours ☆
☆ Convenient Campus Location ☆
☆ Looks Great on Your Resume ☆
CALL TODAY!
$$ 545-3509 $$
OR STOP BY MEMORIAL HALL TODAY.

Rumford
Pet Center
10% Off Any Purchase
Excluding Sale Items, Dog & Cat Food (w/coupon)
Hampshire of Holyoke Malls

All You Need To Save Money Is A Pair Of Scissors
BOB'S STORES
Everyone's Favorite Store!
$5.00 Off A Pair Of NIKE Athletic Footwear
Present this coupon at any Bob's Store. Expires February 28, 1993.
Code M
FREE Bob's T-Shirt
Present this coupon at any Bob's Store.
Code 15
Bob's is where you look for the looks you wear! So, let's go down to Bob's in Enfield, Connecticut for that good friends feeling!
ENFIELD, 25 Hazard Ave., 745-1643
MANCHESTER, MIDDLETOWN, WATERBURY, HAMDEN, MILFORD, DANBURY
Store Hours: Monday Thru Saturday 10-9, Sunday 11-6
ALSO IN CRANSTON, RHODE ISLAND; MIDDLETON, MASSACHUSETTS; AND POUGHKEEPSIE, NEW YORK
We accept MasterCard, Visa, American Express, and Discover Card.
UMASS 9 91 190 EXIT 47E Elm St. Enfield Square Enfield Commons MASS CT BOB'S

Panel explores native images

Directors discuss concept of social responsibility

By NICOLE DUMAS
Collegian Staff

The complexity of native/white relations and the meanings of "Aboriginal" identity in a postmodern world were examined in a series of recent films related to the representation of native peoples.

A film series entitled "The Shock of Re-Cognition: Identity, Memory, and the Politics of Representation in Indigenous Media" featured works by and about native peoples of North and South America as well as New Zealand and Australia.

The series provided a look at media as both a source of domination and empowerment for native peoples, according to organizers.

The festival was curated by UMass Anthropology Professor Jackie Urla, who said she recognized the recent explosion of film and video productions by and about native peoples across the globe and explained that the idea for the festival "emerged out of thinking about non-western forms of visualization."

One of the highlights of the event was a panel discussion held on Jan. 22. Urla asked the audience what they might learn from the relationship between the victimized and the colonized.

"How does the victimized represent the victimized and how does the colonized represent the victimized?" she asked.

Urla asked the panel of filmmakers about their political, social and aesthetic interests and how that resulted in the images that are chosen for their films.

Diane Reyna of the Institute for American Indian Arts and director of the film Surviving Columbus said her films are very personal for her.

"It starts from where I come from. . . everything goes back to the community," she said.

Reyna, who is a member of the Pueblo tribe, discussed her feelings about issues such as social responsibility and the importance of satisfying two distinct cultures, "the American and the Pueblo." She said she recognizes the difficulties involved in this and added, "my primary responsibility is to the Pueblo community."

Frances Peters, a filmmaker from the Australian Television Aboriginal Programming Unit, works in what she called "mainstream television" and said her direction in filmmaking is a conscious decision since she tries to make films for people who would not usually see films about aboriginal people. Peters explained that "without people who listen, our films are nothing".

Ava Hamilton, producer of Everything Has A Spirit, a film about Native American's struggle to maintain their spiritual traditions, said she will only work on things related to her own community.

"I won't speak for other tribes, tell their stories," she said. Hamilton discussed the different responsibilities a native filmmaker must face, such as accountability, truth and responsibility to the community.

"The reason I am in documentary is because of the stereotypes that are presented. Columbus didn't discover this country. George Washington wasn't the father of our country — that's the kind of truth I am talking about," said Hamilton. "I know who I am accountable to. I am accountable to my family. I am accountable to myself."

Documentary films, particularly social documentaries and ethnographic films, depend on "the other" — such as the urban underclass and "problem sectors" of the community, explained Annie Goldson, a panel member from the Center of Modern Culture and Media at Brown University.

Goldson said many of these documentaries affirm a sense of superiority for western filmmakers, and that some are "exploiting people at the level of representation."

Rayna Green, director of the American Indian Program at the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C., said she struggles with "how to do the true thing and not fight with ghosts of 500 years ago."

"I don't want to be a part of ethnographic films that explain things," Green said. "I want to make films that have people raise questions about their own world."

The film series was presented in conjunction with the Five College faculty seminar entitled "The Shock of Re-Cognition: Artistic Representation and Cultural Politics." The program was funded by a grant from the Getty Grant Program with additional support provided by Amherst College, Five Colleges, Inc., the UMass Arts Council, and the UMass Anti-Racism Coalition.

State pay raise causes squeeze on trust fund

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The state Legislature's passage of a 13 percent pay raise for state employees last year and declining state appropriations for employee benefits are forcing University of Massachusetts administrators and student leaders to rethink the way student fees are allocated.

One of the proposals that has arisen as a result of the mandated pay raise is a $7.50 per year increase in the Student Activities Trust Fund. This increase must be passed by the University's Board of Trustees before it can be implemented.

Allen Brainerd, the business manager for the Student Activities Office, said the need for the fee increase is a way "trying to catch up with cost increases" from last December's pay raise for state employees as well as a steady decline in state appropriations for various employee benefits.

The state Legislature passed the 13 percent pay increase last December for 50,000 unionized state employees, overriding Gov. Weld's proposal to limit the raise to 5 percent. Employees covered under the agreement received a 6 percent increase last Dec. 21 and another 7 percent increase on June 28, 1993.

The University's Board of Trustees subsequently voted on Dec. 3 to increase the raise to cover "non-unit" employees, a decision Student Trustee Kevin Newnan said was made with "little discussion and little financial information," given the "magnitude" of the decision.

Newnan said the Board's vote did ensure the raise would not apply to the president, vice presidents, chancellors, or employees that had been recently upgraded or hired. Periodic performance review was also required, Newnan said.

"This covers a minimal amount of people — [the pay raise] still represents a big expenditure," Newnan said.

State Sen. Stanley Rosenberg, D-Amherst, said the raise should have been implemented more gradually according to a contract settlement state employees signed three years ago with former Gov. Michael Dukakis in late 1990, but Weld refused to the pay for the agreements.

"The University would have to had to find ways to increase salaries in small amounts," Rosenberg said. "If

Turn to PAY RAISE, page 12

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOMESTYLE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS • NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 MAIN STREET, AMHERST

HEALTHY SKIN
Begins with a deep pore cleansing facial.
Also lash and brow tinting, shaping, hair removal with wax
AESTHETICS SKINCARE
34 Main St., Suite 1, Amherst, MA 253-9879

College Supplies
A terrific selection of Computer supplies, notebooks, pens, pencils, paper clips, typewritter ribbons, lamps, T-shirts, binders, art supplies, calandars, blank books, Frisbees, stationery & the best card shop in the Valley!
A•J• Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
Ride the free bus (or walk) downtown and see what Amherst has to offer
Open Mon.- Sat. 5 am to 9 pm, Sundays 5 am to 1 pm

★ EXTRA HOURS ★
FOR YOUR SHOPPING CONVENIENCE
UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center
Wednesday & Thursday • 9am–7pm
Friday • 9am–5pm Saturday • 11am–3pm
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Wednesday & Thursday 1/27-1/28 • 9am–8pm
Friday 9–5 • Saturday 11–4
Monday through Friday 2/1–2/5 • 9am–5pm
Saturday 2/6 • 11am–4pm
★WE NOW ACCEPT VISA-MASTERCARD-DISCOVER★
CA$H
FOR YOUR USED BOOKS!
BRING YOUR BOOKS TO:
CAMPUS CENTER
JANUARY 25, 26, 29, FEBRUARY 1
9:00 AM - 5:00 PM
JANUARY 27, 28
9:00 AM - 7:00 PM
FEBRUARY 2
9:00 AM - 2:00 PM

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the entire Five College community.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Submissions must bear your name, local address and phone number in order to be considered for publication. This information is subject to verification.

Anonymous letters will be printed at the editor's discretion. Letters should be no longer than 50 typed, double-spaced lines. Columns should not exceed 70 typed, double-spaced lines. Untyped submissions will not be considered for publication.

Responses to or criticism of columns, cartoons, articles or letters are limited to letter form (under 50 lines). Columns responding to previously published material will not be printed. Responses to or criticism of letters that themselves have responded to a letter, column or article will not be printed. Collegian staff are restricted from writing letters, but may write columns. Any exceptions will be determined solely by the editors.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writer and do not represent the views of the Collegian.

The Editorial staff is committed to honoring the above-mentioned policies in order to provide a forum for community discussion of issues.

School bus driver's crime: it's not just society's fault

PITTSFIELD — I had intended to write an upbeat, light-hearted column for back to school. Unfortunately, reality doesn't work that way.

Berkshire County residents were stunned when they picked up the Jan. 20 Berkshire Eagle and turned to the local section. The headline they saw? "School bus driver accused of raping children on his Lanesboro route."

It seems that 64-year-old Robert C. Halsey of Lanesboro has been charged with two counts each of rape of a child with force, lewd and lascivious behavior and eight counts each of assault and battery and assault with a dangerous weapon, and all while he was on duty. According to the assistant district attorney, Halsey drove the victims to a remote part of Lanesboro, assaulted them and threatened them with a knife, a gun and a baseball bat.

Greg
SUKKIENNIK

The assistant D.A. promised there would be more charges and it seems she's probably right: neither the D.A.'s office nor school officials would say a word because of the "pending investigation." The children he is charged with raping are eight years old. Repeat that to yourself a few times.

That's not all. The crimes Halsey has been charged with are unspeakable by any measure. But the impact upon Berkshire County would be greater if this wasn't something that local residents read about nearly everyday.

I worked at a small weekly paper in Pittsfield over winter break. We got faxes every day from the Berkshire district attorney's office. Here's a sample of the kind of crimes against children being committed in UMass' backyard, an hour west on Route 9:

• Jan. 13: "[Thomas] Todd admitted sexually assaulting two children, a 6-year-old girl and a 5-year-old boy, in Pittsfield between Nov. 1, 1991 and Dec. 31, 1991." Todd was given concurrent 9 to 15 year sentences at Cedar Junction.

• Jan. 15: "[David] Castegenaro [and a co-defendant] admitted to breaking into the home of a 21-year-old Lee woman on Aug. 3, 1991. Castegenaro also admitted sexually assaulting the woman." He received a one-year bid for intent to commit rape and a suspended 12-year sentence for breaking and entering with intent to commit a misdemeanor (burglary).

• Jan. 12: "[35-year-old Edward] LaFrance pled guilty to 28 counts of rape of a child with force, six counts of indecent assault and battery on a child under 14. . . LaFrance admitted sexually assaulting a now 16-year-old girl in North Adams between Aug. 1, 1988 and Sept. 1, 1991."

LaFrance was given concurrent 20-year terms for rape at Concord, concurrent 8 to 10-year suspended sentences at Cedar Junction and nearly 20 more years of concurrent jail terms on the other counts. You might say, "Shouldn't we put him to death?" I'd agree but for one reason: death is too good for that s.o.b. Imagine suffering unfathomable pain every day since you were 11. His victim did.

These are just the criminals that got caught. What about all the acquaintance rapes that go unreported? What about kids too afraid for their lives to tell someone that something terrible has happened to them?

Now, all these criminals are, well at least biologically, men. The politically correct zombie hordes might cry, "Patriarchy! Patriarchy!" and I'd be tempted to agree. After all, there must be something seriously wrong with a society that teaches men to rape, never mind rape children, right? That's a debatable point. But to subscribe to that theory is to deny that the guilty hold personal responsibility for these crimes.

It's easy to blame society for everything people do wrong. It's easy to say "some people are just evil" and let it go at that. Such explanations are inherently flawed because they assign no blame for crimes which clearly demand retributive justice. It is much harder — and much better — to take control of one's life, to learn that there are forms of behavior which are socially unacceptable and inhuman, and to accept the responsibilities of freedom along with the privileges.

You might think that's an awfully conservative-sounding point of view for a Massachusetts Democrat to have, especially here in the Unhappy Valley. You might even disagree. If so, do the following: imagine those were your 8-year-old children on that bus.

I see you've changed your mind.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

Clinton's election signals new generation of change

Parades, parties, promises, presidents and Michael Jackson — the 1993 Presidential Inauguration, and more. To some, a notch on the timeline of history, to others Jan. 20 was a notch on the timeline of our lives; Jan. 20 was a moment, a milestone for our memories.

E.C.
THOMAS

For me, Jan. 20, 1993, was a day of firsts. It was the first time I actually sat through an inauguration without feeling nauseous. It was the first time I had voted and later elected a president, and the first time I felt I mattered as a player in the political process. It was the first time a president spoke to my generation and most importantly, it was the first time I had faith in our government — me, the one with a mind made of a cynical collage.

Yet, there I was sitting in front of the TV alongside my housemate, our bodies filled with energy and excitement and our eyes with tears.

I felt proud, patriotic, inspired and most of all I felt an admiration. I admired Bill Clinton, much like my parents had admired JFK.

I can't count the number of times someone has told me stories about their experiences during the sixties. Every time I listened to these memories, I felt a little disappointed that I didn't have any real "change the world" stories to share. No sitins, takeovers, picket lines — no revolutions fought and won. In a way, our generation has been made to feel faceless. I always figured that maybe it was this lack of identity or feeling of "missing out" that made the radicals of UMass feel purposeless, so in order to fill their life's void, they'd take over a building.

After watching building after building taken over and listening to demand after demand at UMass, and even while listening to some of the '60s stories, I sometimes felt it was all sort of ridiculous and these "revolutions" were only complete anarchy, chaos and sometimes, as in the case of UMass, a rebellious mask for boredom.

That's not to say that the changes that came out of the '60s revolution were pointless, just that it wasn't a generation of complete bliss or a time where good always defeated evil. To me, the sixties were simply overrated.

Yet on Jan. 20, I knew why these stories were so important to people and what kind of excitement they felt. Nearly 30 years later, I sat on my couch knowing that I had fought and won in my ideals and beliefs and was able to implement change.

The 1992 election looked from the onset like another four years of Bush — it looked like a give; hell, Bush might as well just sit back for the ride.

Luckily, out of a place named Hope, hope came. Bill Clinton fought all the way to the end for the chance to share his vision of America, and he won. His determination to reach his lifetime goal and his courage to face a seemingly inevitable defeat are two attributes that separate him form the rest. Knowing that I helped in that fight made it all the more victorious.

Clinton has already revoked some restrictions on abortion and has lifted the ban on gays and lesbians in the military, and while it is a given that Clinton isn't perfect, for the first time I actually believe things will only get better.

We are no longer a generation without an identity — we are the generation of change, in ideals, beliefs, and concerns. I no longer regret not being a student during the sixties; in fact I'm excited that my time has come, that my time is now — the '90s. This is indeed "our time."

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Athletic dept. slights female alum

Some time in October, my husband, a UMass alumnus, received literature form the UMass ticket office regarding the availibilty of certain UMass Minuteman ticket packages. At the time, I was a bit annoyed that this information was not sent to me, or to both of us, as I am also a UMass alumnnus and a Minuteman fan. However, I let it pass, thinking that it was just an error.

Based on this literature, I took it upon myself to review the avialable tickert packages and made the decision to purchase the Mullins Pack for me and as a surprise for my husband. I filled out the form with BOTH of our names and gave MY credit card number for the charge.

Today, the envelope came in the mail with the receipt for the tickets. Unfortunately, the envelope was addressed to only my husband. This not only ruined the surprise for my husband, it highly annoyed me because I was the one who ordered and paid the $114.00 for the tickets. Does the UMass Athletic Department only recognize the male alumni? Apparently so. I hope in the future that the Athletic Department and Ticket Office will consider the female alumni population.

Lisa Yarin
Westfield

Wild Bill Clinton shows off in a new era of party politics

WASHINGTON — Inauguration week has already brought about unprecedented change in the American way. Daily highlights of Bill Clinton's big party include:

Jan. 14 — Clinton admits that he knowingly lied during the campaign and that many of his campaign promises such as a balanced budget, national health care, school reform, marital fidelity and others will be simply impossible to uphold.

Clinton defends having misled the American people: "Hey, in these times who doesn't exaggerate a little during a job interview? This is a sweet job, I've got my own house, a new $250,000 car and even a plane. You would've lied a little too."

Jan. 15 — It is revealed Bill Clinton is the father of Murphy Brown's kid. Vice President Dan Quayle cries conspiracy and demands a recount. Says he'd do it himself but a lot of people voted and he only has ten fingers.

Jan. 16 — Bill and Hillary spend a night on the town with Democratic congressional leaders, learning the ins and outs of congressional perks.

Clinton admits he's played post office before and would like to do so again.

The first couple-elect stumbled upon Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-Massachusetts). Sen. Spuds said if Clinton wanted to compare himself to his brother John he would have to prove his merit, shot for shot. Clinton agreed to the challenge and Kennedy whipped out a bottle of Bushmills Irish Whiskey. Three rounds later Bill is seen hugging the porcelain singing, "I can't keep thinking about tomorrow."

Dan
WETZEL

Hillary takes over and faces Teddy Ballgame alone. After five rounds, Kennedy asks Hillary if she'd like to go for a drive, maybe see Palm Beach. She declines. Three rounds later Hillary is still standing and Kennedy has been drunk under the table.

While down there, he looks up Ms. Clinton's dress.

Jan. 17 — Clinton defends spending $100 million to celebrate his new job: "I am the first resident of Arkansas to find work since I've been Gov.," Clinton said. "This is certainly cause for a celebration."

Jan. 18 — Clinton holds an all-star gala celebration on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. The show is carried live on HBO, is hosted by Ed McMahon and to start the evening off Milli Vanilli sings the national anthem.

In this circus of the stars, Clinton gets to rub elbows with the likes of Michael Jackson, Barry Manilow, and LL Cool J and "do the achy-breaky" with Billy Ray Cyrus.

In the middle of the gala, Lincoln's statue got up and walked out.

After the show Wild Bill is seen passing a joint between Mick Fleetwood, Chelsea Clinton, Axl Rose and Sister Souljah.

Later that evening, Clinton tapes a show of "Battle of the Network Stars." Clinton was prepared to take team MVP honors before Charles Nelson Riley knocked him into the water during the kayak pool race.

Jan. 19 — Clinton, after his daily jog, stops into a McDonalds where Dan Quayle serves him his Big Mac.

Jan. 20 — The inauguration goes without a hitch; Clinton and Gore look regal relaxing nicely in their Layz-boys.

Before the ceremony Bush tried to brief Clinton on how to deal with the situations in Bosnia, the Middle East and Somalia. Clinton listened intently for 30 seconds, then noticed a familiar face.

"Hey isn't that Alyssa Milano? Gotta go, George," Clinton said, breaking free from Bush. "She was the best Amy Fisher of them all you know."

Jan 21. — Ray Charles majestically sang "God Bless America." Six out of 10 Americans sure hope the good Lord was listening.

Dan Wetzel is a Collegian columnist.

Find fame, fortune at Collegian

Every day last semester, you eagerly read the editorial page of the Collegian, then beat your head on the pavement because you didn't agree with the flimflam expounded there.

Don't hurt yourself. Grab a pen.

If you'd like to see your words of wisdom or artistic masterpieces make a regular appearance in this paper read by thousands (19,000, to be exact — we love to be exact), come to our meeting (we love meetings too — they make us feel professional) for new and not-so-new columnists and cartoonists.

All columnists and editorial cartoonists must attend. (See how bold that is? We mean it.) It will be at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 28, in the plush Collegian offices (Campus Center basement, at the opposite end from the ATM machines and neighbors to WMUA).

Important stuff for new columnists: please bring a sample column to the meeting or to the office by Friday afternoon. A column should be 50-70 lines (about 2-2 1/2 pages), TYPED (double-spaced, please) and well-written. And don't write "Why I Want to be a Collegian Columnist."

Struggle for truth continues

The turbulence of the fall semester — from the violence against an ALANA resident assistant to the sabotage of the 25-year-old Upward Bound program, a college preparatory program for low income and first generation college students — is supposedly over, but the struggle continues.

They have once again appeased us by agreeing to some of our demands, but are they really going to follow through this time or have they duped us again? Because as we know, in the annals of UMass history, in regards to the ALANA community, the process has become very cyclical. I will stand very critical of the administration until I see proof of their efforts.

Malkes
GOMES

As students, it is our duty to make sure the University administration stands by their word and does what it promises. We need to keep a constant watch over them. If we don't see tangible evidence of progress on the part of the University, which surely has not been laudable over the past years, then we must once again come together. I think by now they know students mean business, or at least they are learning that. They may have published in papers and manipulated the media to think that everything was resolved. Please don't believe the hype — because talk is cheap and action is where it is at.

Remember who pays the chancellor's and others' salaries. Also remember that this school should be run the way students want it to operate, not by selfish bureaucrats and their immature games.

I remember back to the press conference with Chancellor Richard O'Brien in the Campus Center Auditorium Nov. 9. Well, shortly after this about 30 students, including myself, went to a meeting to discuss the Upward Bound program. During this meeting we were told by Ken Burham, dean of academic support services, that students of the Upward Bound program were being catered to by alternative services.

Amazingly enough, two weeks later I found out from sources at the Amherst High School that the students were not receiving alternative services from UMass. In fact, the students were calling CCEBMS to solicit help. This is still the case to this very day. Yes, it does seem a little strange. I believe we were lied to.

Months ago we were told by Chancellor O'Brien that there would be an official investigation into the sordid dealings and the aberrant behavior in the conspiracy of eliminating Upward Bound. To this day a proper investigation has not taken place. I don't mean a study of the problem, which they constantly try to smokescreen us with, but a real investigation. I would deduce that someone is trying to cover up.

When a group of students, faculty and community members demanded in June 1992 to meet with the chancellor, an investigation was suggested. By the faces and the reactions of Chancellor O'Brien, Ann Quinley, former dean of academic support services, and Dean JoAnne Vanin of student affairs, it was quite apparent that something was going on. In fact, Gloria de Guevara, who at the time was interim director of Upward Bound and associate dean of academic support services and was responsible for writing the failed grant proposal, was not allowed in the meeting. A gag order to not speak to anyone was put on her from her superiors. To me this resembles a definite Watergate Scandal.

As a student, I demand answers to some questions: where is the missing computer equipment and withheld pay increases the Department of Education approved? Why were funds mismanaged, and why did checks show up at the office for people who didn't work there? Why was a poor grant proposal turned in with information from 1982? Why was the letter dated May 8, 1992, declaring the Upward Bound program defunded, held until after May 25? Oddly, school had already been dismissed when the information became public. I wonder why.

I hope the administration has learned a few important things over the last few months: integrity, honesty and morals, which were clearly lacking. I hope they learned about communication with students and working together as a staff because the fact that President Hooker had to come here is an embarrassment.

Many of you have Ph.D.s, but that is nothing if you are not really educated in dealing with people, because without true education there can be no advancement. Like Malcolm X said, "Without education, you are not going anywhere in this world." I believe that to mean being educated in all realms, not simply from a book. Many may think they have been educated, but they have been misdirected. I encourage the administration to carry out an expedient authentic investigation of all charges and save what little integrity is left, but then again over the last few months could everything have been cleaned up? May the power of truth shine and bring down those who have perpetrated these crimes.

Malkes Gomes is a UMass student.

Government uses dinosaurs as tools of public deception

I realize that what I'm about to say may take most of you by surprise, but it's time that the facts be known.

Our government is guilty of perpetrating the most heinous of injustices against the people. I speak not of war or illegal arms for hostages deals, but of the dinosaurs. This is not a joke. The government is actively leading us to believe that the dinosaurs are in fact extinct.

"But wait a minute," you might say, "the dinosaurs are extinct. They died out 65 million years ago." But that is just what they want you to believe.

Patrick P.
ROBBLEE

Most paleontologists, perhaps all, adamantly insist that because the fossil record of the dinosaurs disappears at 65 million years before present, the dinosaurs must have died out in some mass extinction.

It's no surprise to me that none of these so-called scientists can agree on a single theory. Some champion a theory of climatic change that altered vegetation patterns resulting in starvation. Others put their faith in a massive asteroid collision with the earth that sent dust and other particles into the atmosphere creating a blanket around the globe that prevented incoming solar radiation from reaching earth's surface. Still others search for a variety of other implausible explanations.

But why the disunity?

Our government provides grants to all the different schools of thought. Thus, each one has the financial resources to bombard their foolishness against the American people. Their lies are passed off as scholarship.

Yet there is one school of thought that has received no funding from the government and as a result remains obscure. I speak of none other than the theory of the spirituality of the dinosaurs.

In the dinosaurs' 185 million-plus year existence, they created a unique dinoculture complete with social organization, child-rearing practices, food procurement techniques, social hierarchies and most importantly. . . religion.

It only makes sense. The dinosaurs were religious fanatics and they practiced with such religious zeal that they eventually attained a higher state of spirituality and as a result became invisible. I jest you not.

Think about it — this explains everything. The dinosaurs completely did away with their mortal bodies. Thus, they aren't really extinct at all. Oh no, they're still with us, alive and well.

But the government refuses to allow the people to know this.

Just think of all the unexplained phenomena in the world — UFO's, the disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa, mysterious sightings of Elvis — these are all produced by invisible dinosaurs trying to screw with our heads. And the government knows this is the truth but refuses to let it out.

You see, it's in their best interest if we're always distracted by things like horses with human heads and aliens that fornicate with humans. This frees them up from public scrutiny allowing them to trade arms for hostages, pardon crooks, participate in savings and loan scandals, write bad checks, and so on.

Essentially, they are ruthlessly using the dinosaurs, a most holy and pious set of creatures, to keep the people down. This is the only possible conclusion.

Patrick P. Robblee is a Collegian staff member.

EWC gets one program, second proposal on hold

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Everywoman's Center received funding from the University on Dec. 23, 1992 to restore one of the Center's programs which had been eliminated due to budget cuts, according to the Center's director.

Carol Wallace, the director of the EWC, said last fall members of the EWC staff and students submitted proposals to Chancellor Richard O'Brien for the restoration of the Women of Color Campus Advocates program to provide more services for women of color and the Women's Administrative and General Education Support program, a re-entry program for older non-traditional women students.

Wallace said the meetings between the Chancellor and women of color staff members of the EWC and students concluded with the Chancellor's invitation to submit proposals of the programs that they wanted restored to the Center.

Wallace said the result of meetings with the Chancellor and the submission of proposals was the restoration of funding for the Women of Color Campus Advocates program beginning this fiscal year and advocacy for the restoration of the re-entry program next fiscal year.

"The Women of Color Campus Advocates program will provide advocacy and awareness that meets the specific needs of women of color at the University and the community," Wallace said.

"The educational program will work to increase awareness of the difficulties that women of color face," Wallace said, "and provide advocacy to women of color."

Wallace said the funding for the Women of Color Campus Advocates program will be built into the EWC's base budget to ensure ongoing funding for the program.

She also said that there is a search to hire a coordinator and an assistant coordinator for the program and a staff will hopefully be in place prior to the end of this fiscal year.

The EWC used to have a Third World Woman's Program that evolved into the Bridge Program which provided services to women of color, but the program was eliminated due to budget cuts in the fall of 1990, Wallace said.

■ Upward Bound

continued from page 3

most likely find various reasons for the loss, but said he hoped the report would examine the reasons and make recommendations about remedying them. He added that he was interested in making the program stronger with her assistance.

Anderson, who earned her doctorate in 1990 from the University, manages her own consulting firm which specializes in organizational development issues such as evaluation and assessment, leadership training and team building.

Her recent experience includes serving as grant writer and evaluator for the Springfield Community Action Commission's Head Start Program, a program which received federal funding of over $375,000.

In accepting the assignment, Anderson said she believes cutbacks such as this one are common and predictable, according to a statement. She said her goal is to review recent events, but work towards building a "strong, diverse and future-orientated program."

■ Goldstein

continued from page 3

The University also completed the new Gunness Engineering Building last year.

Goldstein received his bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1960, 1962 and 1964, respectively. He started teaching at Lehigh in 1968.

Some of Goldstein's academic accomplishments include conducting research for NASA on the metallic content of lunar samples collected by Apollo astronauts. Goldstein has written eight books, and has approximately 200 publications to his credit.

Goldstein served as an aerospace technologist at the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland. From 1976 to 1983, Goldsteing served as the T.L. Diamond Distinguished Professor of Metallurgy at Lehigh. He also served as assistant vice president for research on a part-time basis.

Goldstein became Lehigh's vice president for research in 1983, and served as vice president for graduate studies and research from 1987 to 1990.

As an administrator, Goldstein doubled Lehigh's research money from $13.7 million to $27.9 million, increased the number of research projects, oversaw a tripling of private-industry support for research from $1 million to $3 million, and increased the number of doctorates awarded annually from 60 to 105.

■ efforts

continued from page 3

Washington Tower. Francis Marchant, a non-student from Framingham, was charged with assault and battery and two civil rights violations for allegedly punching and threatening Arlens Barosy and using racial slurs.

The incident sparked protests by minority students concerned with their safety, alleging a lack of minority representation and resources on campus and education on diversity issues. Involved in negotiations were Black, Latino, Asian and Native American student groups, represented by a coalition called ALANA.

O'Brien said he will continue to update the campus by releasing monthly progress reports regarding campus multiculturalism which will be published in the Campus Chronicle.

THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Did Someone Say "Party"?

AWESOME SAVINGS!
Large Cheese
NEAPOLITAN PIZZA
$6.99
Or Two For $10.99
Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per visit at participating restaurants. Not valid in combination with any other offer. Limited delivery area. ©1992 Pizza Hut, Inc. 1/20 cent cash redemption value.
Pizza Hut

253-9787 Dine In/Carry Out
253-3443 Delivery

ATTENTION
ALL UNDERGRADS ARE WELCOME TO JOIN THE DIVERSE COLLEGIAN STAFF
NEWS
BUSINESS
GRAPHICS

haircuts always $10!
BUCCI
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

AIM HIGH
PUT YOUR COLLEGE DEGREE TO WORK.
Air Force Officer Training School is an excellent start to a challenging career as an Air Force Officer. We offer great starting pay, medical care, 30 days of vacation with pay each year and management opportunities. Contact an Air Force recruiter. Find out what Officer Training School can mean for you. Call
TSgt Don Dawson
413-557-2866
AIR FORCE

■ Marcum

continued from page 1

certainly hope [now] we have things in place that will enable us to do a better job of monitoring the athletic department."

Coaches rally around Marcum

Since sending O'Brien the letter urging Wong's hiring, coaches throughout the department have rallied around Marcum.

"I speak for every coach in the department and we are excited about Bob Marcum coming to UMass," said men's gymnastics coach Roy Johnson. "Glenn Wong was an outstanding person and did a quality job as interim athletic director and Bob Marcum is an outstanding person and will do a quality job as athletic director."

In the selection process itself, the coaches reportedly felt alienated from the search and thought UMass need to look no farther than the popular Wong to fill the position, however at no time were they displeased with Marcum.

O'Brien said he had taken the letter into consideration but Wong had never been a candidate for the position. Wong was a member of the search committee, which O'Brien and former Dean of the School of Physical Education David Bischoff had composed.

"He couldn't be a candidate because he was on the search committee," said O'Brien, who alone had the authority to choose the future athletic director. "It never arose to stack Glenn up against Bob Marcum."

O'Brien said he would have liked to have seen Wong apply for the position but he said he had never urged Wong to do so.

"Yes, I think Glenn Wong would have made a fine athletic director and I wish he had been a candidate," O'Brien said.

Wong, who was hired on Sept. 1, has always asserted he was holding the position on an interim basis only. He would not comment on the possibility of becoming a candidate.

O'Brien also said he wished the coaches could have played a bigger part in the process.

Meeting with coaches

Marcum, who officially takes over on Feb. 8, had a meeting with the coaches after they had sent O'Brien the letter and at least one coach said it helped smooth out any tension.

"We were just left in the dark about everything and people got nervous," women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "It wasn't meant to be negative to Bob Marcum, it was just a vote of confidence to Glenn.

"We were so removed from the process, but the hiring has put a lot of our minds to rest," Rudy said.

Johnson said, "Of the four candidates, Bob Marcum stood far and above the other three."

Mark Burson, who coached women's soccer at South Carolina under Marcum's tenure, had nothing but praise for his former boss.

"UMass has got itself a very good athletic director," Burson said. "Bob Marcum is very professional, he knows college athletics inside and out, is a terrific fundraiser and should serve UMass very well."

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Interim Athletic Director Glenn Wong.

Frank MacInerney, who held the athletic director position for 20 years, retired last summer under a cloud of controversy concerning the misuse of state funds, which prompted an investigation by the state's attorney general's office and questions of gender inequality within the department. Bischoff resigned during the same scandal.

In the meantime, Wong has filled in as athletic director and has received widespread acclaim for his efforts.

"Everyone I have met has been unstinting with their praise for Glenn," O'Brien said. "He has truly done a terrific job."

Marcum, who since 1990 has served as vice president and general manager of the Atlanta Motor Speedway, said the coach's letter to O'Brien does bother him.

"Glenn obviously did a very fine job the past year and it is not surprising some people expressed their loyalty to him," Marcum said. "It is a testament to Glenn."

Cleared of charges

If anyone can move past a difficult situation, in which they have no control over, it is Marcum.

Marcum was fired from the athletic director's position at South Carolina in 1988 by then University President James Holderman, who charged Marcum had misrepresented the school's drug testing program.

Marcum sued the school for wrongful termination, won the case and was awarded over $200,000. Holderman resigned a year later.

O'Brien and UMass President Michael Hooker said they carefully reviewed the entire situation and are certain Marcum's character is impeccable.

"With fine detail we looked into any charges and things are all in order," O'Brien said.

A "sleeping giant"

Marcum, who signed a three-year contract paying him $100,000 a year plus incentives based on performance, said he wants to take the university's athletic department, which he described as a "sleeping giant," to "the next level."

Marcum's first priority will be to hire a hockey coach but long-term goals include upgrading the UMass football program to Division 1-A. The Minutemen currently play in Division 1-AA, while South Carolina and Kansas are both in Division 1.

"[Division 1-A football] will depend on the vision of the chancellor, the president and the Board of Trustees," Marcum said. "We have a window of opportunity here and if they want to see an upgrade, I am capable of taking UMass there."

O'Brien said, "I am personally for it but it won't occur for at least five to 10 years. UMass is trying to be one of the great state universities in the country and every one of the great state universities plays Division 1 football."

Hurdles to upgrading the program include building a new stadium with a minimum capacity of 32,000 seats, increasing fan support (UMass games currently average a little over 10,000 for attendance) and finding the funding to support college athletics' most expensive sport.

Fundraising, marketing and promotion, all past weaknesses at UMass, are cited as Marcum's greatest strengths.

"Bob is a person of vision and an impressive fund raiser," O'Brien said.

"We have a quality man who is ready to bring us into the 21st century," Johnson said. "And everyone is looking forward to that."

Say CHEESE!
The Collegian is seeking to expand its photography staff. Interested students should attend a meeting on Sunday at 3:00 in 113 Campus Center.

The Collegian is always looking for new writers. There are many different opportunities available. For more information contact the News Editor at 113 Campus Center 545-3500

D.P. Dough
Delivers Calzones
call 256-1616
Now Open at 11:30 A.M.
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 Calzones
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY 2 CALZONES
Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 Calzones
2 FREE COKES WITH THE PURCHASE OF ANY 2 CALZONES
Exp. 8/30/93 • Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 Calzones

PARADE OF SHOES
Leather
Fashion Footwear For Women
One Smart Price.
$19.98
Located at 180 N. King Street in Northampton in the Cedar Plaza.

■ pay raise

continued from page 7

[the raise] were done in the correct way, it would have been easier — this way it's an overnight shock."

Newnan said he opposes proposed $7.50 increase unless the University and the Division of Student Activities implement changes in the number of professional employees and the role of students in handling trust fund money.

"I'm not in favor of the increase unless there is a substantive movement toward downsizing professional staff and moving toward student involvement and providing professional training mechanisms for this happen," Newnan said. "Students need to have hands-on jobs in terms of handling the Student Activities Trust Fund."

However, Brainerd said there needs to be a "lot more analysis" of the options Newnan outlined.

"We have to ask if these things translate into positive things for students," Brainerd said. "You have to look on a department by department basis and ask what you feel you need to do to maintain the level you want."

Brainerd also said decisions regarding the proposed fee increase have been made in "consensus" with the SGA leadership.

While the Undergraduate Student Senate controls the allocation of trust fund monies to the Registered Student Organizations, the actual administration of the funds is often controlled by administrators from the Student Activities Office. This relationship is not always a clear one, according to Brainerd.

The SATF fee is currently $112.50 a year for full-time undergraduates. In total, the SATF is worth slightly less than $5 million, according to University officials.

Newnan said the only other scenario under which he would support the increase would be in the event that there would be more money available to Registered Student Organizations and not simply to maintain the current level of professional employees.

Brainerd noted that the Student Activities Office, which is currently operating without a director or an assistant, is in the process of examining its mission and that all current staff are needed to maintain the current level of activities and services.

"A lot of people have had to double up on jobs and everybody is getting worn out," Brainerd said.

SGA President Jen Wood noted that "everyone agrees we need to save money," and that differences arise over the best way to do this.

"We need to sustain our activities level, and if we have to keep professional employees to do that, we have to," Wood said. "But too much of the activies fee goes to administrative costs. . . and we are dead set against a fee that increases every year."

Wood also said the SGA and the University administration are also looking to find other sources of revenue to support student groups, including hiring a grant writer to write proposals to various foundations and other organizations, encouraging RSOs to look to private companies to donate equipment and having RSOs fundraise through parents.

Long lines at Whitmore mark semester opening

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Long lines are becoming synonymous with registration at the University of Massachusetts. Unmailed bills, financial aid forms and misplaced housing assignments all lengthened the lines that blocked the halls of Whitmore on Monday.

Many of the students flooding into Whitmore took one look at the lines for the Bursar's office, and walked out exasperated.

Chuck Mattera, a freshman from John Quincy Adams Residence Hall, waited in a half hour line to change his meal plan. He started out in another room, but was eventually sent to the Bursar's office. He remained optimistic through the wait.

There were a few people with serious problems. Clemence Wilson, a freshman marketing major, said she waited for a half hour in one line, only to be told that she was in the wrong line.

"I've been waiting a long time," she said, "the University never sent me a bill, and now I have to wait in line to pay it."

At the Financial Aid Office, there was also slow going. Jenn Sanchez, a sophomore nursing major, was at the end of the line.

"They should have more people working," she said. "People shouldn't have to wait this long."

The Housing Assignment office was unusually quiet, due to the fact that yesterday was move-in day, and most of the problems were solved at that time.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
A student's bill for the spring semester at UMass.

The Work Study Office was crowded with students looking for extra cash during the semester. Counselors were behind the desk to help students find positions in campus jobs.

Mike Michalski, a junior English major, was the receptionist at the Information Desk. Many students stopped by to ask for directions and advice.

"Everything should be on the touch tone system, it would make things much easier," said Michalski. He also said the mood of the building was hectic, and most of the students were frustrated by the lines they faced.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Students waited in long lines on Monday outside the Bursar's Office to resolve last-minute difficulties, pay their bills and whatever else they needed to do to attend school this spring.

Ever wondered what it would be like to live in the basement of a big, gray building on a state university campus?
See the Amazing Basement Dwellers!
Learn their history! Join them!
The Collegian. 113 Campus Center.

WHY PAY FULL PRICE FOR TEXTS?
Shop Atticus first--we have many discounted texts and used paperbacks!

Basic Psychology	3rd ed. by Gleitman	New $39.95
Chemistry	4th ed. by Chang	New $54.95
Cultural and Social Anthropology	by Murphy	Used $21.95
Democracy by Default	by Edie	Used $19.95
Broadcasting in America	6th ed. by Head, Sterling	Used $34.95
Extraordinary Chemistry of Ordinary Things	by Snyder	Used $37.50
Inquiry into Physics	2nd ed. by Ostdiek, Board	New $44.95
In the Shadow of the Sun	by Deere	Used $9.00
Life-The Science of Biology	3rd ed. by Purves, Orians, Heller	New $53.95
Management	3rd ed. by Robbins	Used $38.95
Marketing	3rd ed. by Berkowitz, Kerin, Hartley, Rudelius	Used $42.95
Poor and the Powerless	by Thomas	Used $9.00

Many More Titles in stock--quantaties are limited so shop early!
ATTICUS A world of reading Since 109 BC
Atticus/Albion Bookshop
8 Main St. Amherst

"Don't Look Like A Ghost, Look Your Most!"
TANNING
at Carol's Headquarters
Intro Special: 8 Sessions for $29.95
115 Russell St. • Rt.9 Hadley • 584-9948

Council Travel
LONDON FRANKFURT PARIS SYDNEY TOKYO AMSTERDAM AUCKLAND HONG KONG
CHEAPEST FARES TO:
•EUROPE •ASIA
•AUSTRALIA/ NEW ZEALAND
Plus rail passes, international student ID, tours & much more.
Ask for our FREE travel catalog!
79 South Pleasant St. AMHERST
(413) 256-1261

Super Specials for the Superbowl at Scotts!
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692
Miller Genuine Draft Reg/Light $6.99 + dep. 12-12 oz. bottles
Gordon's Vodka $6.99 750 ml
Natural Light 1/2 Keg $32.99
Budweiser Reg or Light $11.99 24-12 oz. cans
Jack Daniels Whiskey $11.49 750 ml
Jose Cuervo Tequila w/FREE Margarita Mix $11.99 750 ml
No Permit Required to purchase Kegs
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS

Student constitution on burner

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association's attempts to have its constitution officially recognized by the University have reached their furthest point in the past 20 years, according to student leaders.

The Undergraduate Student Senate voted last December to ratify a new version of its constitution, which eventually must be passed by the University's Board of Trustees.

The constitution has also been ratified by the University's five area governments, and must be passed by a campus-wide referendum during the President-Trustee elections in March. SGA President Jen Wood said the process by which the constitution will be presented to the campus as a whole is still unclear.

"Students should know what they are voting on," Wood said. "I don't like a student government without dissent."

The significance of the constitution, according to Student Trustee Kevin Newnan, is that it will provide a greater weight to student votes on such as issues as tuition and fee increases.

"The movement to recognize the constitution represented a greater willingness on the part of the administration to give students a seat at the table," Newnan said. "In the past, when the idea of recognizing student government came up, the administration always found a way around it."

Newnan said issues such as last spring's takeover of the Whitmore Administration building by students demanding the University make a stronger commitment to multiculturalism have made administrators realize students must be given a greater role in determining university policy.

Wood said another reason the constitution has made further progress than at any time in the past 20 years is that members of the Undergraduate Student Senate have made a commitment to getting the constitution recognized.

"There's a real spirit of cooperation — people understand why this is important," Wood said. "People are becoming more willing to make compromises."

Newnan said the constitution was based largely upon that of UMass-Boston.

The 1973 Wellman Document, which concerns the Board of Trustee's policy on University Governance, outlines the process under which SGA leaders are working to amend the constitution.

The document states that governing bodies, such as the SGA, have "the privilege of recommending policies and procedures affecting the campus and the University as a whole" on matters of academics, faculty status and student affairs.

Such groups can also, under certain conditions, contribute to long-range planning, preparing the University's annual budget request, and the allocation of available resources.

Although Newnan and Wood said they are both hopeful that the constitution will be passed during this semester, they are both realistic about the situation.

"It's not something I feel like we need to rush through just so I can say it was something I did during my term as trustee," Newnan said.

Wood said she "won't be surprised" if the constitution must be presented to the Trustees more than once for final passage.

Student readers needed to aid sight impaired

By EVELYN A. DE JESUS
Collegian Staff

Approximately 95 percent of the visually impaired students at the University of Massachusetts who end up dropping classes do so because the textbooks they need are not available for them, according to a University official.

That is why the office of Disability Services is looking for volunteer readers to read to visually impaired students. This volunteer position would take no more than one hour a day, according to Madeline L. Peters, assistant director for Disability Services.

Peters said part of her job involves obtaining appropriate textbooks for visually impaired students.

Peters said what she usually does is call Recording for the Blind, a nonprofit organization in Princeton, New Jersey that records books on tape for the visually impaired and the learning disabled, to see if they have the book available on tape.

If the book is not available, she said she tries to look for a volunteer, preferably a student from the same class, to read them their textbook or tape it for them.

Peters said the demand for readers has increased in recent years and that she has at least 10 students "who depend on "readers to be able to do their school work.

She also said that professors sometimes assign copy packages without a bibliography. This sometimes turns out to be a problem to the visually impaired students because they often cannot find the original book on tape. Most of the times professors are not aware of that, she said.

On the other hand, she suggested that professors try to cooperate with the students in whatever they might need.

Bub's southern neighbor a bust

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Nearly everyone is familiar with Bub's Barbecue in Sunderland, home of the sizzling meat, all-you-can eat side dishes, free juke box and gallons of tangy barbecue sauce, but not so many are aware that Howard "Bub" Tiley's restaurant has a floundering identical twin in Orlando Fla.

The Florida restaurant has the same name, the same wooden tables with rolls of paper towels, the same all-you-can-eat format, and of course the same barbecue sauce.

According to Tiley, the only thing that's missing is the customers.

"Business is not very good," said Tiley at his Florida winter home. "I think it's just the economy, but if it keeps going like this, they probably won't stay in business."

The franchise is one of two built about two years ago. The other, located in Connecticut, went out of business shortly afterwards.

Tiley said the Sunderland restaurant is the only one that seems to thrive, and he does not plan to open any more restaurants.

"I don't really want to get further into the franchise business," he said.

The one business venture Tiley said he does have an interest in is possibly marketing his famous sauce, to which he attributes Bub's success.

"I think it's really the sauce that made the place," he said.

Tiley declined, however, to comment on specific plans for selling his sauce.

The Collegian is looking for news writers!
Interested students should contact Jason George, News Editor, at 113 Campus Center for more information.

Work for the Collegian
Business, News, Graphics
There's something for everyone.
Try us.
113 Campus Center
545-3500

SHOOT for the Collegian!
Ask for Matt in 113 Campus Center for more info.

The Best in Test Prep!
• MCAT • LSAT • GRE • GMAT
New Location: 150 Fearing Street
549-5780
KAPLAN
The answer to the test question

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?
Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.
UMass and You – a winning team!
Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)
UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!
Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)
Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)
Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

■ Mullins Center

continued from page 1

Ogden Entertainment Services Corporation to maintain and manage the Mullins Center, which officials said will cost approximately $151,200 a year. Ogden runs the Meadowlands Complex in East Rutherford, New Jersey (home of the NBA's New Jersey Nets and NFL's New York Giants), the Palace at Auburn Hills, Michigan (home of the Detroit Pistons) and the Great Western Forum (home of the L.A. Lakers and Kings).

Lee Esckilsen, executive director of the Mullins Center, said Ogden's philosophy is the same as the University's.

"We are not just here to make money," Esckilsen said. "We realize there is a revenue deficit inherent in the building. Ogden's job is to keep it low as possible."

"We are being asked to use our expertise and experience," Esckilsen said. "In addition to basketball and hockey, we plan to bring in and run top-flight events and to work with UPC, and the HRTA and Sport Management departments to maximize their potential."

The Mullins Center has already lined up a potpourri of five-star events, including the Harlem Globetrotters, Jesus Christ Superstar, the rock group Metallica, and the Ice Capades. Esckilsen said the Center will hold 9,493 for basketball, a little less for hockey, and approximately 3,200 for theater events.

The biggest potential problem that has been raised is the lack of parking around the Mullins Center. Esckilsen said he thinks things will work out fine.

"For sporting events, you're dealing with 1,200 to 1,500 cars, which at night isn't going to be easy finding parking for everybody," he said. We'll probably end up doing some sort of a shuttle bus system from the different lots around the campus.

"Whenever you go into a building to see an event with 8,000 to 10,000 coming and leaving at the same time, no building in the country can get away without traffic," Esckilsen said. "That's the nature of the activity, and hopefully people will be patient and understanding."

The traffic study done by the BSC Group of Boston was completed last week, although many question still remain. The plan recommends limiting traffic to major roads such as Rte. 9 and 116, supplying traffic information to each ticket buyer, and partially barricading Massachusetts Ave. after events.

Officials said one of the saving graces of the Mullins Center is the fact that thousands of on-campus students will attend many of the events, opting to walk instead of driving to the Center.

The solar power heating system, which was in the original plans for construction, is not yet ready, according to Esckilsen.

News Roundup

compiled by Jason George

Construction Projects Cover Campus

The University of Massachusetts physical plant will be engaging in a dozen major construction between March and August 1993, several of which will limit access on the campus.

Among the highlights will be the installation of a steam tunnel between the polymer science building and the power plant between May 15 and early October. The project will cost approximately $2 million.

The cost of the programs will be an estimated $7 million. Funding will come from an increase in state allocations to the University from the Legislature as well as funds gained from tuition retention, according to campus officials.

Work to replace the steam line between Thompson Hall between the Photo Center and Dickinson Hall is scheduled to begin on March 15. The estimated cost is $800,000.

Eastman Lane will be rebuilt from North Pleasant Street to East Pleasant Street, which will involve utility repair and road work. Landscaping and site condition improvement between Durfee Conservatory and French Hall may cause delays along Thatcher Way.

In March, work to dismantle, remove, and replace the 20-year-old cooling tower at Whitmore to provide chilled water for air conditioning is scheduled.

Finally, during the summer, new roofs are scheduled to be installed on the School of Management building, Hills House, Old Hasbrouck, Morrill Science Greenhouse, Hampshire Dining Common and Patterson Residence Hall.

Vice Chancellor Search on hold

The University of Massachusetts is temporarily putting the search for a vice chancellor for university relations and development on hold after the candidate recommended by the on-campus search committee declined the position.

The search committee had recommended Norman Arkans, who is currently assistant vice chancellor for university relations at the University of Washington. Arkans declined the position after his wife, an English professor at Washington, was offered an endowed chair.

Chancellor Richard O'Brien said he felt it would be appropriate to leave the resumption of the search to his successor since he will be leaving office on June 30.

Daniel Melley has served as vice chancellor on an interim basis since March 1990, when Deidre Ling left the position to become head of the Middlesex School in Concord. Melley has agreed to continue in the position at least until the end of June.

Chemical Engineering in Top 25 Worldwide

A recent study by the Institute for Scientific Information ranked the University of Massachusetts chemical engineering department 19th worldwide among the top 25 universities for 1992.

The ranking was based on the number of times its faculty members were cited in academic journals.

Faculty from the chemical engineering department published 117 papers and received citations 451 times, for an average of 3.85 citations per paper, which was the study noted was more than twice the national average.

Mullins Open House to help United Way

Visitors to the Jan. 31 open house at the Mullins Center will have the opportunity to help out the United Way.

At the open house, which will be held from noon to 5 p.m., volunteers from the Hampshire Community United Way will be asking for donations to help pay for programs to feed and shelter the homeless, protect women and children from abuse, and provide health care for the elderly.

USTRAVEL
at the Campus Center
Your Travel Planning Specialist
Spring Break Packages
CANCUN
Special UMASS Group Rates and Departures:
Departures from Boston
Limited Space Left
Other Destinations Available:
Don't Miss Out! Stop In Soon & Book!
545-1700 • 545-2900
GWV International

C A V
Motors
"Ask About our Student Discounts"
AUTO BODY & PAINTING
USED CAR SALES
12 Russell St. RT. 9
584-7139
Hadley, MA

Yesterday's Gone, Yesterday's Gone...
As we ring in a new era with the swearing in of the first baby boomer President, this filler space will attempt to remain as unbiased as we possibly can while still saying...
Say good night, George!

Come In For The Most "Super" Savings Around!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEER WINE LIQUORS

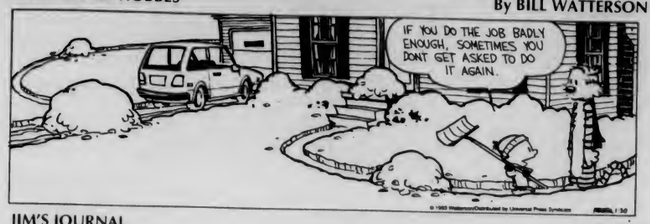
MILLER LITE $11.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT $9.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT & LIGHT $12.49 + DEP. CASE 2-12 PK. BOTTLES
BECKS BEER $15.99 + DEP. CASE 2-12 PK. BOTTLES
O'DOULS (NON-ALCOHOLIC) $6.49 + DEP. 12 PK. CAN
KOCH'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY $7.29 + DEP. 24-12 OZ. SUITCASE CANS

GALLO WINES CHABLIS, RHINE, PINK CHABLIS, RED ROSE, FRENCH COLOMBARD, CHENIN BLANC, BLUSH, BURGUNDY $6.49 3.0L
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO $5.99 750 ML
SEBASTIANI PROPRIETOR'S WHITE ZINFANDEL $5.49 1.5L
R.H. PHILLIPS CHARDONNAY $4.99 750 ML
BARTLES & JAYMES WINE COOLERS (ALL FLAVORS) 4 PK $1.99 AFTER REBATE
SALE 2.99 MAIL IN REBATE 1.00

GORDON'S VODKA $9.99 1.75L
SALE 11.99 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 AFTER REBATE
BURNETT'S GIN $9.99 1.75L
SALE 11.99 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 AFTER REBATE
CANADIAN CLUB $15.99 1.75L
CASTILLO SPICED RUM $4.29 750 ML AFTER REBATE
SALE 6.29 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00
J&B SCOTCH $24.99 1.75L

not responsible for typographical errors VISA MasterCard
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 1/28/93 THRU WEDS. 2/3/93
Full Redemption Center

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

Today's Staff

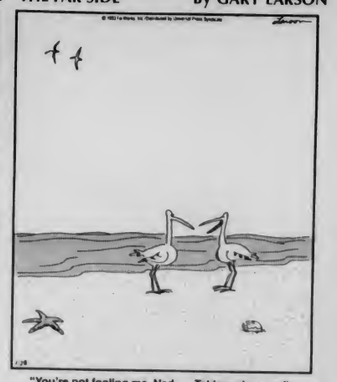
Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Jason George
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Mike Carvalho, Seth Kaye

There will be a meeting for all returning graphics staff, day and night, at 6:00 tonight in the Graphics room.

Any people wishing to apply for either department should come at 6:30 to 105 Campus Center.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



"You're not fooling me, Ned. ... Taking a long walk on the beach sounds romantic, but I know you're just looking for crustaceans."

Quote of the Day

"That he did the best he could with what he had."

– Justice Thurgood Marshall (1908–1993) on how he wished to be remembered

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Buckle down to work this morning if hoping to leave the office early today. You can do a lot for a friend who is feeling lost and confused. Offer positive reinforcement.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Although your work performance is excellent, you will make fewer mistakes if you take an occasional break. A friend brings sunshine into your life. Celebrate being together.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not press influential people to accept your ideas. Once you back off a bit, they will come around. Skip romance and stick to platonic relationships.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An opportunity to travel is on the horizon. Domestic matters still require careful treatment. You are adroit at handling conflict and can smooth over any ruffled feathers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An old project can be recycled to make new profits. An addition to your present domicile could be the best answer to pinched quarters. Seek loans but avoid a high-powered salesperson's pitch.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Member of the opposite sex may insist that you make a commitment. A commonsense approach helps you maintain your emotional balance. Refuse to be rushed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make decisions only after careful deliberation. A lack of attention to detail could prove costly. Devote more effort to your appearance. Postpone tasks that can be handled later.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Collect information and value it highly. Others may try to get you to part with certain data. Do so only at a fair price.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Limit your spending to necessities. A hunch that comes to you at the last minute could pay off handsomely. An aggressive person is in your corner and will promote your best interests.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Coax secrets out into the open. Be prepared to accept new responsibilities. Getting involved in the schemes of your friends or relatives would be a mistake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Self-restraint is needed to conquer a professional or personal problem. Choose your words carefully in written or verbal communications. Do not underestimate another person's determination.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may find a certain poem or song inspirational. Trust your intuition when exploring an unfamiliar area. A telephone call is not only encouraging but gives you much needed information.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

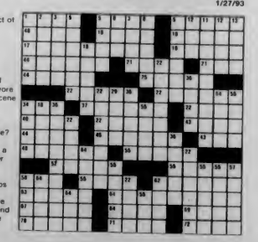
ACROSS
1 So long, in Sri
5 New Jersey team
9 A Ford
14 Actor Baldwin
15 To be, in Paris
16 Christopher of "Superman"
17 Russian bovine?
19 Mountain ash
20 Deliriumed
21 — vu
23 "Have you — wood?"
24 Smallest amount
25 Discourage
27 Wooden shoe
31 Footballer Herschel
34 Silent Pres
37 Old French dance
39 Lessen
40 Melee
42 Tibet's neighbor
43 Fine or Liberal
44 Pavlova
45 Teen-off
47 Krazy —
48 Asian object of worship
50 Summer TV fare
52 Type of orange
54 Claw
58 Grain beard
60 Persian of yore
62 Make the scene
63 Start of a familiar palindrome
65 Polish adage?
67 "– Mio"
68 Writer's from a crystal gazer
69 Dir. —Attenuser
70 More composed
71 River into the Gulf of Finland
72 Give the eye

DOWN
1 Dravidian language
2 Unaccompanied
3 Seed coat
4 Way in
5 Salamander
6 List ender
7 Stopped
8 Used a needle
9 Printing mistakes
10 Vintage car
11 Jersey boat?
12 "The Terrible"
13 Counting-out word
18 Ready for one
22 Gem expert
26 Island in a palindrome
28 Cover a cut
29 Finished
30 Nocturnal ungulate
32 Miss Hart
33 What's left
34 Ill-tempered one
35 Japanese aboriginal
36 English tutor?
38 The transept crosses it
41 Tiny amounts
46 Dialogue of 48 Across
49 Tool kit item
51 Arctic cetacean
53 Dickens' Dread
55 Type of cotton thread
56 Like Humpty Dumpty
57 Just out
58 Andy's sidekick
59 "I — Teenage Werewolf"
61 Facility
62 On the briny
64 Pub order
66 Gun the motor

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	H	E	M	C	U	L	L	S		M	E	T
B	A	R	E	O	N	T	O	P		E	R	A
E	V	E		S	T	I	N	G		S	I	K
D	E	C	O	R	A	T	E		P	A	I	L
			R	U	N	N	E	R
S	W	A	Y	E	D		M	O	D	E	R	E
P	I	N		D	E	T	E	R		D	I	N
A	D	D		A	R	O	S	E		S	A	T
T	E	E	N	S		A	N	E	W		S	T
E	N	S		L	A	G		A	N	G	L	E
		E	L	E	C	T		S	P	I	N
P	L	A	I	D		E	L	A	T	E		A
G	O	S	H		S	L	A	T	E		W	E
O	N	E		S	E	N	D	E	R		L	A
S	P	E	D		S	E	N	S	E		U	E

1/27/93



SUPER BOWL SUNDAY

Super Sunday at the Top

Plenty of TV coverage, including the BIG SCREEN

FREE! Pretzels, Nachos, Popcorn
While they last!
orders from the Munchie menu also available

Drink Specials
and of course
Miller Genuine Pitchers $4.25
Sam Adams Draft $1.45

Starting at 4:00 pm Sun. Jan 31st only at

The TOC

Hatch Bar Super Party

New BIG SCREEN TV

Pre Game Party begins at 5 pm
Kick-off at 6:15

Free Munchies
Beer Pitchers $3.50
Drink Specials
and a special $2.00 Half-Time Buffet:

Pasta with Marinara Sauce
Garlic Bread
Garden Salad

only at

the Hatch Bar

Sports Bar & Lounge Ground Floor Student Union

SUPER STOP & SHOP
VIDEO CENTER

HADLEY SUPER STOP & SHOP
456 Russell Street
Hadley, Ma 01035

★ We have over 9,000 movie titles on VHS available for rent.
Ask any clerk for details.

★ We have over 550 Nintendo, Super NES and Sega Genesis Video Games available for rent.

Join us for
BACK TO SCHOOL
MIDNIGHT MADNESS
ALL MOVIE AND VIDEO GAME RENTALS
69¢
* Plus a FREE prize with each rental
Saturday, February 6, 1993 between 11 p.m. & midnight only
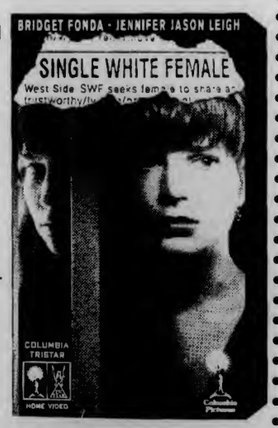
*While supplies last

★NOW SHOWING★

- Bridget Fonda and Jennifer Jason Leigh star in this acclaimed thriller about a woman whose roomate "borrows" her clothes, her boyfriend... and her life.
- A stylish and chilling psychological shocker powered by electrifying performances.



© 1992 Columbia TriStar Home Video

The '93 checklist to a hipper, hotter you

By CUTTER GARCIA
Collegian Staff

This month magazines everywhere will be filled with the trendy "In/Out" lists that Americans love so dearly. These lists are very important because they let us, the ignorant public, know what things we should think are cool and what things we should think are lame. It's a service, helping lead the lemmings down the road of social acceptance.

In this "Back-to-School Extravaganza," we've decided to fill you in on what's on the rise for '93 and what's coming down quicker than the Challenger.

I spoke to students to get their opinion on trends and styles, entertainment and culture, school and work, food and sex. It's everything the cool college student needs to know to survive in '93. They even let me throw in a few of my own to keep me happy.

It's hard to be cool, but if you just follow these directions (cut out this list, tape it to your fridge, memorize it, surrender your individuality, follow along blindly with the greatest majority and succumb to my will), my job here will be complete.

Don't laugh! Parachute pants and the Michael Jackson "V" jackets were on an "IN" list in '83, and look how many of us that harmed. I've still got some friends in therapy over it.

IN: Hiking Boots
OUT: Birkenstocks
IN: General Hospital
OUT: Santa Barbara
IN: History 491A — "History of the Kennedys Through Film"
OUT: Forced language requirements imposed upon selected majors
IN: Nikki Taylor
OUT: Cindy Crawford and the other overexposed supermodels
IN: CBS and David Letterman
OUT: NBC and Jay Leno
IN: Eating in the D.C.'s, even if you live off campus
OUT: Surviving on Ramen Pride and Microwave Popcorn
IN: Freedom of choice
OUT: Big Brother
IN: Seinfeld
OUT: The Jackie Thomas Show
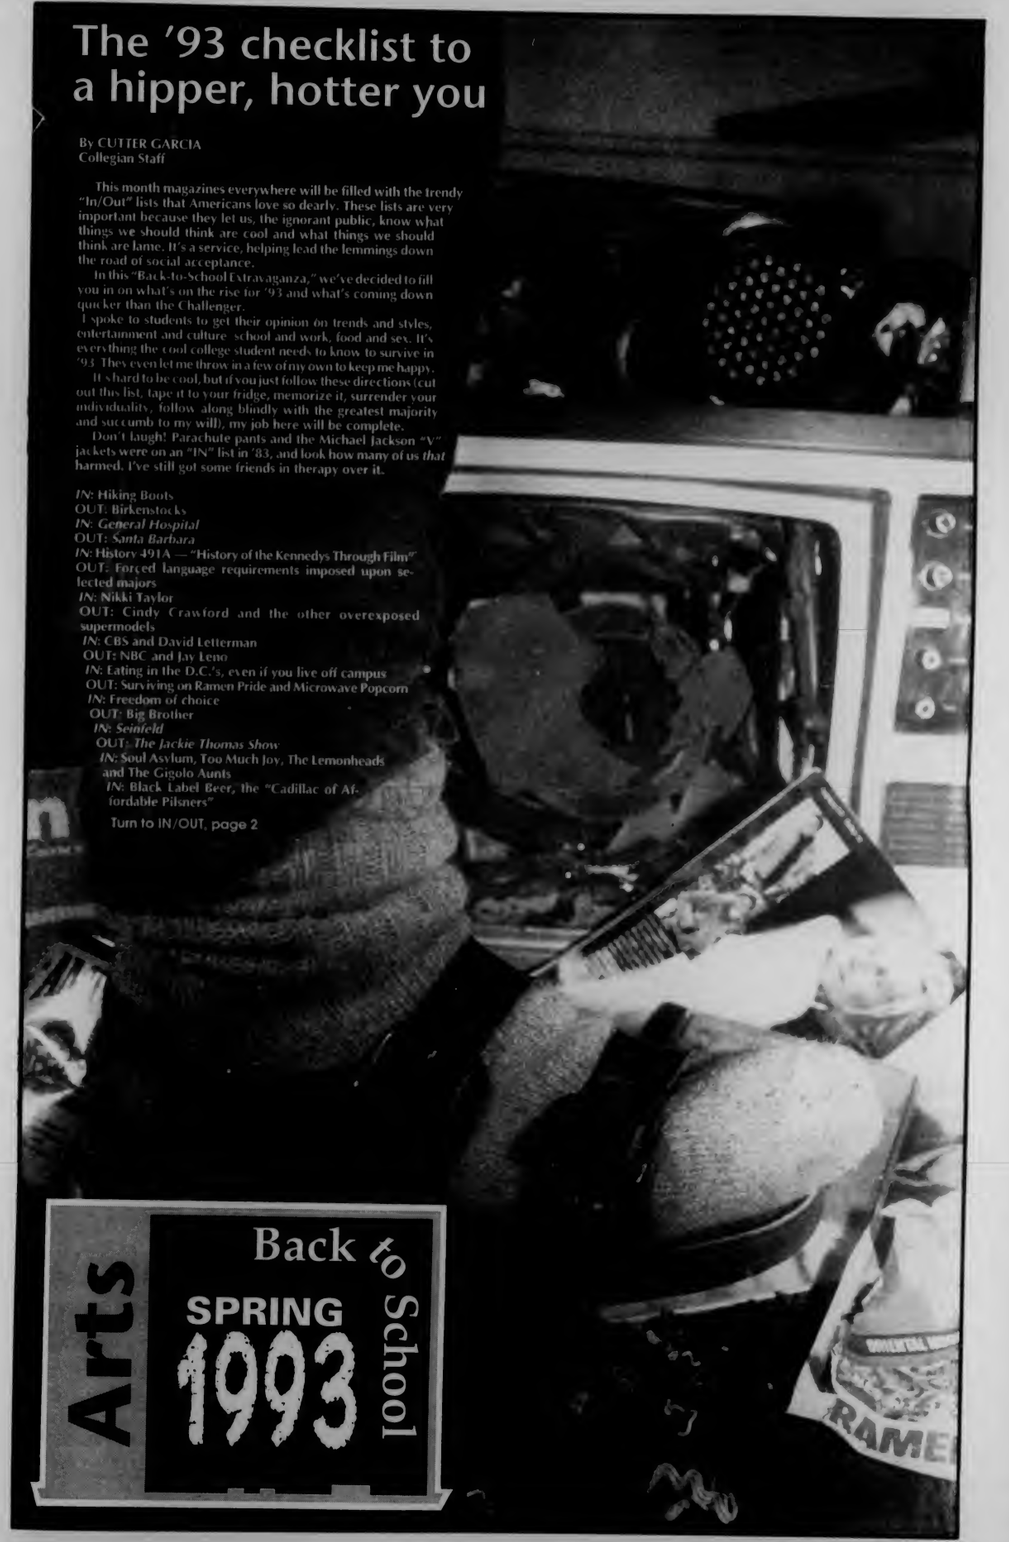
IN: Soul Asylum, Too Much Joy, The Lemonheads and The Gigolo Aunts
IN: Black Label Beer, the "Cadillac of Affordable Pilsners"

Turn to IN/OUT, page 2



COVER PHOTO BY JOSH REYNOLDS

■ What's In, What's Out

continued from page 1

OUT: American, the "Challenger" of Shuttle Butt beers
IN: Pot, maryjane, el wacko tobacco
OUT: Night Train and Thunderbird
IN: Slick Willie and the eternal tree hugger
OUT: The only good excuse the leftist liberals had for crying, a damn fine American, George Herbert Walker Bush
IN: Amherst College Library (plenty of needed resources)
OUT: Tower Library (never the books you need)
IN: Disney cartoon movies
OUT: Any film with Madonna. In fact, anything with Madonna
IN: The Gap
OUT: J. Crew
IN: The Mullins Sports Arena and an overdue expanded athletics program
OUT: The Cage and frustrated fans who've waited for the growth of sports
IN: "White Linen" by Esteé Lauder for women, "Eternity" for men by Calvin Klein
OUT: "Poison" for women by Christian Dior, "Drakkar" for men
IN: Writing for the Collegian
OUT: Bitching about issues without first putting forth an effort to help change them
IN: Paying cash
OUT: Using plastic
IN: Designated drivers
OUT: 10 to 20 for Vehicular Manslaughter
IN: Saved by the Bell
OUT: Beverly Hills 90210 (Especially Brenda)
IN: Andrew Shue
OUT: Luke Perry (He can hang out with Jordan and the other New Kids now)
IN: Women asking men out on dates
OUT: Grovelling like dogs and being nervous she'll say "no"
IN: Masturbation
OUT: Lying about it
IN: Health-conscious people
OUT: Smoking and dipping
IN: Tension-filled first kisses in private
OUT: Sloppy public displays of affection
IN: The Bruins
OUT: The Pats and Mac (we'll miss you, pal)
IN: Romance, including wooing, mystery and love letters
OUT: The one night slam (although I must say I'm still holding out for this one)
IN: Spring Break
OUT: of your mind while you're there
IN: The sun and Southwest beach
OUT: The cold and dressing in layers
IN: Antonio's
OUT: Townfolk who want to ruin a good time for everyone by making the majority pay for the mistakes of a very small minority
IN: Appreciating students and the revenues they generate
OUT: Hating students, yet still accepting their money
IN: The Big Band sound and the balladeers
OUT: Thrash metal
IN: Bernadette Peters in The Goodbye Girl
OUT: Debbie Gibson in Les Miserables
IN: Key West
OUT: Panama City
IN: Effective protests with meaning and purpose
OUT: Taking over buildings to change the names of holidays
IN: Equality of the sexes
OUT: Women getting out of speeding tickets because they cry
IN: Men trying the same trick
OUT: of the car and smacked around by the cop for doing so
IN: Dogs, because they'll love you no matter what you do
OUT: Cats, because they only love the person who can use the can opener
IN: Condoms
OUT: safely
IN: Tolerance
OUT: Small mindedness
IN: Student loans
OUT: of the country after I graduate
IN: Reading the Collegian
OUT: Complaining about freedom of speech
IN: Short, suave reporters for the Collegian Arts and Living section
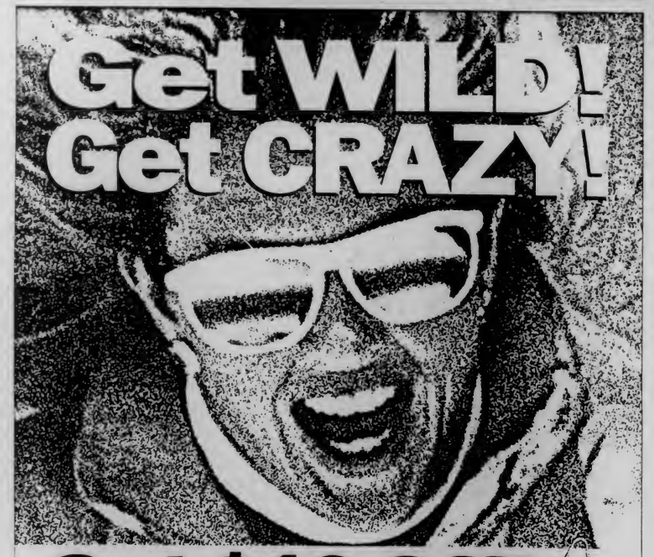
OUT: Tall, 'roid-raged hard guys who drive IROCs and wear B.U.M. Equipment clothes

There you have it. A sampling of the trends which should be sweeping the campus any moment. The most important thing to remember is that no matter how much you may disagree with my findings, I have compiled them through careful research and meticulous attention to detail. Your voices have been heard.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
The Ins and Outs of '93

Buy One Grinder, Get Second for 1/2 Price*
* Equal or Lesser Value
KRETE
Family Restaraunt & Pizza
FREE DELIVERY
Ask about our Daily Specials
586-8255
331 Russel St. • Rt. 9 Hadley
Buy One Pizza, Get Second for 1/2 Price*, plus Free Greek Tossed Salad
* Equal or Lesser Value

Get WILD! Get CRAZY!


Get $10 Off!
Stratton has a lower price for anyone pursuing a higher education. $24 midweek. $29 weekends. $34 holidays. So you can save $10 every day but holidays (when you'll still save $5), and you'll also get up to 92 exciting trails, a 12-passenger gondola, plus all the extracurricular fun you can handle. Now, how's that for financial aid?
Current and identifiably valid college photo ID required at time of purchase. If your college ID has no photo, please provide other photo ID. Sorry — no pix, no tix.
Stratton VERMONT COLLEGE DISCOUNT

LOTS for LITTLES
TOYS · BOOKS · MUSIC
Plus new and recycled CHILDREN'S CLOTHING
Consignments (413) 256-6823
201 N. Pleasant Amherst, Mass. 01002
Voted Best Toystore in the Valley
1992 Advocate Reader's Poll

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Boxercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

UMass Music Dept. celebrates 25th anniversary

Event samples diverse works by faculty

By SARAH LEVESQUE
Collegian Staff

Variety, balloons, and sweet melodies entice all to come celebrate the 25th anniversary of the UMass Music Department's accreditation at a gala showcase of faculty talent Saturday, January 30 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Twenty-five accomplished artists from the department will perform various works ranging from "serious virtuosity to farce." Works from Chopin, Grieg, Saint-Saens and Verdi will be featured, as well as jazz pieces.

Soloists and ensembles will perform using every instrument from the human voice to the flute, from the horn to the piano, in commemoration of the music department's 25 years of accreditation by the National Association of Schools of Music as an official School of Music.

"We are delighted to be able to present this extraordinary roster of artists," said Department Chair Ernest May. "Listeners will have the opportunity to enjoy their favorite department performers, while helping raise scholarship funds to enable talented students to attend the University." Proceeds from the showcase will benefit the Friends of Music scholarship fund.

The audience will enjoy a lengthy roster of performing artists including pianist Nigel Coxe playing Gershwin, Laura Klock playing the horn, soprano Paulina Stark and tenor Jon Humphrey singing duets from Verdi's La Traviata, and Jeff Holmes and Fred Tillis doing jazz improvisations.

Professor Laura Klock, who will play Franz Strauss' Nocturne on the horn, says the event is an excellent introduction to the faculty of the music department.

"This is a good chance to hear a broad range of types of music, a kind of sampler program with a little something for everyone. It's a chance to see the best of what we do," said Klock, who has performed throughout the eastern United States and has toured in America and the British Virgin Islands.

Reserved seats in orchestra rows A-K are $12 ($10 for students, elders and children). All other seats of Bowker Auditorium are $8/$6. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or at the door. All audience members are invited to a post-concert reception in the Campus Center Auditorium.

COURTESY DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC & DANCE
Laura Klock will perform on the horn in the UMass Music Department's 25th Anniversary Faculty Showcase concert on Saturday, Jan. 30 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium at UMass.

COURTESY DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC & DANCE
Jeff Holmes will jazz up the 25th Anniversary Showcase on the piano and trumpet.

the Collegian's
ARTS & LIVING
section is looking for writers.
Seek out Jon or Lisa in the Collegian newsroom if interested.
113 Campus Center

SPRING BREAK A BUST?
NOT WITH THIS BOOK!

There's more to Florida than just Ft. Lauderdale and Daytona Beach. Now the state's number one travel-writing team presents 22 of the Best of the Best vacation beaches. From the powder-white sands of the Pensacola panhandle to the beautiful Barrier Islands, the hot clubs of South Beach to the coral reefs of the Keys, FLORIDA'S BEST BEACH VACATIONS has all the essential information on motels • condos • restaurants • night life • snack bars • boat rentals • restrooms • gift shops • parking • picnic areas • lifeguards • special events • water sports and much, much more!
$13.00, paper, now at your bookstore, or to order by phone call 1-800-733-3000.
Clarkson Potter/Publishers The sign of a beautiful gift

Mr. Lupo's slams and praises of the films of '92

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

By the time you read this, every critic and their mother will have thrown in their two cents on 1992's best and worst in movies. But with the Golden Globes already presented and the Oscar campaigns in full swing, there's still some time to present some final Best and Worst thoughts on the year's movies.

BEST MOVIE: Hands down, Malcolm X.

WORST MOVIE: Cool World. RUNNERS UP: Ready? The Bodyguard, Toys, Christopher Columbus: The Discovery, Medicine Man, Hoffa, Consenting Adults, Whispers in the Dark, Unlawful Entry, White Sands, A Stranger Among Us and Man Trouble.

BEST ACTOR: Denzel Washington, Malcolm X. RUNNERS UP: Jack Lemmon, Glengarry Glen Ross; Tim Robbins, The Player; Harvey Keitel, Bad Lieutenant; John Malkovich, Of Mice and Men.

WORST ACTOR: Keanu Reeves, Dracula. RUNNERS UP: Danny DeVito, Batman Returns; Jack Nicholson, Man Trouble and Hoffa; Michael Douglas, Basic Instinct.

BEST ACTRESS: Emma Thompson, Howards End. RUNNERS UP: Susan Sarandon, Lorenzo's Oil; Jaye Davidson The Crying Game; Tilda Swinton, Edward II; Sigourney Weaver, Alien 3.

COURTESY WARNER BROTHERS

Melanie Griffith, shown here in her role as Maria Ruskin in The Bonfire of the Vanities, is the worst actress of 1992 in Mr. Lupo's annual film critique.

WORST ACTRESS: Melanie Griffith, Shining Through and A Stranger Among Us. RUNNERS UP: Lorraine Bracco (doing a Melanie Griffith impersonation?), Medicine Man; Annabella Sciorra, Whispers in the Dark; Ellen Barkin, Man Trouble.

BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR: Jack Nicholson, A Few Good Men. RUNNERS UP: Gene Hackman, Unforgiven; Alec Baldwin and Al Pacino, Glengarry Glen Ross; Brad Pitt, A River Runs Through It; Al Freeman, Jr., Malcolm X; Gary Sinise, A Midnight Clear and Of Mice and Men.

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS: Judy Davis, Husbands and Wives and Where Angels Fear to Tread. RUNNERS UP: Michelle Pfeiffer, Batman Returns; Miranda Richardson, The Crying Game; Marisa Tomei, My Cousin Vinny; Shabana Azmi, City of Joy.

BEST DIRECTOR: Spike Lee, Malcolm X. RUNNERS UP: Robert Altman, The Player; Neil Jordan, The Crying Game; Woody Allen, Husbands and Wives; Tim Robbins, Bob Roberts; James Ivory, Howards End.

WORST DIRECTOR: Danny DeVito, Hoffa. RUNNERS UP: Penny Marshall, A League of Their Own; Ralph Bakshi, Cool World; John McTiernan, Medicine Man; Woody Allen, Shadows and Fog; Richard Donner, Radio Flyer; Roland Joffe, City of Joy.

FUNNIEST MOVIE (intentional): Wayne's World. RUNNERS UP: Housesitter; Honeymoon in Vegas; Bob Roberts.

FUNNIEST MOMENTS (unintentional): The ear of corn as a murder weapon in Sleepwalkers; Wynona Ryder opens her eyes after she's supposed to be dead in Bram Stoker's Dracula; Alan Alda goes wacko in the last ten minutes in Whispers in the Dark; Patrick Swayze assists in a breech birth in a leper colony in City of Joy (trust me, you had to be there); Rebecca De Mornay warns the disabled handyman in The Hand That Rocks the Cradle; the cheesy Academy Awards recreation in The Bodyguard, and all of Shining Through.

BEST ROMANCE: Stephen Rea and Jaye Davidson, The Crying Game. RUNNERS UP: Steven Waddington and Andrew Tiernan, Edward II; Sarah Jessica Parker and Nicholas Cage, Honeymoon in Vegas; Steve Martin and Goldie Hawn, Housesitter.

WORST ROMANCE: Kevin Costner and Whitney Houston (it's called chemistry, guys), The Bodyguard. RUNNERS UP: Daniel Day-Lewis and Madeline Stowe, The Last of the Mohicans; Andy Garcia and Uma Thurman, Jennifer 8; Sigourney Weaver and Charles Dance, Alien 3.

BEST SCREENPLAY: David Mamet's cryptically masterful Glengarry Glen Ross. Pure gutter poetry. RUNNERS UP: Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, Howards End; Neil Jordan, The Crying Game; Quentin Taratino, Reservoir Dogs; Woody Allen, Husbands and Wives.

WORST SCREENPLAY: Joe Eszterhas' Basic Instinct (not only is it homophobic and sexist, it's also cheatingly plotted and filled with dialogue that manages to be cheesy and wooden at the same time.) Selected samples: Michael Douglas: "She knows where I live...and breathe." Jeanne Tripplehorn: "She's evil! She's brilliant!" RUNNERS UP: David Mamet's pointless Hoffa; Lawrence Kasdan's clueless The Bodyguard; Barry Levinson's and Valerie Perrine's witless Toys.

BEST IRONY: It was a crappy year for women's roles, but the theme for this year's Academy Awards is "Women and The Movies."

Mr. Lupo gives short space to epic pitfalls

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

A FEW GOOD MEN: You just have to appreciate director Rob Reiner. Though he never makes particularly interesting films — they're safe crowdpleasers — he's also never made a flop. Men continues his penchant for white bread commercialism.

Men is a nicely done, if entirely predictable, courtroom melodrama that succeeds purely on its intense star power. Solid performances all around — Tom Cruise is excellently aloof as usual, Demi Moore injects the underwritten token woman role with some class, and Keifer Sutherland, Kevin Bacon and James Marshall act their hearts out.

But the film really belongs to Jack Nicholson and his gleefully over-the-top showing-off. Sure, he's chewing the scenery, but by all means Jack, go for it — anything to forget Man Trouble.

They do make 'em like they used to — efficient, familiar and ridiculously entertaining. B+

FOREVER YOUNG: Probably one of the most shameless, offensively manipulative weepers ever made — and one of the most effective. Screenwriter Jeffery Abrams (screenwriter of Regarding Henry — and it shows) dredges elements from Encino Man and Late For Dinner, as well as a sickly sweet Mel Gibson to create a weepy melodrama that's surprisingly well-acted and persuasively directed. Sure, the emotions are as shallow as a "very special episode" of "Diff'rent Strokes," but if you're in the mood for a curl-up-with-a-box-of-Kleenex-flick and don't mind your strings being pulled with every twist of the plot, Forever Young makes a better date movie than say, The Bodyguard — at least Forever Young doesn't think it's high drama. C+

TOYS: A painful movie experience. Toys is director Barry Levinson's very public fall from grace. A year ago he helmed the superb Bugsy — and now he's trapped in what amounts to an art director's wet dream. Robin Williams looks very embarassed; the other actors (Joan Cusak, Robin Wright, LL Cool J) look as though they're making it all up as they go along. Two hours-plus of a very confused film, Toys looks absolutely scrumptious — like a theme park waiting to happen — but a washout of a script struggling to decide what it's about (not to mention an annoying soundtrack) make Toys just another pretty place to visit — for about five minutes. D-

LEAP OF FAITH: In between Richard Pearce's sentimental crutches there's the makings of an interesting little film here. Faith is an unassuming fable-wannabe that skewers religion without mocking faith. Anchored by a strong Steve Martin performance, with some comeback support by Debra Winger, Faith, taken on its own terms, deserves to be a modest hit. The ending, however, tries to have it both ways. Faith can't settle on what it wants to be; is it a harmless Hollywood comedy-drama or a tidy morality play? But in this winter of bloated epics with equally bloated pretensions, maybe it's worth taking the leap. B

HOFFA: Director Danny DeVito lays on the swirling visuals in every shot of this vague, horrible biopic like he's participating in the compulsaries for some sort of Epic Movie Olympics. Devito doesn't play fast and loose with the facts — he just doesn't supply any. Hoffa is all showplace bravado; I for one didn't know anything about Teamster boss Jimmy Hoffa before watching the movie and I still have no idea who he is now.

David Mamet (he scripted the near-perfect Glengarry Glen Ross — are we sure?) supplies a surprisingly sketchy

Turn to MOVIE SHORTS, page 7

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Gallo Chablis - Blush, Rhine, Burgandy 1.5 L $3.99
Jack Daniels 750 ml $12.99
Jagermeister 750 ml $15.99
Mad Dog 20/20 750ml $1.99
Poland Springs Vodka 1.75 L $9.99
Tequila Cuervo Gold Max Pack
A 750ml of Gold & 1.0 L Marguerita $13.49
Captain Morgan/Coconut 750 ml $9.29
Concha Y Toro Sauvignon Blanc 1.5L
Sauvignon Blanc or Cabernet/Merlot Blend $5.79
Wurzburger Octoberfest 6 pk ..... $5.29 (+dep)
Bud Family 12 pk..$6.99 (+dep)-Case, cans only .$12.99 (+dep)
Miller G.D./G.D. Light 12 pk $6.99 (+dep)-Case, bottles only .$12.99(+dep)

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
Open 9 am - 11 pm
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

Dark Dance sheds new light on horror genre

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

Dark Dance, the latest novel authored by fantasy writer Tanith Lee, is easily one of the best new books of contemporary horror fiction, twirling and dipping the reader through the creepiest corners of their imagination.

Released last month, Dance is set in England — and Lee gets right to the heart of British culture with her unusual vocabulary and meticulous, descriptive settings. Dance is the story of a young woman, Rachaela, leading a nondescript, mundane existence, who is eager to put behind her a troubled childhood and her mother's recent death.

Rachaela doesn't expect much from life, and every little setback has the propensity to grow to grotesque proportions. She trudges on, bringing the reader deeper and deeper into the book emotionally. The plot thickens when Rachaela realizes she is being followed — make that HUNTED — by her past. Her father had abandoned her mother after her conception, and he's eager for her to receive her "inheritance."

Dance is a wild tale of a woman grasping for freedom. Through Rachaela's character, Lee questions British and American customs, which elicits a plethora of tongue-in-cheek witticisms and ironies from Rachaela.

Dark Dance lends itself to many interpretations, which is a testament to the depth of its main character whose sarcastic wit and affected manner speeds the reader through hectic, hair raising chase scenes and travel episodes, through childbirth, death and a fiery, climactic ending.

I enjoyed the character of Rachaela because of her strong affinity for books — and coffee. Rachaela's character borders on being haughty and being independent. Lee often mentions classical music composers and their music as a device to illustrate Rachaela's moods. This hurts the book at certain points, because readers are usually familiar with other books but not a wide range of composers (Stravinsky, Prokofiev, Mahler and Mozart, to name a few.)

Easily earning 3 horrorible stars, Dance is the latest book from Dell Publishing's Abyss line of "psychological horror." Endorsed by Stephen King, the Abyss line of books claims to be for "the seeker of truth, no matter how disturbing or twisted it may be. It's about people, and the darkness we all carry within us."

The novel makes no claims to be about conventional horror villains like vampires, werewolves, ghosts, etc. Instead it focuses on the most terrifying type of animal — humans.

Dance is a sensual, compelling variation on the vampire motif. And the characters are all mad, mad, mad. (The big tip off: Lee chooses a quote from Lewis Carroll's Alice in Wonderland to set the theme of the novel.) Then it's hold on to your seats, kids. Dance will crazily twirl and dip you through your own imagination. You might believe some of it or most of it — but Lee's mastery of the English language and your deepest fears will enable you to visualize all of it.

Dark Dance sends shivers of delight down your spine. At its worst, it might cause you to gag. (In lieu of going to the market Rachaela's family has a unique way of getting their meat.)

This book is immediately engaging. The sensitive reader should be prepared for a few explicit scenes, but Lee's journey through time, across England, into madness and out is a must-read for Anglophiles and horror fans alike.

excerpt from Dark Dance by Tanith Lee

Distracted by recollection or mere nostalgia, Alice, Anita, Sasha and Miriam wandered around the room, in their turn seeming to try to choose a gown, as maybe once they had.

Livia remained near the door. Her face contorted. She said to Rachael, 'My Constantin,' and pressed her dry old hands to her face. It was as if she wanted to cry and could not. The ricturs of pain left her slowly, and she lowered her hands, and went to a red dress, beginning to smooth its stiff sheer folds with one ringed finger.

Rachaela moved along an aisle of dresses.

Ruth had come to a standstill.

There was a rent in the ceiling above, a hole, and under it a dress posed almost alone.

It was, like the bedroom, a dress of blood. It came from a period of make-believe. The shoulders of the dummy were bare. The waist of the dress pointed like an arrow, with a line of ruby buttons to the navel. The skirt flowed, embroidered in shiny bloody thread like grapes and flowers and foliage. The ruched sleeves fell from the shoulders to the floor, and under them were other sleeves of tight red lace.

"This one," said Ruth.

"Oh, she's chosen that one!" exclaimed Miranda.

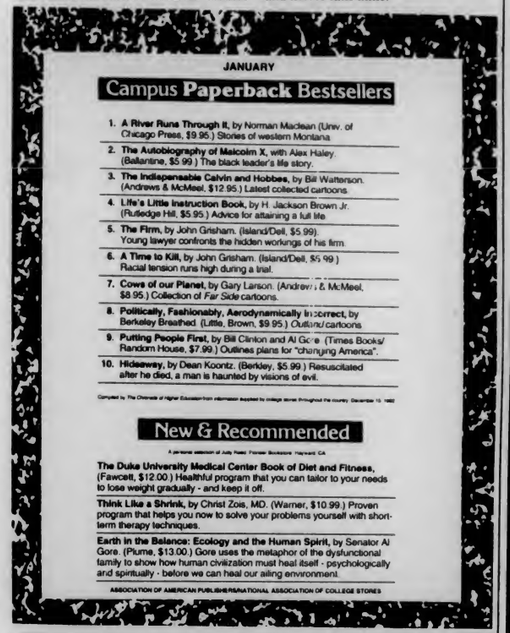
"How beautiful she'll look," said Teresa.

"I remember —" and fell silent.

All the women susurrated, a chorus of grasshoppers.

The skirt of the dress moved. It flaunted and bellied, as if an unseen leg had flexed beneath it.

Ruth stepped away.



There will be a brief meeting of all current Graphics Staff, Day and Night, TONIGHT at 6 P.M. in the Graphics Room.
Anyone else wishing to apply for either Day or Night Graphics should come at 6:30 to 105 Campus Center.

"Even if animal research resulted in a cure for AIDS, we'd be against it."
Ingrid Newkirk
Founder: People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals
Vogue September 1989

Fed up with the "animal rights" movement?
"Animal rights" groups equate the life of a child with that of a rat. They are stifling medical research through disinformation, harassment, and terror. Now you can do something about the disinformation on your campus. Students for Medical Progress, a program of Americans for Medical Progress, will help you work locally to support biomedical research, bring speakers to your campus, and organize to start campus chapters. Support biomedical research. Call: 1-800-4-AMP-USA
RESEARCH SAVES LIVES

Work for the Arts desk!
There are lots of different things to do!
All you need is interest and enthusiasm.
Contact Lisa Curtis or Jon Lupo at 113 Campus Center for more information.

SLEEP IN CLASS
While Your Car Is Being Repaired
Use the FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE to Campus
plus
10% OFF with Student I.D.
Not Valid with Other Discounts. OFFER EXPIRES 2/28/93.
MIDAS
MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS
COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
RTE. 9/HADLEY • 586-9991
NEAR HAMPSHIRE MALL

A pizza lovers survival guide

By BROOKE C. WHEELER
Collegian Staff

Your stomach is whimpering from emptiness — but so is your wallet. You cringe at the thought of recklessly spending your laundry money just to quiet that obnoxious rumbling noise emanating from just above your belt buckle.

Gee, what's a poor college student to do?

The answer is as old as college itself and as synonymous with studentia as late nights and beer. The answer is in the language of crusty bread and dripping cheese and warm globs of tomato sauce. Salvation can be found in the sublime landscape of a few humble slices of pizza.

Naturally, in an area of high student concentration such as our neighborhood, pizza is more readily available than oxygen. Choosing the right pizza can be a confusing and tiring experience. Allow me to weed through a scant few of the prospects and uncover the truth behind several establishments' offerings of the crusty, cheesy kind.

For the sake of clarity, I will identify the criteria. I've only included 12 different establishments. There are, of course, many more in this area, but even I can't eat that much pizza. All the pizza judged was plain cheese, going by the old maxim that if they can't make a good cheese pizza, they sure as hell can't pull off a "deluxe with everything."

Pizza was judged for the character of the crust, the personality of the sauce, the quality and amount of cheese, and the grease content (measured on the "Napkin Scale": 1-10 Napkins). In extreme cases, I also used the "Beer Scale," where I estimated how many six-packs of beer it is necessary to consume before the pizza becomes palatable. Overall quality was judged with 0-5 "Slices": 5) A noble pizza, 4) Pretty decent, 3) You could do worse, 2) Eh, 1) Marginally edible, 0) Unfit for your dog.

Domino's — An obvious choice for the inexperienced palate. The crust is fried, greasy and puffy. This represents a poor "chilling pizza" (i.e. able to be eaten cold the next morning) because the grease congeals into a marbleized pattern on the bottom. The sauce is on the sweet side, as too many chain-pizza sauces are. There is a fair amount of cheese, and some flavor can be detected if you blot off the grease. 10 Napkins, 3 Slices.

Cantone's — Take care in lifting a slice because for some reason they flipped the ratio of sauce to crust. The crust is thin and flaccid and the sauce a bit liberal. A heavy garlic taste pervades the sauce, so be prepared to taste this pizza the next morning. The cheese comes in a good helping, but also tends to be burnt. 5 Napkins, 2 Slices.

Pizza Hut — This pizza is a lot like Domino's with an extra helping of grease. The crust is the same puffy, fried type. The sauce is very sweet and dark, instead of spicy. The cheese is plentiful and gooey, but suffers from the grease. 10 Napkins and a bath, 3 Slices.

Bell's Pizza House — The first thing you notice is that they don't skimp on the cheese. It looks tempting, but beware when you lift it. If you can get a piece to your mouth without the ample cheese sliding to the floor, you will have a filling meal in one slice. The floppy crust doesn't help keep the cheese off your lap, so use two hands. 10 Napkins and a towel; 2 Slices.

The Hatch — Hatch pizza should be only for emergencies, like low blood sugar or foodfights. The crust is absolutely flavorless (stay away from the wheat crust). The sauce is overly sweet and clogged with oregano. The cheese is burned and never quite warm, so it's already semi-congealed when you get it. 1 Napkin, 0 Slices.

The Sub — There's nothing better than a hot slice at the Sub with friends after a party or two on the weekend. The crust is what I call "normal" crust: regular, unfried dough, firm, a little dusty flour left on the bottom (the mark of a nice crust that hasn't succumbed to grease). The sauce has a nice spicy flavor, but the cheese, that wonderful melting cheese, is what makes you come back for more. It's ample, hot and soft, not too chewy. Mmmm. 2 Napkins, 5 Slices.

Antonio's — If you only have one dollar left in the world, this is where to spend it. This pizza is hands down one of my favorites — I confess that many was the night last semester that I wandered into Antonio's (when I didn't feel like cooking) for a slice with spiced chicken and onions. Despite being known for variety (pesto and tomato, artichoke, seafood, bacon, etc.) their cheese pizza is outstanding. The crust is firm and crisp, with the wonderful added texture of cornmeal. The sauce is fresh tomato-y, not dark and syrupy, a nice reprieve. The cheese is a genuine achievement in that delicate balance of melted and lightly browned. Nice. 1 Napkin, 5 Slices.

Bertucci's — Our newest establishment in town is the pizza joint's evolution into a truly higher form. I mention the classy ambience simply because I liked it so much. It is high-ceilinged and dramatically lit, and sports two friendly bartenders, Keith and Rich. The pizza is delicious, the crust being perhaps the star. The outer edge of the crust is thin and crisp and has a pleasant smoky flavor. The sauce is similar to Antonio's, fresh and flavored like real tomatoes, not heavy canned tomato paste. The cheese is flavorful and achieves that difficult level of light-browness. Another plus is the use of a flavorful (extra virgin, golden yellow?) olive oil. Yum. 1 Napkin, 5 Slices.

Honorable mentions (due to space restrictions) — These establishments also receive my stamp of approval: College Pizza, Pinocchio's, and Bruno's.

Superior Pizza — One six-pack.

For all the ones that I didn't cover, go and try a slice and tell me what you think. Happy eating.

Jordan's Crying Game will bend your tiny mind

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

For the first time in a long while, everything you've heard about a movie is true — and then some. Writer-director Neil Jordan's stark and romantic thriller, THE CRYING GAME is a film of mind-bending surprises, honest drama and brilliant performances.

Game, the latest critics' darling and ten-best list mainstay, is the type of film that plays the audience like a master violin — beguiling and charming the viewer. The seemingly simple story unfolds and then pulls a whopper of a fast one, sending both the audience and the film for a glorious loop.

The story opens with a kidnapping; British soldier Jody (Forest Whitaker) is taken hostage by a branch of the IRA. Fergus (Stephen Rea), a disillusioned member who wants out, starts off as Jody's captor and ends up involved in an unlikely friendship.

After a botched execution, a remorseful Fergus escapes Ireland for England to look up Jody's girlfriend, Dil (Jaye Davidson).

We're prepared for the archetype romantic thriller, along the lines of The Bodyguard, where boy meets girl, they fall in love, and boy saves girl in the end. What we get is something entirely different.

What ensues is a never before seen examination on conscience, clouded desire and, in its most raw and loaded forms, love. Without revealing too much, Jordan weaves all the classic elements of romance and political intrigue — along with a sly sense of humor at times — and turns them upside-down.

Game assaults the viewer in a place most movies never dare to target: your mind. This is not a film full of cheap jolts and absurd plot devices. Game makes compelling drama out of extraordinary situations — then loads them with sexual, political and personal repercussions.

Jordan has also crafted a brilliantly-acted character study. The Crying Game takes time and risks in exploring its characters as few films today do. Each is a fragile study of love and protection.

Stephen Rea invokes his central role with a knock-out combination of everyman lure and tough

Turn to CRYING GAME, page 7

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741

FOUR (4) Bedroom Apartments!
$899 (utilities included! wow!)
Microwave Ovens!!

RENT FREE!!
Move in now - no rent until February 1, 1993!
Move in February '93 and receive it FREE!
1 month free rent with 1 year lease!
*Promotion & prices subject to change without notice

TOP TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD LIVE HERE:
1. Your PARENTS don't!
2. YOU pick your roommates!
3. PRIVACY- Spacious Four (4) Bedrooms!
4. TWO (2) Bathrooms- no waiting in the shower line!
5. UTILITIES included $$$!
6. Directly on BUSLINE- minutes from campus & downtown Amherst!
7. It's FREE public transportation!
8. INCLUDES major appliances & w/w carpeting!
9. QUIET forest setting - for your peace of mind.

Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!

Don't wait another day, call today!

CUT THIS AD & USE IT TO LIVE "RENT FREE!" AT ALPINE COMMONS!

256-0741

BEYOND THE NAMES PROJECT
Quilt Exhibition • February 1993

The Health Education Division is proud to display the panels from the Five-College AIDS Quilt Project at the University Health Center gallery through February, 1993.

The five area schools have given students an opportunity to express their personal reflections on the AIDS/HIV crisis. Using donated cloth, yarn, fabric markers, buttons, paper, glitter, etc. students have expressed how they have been affected in their attitudes towards sexuality, health care, the political process and the future. These individual panels have been and will continue to be collected at each school and joined together to educate our communities about the depth and spectrum of response to HIV disease.

A LIVING ENVIRONMENT FOR PEOPLE WITH AIDS
The Gables - "A Celebration of Life"

an Interior Design B.F.A. project by Rebecca Tinelle

There will be an open reception to recognize the students and staff who have made these projects possible.

February 11
5-7 p.m.
University Health Services Gallery
(1st floor between clinics 1 and 3)

For more information please contact the Health Education Division at 549-2671 ext. 181.

The Beyond the Names Project has been sponsored by a grant from American College Health Association and by gracious contributions from: Serv-U, Greenfield Eastern Textile, Home Fabric Mills, Family Planning, Hastings, Ames/Greenfield and Polymark Fabric Paint.

Musicians parody conservatives anew

By ROBERT J. WARREN
Generation X Press

Stormtroopers of Death
Live at Budokan
Megaforce records

No one tops Stormtroopers of Death (S.O.D.) at pure dirge-riff, power chord, chunk density. No one. Think of concrete slabs crumbling. Simple, powerful and abrasive.

When 1985's Speak English or Die came out, the vulgar, reactionary lyrics were hilarious. Archie Bunker on a serial-killing spree. We were only halfway through the '80s and ultra-conservatives were fun to laugh at (Reagan still seemed to be a harmless dolt). But now, with Pat Robertson, Jesse Helms, Pat Buchanan, David Duke, Rush Limbaugh, et al splashing outside the right-wing waters, the rantings of conservative parody (and that is what much of S.O.D. is) has lost much of its humor. Who means it and who is kidding? Even scarier, who laughs and who takes it seriously?

S.O.D. isn't serious. S.O.D. is offensive for the fun of being offensive. Suicide, xenophobia, and plenty of curse words are preplanned buttons for pushing. Anthrax's Scott Ian originally put S.O.D. together as a goof. Charlie Benante (Anthrax), Dan Lilker (Nuclear Assault) and Billy Milan joined in the gag. When the side project was over they all went back to their "real" bands.

Live at Budokan is a live reunion, of sorts, and serves us a simple reminder that the past is past. There are a couple of fun moments (i.e. attempting Ministry covers), but the package as a whole is mediocre. For fans only — for nostalgia's sake.

■ Crying Game

continued from page 6

guy eroticism; his hero persona is nearly outdone by his helplessness to control not only his desires but external forces that jeopardize those desires.

As Dil, newcomer Jaye Davidson is an exquisite wonder. A marvelously brave and delicate performance, Davidson uses her own (and ultimately Dil's) sexuality to take the classic heroine character and infuse it with an amazing amount of style, form and exposed emotion. If Davidson never acts again, her contribution to the cinema is complete.

Forest Whitaker, last seen in last fall's Consenting Adults, works wonders in a role that, in a refreshing way, gains resonance as the film unfolds. This alone makes a second viewing a must.

Also superb is the amazingly versatile Miranda Richardson, who won raves in the otherwise fluffy Enchanted April and now co-stars in Louis Malle's Damage. Here, in a ballsy, vicious turn, Richardson heats up the intrigue side of Game, adding another stellar supporting performance to her impressive acting resume.

It's frustrating to try to write this, since one of the things that makes the Crying Game so impressive and exceptional is its wave of surprises. Viewing Game is like experiencing movies for the first time — it manipulates and exceeds our assumption, jarring the audience out of its familiar setting. Suddenly, we don't know everything.

But more important is how Jordan meshes these surprises into complex psychological crises, then into tense drama. Intelligent, challenging and even entertaining, The Crying Game is a rarity in films today — an original.

■ movie shorts

continued from page 4

narrative — I found myself continually having to grasp my bearings with each leap from one section to another. It isn't much of a story, but randomly selected highlights of Hoffa's life. Unlike, say, Malcolm X, DeVito seems to relish in the mythic figure of Hoffa instead of delving into who he is and how he got from one major point of life to another.

Hoffa is like a 2-1/4 hour trailer for itself — filled with picture-perfect crowd scenes (the kind where all the extras overact like they're in the chorus of their high school play) and "I gotta do what I gotta do" moments, without getting down to business on who this guy really was. All of Hoffa's big budget Epic Pretensions (it's so Epic it doesn't even have opening credits — ooooh) just accentuate the big empty space that is at the center of this very hollow movie.

And I haven't even mentioned Jack Nicholson's idle Rich Little impersonation of Jimmy Hoffa.D

SCENT OF A WOMAN: Retired Army Colonel Frank Slade (Al Pacino) loses his sight and becomes a crabby, middle-aged man who gives New York City one last grand tour. He is accompanied by a paid escort, a prep school senior, Charlie (Chris O'Donnell.) And what do you know — they learn about Life, Love and Each Other. But despite its familiar terrain, for the most part, Scent carries the viewer along in a pleasingly clever, funny (but oh-so-long) way.

Then, inexplicably for the last half hour, Scent turns crassly sentimental, opting to drown the conclusion in out-of-nowhere crocodile tears and end on a false Uplifting Moment.

If it takes this kind of grandstanding from Al Pacino (hey Al — ever heard of subtlety?) to cop a well-deserved Oscar, go for it; but I for one was not that impressed with his showy performance. Scent works much better without the woefully tacked-on ending, so do yourself a favor — and I'm serious here — leave the theater the minute you see Charlie's prep school again. It's much more satisfying. (Don't worry, you won't miss anything — everyone gets happy.) Without the ending: B-. With the ending: C-.

Italy's art takes a visit

Masterpieces on exhibit in Worcester

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

The Worcester Art Museum may be an hour drive from our beautiful campus, but it is well worth the trip to see its latest exhibit, Ottocento: Romanticism and Revolution in 19th Century Italian Painting.

Ottocento, (literally "eight hundred") or the nineteenth century, was a tumultuous time in Italy's history. Its people and artists were swept up in a wave of nationalism. Most students don't even know that Italy did not actually achieve political unification and become a country until 1870. And it has only been very recently, during Italy's celebration of its centennial, that it turned to the work of the Ottocento period and recognized its value.

"The Ottocento is being reevaluated and investigated by a new generation of serious scholars who are placing its development within the larger European context, as well as writing thoughtful, profound studies on works by individual artists," writes Roberta J. M. Olson, curator of the exhibit in her catalogue, which is the only one available on this art work in English.

"Just as Italian nineteenth-century art was the result of a national self-consciousness during the Risorgimento [the nineteenth-century movement for Italian unity], the current reappraisal of the Italian Ottocento coincides with the recent reexamination of their own national development and culture after a hundred years of existence as a nation."

The items in this exhibit are being demanded by major museums all over the world, according to curator of exhibitions for the American Federation of the Arts, Marie Therese Brincard, and yet the exhibit is in humble Worcester, Mass. In fact, even more astonishing, it is one of only three cities in the United States to present Ottocento.

The Worcester Art Museum (WAM) was chosen as one of the sights for the exhibit because it has quite a few Italian paintings as part of its permanent collection. This is the first major exhibition in America to present an overview of 19th century Italian painting and its place in mainstream history.

There are 99 paintings, drawn from European and American collections, demonstrating the vitality of artistic traditions in various regions of the country.

The works have been divided into four sections, "The Epoch of Napoleon and the Seeds of Unification, circa 1797 to 1814;" "The Dialogue Between Historical Romanticism and Realism, circa 1815 to 1848/60;" "Realism and the Prelude to Unification, circa 1849 to 1870;" and "After Unification — Realism, Divisionism, Symbolism, And A More International Art, circa 1870 to 1898."

Napoleon crowned himself king of Italy in 1805, and had a significant effect on the art of the period. He chose Milan as his capital and appointed as his official court painter the Milanese Andrea Appiani.

"In the paintings of both Appiani and his friend and pupil Giuseppe Bossi, neoclassicism was tempered by local Renaissance and baroque traditions," writes Olson. Appiani's Emperor Napoleon as King of Italy (1805), in the first of the four sections of the exhibit, is easily one of the most intricate, breathtaking paintings of the exhibit. Napoleon is awe inspiring as he stares down into the eyes of all of the onlookers who attended the exhibit's opening on January 16.

The second section of the exhibit shows how Naturalism emerged. "It was initially centered in Naples and its environs, traditional haunts for foreign artists enthralled by the excavations at Pompeii and Herculaneum, balmy climate, and picturesque scenery, " writes Olson.

It is Ippolito Caffi's painting, Interior of the Colosseum with Fireworks known as "Fuochi di Bengala," (1845) that best illustrates Naturalism in the exhibit. It loses the defined lines of the neoclassic period and strives for to be more natural to the eye. A seething red fills the night sky from behind the ruins, giving the painting a glowing quality, as if a fire were truly burning within its farthest reaches.

The third section of exhibit, Realism, is fascinating for the viewer with a lot of time on their hands. Each painting is brimming with symbolism; the longer one looks into its intricacies, the more there is to be delighted with.

"Sometimes to avoid censorship [the artists] employed Italian historical subjects as a guise for a contemporary political issues," writes Olson.

An example of this is Odoardo Borrani's The Seamstresses of the Red Shirts (1863) where even the tiny face in a sketch at the back of the painting is the face of a real person, an insurgent. The curtains aren't hung by a rod, but by a militant spear. You probably won't even notice it at first glance. Never mind the fact that the painting is a masterpiece in of itself without looking for the clues of the artists political stance.

Ottocento: Romanticism and Revolution in 19th Century Italian Painting will be on exhibit at the Worcester Art Museum until February 28. Admission is $2.50 for full-time college students with current ID, and free to all on Saturdays — entrance from 10 a.m. to noon, courtesy of Shaw's Supermarkets. Call the museum for more information.

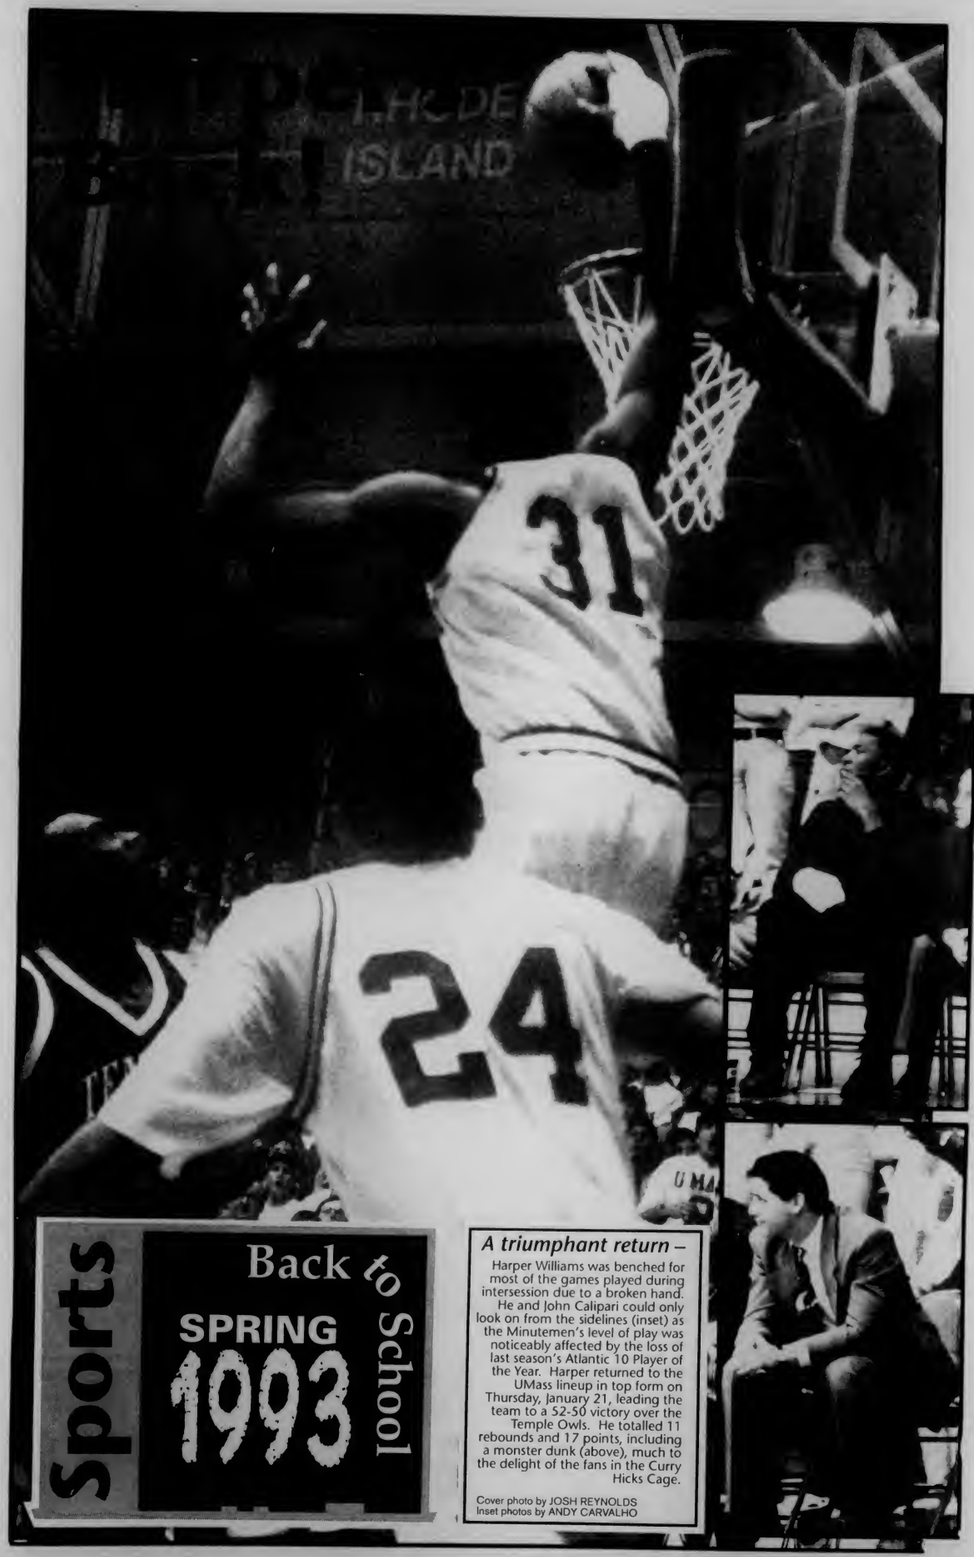
The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

WINTER CLEARANCE SALE
ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

Auditions For
Not Ready For Bedtime Players
Everything You Thought! NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS The Kids Are About Set...And Ready Too!
February 3, 1993
8:30 PM
Campus Center Rm. 169
For more information call the Health Education Division and ask for Nancy or Dee 549-2671 x181.

WITH THIS COUPON C
BUY ONE, GET ONE
FREE!!
James H. McManus eating place
OPEN SUN - THURS. 6AM - 3AM FRI & SAT OPEN 24 HOURS.
NEXT TO SUPER STOP & SHOP
RTE. 9
HADLEY/AMHERST
256-6889
Buy any one item from our menu, & receive the second for free! Minimum purchase of $3.55 required. Higher price prevails, daily specials excluded, no other discounts or promos apply. Excludes Scallop & Steak Dinners.
exp. 3/15/93



A triumphant return –

Harper Williams was benched for most of the games played during intersession due to a broken hand. He and John Calipari could only look on from the sidelines (inset) as the Minutemen's level of play was noticeably affected by the loss of last season's Atlantic 10 Player of the Year. Harper returned to the UMass lineup in top form on Thursday, January 21, leading the team to a 52-50 victory over the Temple Owls. He totalled 11 rebounds and 17 points, including a monster dunk (above), much to the delight of the fans in the Curry Hicks Cage.

Cover photo by JOSH REYNOLDS
Inset photos by ANDY CARVALHO

A men's hoop recap with an injured Williams

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts basketball team's opponents received a late Christmas present on December 26, and the Minutemen have been trying to recover ever since. That was the fateful day 1991-92 Atlantic 10 Player of the Year Harper Williams broke his hand.

Williams fractured the fourth metacarpal bone in his right hand when he fell diving for a loose ball at practice and tried to break his fall. Expected to be out six to eight weeks, and with whispers of being medically redshirted and returning next year, Williams returned on January 21 against Temple. He returned not a moment too soon, because the team felt Williams' loss.

Luckily, the Minutemen had enough scorers to pick up the slack, and UMass survived the loss of the 6-foot-7 forward, but not without a price.

For the second time in two intersessions, UMass dropped into and out of the Associated Press Top 25, which was the best illustration of the loss of Williams. Although the team finished 8-2 over break, coach John Calipari said the team was still missing something, and assured fans that Williams will reclaim his starting role once healthy.

"The Rhode Island game is a good example," he said. "Last year against them, we had Harper step up twice. This year, we don't have that player. Lou [Roe] and Tony [Barbee] can't do it, and neither can [Jerome] Malloy and [Mike] Williams."

With Williams back, the Minutemen are ready to hit the ground running when A-10 play resumes. Until then, they have DePaul (a game played since press time) and SW Louisiana.

Here is a quick synopsis of some of the action you may have missed while convalescing at home. . .:

Massachusetts 81, Holy Cross 66

SPRINGFIELD — After losing a tough game to the nationally ranked Oklahoma Sooners 93-83 on December 12, the Minutemen had 16 days to prepare for Abdow's Hall of Fame Classic against Holy Cross, and it paid off. The offense exploded all around and the Minutemen easily took care of the Crusaders by an 81-66 count. Tony Barbee led all scorers with 24 points, but Lou Roe (15 points, 13 rebounds), Mike Williams (18 points) and Derek Kellogg (8 assists) also had good nights.

Barbee had one of the best nights of his career, scoring 10 of the Minutemen's first 21 points in building an early 21-6 lead. The Minutemen were on the verge of blowing the Crusaders out, but the blowout never happened. In fact, Holy Cross sliced the lead down to six in the first half, but never got that close in the second half.

"It's hard to play against a basketball team when you don't react to their defense," Holy Cross head coach George Blaney said. "That put us in a hole.

The Minutemen hit their foul shots throughout the game, espcially down the stretch. UMass shot 89 percent from the charity stripe, compared to Holy Cross' 58 percent.

Because South Carolina upset Alabama-Birmingham 75-68, the Minutemen faced the Gamecocks the next night in the Abdow's Hall of Fame Classic Championship game.

Massachusetts 84, South Carolina 66

SPRINGFIELD — Tony Barbee scored a career-high 31 points as the Minutemen won their third consecutive Abdow's championship in front of a capacity crowd of more than 8,000.

The Minutemen jumped out to a 40-29 halftime lead, and after South Carolina closed within nine early in the second half, UMass took off. A 10-2 run made things more comfortable for the team, as they won their host tournament for the third time in three years.

Barbee shot 11-for-13 from the field and hit his first eight shots without a miss. For his efforts, he was named Abdow tournament MVP. Lou Roe was also named to the All-Tournament team.

Massachusetts 75, New Hampshire 61

DURHAM, N.H. — In their ugliest game (at that point) of the season, the Minutemen outlasted a winless (0-6) University of New Hampshire team 75-61. UMass (5-2) held on to a 14-point halftime lead despite sleepwalking through the second half. Jerome Malloy sparked the Minutemen with 21 points, including three 3-pointers.

Super-sub Mike Williams added 19 points off the bench, while Tom MacDonald of the Wildcats led all scorers with 22 points. UMass continued their torrid foul shooting by hitting 21 of 22 free throws in the second half.

"The only thing that could have been worse would've been if we had lost that ballgame," Calipari said. "But at the end of the year, it will be a W on our record.

The win was the first on the road this year for the Minutemen, who had lost to Florida State and Oklahoma. The nifty three-game win streak was brought back to Curry Hicks Cage three nights later.

Massachusetts 90, Boston University 42

The Minutemen played their best game in two years, dominating the Terriers to such an extent that an embarrassed Calipari apologized to BU coach Bob Brown.

"I said to him after the game, 'Sorry about the score,' and [Brown] said, 'There was nothing you could do about it.'"

Mike Williams (20 points) had the hot hand early with 12 points in the first half, and UMass roared out on runs of 15-0 and 10-0 to gain a 48-9 advantage with 2:06 left in the half. The Minutemen held BU to 17 points at the break, and things weren't much better in the second half.

Ted Cottrell scored a career high 10 points, leading five players who notched career-highs in this non-contest. Giddel Padilla and Craig Berry saw their first action of the season, and the five-man rotation of Padilla, Berry, Chris Robinson, Rigoberto Nuñez and Jeff Meyer outscored the Terriers 12-4 in the last three minutes.

Cincinnati 64, Massachusetts 53

SPRINGFIELD — Reality hit the Minutemen hard, as the No. 16 Bearcats increased their record to 8-1 at UMass' expense. Nick Van Exel had a career high 27 points to bury UMass. Van Exel hit 7-of-10 three-pointers, most of which were shot near the NBA three-point line.

At halftime, two blindfolded men who were involved in a shooting contest were more successful than the Minutemen, who shot 26 percent from the field after the first 20 minutes. After scoring 50 points in the first half against BU two nights before, UMass could only muster 17 points.

"This game sent basketball back 10 years," Huggins said. "I'm just glad to win over a heck of a ballteam."

The resilient Minutemen bounced back from a 14-point first half deficit and hung tough through the second half. Jerome Malloy, who shot only 2-for-11 for the game, nailed a clutch 3-point field goal to cut the Bearcut lead to eight, 49-41, with 7:09 left in the contest.

After the two teams traded turnovers, Van Exel went to work. His slashing drive put Cincinnati up 61-51, and after a Tony Barbee putback, Van Exel struck again with the backbreaking trey from the right side to give Cincinnati an 11-point lead with 4:11 left.

"We weren't agressive," said Calipari. "I've never seen Lou play a worse game," he said of Roe, who had only four rebounds.

Temple 52, Massachusetts 44

PHILADELPHIA — Despite playing only six men and shooting only 39 percent, Temple University (5-3, 1-1 in the A-10) stifled UMass sufficiently enough to walk away with its first conference win in McGonigle Hall.

"We are a very bad basketball team right now," Calipari said. "And I am a very bad coach. We have a lot of work to do."

Temple held UMass to a deplorable 30 percent from the floor, with normally reliable Jerome Malloy (3-for-14) and Mike Williams (4-for-13) affected the most. Temple bounced back from an early 8-2 deficit, exploding on a 17-2 run to lead 19-10 with 8:55 left in the first half. UMass cut down on the lead and only trailed by 3, 25-22, at the half.

UMass stayed within striking distance in the second half, finally knotting the game up with 6:11 left. Aaron McKie (19 points, nine rebounds) killed the Minutemen however, with 11 straight points down the stretch. UMass went four straight minutes at the end of the game without a shot from the field.

The hole caused by Harper Williams' injury was never more gaping, as the Minutemen were unable to get anything started down low. Lou Roe looked lost in the paint, scoring only eight points while committing five turnovers. Roe was double- and triple-teamed every time he touched the ball, which took away UMass' only inside threat.

Massachusetts 82, Rutgers 78

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — In the most exciting game of the year (at that point), the Minutemen won a crucial Atlantic 10 game when Mike Williams, starting for the first time this season, broke a 78-78 deadlock with a clutch three-pointer from the top of the key with 1.7 seconds left.

The Minutemen blew an eight point second half lead and were trailing 77-76 with 1:03 left when Kennard Robinson was fouled and went to the line. Robinson missed both free throws, but Rutgers' Damon Santiago had his foot on the out of bounds line when he rebounded the second miss.

On the ensuing series, Roe hit two free throws with 24 seconds left to give UMass a 78-77 lead, and with 13 seconds left, Jamal Phillips missed his second free throw after tying the game at 78 on his first.

Williams brought the ball up the court and pulled up for the winning trey. Jerome Malloy added a foul shot when Rutgers was slapped for a technical for attempting to take a time out with none left.

"The phrase we're using for the rest of the year is 'refuse to lose,'" Calipari said. "That doesn't mean we'll win every game, but it means if a team's gonna beat us, they'll have to come and get it, we won't give it away like we did earlier this season.

Turn to RECAP, page 6

PIZZA SUBS
Bruno's
363 MAIN ST.
AMHERST
256-0222
SALADS LASAGNA
SPAGETTI
Spring Semester Specials
Cheeseburger Subs! Real Bacon for Pizza
Fast Free Delivery for Lunch, Dinner, and Late Night • 256-0222
$2.00 Off Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
$2.00 Off Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
Free Small Cheese When You Purchase a Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
$1.00 Off Medium Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
$1.00 Off Medium Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
Free Small Cheese When You Purchase a Large Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
75¢ Off Small Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
75¢ Off Small Pizza Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
2 Large Cheese Pizzas $9.95 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
2 Spaghetti Dinners For $6.00 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
$1.00 Off Lasagna Dinner Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93
2 Large Cheese Pizzas $9.95 Bruno's - 256-0222 Not Valid with other specials Expires 3/31/93

Follow UMass Basketball this semester with the Collegian. We've got what you want every day.

BANANARAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

How would you like to write for the Largest College Daily in New England? Come to 113 Campus Center to find out how.

the SUB now has PIZZA & WE DELIVER
The SUB, Amherst's #1 Sub Shop Since 1977, now has Pizza. Select from our wide variety of Pizza Subs & Calzones. For delivery or take out orders. Call 549-5160

Harper Williams returns to Minuteman lineup

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Harper Williams had an interesting new year's resolution to keep.

The 6-foot-7 senior had broken his hand diving for a loose ball during a Dec. 27 practice, and as the new year rolled in, he had to decide whether he should sit out the season as a medical redshirt or work hard and return for this season's stretch run.

He chose the latter and kept his promise.

"I talked it over with my family and I decided if I was going to make it then I was going to make it this year," said Williams, the 1991-92 Atlantic 10 Player of the Year. "It was real hard for me to sit out and watch. I felt caged up not being able to get out there."

The decision of whether to redshirt or not was a difficult one for Williams. The pros and cons of doing so were numerous, as was the pressure to come back and help his team return to the NCAA Tournament.

Williams' aspirations to play professional basketball were also at stake. NBA scouts wanted to know how Williams would respond to injuries and how hard he would work while not playing, so coming back quickly would be beneficial.

However, redshirting would give Williams another season to polish his basketball skills. Next season, with the arrival of 6-foot-10 Marcus Camby, Williams would have been able to play facing the basket more, a position he will be expected to play if he makes the NBA.

Also factoring in the decision was the prospect for next season's team. Camby leads a big time recruiting class, all three guards return as does forward Lou Roe and don't forget High School All-American Donta Bright will be eligible to play. The Minutemen, with Williams, would be a legitimate 11 deep and a Top 10 team.

All of that would bring more television games and the possibility of a run deep into the NCAA Tournament, which would provide Williams with some much needed exposure.

"Next year's team didn't matter," Calipari said. "I told Harper that to play in the NBA, he would have to go to Orlando or another camp and play well before the scouts. Whether it was this year or next, there is no way he would get drafted without playing at a camp.

"Just because he plays a few more television games next year won't make him the best player in the country. He'll have to earn the right to be drafted at a talent camp."

Williams said, "I have to play for UMass and not worry about what's going to happen after graduation. That will take care of itself."

And thus, only three and a half weeks after breaking the hand, Williams returned to action, against arch-rival Temple no less.

In what Daily Hampshire Gazette reporter Milt Cole, who has covered UMass basketball for the for the past 23 years, termed "one of the greatest games ever played at the Curry Hicks Cage," UMass rode the emotion of Williams' return and beat the Owls, for only the second time ever, 52-50, on a Tony Barbee buzzer beater.

"I wanted to come back against Temple, it was a good league game and we wanted to prove last season's [67-52] win wasn't a fluke," said Williams, who made the decision to play that afternoon.

Williams showed no signs of rust as he scored 17 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

"I have to thank [Associate Head] Coach [Bill] Bayno for keeping me in shape. He worked with me every day so I would stay in condition," Williams said.

Williams said his hand was slightly sore after the game but he said it did not bother him during play.

"It affected my grip a little, so it was tougher to get rebounds, but that was all," the Bridgeport, Conn. native said. "It didn't really stop me from playing my game."

Certainly not enough to stop Williams from delivering a monster dunk with 10:21 remaining in regulation.

"He was unbelievable tonight," Calipari said of his star center. "We couldn't have won tonight without Harper. He just attacks inside, battles for rebounds and he understands how to get himself open a little better than Lou."

Roe, who scored 12 points against Temple, will likely benefit the most from Williams' return.

"Having Harper back lets me move the base line freely," Roe said. "Harper's a big force down there they have to keep an eye on him which frees me up to get the backdoor dunks.

"I was kind of afraid for Harper for a little bit," Roe said. "I didn't know if he would be all right out there with his hand, but after seeing him snag a couple of rebounds and dunk a couple, I said 'this guy's all right.'"

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Forward Harper Williams broke his hand the day after Christmas, yet returned to action four weeks later. The 1990-91 A-10 Player of the Year considered medically redshirting, but decided to finish his collegiate career this year.

The Collegian – your daily source for UMass Sports results.

EXOTIC FISH & PET WORLD
49 Russell St., Rt. 9
Hadley - At the Village Barn Shops
FRESH WATER FISH Hundreds of Types In Stock
586-3362
MARINE FISH The Areas Largest Selection
A FULL SELECTION OF QUALITY DRY GOODS & SUPPLIES FOR YOUR PET ... AT EXCELLENT PRICES!
REPTILES A Separate Room Full - Don't Miss Seeing Our Own 14' Python!
SMALL ANIMALS & BIRDS From Parakeets to The Unusual - Some Already Tame!
OPEN SAT, SUN, MON: 10-6
TUES-FRI: 10-9

Disability Services is in search of volunteer readers for disabled students. The job of a reader consists of reading books onto tape and/or reading aloud for students. No experience is necessary. We will train. Please contact Lorie Bell at Disability Services for further information at 545-0892

Sounds Easy Video Stores
"The Intelligent Choice"
Fast break to Sounds Easy for all your video needs.
Free Membership, VCR Rentals
3 Days 2 Night Rentals Friendly Service, Large Selection
COUPON
RENT 2 MOVIES at reg. price Get one FREE
Good Mon. - Thur.
Keep for 3 days and 2 nights
Includes new releases
One coupon per customer
Expires Feb. 28, 1993
Col.
COUPON
MOVIE PASS SPECIAL
10 movies for just $19.99
One coupon per customer
Expires Feb. 28, 1993
Col.
Amherst - 6 University Dr. 549-5200 Sun.-Thurs. 10-10 Fri., Sat. 10-11
Northampton Hamp Plaza, King St. 586-7260 Sun.-Thurs. 10-10, Fri.-Sat., 10:30
Greenfield - 20 Mohawk Trail 772-2141 Sun.-Sat. 10-10
See Other Side For More Savings

Atlantic 10 Notebook returns from hibernation

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

With Harper Williams out to injury, another Williams — Mike, that is — stepped up his play. The sophomore sixth man is averaging 15 points.

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

While Atlantic 10 basketball teams have begun to achieve unprecedented success over recent years, the league itself still does not command much respect among Associated Press' Top 25 voters.

While the league is better than ever this season, the memory of its weaker days in the late '80s persist.

As recently as 1989-90 the A-10 posted a miserable 48-57 (.444) non-conference record. Last season the conference recorded a 76-36 non-league mark and this season it is off to a 52-20 (.722) clip.

In 1989 the league was ranked No. 16 by the RPI power rankings, which the NCAA Tournament selection committee uses to select and seed teams for March Madness. This year the A-10 is ranked No. 5. However, the 1989-90 statistic is what many recall when thinking of the A-10.

"It takes time to gain recognition," said Mike Sheridan, managing editor of Eastern Basketball and Basketball Times and a respected expert of college basketball. "The A-10 has a perception problem but it is fighting it the best way — on the court. As the A-10 teams keep getting better the perception will also improve."

In the meantime the national reputations of A-10 schools stall out during league play.

"What I hate most is that when we lose in our conference we drop out of sight in the polls," said UMass coach John Calipari. "This is a tough conference and we shouldn't be penalized for league losses.

"This year Georgetown loses at Miami and drops one spot [in the Associated Press Top 25], we lose at Temple and we drop off the charts," Calipari said. "We are expected to win every game in the conference but that is ridiculous. How many teams have won at Temple the last few years?"

Temple is 141-15 all-time in its cozy 3,900-seat stadium.

Temple coach John Chaney agrees the conference deserves more respect among basketball writers.

"Last season we lost at The Cage [UMass' home court] and the press wrote us off as dead," Chaney said. "That's tough. Only two schools [Rutgers, West Virginia] besides us have won there in the past three seasons."

The good news for league schools is while Top 25 polls often ignore A-10 schools, postseason tournaments do not. Temple won only 17 games last season but joined West Virginia and UMass in the NCAA Tournament, while Rhode Island (22-10) and Rutgers (16-15) were extended bids to the NIT.

Springfield "home" games

• Despite a monster last-minute advertising campaign, the Cincinati game at the Civic Center had some empty seats, as a few people decided to stay home and watch on ESPN.

• Calipari criticized UMass fans at the first night of Abdow's, stating the crowd was so quiet "they must have been on drugs."

• UMass Interim Athletic Director Glen Wong said the Abdow's Tournament would remain at the Civic Center next season, despite the Mullins Center being available.

• When ESPN's Jim Valvano entered the media room before the Cincinnati game, just hours after a Sports Illustrated cover story about the former North Carolina State coach's battle with cancer hit newsstands, he was as lighthearted as ever.

Valvano walked up to the media meal table, where a spread of cold cuts was waiting for him, and asked where the pasta was.

"You got a guy named Calipari as the head coach and I can't even get a little pasta in his own building?" Valvano joked.

• No one was more upset at the Abdow's outcome than Alabama-Birmingham. UAB, who arrived in Springfield with a 10-1 record, was expected to challenge for the tournament title but ended up going 0-2.

UAB Coach Gene Bartow refused to do his own radio show after the consolation game loss to Holy Cross, and an assistant athletic director was so disgusted with his team's performance he failed to stay for the UMass-South Carolina final.

He proved to be the only member of the 23 voters who did not pick Tony Barbee as the Tournament MVP. His selection was Bill Walker of Holy Cross.

Atlantic 10 expansion

• Although Duquesne officials won't admit it, the school's return to the Atlantic 10 is because the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, which they are currently a member of, is slated to lose its automatic NCAA bid next season.

Dayton, a member of the MCC, will move into the Great Midwest Conference next season and league membership will slip to seven, at which time the NCAA is expected to take away its bid. With Duquesne gone the MCC seems to be on shaky ground.

A-10 Commissioner Ron Bertovich said in November the league was looking to expand by one member this year and three after next season, creating the Atlantic 12.

Xavier, LaSalle, and Evansville (which all currently compete in the MCC), Delaware, James Madison and Richmond are all prime candidates.

• The A-10s biggest obstacle to expansion may be its lack of a football league. Three conference teams — Temple, Rutgers and West Virginia — all have

Turn to A-10 NOTEBOOK, page 6

20% one item discount with this ad
DISCOUNT SURPLUS
• Couches • Carpets • Beds
• Chairs • Desks • Lamps
(413) 586-7202
206 Russell St. (Rt. 9) Hadley, MA
We take in consignments
Cash • Personal Checks • Major Credit Cards Accepted

This Space for Rent.
Contact the Collegian's advertising department for more info.

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
WECOME BACK
MIKE'S SPECIALS
This Week
All Vodka Drinks
One Dollar
Vodka & Soda, Screw Drivers, Cape Codders, etc...etc!
Rolling Rock Pitchers...$4.50
Best Pitchers...$3.50
Bud Dry Bottles...$1.00
Mon Night - FREE Buffet
Wed is Guest Bartender Night
This Weeks Guest Bartender is
JEN ANEZIS
This THURSDAY is BUD NIGHT
FREE PRIZES - T SHIRTS Etc.

Simply Delicious
Route 9 & S. Maple Street • Hadley • 586-3375
Between Hampshire & Mt. Farms Mall
The Diner of the 21st Century
DINER SATISFACTION GUARANTEED!
NOW OPEN!!
24 HOURS!
Breakfast • Lunch • Dinner
All Day...EVERY DAY!!!
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
– 24 Hour Opening Specials –
WITH THIS COUPON
2 BURGERS & A LARGE SODA
$2.00 + tax
NO OTHER DISCOUNTS APPLY
EXPIRES 2/28/93
HIGHER PRICE PREVAILS
NO OTHER DISCOUNTS APPLY
WITH THIS COUPON
BUY ANY 9" GRINDER at reg. price
GET THE SECOND GRINDER
1/2 PRICE!!!
NO OTHER DISCOUNTS APPLY
EXPIRES 2/28/93
HIGHER PRICE PREVAILS
NO OTHER DISCOUNTS APPLY

Women's hoop sees success

Minutewomen win four in a row during intersession

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

If you want an example of the word "improvement," look no further than the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team. Even if head coach Joanie O'Brien's club were to lose their remaining 13 games, the team (5-7) would still have a better record than last year.

What is even more impressive about the current turnaround is that of the Minutewomen's seven losses, five of them have been decided by six points or less. Also, UMass has won four of its last five after starting out the year 1-6. Now that is improvement.

Here is a brief recap of each UMass game over the break:

OHIO STATE 81, UMASS 48

The Minutewomen were overwhelmed by the rising meteorite of Ohio State, who have recently shot into the Top 10 nationally. UMass was pressed into 31 turnovers against the very physical Buckeyes. Ohio State's starting backcourt of Audrey Burcy (six steals in 15 minutes) and Averill Roberts (13 points and three steals) led the attack.

Buckeye forward Katie Smith (17 points, five steals) and center Nikki Keyton (12 points, six rebounds) were too tough inside for the Minutewomen.

The lone bright spots for the Minutewomen were the play of the frontcourt tandem of senior Kim Kristofik (16 points, 13 rebounds, four steals) and freshman center Melissa Gurile (10 points, six rebounds).

Wagner Tournament
WAGNER 58, UMASS 52

The Minutewomen nearly pulled off a comeback victory after falling behind 37-26 at the half. Tough defense forced Wagner into abominable shooting (5-28, 17.9 percent) and allowed UMass to get back into the game.

UMass freshman Octavia Thomas led the way for the Minutewomen with 21 points while Gurile (14 points, nine rebounds) had another strong showing.

However, Wagner made their free throws (11-for-14 in the second half) down the stretch and they held on for the victory. Wagner was led by forward Kristee Chaplin (13 points, four assists) and guard Brenda Milano (nine points, six assists, and eight rebounds) and Patti Winterfeldt (14 points, 10 rebounds).

YALE 56, UMASS 54

In the consolation round of the Wagner tournament, the Minutewomen again fought hard before falling at the end. UMass outshot Yale 47.8 percent to 35.5 percent, but Yale, due to eight more rebounds and nine less turnovers, got off 16 more shots than the Minutewomen.

Gurile led UMass in the scoring department with 18 points, and she had four blocks to boot. The play of the two freshman guards was impressive as well.

Kim Gregory knocked down three treys and piled up 17 points while Tricia Hopson dished out five assists when turning the ball over just once in 26 minutes off the bench. Thomas pounded the boards up front for the Minutewomen as she had 13 boards.

UMASS 59, CENTRAL CONNECTICUT 45

The Minutewomen came up with a much-needed victory on the road as they cruised past CCSU. Pounding the boards, the Minutewomen outrebounded CCSU by 17, 47-30. In addition, they forced CCSU into 29 turnovers.

Gregory had another explosive night for UMass as she poured in a team-high 13 rebounds and three steals.

Kim Kristofik helped Gurile out up front as she had 14 points, snatched seven rebounds and doled out a team-high five assists. Guard Andrea Hartman and forward Paige Martin, with 15 and 11 points respectively, led the way for CCSU.

UMASS 60, SIENA 43

After three straight games on the road, the Minutewomen treated the home fans at the Curry Hicks Cage to a second straight victory. The frontcourt led the way for UMass as the Minutewomen out-rebounded the Saints 44-33 and held the Saints to 30.5 percent shooting.

Kristofik had an excellent all-around game for UMass as she had 14 points, 10 rebounds and four assists. Octavia Thomas shot a torrid eight-for-nine from the floor to finish with 16 points. Gurile continued her impressive play in the post with 16 points, eight rebounds, and two blocks.

For the Saints, mad gunner Tammy Smith drilled three trifectas while on her way to a game-high 17 points.

UMASS 66, TEMPLE 63

On the road to Philadelphia, the Minutewomen came back from a six-point deficit and came away with their first regular season Atlantic 10 victory in three years. A late 6-0 run enabled UMass to get past the Owls.

Kristofik paced the way for UMass with 18 points. Thomas scored 16 points, many of them in clutch moments. Gregory, meanwhile, helped out in the backcourt with 14 points. UMass outscored the Owls 38-14 in the backcourt. Temple guard Chantel Adkins scored 15 points with four 3-points.

UMASS 88, HOFSTRA 53

With a blowout of the Flying Dutchwomen, UMass made it four victories in a row. UMass widened a four-point halftime lead (at one point in the first half, Hofstra had a 26-18 lead) with fierce defense (Hofstra shot 40 percent in the first half, 17.9 in the second half), tough rebounding (UMass had 56 boards, Hofstra 36) and white-hot shooting (64.5 percent in the second half).

Kristofik led the way for UMass again, as she pumped in 22 points and grabbed nine rebounds. Gurile wreaked havoc in the paint as she scored 20 points, snagged eight boards and blocked three shots.

Octavia Thomas (11 points) hit the glass for a team-high 11 rebounds while Tricia Hopson (seven points) dished out a team-high seven assists. Gregory and Gloria Nevarez each chipped in with eight points.

TEMPLE 46, UMASS 40

It was payback time for Temple as the Owls ended UMass' four-game win streak with a hard-fought, sloppy (47 total turnovers) victory. UMass trailed by 15 with 12 minutes to go but nearly pulled it out with a 12-3 run before Temple regrouped and came away with the win.

Octavia Thomas scored 12 points for the Minutewomen to lead the way while Gurile chipped in 10 points, 1' rebounds and four blocks.

For Temple, Chantel Adkins continued to bomb away as she knocked down three treys on her way to twelve points

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 7

Duquesne back in Atlantic 10

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 is ,ow the Atlantic 8, but next year will be the Atlantic 9.

Confused? You should be, because for the second time in two years, Duquesne University is leaving their conference. This time, Duquesne is leaving the Midwestern Collegiate Conference and returning to the Atlantic 10 Conference, from which it left last January.

The Pittsburgh school left the A-10 last winter reportedly due to a need to revive Mid-Atlantic rivalries. Duquesne was reportedly upset that LaSalle University was not admitted to the A-10 and decided to join the MCC with LaSalle.

But things have apparently changed in the last 12 months, enough to make Duquesne reconsider its current stature. With the University of Dayton leaving the MCC for the Great Midwest, the conference will not get an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament next year.

While Duquesne officials dismissed notions that this was the reason, President Murray did say, "We came across information not shared with us during the recruiting process, and we are in a process where we continue to assess and reassess our position."

Duquesne is a charter member of the Atlantic 10 Conference, which was formed prior to the 1976-77 season. The Dukes will rejoin the A-10 effective July 1, 1993. The athletic directors of the conference voted unanimously to reinstate the school.

"The A-10 has reached a new level of excellence —both on and off the playing fields — and Duquesne University will again be a part of that," A-10 commissioner Ron Bertovich said. "When Duquesne approached us about returning to the conference, Dr. Murray made it clear he believes the A-10 is the best place for the Dukes' athletic program.

"Duquesne University had always been a valued member of the A-10 Conference and we are pleased to have Duquesne with us," he said.

University of Massachusetts head basketball coach John Calipari was just as excited as Duquesne.

"I think it's great," he said. "It makes the conference stronger. I get to go back to Pittsburgh." Calipari is a native of Moon, Pennsylvania, and was a former assistant to Paul Evans at the University of Pittsburgh.

THE COLLEGIAN. WHEN YOU WANT THE LATEST UMASS SPORTS RESULTS.

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202
Free Parking 北京園
on Route 9, Hadley

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics
BEST Machines
BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Bxercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

Who's been making Amherst's finest Pizza since 1967?
SLICE OF PIZZA 89¢
BELL'S Pizza HOUSE
PIZZA
549-1311
65 University Drive • Amherst
Serving the Valley for over a quarter century
1967 - 1993
BELL'S PIZZA HOUSE

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR
&
AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
Imports& other unibody vehicles are our specialty
Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
REMEMBER
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157
256-1385
Shop Reg #RS1212

recap

continued from page 2

"This might've been the biggest win we've had, coming off those losses. I'm proud of this team."

Massachusetts 76, Geo. Wash. 68

This game wasn't as close as the score indicated, because UMass took the Colonials out of the game from the opening tip-off, when Lou Roe outleapt the much heralded Yinka Dare. UMass jumped out to an 18-2 lead, and 10 minutes had gone by before a player other than Dare had scored for GW.

Roe had 16 points and 14 rebounds, while Dare only mustered 6 points and four rebounds. George Washington could not or would not get him the ball, and when Dare had the ball, reserve Jeff Meyer contested his shots.

"[Dare] damn sure looks intimidating," said Roe. "The key is to try not to let him get the ball too close to the basket, and keep him out of the game by getting him into foul trouble."

Leading UMass offensively was Tony Barbee, who scored 24 points, 12 of which came on free throws.

The Colonials, who fell to 0-3 in the Atlantic 10, began fouling the Minutemen when they were only trailing 57-47 with five minutes left in the ball game. From there, George Washington could only shave two points off the final margin.

Massachusetts 84, Rhode Island 72

The Minutemen (9-4, 3-1 in the Atlantic 10) reverted to old form, taking Rhode Island (10-4, 2-1 A-10) out of the game early and winning their eighth in a row against the Rams. Lou Roe (20 points, 10 rebounds) and Jerome Malloy (21 points) were a combined 16-for-21 from the field, and the Minutemen led by as much as 28 points before mailing in the last seven minutes of the game.

UMass fell behind 10-5 after the first five minutes of the game, but jumped out in front two minutes later when Dana Dingle showed off his jump shot to put the team up 12-10 with 12:56 left. The Minutemen never looked back, and by the end of the game, their thoughts jumped to Temple and sweet revenge at the Cage.

Massachusetts 52, Temple 50

Unbelievable.

In one of the greatest games in Curry Hicks Cage history, the Minutemen, by virtue of their best player's triumphant return from injury and their second best player's last second shot, exacted revenge on Temple by defeating the Owls for only the second time in 24 tries.

Shocking nearly every spectator in the building, Harper Williams returned only 27 days after breaking his hand, but it was Tony Barbee who stole the show with his second chance jumper to give UMass a 52-50 win.

"The last few seconds were kind of crazy," said Barbee. "I thought 'oh my God, I missed,' got the ball back and just let it fly.

UMass (10-4) had a nine-point lead with 5:43 left in the game, but Temple's Aaron McKie caught fire. A layup and a dunk by McKie cut the lead to five, and Derrick Battie hit a layup to cut the lead to three. After Mike Williams hit one free throw, McKie hit from three-point land to cut the lead to one.

With 2:58 left, Rick Brunson hit a layup to put Temple up by one, and McKie hit another three-pointer to give Temple a four-point lead. What followed was simply miraculous.

Jerome Malloy missed a free throw, but Lou Roe rebounded the miss and put the ball in off the glass to cut the lead to two. After stopping Temple, Harper Williams was fouled and hit two free throws to tie the game, 50-50.

With 1:13 left Temple should have shot quickly in order to get the ball back, in essence playing two shots for UMass' one. They didn't, instead winding the shot clock all the way down to one before McKie attempted a desperation shot with 27 seconds left that wasn't close.

A-10 notebook

continued from page 4

Division 1 football programs and all currently compete in the Big East for football. If the Big East looks to expand for all sports, those three schools would be likely candidates.

Rutgers has also spoken with the Big Ten about becoming its 12th member. West Virginia basketball coach Gale Catlett said he wants his school to become the 10th member of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Other Notes

• The best line from the Duquesne teleconference came when a Pittsburgh reporter facetiously called out to Ray Cella, A-10 director of communication.

"Ray, Bruce Parkhill [Penn State men's basketball coach] here. I want back in the conference."

• UMass recruits Tyrone Weeks, a 6-foot-7 forward from Philadelphia's Franklin Learning Center and Edgar Padilla, a 6-foot-3 guard playing in Puerto Rico, have yet to pass their SATs.

Both reportedly scored 660 on the test. A 700 is needed to be eligible to play.

UMass' two other recruits, Hartford's 6-foot-10 Marcus Camby and Thayer (Braintree, Mass.) Academy guard Carmelo Traveiso have both already made the grade and will play next season.

• In a sign of how ugly college recruiting can be, some rival coaches spread the word that Weeks and Padilla scored in the neighborhood of 400 on the SAT. The idea is to create bad publicity for UMass and so if either player passes his test, it will look like he cheated.

• UMass' Prop 48 casualty this season, Donta Bright, said he earned a 2.8 GPA last fall.

• After the UMass-Temple game in Philadelphia, Calipari and Temple assistant coach Dean Demopoulos engaged in a heated argument, apparently about recruiting practices.

Temple is still in the running for Philadelphia's 6-foot-11 Rasheed Wallace, considered by many to be the top high school player in the country. The Minutemen had been recruiting Wallace until Camby committed to UMass.

Demopoulos asserted that UMass was still recruiting Wallace and thus hindering his efforts. Calipari, who has already committed all four of his scholarships for next season, said that was ridiculous and berated Demopoulos for "trashing the UMass program."

After a few minutes of jawing at each other, Calipari walked away.

• The best rumor about next season's UMass schedule is a possible Minutemen-Kentucky match-up in the Mullins Center, to be televised nationally on CBS.

UMass is already slated to play Oklahoma (away), DePaul (away) and Florida State (home), while Notre Dame looks to be the featured opponent at Abdow's.

• When Chris Robinson dunked in the final seconds of the UMass-Boston University game he became the final Minuteman to score this season.

• The top three UMass dunks thus far: 3) Walk-on Craig Berry's two handed jam, on a nice feed from Giddel Padilla, in the second half of the BU game.

2) Harper Williams' baseline, double-pump dunk in the Siena game.

1) Lou Roe's astounding one-handed, baseline, monster-slam over Temple's Derrick Battie in the UMass-Owl game at the Cage.

College Basketball Notebook

College hoop has given us many different things over the break: zaniness, tragedy, upsets, classic battles and so on and so forth. Here is the College Basketball Notebook for winter break.

Surprise, surprise: Virginia was the final undefeated team in the nation, surprising everyone before running into North Carolina, who I must begrudgingly say are playing as good as any team in the nation. The Cavaliers are playing tough two-way basketball, but despite the victory at Duke, I am still not completely sold on Virginia.

Jeff
CROFTS

Vulnerable: Even before the loss to Virginia, the Blue Devils have looked vulnerable (see Oklahoma and Iowa) this year. Something is missing, and I'm trying to figure out what it is. Grant Hill is absolutely incredible, Bobby Hurley is still Bobby Hurley and Thomas Hill is an underrated player, but something is lacking. Did someone say Christian Laettner?

Hawkeye tragedy: It is said many times in the tragic death of a young athlete, but the unfortunate passing of Iowa forward Chris Street puts things into perspective. Basketball is just a game, although it is hard to remember that sometimes. Street, who was killed in a car accident, will be remembered in Iowa City for his intense play on the court.

BC Eagles rise and then fall: I was extremely quiet when Boston College rose into the Top 25 after a string of Big East victories. Surprisingly, I am still quiet after three straight losses dropped them back out of the Top 25. It would be nice to see a UMass-BC battle in the NCAAs. I want to see it. Badly.

Kansas a complete team: The best overall team in the NCAA is Kansas as the AP poll says so. Rex Walters is starting to play like he is on a mission, while everyone else on the Jayhawks is quietly doing their jobs very well. Darrin Hancock has not exploded the way I envisioned he would, but he is doing a tremendous job on the overlooked things like offensive rebounding and defense.

Georgia Tech on skids: After beating Duke at home, Georgia Tech has responded by losing their next three games. One of those losses came at the hands of the College of Charleston, which sounds like a team John Thompson would schedule.

Mr. Robinson's Neighborhood: Purdue's Glenn Robinson has made the most impact of any newcomer into the college ranks. He can do it all. Robinson vs. Chris Webber will be the matchup of the '90s.

Visit the Bakery in Hartford: Vin Baker continues to pile up numbers for the University of Hartford and will soon be NBA bound. Did somone say Reggie Lewis? It looks like Baker could be taking a similar route as the Celtics star.

Finally, a telegram just arrived from Temple University addressed to Lou Roe: Lou, dunk you very much for treating me to the Spalding Sandwich you fed me at the Cage, the leather was very tasty. I enjoyed it very much. Hope to have another one very soon. Sincerely, Derrick Battie.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist

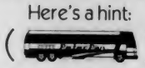
There's A New Way to Get to Mt. Tom.
Here's a hint:


Now it's even easier to ski closer to home! And purchasing a combination bus/lift ticket saves you money, too! Take the Peter Pan bus, any day of the week, from any one of these locations and enjoy great skiing day and night at nearby Mt. Tom:
AMHERST/UMASS HARTFORD
NORTHAMPTON MIDDLETOWN
SPRINGFIELD MERIDEN
BRIDGEPORT NEW HAVEN
Mt. TOM SKI AREA Peter Pan Trailways
Route 5, Holyoke, MA • Call Peter Pan for Info: 781-2900

OCEAN FRONT
Fun! Fun!
Plenty of Pool Deck Action
Prizes • Contests
D.J. • Pool Bar
CHECKERS CAFE
SPECIAL RATES
1- 4 From
$88
LIMITED AVAILABILITY
DAYTONA BEACH FLORIDA
THE DAYTONA INNS
BROADWAY • SEABREEZE
219 S. ATLANTIC AVE • DAYTONA BEACH, FL 32118

ALL BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
QUARTER POUNDERS
BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241
ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

January a hectic month for Boston sports fan

For those of you who were stuck in Amherst all winter break and were subjected to the monotony of the western Massachusetts sports scene, I feel for you. (Really, how much news can one take about the Springfield Indians?)

Reigning from the sports mecca of Boston, I, however, spent my January consuming all the Boston sports anyone, outside of Eddie Andelman, could possibly handle.

Long gone are the days of 1985-86 where all four area sports teams found their way into the championships of their respective sports. However, like my old Toyota, the Boston sports scene can still heat up for some great times.

So in case you were in Amherst over break or had your head in the ground (I remind you they are one and the same) here are the Top Ten big things that happened in Boston sports over January.

10 — The death of Johnny Most. The greatest hoop announcer of all time passed away, but sadly, Most will never make the Hall of Fame because of the biased manner in which he broadcasted Celtics games. While many will say "Havlicek stole the ball" was Johnny's greatest call, my generation will always remember Game Six of the Eastern Conference Finals as Johnny's best. "Allllllllll right, Thomas to inbound...AND BIRD STEALS IT, OVER TO DJ LAYS IT IN!."

9 — Boston College Football. This team has the distinction of being the only Boston organization I don't like. Watching this football team on New Year's only made my break sweeter.

B.C. rode the greatest wave of media hype since the Royal Rumble, and just like wrestling they proved to be a bunch of fakes as Tennesee stomped, mauled and Buttafuocoed its way to a Hall of Fame Bowl victory.

There are three reasons I don't like B.C. Football: A) The media hyped this team to be as great as the '72 Dolphins, while everyone knew they weren't; B) At the start of the season, the Eagles claimed they were playing for a teammate who had died of cancer, yet on Bowl week, B.C. never mentioned his name; C) Finally, Tom Coughlin was rehired at the end of the season, despite having offers from the NY Giants, to a contract of $500,000 a year. At a press conference, Coughlin made it seem like loyalty kept him at B.C., until a reporter asked if B.C. offered him more money. Of course his reply was yes.

8 — The Red Sox and arbitration. What would any New England winter be like without the rumblings for more money? Both John Dopson and Luis Rivera went to arbitration and both got raises. Rivera found his way to another deal worth over a million a year. Dopson, who did not play last year, was given a $200,000 increase.

Jason
NASH

They didn't have money for the greatest player in baseball, Barry Bonds. However, they did have enough to sign a pitcher who hasn't played in a year and a shortstop who had the fourth worst fielding percentage in the league.

7 — Peter Gammons. Not an actual event, but still a great reason to love Boston sports. This Boston Globe columnist would be better in the front office than most general managers in the league, including Lou Gorman.

6 — Brett Hull trade rumors. I know it will never happen, but it's great to dream. Because of Hull's lackluster start (yet he's still in the top ten in goals scored), the word around St. Louis is that he wants out. Wouldn't the reuniting of Hull 'n Oates create some sweet music around the "Gaaahden"?

5 — The Celtics. The C's started their winter break as ugly as Chelsea Clinton and ended as perfect as the Gore daughters. After going 1-4 on their West Coast trip, the Celtics regrouped at home and peeled off 8 of 10, including seven in a row. Granted this is no Championship team, but it is a good team and a playoff team.

4 — Wade Boggs. As The Boston Globe put it, "Gotham has got its Batman." Indeed it has, as Wade Boggs signed with the New York Yankees for more than three million a year. Boggs claims that the Red Sox brainwashed players to hate the Yankees and was happy to be on the other side of one of sports oldest rivalries.

3 — Marcus Webb. Marcus, Marcus, Marcus. Couldn't you have thought of a better excuse than being stopped by the police? I'd like to believe you, but no one in that entire area saw you get stopped. You said you recall one of the officers being named "Smith," but it turns out that no one on either the Brookline or Newton forces are named Smith.

With all the racial strife in Boston, Webb's action just adds to the problems and the stigma about racism the city has. Remember about three years ago when Dee Brown was in Wellseley center and police officers held him on the ground at gunpoint outside a bank, thinking he was a former bank robber? (You know how those bank robbers always return to the scene of the crime.)

2 — Bill Parcells. Suprisingly, Mr. Parcells took a worse situation than the one offered in Tampa Bay one year ago by taking the job as the Patriots' head coach. Tampa offered him everything but Disney World last year, and according to close friend Will McDounough, Parcells needed some time off last season, but found he really missed coaching. It's clear Parcells is the best man for the job.

1 — Drum roll please. Meeting Larry Bird. While attending a Celtics-Rockets game, I was lucky enough to sit next to where Larry Bird, Dave Gavitt and all the Celtics brass were sitting. I'd like to say a ray of sunshine broke out in the Garden as I met him, but it didn't, although I did shake his hand and say, "You're the greatest."

After the game Larry made his way, ugly sweater and all, across the Garden parquet into the locker room while about 1,000 remaining fans gave him a standing ovation. A young boy in front of me asked his father who Bird was and the father replied, "That's the greatest player ever." A little dramatic sir, but I could not agree with you more.

There you have it, one of the most exciting Januarys for Boston sports in recent memories. Back to school and Amherst. Hey, anyone know who won the Temple game?

women's hoop

continued from page 5

Forward Margarete Rougier led the Owls with 14 points.

Minutewomen notes: Guard Maleeka Valentine has returned from an early season leg injury to claim a starting role in the backcourt.

Gurile, who leads the Minutewomen in scoring (15.8 ppg), rebounding (7.9 rpg) and blocks (2.3 per game) has twice been named Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week.

Note: As of press time, the results of Saturday's St. Bonaventure and Monday's George Washington game were not available.

WRITE FOR COLLEGIAN SPORTS
FIND OUT HOW AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER
ASK FOR MIKE.

Walking Distance
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst • 253-3539
Free Weights Supreme
Best Cardiovascular

SUNDAY BRUNCH BUFFET
Fitzwilly's
TWO FOR ONE
Purchase one burnch buffet at $10.95 and receive a second FREE. Served every Sunday from 10:30 till 3 P.M..
Expires March 1, 1993
Valid UMASS Id required for discount
Fitzwilly's restaurant bar
23 Main Street Northampton 584-8666

NORTHAMPTON BOWL

Thursday Night College Special
3 Games for $5.00
Offer Valid with College I.D.
525 Pleasant St, Northampton, MA 01060 • (413) 584-2491

TIME OUT
Tonite
BUD NIGHT
Free Prizes, T-shirts, etc
Free Antonio's Pizza
every Tuesday & Wednesday 10 - ?

BLOW SALE
Rich's
Army/Navy and casual clothes store
Pea Coats $45
Flannel Shirts $10
OUT OUT OUT
OUT OUT OUT
Reversible Winter Coats $30
All Merchandise 1/2 Price
(All sales final)
(No other coupons or discounts apply)
Sweaters $10
Sweats $5
Sale January 28 through February 14
24 Center St. Northampton • 586-0275
- Next to the Iron Horse Cafe -

Cover photo by JOSH REYNOLDS, inset photos by JOSH REYNOLDS and ANDY CARVALHO

Thursday January 28, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 65

Cloudy with light snow in the afternoon, highs in the low 30s.

Local News:
Former Sandinista ambassador Francisco Campbell explains the intentions of the Sandinistan government to break with Nicaragua's colonial past. Page 3.

Arts & Living:
The Material Girl proves once again she has no acting ability whatsoever in her latest lame joke of a film. Page 7.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Chancellor search process underway

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

A committee has started reviewing candidates for chancellor of the UMass-Amherst campus and hope to have a list of finalists completed in time to have the new chancellor in place before Richard O'Brien leaves the post.

There are 70 applicants vying for the position being vacated by O'Brien who is ending his two-year tenure as interim chancellor at the end of this semester.

The 15-member search committee, made up of University officials, students and professors, started the process in October and advertised for a new chancellor throughout the late fall. They hope to find a new chancellor by the time O'Brien leaves, according to Chairperson Rina Spence.

The committee will review the candidate's applications and make recommendations to University President Michael K. Hooker, said committee member Abél Ponce de Leon, an associate professor in the Department of Veterinary and Animal Sciences. Hooker will then send his recommendations and those of the committee to the University's Board of Trustees, which will make the final decision, Ponce de Leon said.

"It is going to be an exhaustive process," Ponce de Leon said.

Graduate Student Senate President Marc Kenen said he personally would like to see a new chancellor able "to understand the needs of undergraduate and graduate education and public research. That is going to be a lot so we need a special person."

Kenen, a doctoral student in the School of Education, said he would like to see a person that understands UMass's diversified campus.

"It is a tremendous challenge finding the person because so many different needs are placed on that person," Kenen said.

Because the chancellor may be on campus for the next 15 years, Ponce de Leon also said that he would like to see the new chancellor be aware and sensitive to creating a multicultural and diverse campus.

The new chancellor should also have scholarly credentials, according to Ponce de Leon.

Roger S. Porter, former head of the department of Polymer Science and En-

Turn to CHANCELLOR, page 6

ANNA CONKLIN / C

NEXT TIME I'LL LEND YOU A QUARTER FOR THE METER OKAY? — Computer graphics major Douglas Mazza, class of '94, prepares for Phi Mu Delta's spring rush with something sure to frustrate Amherst Towing.

Weld 'grinch' on education in '94 budget

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — Gov. William F. Weld proposed a $15.2 billion budget for fiscal year 1994 Wednesday that critics instantly labeled a fraud because it does not contain $361 million for education.

Weld said he is willing to revisit the budget and make cuts to come up with the education funds if the Legislature passes a reform package now before the House.

"I'm always happy to be the grinch, as I've said in the past," Weld said.

But Weld refused to tip his hand and say where the money would come from, although he said draft versions of his budget included the funds. "One thing I like about this approach is I think it does keep the heat on for passage of the ed reform bill," he said.

The budget assumes a 4.5 percent growth in tax revenue to $10.46 billion, with no new taxes, and would raise $100 million through new lottery gambling games. It calls for tax breaks for tuition costs and health care for the elderly.

The $15.2 billion spending is about $1 billion more than the governor proposed spending this year, and is about $300 million higher than the state is actually expected to spend by the end of this fiscal year June 30.

Weld, a fiscal conservative, has defended the spending as realistic given state revenues, despite criticism from democrats.

The governor said he believes Wall Street will look on the budget favorably in evaluating the state's fiscal health. "I think that they feel that this is a budget which is in structural balance and that's good news," he said.

Bond rating agencies recently upgraded Massachusetts' bond rating after the state recorded the lowest in the nation during the height of its fiscal problems.

The administration says the budget is balanced without relying on one-time "gimmicks" to raise revenues, and reflects increased control over growth in "budget buster" accounts like Medicaid that

Turn to WELD, page 10

Spike Lee to visit UM campus

Malcolm X director to kick off Black History Month

COURTESY AFRIK-AM SOCIETY

Filmmaker Spike Lee

By MARTIN JONES
Collegian Staff

Filmmaker Spike Lee, writer-director of the autobiographical Malcolm X, is set to speak at the Fine Arts Center next week, kicking off Black History Month events at the University.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Afrik-Am Society, a student organization highlighting the cultural contributions of African-Americans.

Kay West, president of the Afrik-Am Society, said she was excited for Lee's visit, calling it "a great start for Black History Month."

"We invited Spike to UMass because of his ability to draw a diverse audience," she said. "We hope this event can bring students together at the University."

Spike Lee is planning to discuss racism in America during his lecture and will address last semester's racial incidents which sparked campus-wide protests and attracted the attention of national media.

At age 36, Spike Lee has established himself as America's premier Black filmmaker, independently producing six films over the last seven years. Many of Lee's films have become well known for their focus on racial issues in America.

Since the release of She's Gotta Have It in 1987, Spike Lee has produced, written, directed and acted in all six of his films, and has received numerous film awards. Lee was also nominated for an academy award for his screenplay of the 1989 release, Do the Right Thing.

Lee's most recent film Malcolm X is playing in theaters nationwide and has been highly acclaimed by

Turn to LEE, page 6

Marshall honored at high court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thurgood Marshall's body was returned today to the Supreme Court building where he won his greatest victory as a civil rights lawyer and later became the nation's first Black justice.

"The battle done, the Victory won. . . the songs of triumph have begun, hallelujah," said the Rev. Kawsai Thornell, canon of the Washington Cathedral, who led the procession into the imposing court building on Capitol Hill.

The marble-columned Great Hall was opened to allow people to file past and view Marshall's coffin. The line stretched around the block on a cold, sunny winter day. The building was to remain open for at least 10 hours.

Marshall, who died Sunday at age 84, became only the second Supreme Court Justice to be honored by having his casket lie in state at the court. He retired from the court 18 months ago.

"I'm here because I owe him quite a bit," said Donald Adams, a Black retired government worker who arrived at 6:45 a.m. to become the first person in line for the public viewing.

"My family owes him quite a bit, this country owes him quite a bit," Adams said of the man he never met.

Print shop supervisor Arthur Williams of Washington said he had met Marshall several times, and admired him "for opening doors, for being an architect of the law."

"He was Mr. Integration to us," Williams said. Erold Jean Francois, an immigrant from Haiti who now attends school in Miami, said, "We can see the impact that he has

Turn to MARSHALL, page 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inès Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor .....

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Clinton to rescind ban on gays

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton sent Defense Secretary Les Aspin to Capitol Hill and worked the phones himself yesterday to lobby in favor of allowing gays in the military. The White House said Clinton would not back down from his pledge to lift the ban, but tried to mute criticism by saying he also would propose a strict military conduct code.

Clinton personally called Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn to discuss Nunn's stiff opposition to lifting the ban, the White House said as Clinton delayed for at least one day his policy announcement as he tried to quell the protest.

Clinton communications director George Stephanopoulos acknowledged the White House was receiving "a fair amount" of phone calls opposing Clinton's position, but said the new president was undaunted by the outcry.

"He believes that individuals should not be prevented from serving their country solely on the basis of status," Stephanopoulos said. "I think that the president understood when he made this decision that it was likely to be a controversial decision."

The Clinton spokesman insisted the firestorm would not distract Clinton from other pressing duties, putting the finishing touches on his economic plan and searching for an attorney general chief among them. But it was clear that Clinton's decision to go ahead with lifting the military's ban on gays was testing Clinton's mettle in his earliest days in the White House.

BU officials to be investigated

BOSTON (AP)- Boston University has hired an outside auditor to investigate reports that its administrators and trustees benefitted financially from unethical business dealings with the university.

The move follows attacks on BU President John Silber by his own faculty and other critics. University officials said Silber, the outspoken 1990 Democratic nominee for governor, ordered the examination himself.

"We cannot sit back any longer allowing anonymous sources to attack us," said Kevin Carleton, the university's spokesman.

The attorney general's office also is investigating BU's president, trustees and other top administrators and their business dealings.

Catleton said Wednesday that the accounting firm Coopers & Lybrand had been hired to examine whether there have been conflicts of interest. The firm has been given access to BU financial records and to the personal records of Silber and other university officials.

Silber himself was in Germany Wednesday and could not be reached.

Reports of wrongdoing have been swirling around the university since documents surfaced showing Silber made $386,700 from the 1988 sale of Seradyn, Inc. a medical diagnostic company BU controlled. Silber has denied profiting from Seradyn, and has questioned the documents' accuracy.

Newspapers have reported that BU invested in companies in which its retired treasurer and former chief investment adviser, medical school chief and other top university officials owned stock; and that have university contracts. Most are law firms and consulting companies.

And when Silber ran for governor, at least one-fourth of the 51 people on his finance committee reportedly were business executives who had dealings with BU. Their duties included running fund-raising events and asking friends and business associates to contribute.

A non-profit, tax-exempt institution, the university is prohibited by law from becoming involved in political campaigns. But Carleton said he saw nothing wrong with individual contractors raising money for Silber.

"Individuals are free to associate and participate in a political campaign," he said. "That is their right. It's in the Constitution."

The faculty council, elected representatives of the university's 2,612 professors, released a two-page resolution Jan. 20 calling for a code of ethics covering the school's trustees and top administrators.

THE COLLEGIAN
is accepting applications NOW for typists & a librarian.
Interested students should contact Michelle Bayliss, at
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Jason George
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

Police reported early Tuesday that two individuals were assaulted by two subjects in the lobby of Johnson and again outside the dorm. A male subject was taken to University Health Services and received sutures to close a laceration to his eye. The case is under investigation, police said.

In a separate incident, an off-campus argument resulted in a group of subjects chasing two individuals down Fearing Street and assaulting one subject.

Larceny

• An individual reported the theft of her ATM card to police Monday morning. The individual was notified in late January that close to $1,000 had been withdrawn from the bank. The case is still under investigation, police said.

• An individual reported late Tuesday the theft of a clothes hamper containing clothes from the curb while he was unloading his vehicle. Police estimate the value of the clothes at $210.

• Police received a report from an individual early Monday evening that a box of computer paper from his room during intersession. Police estimate the value of the paper of $100.

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
FIT FOR LIFE
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
•PVTA bus route to Rolling Green•
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics •
• steps • nautilus • racquetball •
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •
• stairmasters •
• student discounts •
Call about our 15-week Semester Special-$169
Ends 2 16

NORTHAMPTON BOWL
Thursday Night College Special
3 Games for $5.00
Offer Valid with College I.D.
Sunday Night Special From 8:30pm til close
99¢ per game
525 Pleasant Street
Northampton, MA 01060
(413) 584-2491

Local News

Duller than Chem 101?

The Daily Kent Stater, the student newspaper at Kent State University, listed the top 10 most boring things to do, as reported The Boring Institute.

The Boring Institute is one-man organization run by Alan Caruba in Maplewood, N.J. Living in Mapelwood, N.J. must really be boring.

The list is: 1) Standing in line, 2) Laundry 3) Commuting 4) Meetings 5) Diets 6) Exercises 7) Weeding lawn or garden 8) Housework 9) Political debates 10) Opening junk mail.

Out of the blue

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian apologizes to its readers for not getting an exclusive interview with teen-dream Debbie Gibson. Our friends at Boston University's Daily Free Press beat us to the punch, but to make up for it, "News from other U's" will provide the high (or low) lights.

You may remember Gibson as the perky, bouncy, blonde-haired musical talent, who provided us with such classics as "Electric Youth" and the dreamy "Lost in your eyes."

Gibson, now a mature 22, has changed from teenie-bopper to sex kitten. In her new video, "Losing myself," Gibson plays a striper.

"People right from the start wanted me to have this sexy image, and it took six years before I feel comfortable doing a sexier video or sexier music," Gibson told the Free Press. "[The media] says 'What is this?' when I'm being too goody-goody and 'What is this' when I'm being sexy.

Gibson, who has been critical of Madonna's book SEX, was not comfortable enough to pose nude in Playboy.

"I could never appear nude," Gibson said. "I wasn't flattered by the offer, I kind of figured that everyone gets asked to pose sooner or later."

Gibson went on to explain she doesn't wear her own perfume and how she is involved in the AIDS movement but as with her songs, their just is not much substance to Ms. Debbie.

Sounds familiar

Efforts to create a graduate student union at the University of Texas have apparently stalled out, according to The Daily Texan.

A group of 12 graduate students, who have been shunned at their own school, tried to pressure the Texas State Legislature to recognize them as a union. They failed.

The dozen think their political power is great enough to change policy in the state. Others think they are giving themselves too much credit.

"We can elect our employers who are state legislators," graduate student Andy Boeger said. "This gives us a certain amount of policy influence."

Twelve votes provide very little influence, according to Robert Ovetz, another graduate student.

"You are fooling yourself if you think you can screw UT by going to the Legislature," Ovetz said.

Jeff Lacher, a union organizer, agrees that the legislative approach won't work until there is greater unity.

"If it's 10 loud-mouthed students complaining to the Legislature, they don't care," Lacher said.

Loud-mouthed graduate students, who think they are influential? Sounds like a staff meeting of the UMass Grad Voice.

Sounds familiar, Part II

Following in the footsteps of our fair Amherst, the city of Kent, Ohio is currently battling with local drinking establishment, according to the Daily Kent Stater.

The City Council is appealing the issuance of a liquor permit to the Shark Club .

Cited as a reason to take away the liquor permit, Law Director Don Martell said area residents had complained about noise.

"There was fairly extensive testimony that there would be a detrimental impact on the neighborhood caused by the issuance of the permit," Martell said.

Quilt project decorates UMass

Gives students chance to express feelings on AIDS

By TOM KNIGHT
Collegian Correspondent

Students, faculty and staff from the Five College community are expressing their feelings about the impact of the AIDS/HIV crisis by stitching together squares for the "Beyond the Names" quilt project.

Using donated cloth, yarn, fabric markers, buttons, paper, glitter and other materials, 20 panels of 45 squares have been created so far.

"It has been such a powerful project," according to Myra Edelstein of the University of Massachusetts and Hampshire College Health Education offices.

The project is not meant to compete with the Names Project AIDS memorial quilt which preserves the memory of AIDS victims, but rather to provide a forum for students to express their feelings about the crisis.

"[The local quilt project] gives students a chance to express to other students how they feel about this crisis," Edelstein said. "It's about cherishing life, embracing diversity and being smart by practicing safe sex."

About a year ago, students from the Hampshire College Womens' Resource Center contacted educators from the Five College AIDS and STD Committee who were able to obtain one of only 10 available grants from the American College Health Association for the project.

Through the leadership of the Committee, the "Beyond the Names" quilts were displayed at all five campuses in honor of World AIDS Day during the week of Dec. 1.

Edelstein said she hopes the local quilt project will continue to grow and move throughout the Five College community. Quilt panel kit materials can be obtained from the University Health Education Office.

Not only a powerful education tool, the quilt project "is also an incredible piece of art," said Edelstein.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
A section in the "Beyond the Names" quilt project

The quilts are currently on display near Clinics 1, 2, and 3 on the first floor of the University Health Center. The public is invited to attend the University Health Service Gallery Opening on Feb. 11 from 5 to 7 p.m. where the "Beyond the Names" quilt will be featured.

Student gov't considers layoffs

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

Undergraduate Student Senate officials discussed the possibility of cutting some professional University staff positions last night, in lieu of an increase in the Student Activities Trust Fund fee to be used for salary raises.

"The Student Government feels very strongly that the Division of Student Activities is heavily overstaffed and that there are cuts that need to be made in the number of personnel," said Student Senate President Jen Wood. "Student Government will only support the increase if steps are being undertaken to reduce that number of personnel."

The proposal to increase the Student Activities Trust Fund fee resulted from a 13 percent pay increase for all state employees, which was passed by the State Legislature last December.

It would require an addition of $7.50 to the $112.50 that every University student pays each year to fund operation costs of Registered Student Organizations and salaries of Division of Student Affairs staff.

Wood said the Student Government Trustees are working with Vice Chancellor Thomas B. Robinson to restructure the Division of Student Activities and the Student Activities Office.

The Trustees hope that a plan can be worked to either eliminate the fee increase or, instead, use it for additional RSO funding, Wood said.

The Senate also voted to assist the Central, Northeast and Sylvan Area Government elections on Feb. 16, providing nomination papers, putting out and counting ballots, and other election tasks. The constitution of the Student Government Association calls for the committee's assistance in all Area Government elections.

The Senate also resolved that the SGA will hold its elections for student government president and student Trustee on March 9 and 10.

Sandinistas' objectives lauded

By JULIE OLSON
Collegian Correspondent

The Sandinista revolution's primary objective was to introduce "a new model, a new system that would transform social, political and economic structures inherited from the colonial past," said a former Sandinista ambassador last night.

Francisco Campbell, who was the Sandinista ambassador from 1982 to 1989, told an audience of about 60 people gathered in an Amherst College lecture hall that the point was not merely to change faces in Nicaragua's government, but to initiate a "profound transformation of society."

When the Sandinistas overthrew the Somoza regime in 1979, Nicaragua was troubled with such social and economic problems as no preventative health care programs, desperately needed agricultural lands in the possession of Somoza associates, and a population that was 52.5 percent illiterate.

Campbell said that the Sandinistas wanted to encourage "popular participation at all levels," saying that genuine democracy would be "inconceivable" without peasant landownership, strong social programs, and an economy that traded with more than one other country.

Campbell mentioned that the Sandinistan government brought Nicaragua's illiteracy rate down to less than 12 percent, but many similar successes were hampered by "profound confrontation with the United States, beginning with the Carter Administration," which he said never publicly favored the Sandinista revolution.

Campbell attributed the Sandinista electoral defeat in 1990 to the Reagan administration, which he said had "the sole objective of destroying the revolution."

By arming the Contras, Campbell said Reagan forced Nicaragua's struggling economy to spend money to defend itself, money it needed to repair its economy. The country was left financially crippled and its population was left disillusioned with the Sandinista approach.

Although the Chimorro administration defeated the Sandinistas in the 1990 election, Campbell called the government of Nicaragua today an "exciting paradox," because the Chamorro leadership currently in power is operating under a constitution which the Sandinistas drafted in 1987.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Former Sandinista ambassador, Francisco Campbell

"This is the first time that Latin America has had a government which is right of center, while hegemony remains on the side of the left," he explained.

Campbell called the role of the Sandinistas today "dynamic constructive opposition." He explained that while Chimorro attempts to repair the economy, the Sandinista party is still able to work among the Nicaraguan people, urging them to give the new government a chance. He expressed optimism about this consolidation, and about Nicaragua's future.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Clinton must lift the ban

There are three basic reasons President Bill Clinton should lift the ban on gays, lesbians and bisexuals in the military service. First, throughout last year's campaign, and in the most explicit terms possible, Clinton repeatedly promised to do it. Second, the ban is just plain wrong. Third, Clinton must demonstrate to the military that the president controls the armed forces, not the other way around.

Jonah
GELBACH

The first reason is important because President Clinton has shown a disturbing tendency to retreat from ironclad promises and principled stands made by candidate Clinton. He has backed away from the middle class tax cut, using as cover "new" deficit projections he knew about for several months.

He now "temporarily" supports ex-President George Bush's immoral and illegal — adjectives used by Clinton and his staff — policy on Haitian refugees. In the meantime, his secretary of state, Warren Christopher, shows less than enthusiastic support for Haiti's deposed but democratically elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. President Clinton is quickly losing whatever credibility candidate Clinton had.

The second reason Clinton must lift the ban is an ethical one — it is wrong to discriminate against people on the basis of their sexual orientation and discrimination should be tolerated at no level of federal government. Most people are familiar with the arguments the military and its supporters marshal against lifting the ban; as a New York Times reporter described the position of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, lifting the ban "would seriously undermine morale and discipline, disrupt military readiness and threaten recruiting."

It is difficult to believe that this fear is well-founded, since the military is all about hierarchy and discipline, and penalties for insubordination and poor conduct already exist. If the Chiefs are concerned about lack of discipline on the part of GLB soldiers, sailors, etc., they should consult the military's own code of conduct, which provides penalties for inappropriate sexual activity for heterosexuals; no one is asking that GLB members of the military be exempted from those same strict standards.

As for military readiness, I have a hard time believing that those same people who have been extolling our military ad nauseum over its performance in the Gulf War really believe that allowing openly GLB people to serve will harm military readiness, especially since they obviously want very much to serve in the military. And if ending the ban threatens recruiting, that's fine with me. The military needs to downsize anyway. And more importantly, I don't want public tax dollars spent to give lethal weapons and deadly training to intolerant or ignorant people who won't learn to judge people by the content of their character instead of the gender of their partner.

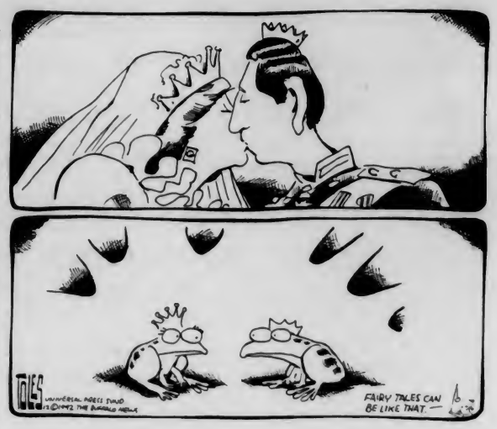
Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, asserts that the ban is different from official discrimination suffered by Blacks before President Harry Truman ordered integration because Blacks already served in the military. But GLB people already serve now — all we are saying is give them a chance. Several years ago, the Department of Defense commissioned a study on the issue and the Pentagon's own study determined that the Department of Defense's fears were groundless.

The third reason for lifting the ban is of paramount importance. Clinton must demonstrate his control of the military. Civilian control is essential to the maintenance of democratic, constitutional governance, and the minute any president shows fear of exercising that control, the foundation of our society is jeopardized. Clinton can end this immoral ban with the stroke of a pen, and he should do it now. The longer he waits, the more time supporters of the ban have to stir up homophobia and paranoia in the public and in Congress.

Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee (a man who fired two gay assistants a decade ago), said Monday, "It's not simply a presidential prerogative." And Defense Secretary Les Aspin has told Clinton that a large majority of Congress might vote for legislation to codify the ban should Clinton lift it. But lifting an executive order is a presidential prerogative, and Clinton can veto legislation; given a minimum of presidential appeal to lawmakers, the chances that a veto can be overridden are small at best.

As the Times wrote in an editorial Tuesday, "This is a chance for Mr. Clinton to show that the anti-war student from Arkansas has the spine to be Commander in Chief." Do the right thing, Bill.

Jonah Gelbach is a UMass student.



Former Butterfield resident finds a better atmosphere off campus

While living in a dorm I had found a certain unbearable problem.

This problem was the etiquette with which Housing Services treated my particular dorm.

Verily, the problem of all dorms being designed like intensive care units of hospitals was merely secondary.

But simply because the residents of my former dorm sought to design a more hospitable atmosphere for the dorm, my dorm had become the scapegoat for all of the University's problems.

The reader may have heard of the dorm — Butterfield House — having been ruthlessly accused during the fall semester of being in league with the White Aryan Resistance Movement, as well as in support of various local White supremacist organizations.

This bombardment of absurd accusations began when Tana G. Henderson actually posted a notice in the kitchen of the dorm, accusing it of supporting the White Aryan Resistance Movement.

The strange thing is that my former dormmates told me that Tana had written this accusation weeks before it was posted.

The reader may think, "Oh well, maybe she is simply slow."

But no, a very suspicious coincidence occurred when Butterfield's official flag, a Jolly Roger symbol, was removed by Housing Services at exactly the same time Tana decided to post her accusation.

Conclusively, such unfounded accusations in a dorm seeking even more hospitality in its already hospitable atmosphere has, on several occasions, almost moved me to the point of vomiting.

Francis Tokarski
Southampton

Notes from the Campus Center basement

After spending New Year's pissing off a roof and barking at passing traffic somewhere in Mattapan, I realized how much time and energy our age group spends impairing its higher brain functions. With the inauguration of the first all-pot smoking ticket (sort of) and the end of the "Just Say No" era, It's time to take a look at the unlikely manner which so many of us spend our leisure time.

The late teens and early twenties are the age when those who are so inclined have grown out of dizzying themselves on swings at the playground, but do not yet feel terribly embarrassed about what the neighbors will think after stumbling home and throwing up on their driveway.

College is where friends have the spare cash (and intestinal fortitude) to down snifters of cognac until their vertical hold strays, while housemates deal pot to make rent. UMass, trying hard to lose its party school image, is hampered by the contrary actions of students. How many other schools offer students the option of living on a "wellness" corridor, and offer classes like "Drugs in Society"? (Try explaining that to your parents after freshman year, "You look worn out son, what did you take this semester?")

Most people eventually tire of cooking their brain a few times a week, deciding that the wear and tear on their system is no longer worth the return. Or, they've had enough of the poor decisions and court dates that often go with the territory. Along the way people collect some entertaining war stories. The three listed below are some near casualties. Don't try these yourself without parental supervision.

I have a friend who would regularly descend into the bowels of the Campus Center after his lunch break to suck on his pipe. If some pot smokers are considered recreational, he's a serious hobbyist. One day at the height of last semester's Washington/graffiti/racism affair, he and a guest had just finished their noon ritual as security officers were hustling Chancellor O'Brien out the back door of a failed public relations effort and an increasingly hostile crowd. Cursing students closed in on the chancellor, blocking his normal route of escape. Panicked that the students would resort to violence, they bolted up the back staircase. Startled by the noise below, the two thought security had sniffed them out and bolted for the top of the stairs, only to be passed by the galloping chancellor with his body guards in tow.

Josh
REYNOLDS

A freshman at another school drank herself into a stupor at her first college frat party. As the haze cleared, she realized she had lost her virginity in a creaky bunkbed to one of the frat brothers. Suddenly concerned by what had happened, and how she would explain it to her boyfriend (with whom she had arrived a few hours earlier), she got up to leave, tumbling from the top bunk and breaking her leg.

Earlier this month, an after-hours party guest had, over the course of the evening, ingested a large quantity of alcohol, a percost, LSD and some decongestants for his cold. Just for good measure, he topped the mixture with a few bong hits.

Sometime after 2 a.m., while no one was paying attention, he lost his balance, and fell off a stool. He whacked his head on the arm of a nearby couch, giving himself a concussion. When he was discovered, understandably disoriented and inarticulate, the hosts assumed it was an overdose and shook him further scrambling his brains in an attempt to raise him to consciousness.

The party emptied quickly as residents scrambled to remove incriminating evidence before the cops and EMT's arrived. He explained to the police that he had taken a muscle relaxant for his back pain, and was duly lectured about taking prescription medicine until the ambulance showed up. Between fainting spells, the EMT questioned him to assess the situation. "What's today's date?"

"Do you mean tonight or this morning?"

"Nevermind, what year is this?"

"1992"

"O.K, who's president?" asked the EMT.

Not sure whether he should answer with the president-elect, or the lame duck, he answered, "Nixon" and was quickly strapped to a gurney and whisked to Cooley-Dickenson.

Vaguely concerned that might be partially responsible for his situation, our hero was coming to the realization that his head hurt more than usual, even for this stage in the game. But drifting in and out of consciousness, he was unable to get hold of anyone with authority and take control of the situation, rather than simply responding to their questions. Besides, he was coming to the peak of his trip at the time, and watching people's mouths was more interesting than what they were actually saying. He was having a good time watching his veins roll away from over tired nurses. They made nine attempts before finally successfully starting his I.V.

He finally managed to tell a doctor that, although he was completely ripped, he was more concerned about the physical damage he had incurred. They cancelled the stomach pump and let him lie still. He's lucky it wasn't Health Services.

Josh Reynolds is a Collegian columnist.

Does being an adult include cartoons and crayons?

When my brothers and I get together, we are automatically 12, 10 and 7 years old. We watch cartoons, we throw food, we torture the cat and our parents and each other.

Never mind that the 7 year old just got his learner's permit, or that the 10 year old is a college freshman, or that I am graduating in May; when we are in the same house, we instantly revert to pre-adolescence. The theory is that when we are separated, we grow up.

But when I return to school, things don't change much. Here I live with other young people, surrounded by infinitely breakable rules, with someone else to cook my meals. After this I'm going to graduate school, "extending our adolescence," as my friend Jess and I phrase it.

Jess, who is preparing for medical school, watches "Sesame Street" on a regular basis. My friends and I hoard construction paper and listen to Muppets records. I bought more children's books last semester than text books.

When my parents were my age, they were married. I just requested Lincoln Logs for Christmas. Why this total rejection of maturity? For me, the decision came about with age. You see, I used to be an adult.

Sophomore year I had an apartment in Boston, and I paid rent and bought groceries and took care of my share of the bills. But my paycheck as a convenience store clerk would not stretch far enough. I ate popcorn two meals a day because I couldn't afford real food; subsequently, I was sick a lot. I would sit in class budgeting out my paycheck, my stomach hurting from worry. At work one night, someone tried to pull a gun on me.

Suki
LITCHFIELD

My parents made me quit, assuring me they'd tide me over until the next job. But the next job never came, and I spent the rest of the year unemployed, feeling guilty and sad and serious. I did not enjoy my adulthood very much.

After I transferred here, I backlashed. Financial difficulties and the sudden realization that I didn't know what I was going to do for the next sixty years led to total irresponsibilty. I stopped going to classes and barely left the room. I became dependent on the telephone for conversation, preferring the people I had known for years to the strangers in my hall.

When I did reluctantly come in contact with my floormates, I met smart, organized adults who climbed trees and dressed up for Halloween and owned Play-doh. My neighbors were responsible people who hadn't packed away their childhoods. Slowly I started to see that you don't have to be serious to be independent.

When I was little, I thought being an adult meant drinking coffee and reading the paper. I wasn't too far off the mark. So, okay, you have to get a job and pay bills, and raising a family comes with a whole new set of obligations. But that doesn't mean you can't watch cartoons, or have the occasional food fight, or build sand castles. A box of crayons is always a good investment. The Muppets are our friends.

The most important lesson I've learned in the past few years is that it's possible to accept responsibility and still remain juvenile. It is a waste of time to worry, and it is a waste of a life to be serious all the time. I'm filling my graduate school applications out now, and I'm using a four-color ball point pen. Wordsworth wrote, "The child is father of the man." He was wrong: the child is the man.

Suki Litchfield is a UMass student.

Hollywood rapes women

Whenever I feel confident enough to suggest that a third wave of feminism might be roaring up from the horizon, something happens to discourage my hope. Recently, that something was the new Madonna film, Body of Evidence.

Now, just as an aside, this is not an editorial about sadomasochism since I have not yet developed an opinion of it. Whether Madonna's character had been a sadomasochist or not, the elements of the film which nauseated me the most had nothing to do with consenting adults hand cuffing and tying each other up.

Melanie
DESILVA

My opposition, on the other hand came from witnessing Madonna being physically and sexually assaulted, and from listening to the shocking reactions of women audience members.

Filmmakers are experts at constructing rape scenes and then not acknowledging them as such within the film. Women were raped in both The Lover and Basic Instinct. Yet, how many viewers actually recognized the violence as rape? Probably not many. In general, rape is romanticized in the movies, slapping the faces of real rape survivors.

In Body of Evidence, Madonna was raped. Yet how many viewers acknowledged it as such? As William DaFoe handcuffed Madonna to the bed post, and tore her panties off without her consent, she struggled desperately to escape. He was raping her. Finally after about 30 seconds of panic, a smile encompassed her face.

The message was clear: if you're being raped, sit back and enjoy it. Not one female audience member in close proximity to me raised any verbal objections. They did not even sigh. They simply continued to watch passively, while I had to leave the theatre for a few minutes.

The next day, a female co-worker told me she had seen Body of Evidence and "loved it." When I raised an objection to the film's content and pointed out the rape scene, she said, "Oh yeah, I guess it was a rape scene. But she deserved it." When I told her that no women deserve to be raped, she replied, "Well, Madonna did."

This was not the only disturbing comment I heard from women in the audience. In the climatic scene of the movie, Madonna is physically assaulted — brutally and violently. Yet through the disturbing violence, what did I hear from at least three women in the theater? "Kill the bitch!" "She's a whore!" "Don't let her get away!" "Good!"

What is going on here? Clearly, it is something dangerous. Images of violence against women have become so ingrained in our culture, many women do not even notice them. Like so many men, they become desensitized, accepting more and more brutality. Internalizing their own oppression, many women accept the ideas that so called powerful women need to be "put in back in their place." If a woman is demanding and aggressive she is asking for physical abuse.

Clearly, blind acceptance of disrespect towards women has to stop. All women must educate ourselves, becoming conscious of society's attempts to continually escalate images of violence. We must fight the constant bombardment of messages telling us that these images are acceptable. The fact is that women cannot progress while simultaneously maintaining the hegemony.

Melanie DeSilva is a UMass student.

My car: the ticket to hell

What is your definition of freedom? Is is the ability to pack up at a moment's notice and head down Route 66, destination: anywhere? That would've been my answer for the last 20 years.

Until I bought a car.

Brooke C.
WHEELER

Those of you who own a car already probably know what I'm about to say: I may as well have had a baby. They're probably easier to take care of. In addition, you're already familiar with how they work — no mysterious parts you've never heard of, no searching for where to put in this or that fluid, no unexplainable clanking or banging noises. A baby is a baby; a car, however, is a potential ticket to hell.

I made the mistake of buying my first car right before finals week last semester: my mental state was I need a car, and I need it right now. But I made the even more colossal mistake of buying a standard 4-speed car; a car that I essentially did not know how to drive. And thus began my descent into hell.

Week One: I enlist the help of a friend to get the thing to a garage so an amused attendant can tell me everything that is wrong with it, everything that will potentially be wrong with it, and all the reasons why I should sell it for parts and cut my losses. Clutching the counter to remain upright and masking nausea and grief with a maniacal grin, I thank him for his concern and write him a check. I'm already in too deep.

Week Two: I have already stalled 13 times, and I haven't even left my parking space. Torn between despaired sobbing and hysterical laughter, I choose both, and attract some attention from a passing neighbor. "Still trying to get the hang of it!" I shriek through the closed window, trying to laugh nonchalantly with tears streaming down my face.

Later: I finally figured out not to let out the clutch in a sudden spastic "thump!" while gunning the engine. The car starts to move; I panic, I stall, and the Belchertown bus rumbles around the corner and waits for me to figure the whole thing out again. The hysterical laughter/sobs start again.

Week Three: I'm home now, in New Jersey, thanks to another friend who lives nearby and agreed to drive me home in my car. From the day I bought it, I've written no fewer than 10 checks: Midas, Jiffy Lube, Maxine's Auto Repair and Beauty School, insurance, registration, inspection — you get the idea. Since I've been home, I haven't touched the thing. I can't even look out the window at it. Then, one day out of demanding necessity I am compelled to drive it to the grocery store. . .

Tune in next week when I discover another hidden talent beneath my quivering exterior: Creative Driving.

Brooke C. Wheeler is a Collegian basket case.

The fine art of letter writing

Just before intersession, a friend of mine asked me for my address, saying she was going to write to me. I gave it to her, but I didn't believe her.

One of the first things I learned after my first year of college is that some people are letter-writers and other people just aren't. They'll take your address, and give you their own, but weeks go by and no letters arrive. I used to wonder if this is what it's like to be the president of the Milli Vanilli fan club, but then I figured, "No their lawyers get all their mail these days."

Luke
ERICKSON

I don't bear these people, the I-just-can't/don't/won't-write letters any grudge because I am aware that letter-writers are a dying breed, like drive-in movies, knuckleball pitchers and clean, safe, affordable off-campus housing.

Susan, my friend at the beginning of this editorial, threw me for a loop because she wrote back not once, not twice, but three times over the winter break. I must say that I was quite pleased. She is no the only one of my friends who have written back to me, but in relation to the number of people I've written to in the last four years, she is one of the few.

I've saved most of these letters because they're like historical documents, not because they're so rare to find, but because they tell a lot about my life and the letter-writer's life at the time the letter was written. They capture a moment in time with just a pen (or similar sort of writing implement) and paper.

I put this information to use last fall in a class called "Diaries, Memoirs and Journals". I wrote 66 pages about the search for my genetic parents, and I found that reprinting or recreating letters I either wrote or received proved to be a very efficient and effective method for telling my story.

When I read Susan's letters or any of my friends' letters over the years, I can almost hear her voice, and sometimes I can picture her face when she wrote what I'm reading. One friend of mine, a journalism major no less, has only written one letter to me in the three and a half years I've known him, but it's the funniest letter I've ever gotten.

One time I spelled out the reasons why I write letters in one to a friend of mine, but I wouldn't want to try to do it again for one simple reason: I like to think that a hand written letter is unique and shouldn't be sent to more than one person.

This is just like the advice that you should never send the same love poem to two different women or else you'll be blacklisted from here to Mugabi. Or simply put: it cheapens your letters.

I'm not sure from where or why I became a letter-writer myself. As a child my parents weren't rich enough or poor enough for me to go to summer camp. I've never been in prison, the army, or even in army prison.

My best guess is that I learned the skill in the summer after my freshman year of college, after I fell in love with a woman from the Brockton area during the spring semester. I was living in Western Massachusetts (Holyoke, Batman!) and could not afford to call too often. So I wrote her letters, partly because it was less expensive, but partly because I liked the romance of writing something longer than a love poem — un lettre de amor.

Sadly, we broke up over the summer, but I even wrote her a letter to try to get her back; a nine-page, double-sided, legal-sized letter that I tacked up on her door on move-in day the first day back to school. (No, it didn't work).

I didn't save her letters back to me, but I've saved almost every one I've gotten from someone since then. So thanks, to those who have written back to me over the last four years. I hope you keep writing back to me. And for those who haven't written back yet, I hope you'll get around to it.

Luke Erickson is a UMass student.

Take a Break from Retail Prices and . . .

YOUR SPRING BREAK IS ON US!

Win a Spring Break Vacation to the Destination of Your Choice or $1,000!

WHOLESALE DEPOT

Stop by Wholesale Depot–the members only, cash and carry warehouse–and check out our one and a half acres of first quality, current season, name brand food and general merchandise at super low everyday wholsale prices. Discover the excitement of wholesale prices and enter to win a fabulous vacation or $1,000!

Wholesale Depot is conveniently located at the Mountain Farms Mall Route 9, Hadley

You Don't Have To Be A Member to Check Us Out!

VISA DISCOVER

ONE DAY PASS/ENTRY BLANK

Yes! I Want to Take a Break from Retail Prices and win a FREE SPRING BREAK!

Name:
Address:
City/State/Zip:
Daytime Phone#:

Warehouse Hours:
Monday - Friday 11 AM - 9 PM
Saturday 9 AM - 9 PM
Sunday 12 PM - 6 PM

0990000630

Special Hours for Business Members Only:
Mon., Wed., Fri.: 9AM - 11AM
Drawing to be held February 13, 1993.

Lee

continued from page 1

numerous film critics, including Siskel and Ebert, who called it "the year's best picture."

Lee, has also involved himself extensively with students around the country. In addition to teaching a film course at Harvard University, Lee also supported a campus protest at the University of North Carolina where students there called for the establishment of a Black cultural center.

Spike Lee's lecture is scheduled for Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Auditorium. Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office at $8 for students and $12 for the general public. Students will also be required to have their UMass I.D. available at the time of the event.

chancellor

continued from page 1

gineering, said he is looking for a chancellor "that is catholic, as in having universal attention."

The committee is also trying to find those who have a scholarly reputation, in addition to having a "record of managerial success."

Some of the committee's recommendations are to find a chancellor who will take a deep interest in fundraising and initiate future financial campaigns, in addition to be willing to appreciate Division I athletics' role "in fostering institutional spirit and pride and attracting public attention and support."

"I am thoroughly pleased with the thoroughness of the search," Porter said. "It is certainly a creditable and credible process."

Mental Health Groups Spring 1993

Groups that will be offered this spring are:

- Adult Children of Alcoholics Wednesday 3:30-5
  (Process group for students with prior ACOA group experience)
- Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families
  Group I - Mondays, 3:30-5 (in Spanish)
  Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30
- Eating Disorder Group Tuesdays 4-5:30
- Self-Exploration Groups
  Group I - Tuesdays, 3-4:30 (for students over 21)
  Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30

Registration and pre-group interview required for all groups. Groups will begin in late February. For information and registration call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North during the month of February.

COMING SOON TO A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

Arts & Living

Madonna bares it all in Body of Evidence

The Material Girl tries to act again in this stupendously lame joke of a film

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

"Did you ever see animals make love, Frank? It's intense." — Madonna as Rebecca Carlson in Body of Evidence.

Watching animals make love for two hours would be more pleasant than watching this movie. One would think that a blond tressed Madonna would slink her way through an atmospheric, twisty sex thriller. Instead she plods, stammers, over and underacts through Uli Edel's stupendously lame Body of Evidence — a film so bad it's funny. But not that funny.

Is Evidence supposed to be the defining apex of Madonna's latest sex — er, erotic trio of media offerings; following the album Erotica and the book Sex? Is it meant to be another stab at a dramatic acting for the Material Girl? Whatever it's meant to be, Body of Evidence is less than a cheap Basic Instinct knockoff. It's a poorly ht pile of manure.

Another bad hairdo, another wooden performance. Don't even try to blame it on Dita, either. You make your bed, Madonna, now. . . well, you know the rest. I'll try to lay off the cheap sexual innuendo, but no promises.

Madonna plays Portland, Ore. art dealer (or "cokehead slut" as one character refers to her) Rebecca Carlson, who likes to date old men and have kinky sex with them. Fair enough. However, her latest amore de senior croaks after having rough sex with her. Before you can say implausibility, Rebecca is hauled in and charged with not only being the murderess — but also the murder weapon.

She hires Frank (Willem Dafoe) to defend her against a district attorney played with "I can't believe I took this role" like charm by Joe Mantenga. In what appears to be, like, two days, the jury is chosen and the trial begins. You know this is gonna be a long trial when after every pseudo-tittilating comment by anyone in the courtroom is followed by overacted whispers in the gallery.

The courtroom scenes are scripted like an afterthought. There's no buildup of drama, because witnesses and evidence pile up out of nowhere. The scenes anyway are more like well-needed respites from the stars' (eh-hem) overblown sexual interludes.

Speaking of the sex scenes, it goes without saying that having a puppy justify his love on your leg is more erotic. The sequences play like a right-wing checklist of Perverse Sex Acts. There's Madonna tying up Willem with his belt, having sex on top of broken glass on the hood of a car (what? it's not moving?), Madonna pouring hot candle wax on Willem's genitals (mmmm, sounds crispy) and an unintentionally hilarious scene where Madonna reprises her Truth or Dare "Like A Virgin" number, only this time more graphically. Is it me or does Madonna look the silliest when she's pretending to masturbate — but then again, who doesn't?

What is remarkable about Body of Evidence is its quartet of impressively bad performances. After sitting through Shanghai Surprise (surprise! It's terrible), Who's that Girl? (who wrote the script?), Bloodhounds of Broadway and Shadows and Fog, I was convinced Madonna couldn't act beyond a variation of her public persona (see Dick Tracy and A League of Their Own).

So I figured this type of femme fatale

Turn to BODY page 8

DAYTONA BEACH

The BREAK of a Lifetime $19.93*

Break away! Break out! Big Beach-Big Fun- BIG VALUE!
Quality Oceanfront Resorts.
Beachcomer Oceanfront Inn
2000 N. Atlantic Ave.
Mayan Inn - newly renovated
103 S. Ocean Ave.

1-800-874-7420

Oceans Eleven Resorts, Inc.

*per person, per night, based on 4 per room. Limited availability at this rate

The GYM at mountain farms mall
584-2175

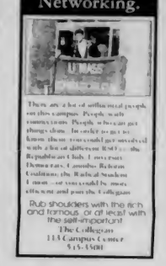
COMPARE & SAVE

Semester Special ONLY $119.00!!
Membership Good Thru 5-31-93

TANNING AVAILABLE

"On the bus route!"

Networking.



Welcome Back!!
Don't Stop Thinking About Tomorrow

The Career Center services can make a difference in the job market. Pick up a workshop schedule and get started.

Special Session!!

How To Make Career Fairs Work For You

Our staff share tips about the ways to get the most from all the Career Fairs this month.

Workshop times:

Tuesday February 2 and Wednesday February 3
12:30 pm Campus Center 904

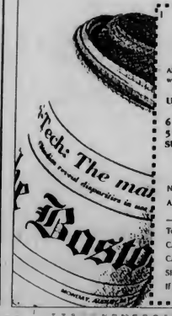
THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education • Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!

THE BOSTON GLOBE ON CAMPUS AT 50% OFF!

That's right...you can get The Boston Globe delivered on campus at a huge 50% off the regular price!

That means you're paying less for New England's best newspaper and an indispensable guide to what's happening in and around Boston, the nation and all around the world.

All that.....at half price! To start receiving The Boston Globe on campus, all semester long, call 1-800-858-4275



Check desired service, fill out form and send to
The Boston Globe Campus Program UMass/Amherst
The Boston Globe
P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107

All subscriptions payable in advance. No delivery during school breaks or exam weeks. Students with varying start dates may have subscriptions pro rated. NO SATURDAY DELIVERY

UMass	Spring 2/8-5/13
6 Days MON-FRI& SUN	( ) $24.50
5 Days MON-FRI	( ) $15.50
SUNDAY ONLY	( ) $ 9.00

NAME_____PHONE_____
ADDRESS BOX #_____DORM & ROOM #_____
To pay by credit card, complete the following ☐ VISA ☐ MASTERCARD
CARD #_____EXP. DATE_____
CARDHOLDER NAME_____
SIGNATURE_____
If requirement: Course_____Instructor_____

■ body

continued from page 7

would be right up her alley (or streetcorner, for that matter). I mean it doesn't take a cheerleading degree to know that Rebecca's trial is really a metaphor for Madonna's own public sexuality. But director Edel (Last Exit To Brooklyn) leaves that option wide open, opting to play it straight as a tepid courtroom/sex thriller. And Madonna's creaky line reading and over earnest sex-slut glances proved more comical than sensual. With all that money you'd think she'd hire an acting coach.

The other actors do the unthinkable and sink to her level. Willem Dafoe, who played Jesus for chrissakes, is bland and stupid. Joe Mantegna shows up and cashes a check, leaving his acting ability at the door.

But I was most surprised by was Anne Archer, whose face contorts with Bad Acting disease. I didn't know what was funnier to watch; Madonna trying to be subtle or Archer bawling her eyes out. Script-demanded pathos.

See it as high-camp or low-drama, but Body of Evidence is all mainstream tease, gratuitous nudity (and stupidity) and poorly written melodrama. It unravels before it begins. D-

An emotional roller-coaster ride with Fever

By ALLISON MASTERS
Collegian Correspondent

The Fever
Sage Recital Hall
January 22-23

"But where are we. . .?" The words echoed in your ears as the idea lingered in your brain. Rhonda Blair delivered this thought provoking concept which set the tone for the rest of her two-hour soliloquy, The Fever, a one-woman performance written by Wallace Shawn and directed by John Hellweg. The Fever was a "crisis of conscience."

Together Blair, who teaches at Hampshire College, and Hellweg, who teaches at Smith College, began rehersal for this piece which they called both exciting and challenging. It was performed at Smith College in June.

The audience was taken on a trip that few have experienced but everyone can relate to. Forcing us to think about a gamut of issues that plague the subconscience, we were lifted to emotional highs and lows.

The emotional roller coaster which we embarked upon with Blair pulled us both in and out of her performance, allowing us to take a closer look at our own lives. Under the strong direction of Hellweg, this transition was done quite smoothly for the audience, and we were able to easily find our way back into Blair's ramblings. The vagueness which embodied the piece contributed to the easy come and go attitude that we could take on, complementing the severe moral obligation we felt with the actress.

As you left the recital hall you were in awe of Blair's performance and a bit overwhelmed with your own personal feelings. There was no doubt that you would not sleep soundly that evening.

COURTESY STAN SHERER
Rhonda Blair (above) starred in Smith College's production of The Fever directed by John Hellweg.

Collegian Arts,
Write For Us!
113 Campus Center
545-3500

Walking Distance
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst • 253-3539
Free Weights Supreme
Best Cardiovascular

Perverse technology

Jesus Jones' latest release disappoints

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

Jesus Jones
Perverse
EMI

The band members of Jesus Jones are making claims that their latest album, Perverse, is an innovative, groundbreaking artistic triumph. I will grant them the fact that this isn't music I could hear any day on the radio. Perverse's tracks are new and unusual. But are they good? That is the question, Mac.

"The point of Jesus Jones, is not to take the easy, boring option, to be either a chronologically-stranded rock band or to accept the dictatorial limitations of song-free techno but to mix influences in the way that peoples' record collections are mixed: to try and do something a new way, contrary to the norm," says EMI records in its history of Jesus Jones.

The Webster's definition of "perverse" is "willfully determined not to do what is expected or desired; contrary." All that is desired of Jesus Jones is that they release another hard hitting album like 1991's Doubt. Their singles such as "Real, Real, Real" and "Right Here, Right Now" put Doubt at number one on the U.K. album chart. The same album went platinum in the United States and they were nominated for two Grammy Awards, "Best Alternative Album" and "Best Pop Vocal Performance."

Though I admire any band who says they're trying to break new ground, there is a lot to be said for staying with a good thing and giving audiences what they desire which is more of the same — more of Doubt.

Unfortunately Jesus Jones (consisting of Jerry De Borg, Al Jaworski, Gen, Mike Edwards, and Iain Baker) wasn't aiming to please with their latest release. Only confused and self-satisfied tracks, all of which were written by Mike Edwards, emerge from this over-hyped disc. The whole album is over-produced and very techno.

The band credits "techno(logy)" for their new, unique sound which becomes increasingly boring on this 12-track album recorded from 1991 to 1992 at "Mike's House."

It's terrifying, garish masked wrestler adorning the cover is a portent of the feasts to come. These masked, caped wrestlers with guts on the point of spilling over the top of their snug lycra in glaring red technicolor are overblown and self-satisfied. The whole album seems to have a slightly sinister, angry undertone which makes it uncomfortable to listen to the album straight through, though some songs like "Zeroes and Ones" have pretty good lyrics and a pop-like, danceable beat.

(Gotta) "Get a Good Thing" (when you see it) has a bit more of the sound their fans are familiar with, but not all the songs are danceable. Tracks like "The Devil You Know" and "From Love to War" and "Your Crusade" are four-star duds.

Perhaps the most horrendous downfall

Turn to PERVERSE, page 10

COURTESY EMI RECORDS GROUP
JESUS JONES — Band members are Jerry De Borg, 300 hz to 8 khz; Al Jaworski, 20 hz to 4 hz; Gen, Drum type sounds; Mike Edwards, First generation (unsampled) vocals; Iain Baker, omnipresent.

The growth and SUCCESS
YOU WANT IN a Merchandising
CAREER...
...Can be found in our Corporate Headquarters!

From our first two stores back in 1977, T.J. Maxx has grown into a $2 billion-plus retailing powerhouse with nearly 500 locations, coast to coast. We've posted record earnings every year we've been in business, which reflects our exceptional stability, even in this challenging economic climate.

Join our company as a Merchandise Analyst, the first step in our Executive Training Program, and your good decision making skills will have an impact on the merchandise mix in our nationwide network of stores.

You'll work in a professional corporate setting - featuring amenities such as a full service cafeteria, fitness center and day care center - while receiving on-the-job training and support as you start on a career path to a Buyer position. And as we continue to grow, so will your opportunities.

We will be interviewing on campus on Thursday, February 18
Resumes are due at the
Mather Career Center by
Thursday, February 4

We are an equal opportunity employer committed to diversity in the workplace.

T.J.maxx
A Business Built on Solid Values

Kan you ~~dpel~~ spel, tipe, right and edditt reel good? Wee kneed yer hellp!
Kome downn two the Kullejun, 113 Kampus Centaur.

The Collegian.
113 Campus Ctr.
545-3500

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Old Milwaukee & Old Milwaukee Lt.
$7.99 case cans
(Quantity Discounts Available)
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L
BUD DRY BOTTLES $10.99 case
Popov Gin $9.99 1.75 L
Sam Adams (your choice)
$9.99 12/pk bottles
Labatts Beer or Ale
$14.49 case bottles
American Beer
Still Only $7.29 case cans
Concha y Toro (your choice) $4.99 1.5 L
Carioca Gold Rum $5.99 liter
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

Pearl Street
DANCE CLUB
Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS
Thursday - EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. WHMP's Ann Spenner Broacasting Live
Friday - DANCING WITH DJ JEFF Playing the Best Dance Music • Free Admission Before 10pm• ••Free All Night With College ID••
Saturday - THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ DAVE Featuring The Best Dance Hits From The 70's, 80's & 90's Mt. Tom Ski Pass Giveaways
LIVE MUSIC
Thurs., Jan 28-9:00pm/18+
Rolling Stones Tribute
THE BLUSHING BRIDES
The Choice
Fri., Jan 29-9:00pm/21+
Free Rock Friday
LITTLE JIMMY & THE BAD BOYS
• Free Admission Before 10pm• ••Free All Night With College ID••
Sat., Jan 30-9:00pm
Funk/Rock
RIPPOPOTAMUS
Tues., Feb. 2-8:00pm
Country/Southern Rock
MARSHALL TUCKER BAND
Bear Mountain
Thurs., Feb. 4-9:00pm/18+
Led Zep Tribute
PHYSICAL GRAFFITI
FRI., Feb. 5-9:00pm
Free Rock Friday
U2 Tribute Band
RATTLE & HUM
Sat., Feb. 6-9:00pm/18+
Live & Unplugged
JAMES COTTON
featuring Luther Tucker & David Maxwell
Mon., Feb. 8-8:00pm/18+
WIDESPREAD PANIC
Thurs., Feb. 11-9:00pm/18+
MURPHY'S LAW
Mon., Feb. 15-9:00pm/18+
Thelonious Monster
Thurs., Feb. 18-9:00pm/18+
SHOCKRA
Thurs., Feb. 25-9:00pm/18+
BIM SKALA BIM
Duck Duck
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix/Unlimited, Northampton Box Office, For The Record in Amherst: Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080 10 Pearl Street Northampton 584-7771

■ Weld

continued from page 1

were eating up an increasing portion of the spending diet in the past.

Senate Ways and Means Chairman Thomas Birmingham, D-Chelsea, said he believes failure to account for the education money is a major flaw.

"I think the whole budget is marred by an absent center which is the $361 million which everybody expects will be spent for education," Birmingham said.

Birmingham also said he believes the revenue projections "may be slightly on the high side."

Michael Widmer, who heads the fiscal watchdog group Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, was also critical. "It's unrealistic to anticipate that all these proposed increases in spending, that we can afford those and afford money for local education," Widmer said.

The budget contains a $198 million "rainy day" fund for fiscal emergencies. Weld said that would not be the first place he would look for the education money, noting other states have higher reserves, but added it could be put toward the $361 million," he said. "I don't think that would be a very difficult enterprise."

■ Perverse

continued from page 9

of the album is the unbelievably gross "Yellow Brown," which is about as vibrant as the song's title. "You see every other color bleeding into yellow bro-own." There must be a better way to convey the message "stop pollution" than to produce this song which leaves listeners with thoughts of yellow snow dancing in their heads.

The next song "Magazine" is infinitely better, high speed and tongue in cheek alternative music. But can you really see yourself singing that chorus? "Magazine..."

But to give Jesus Jones the benefit of the Doubt, "The Right Decision" could be a hit. It has quality lyrics: "The problem with success is that you can become what you detest."

"Spiral" is just a repeated beat with a few loud outbursts. Finally I was so bored I started to tune it out, and realized it sounded like techno insects. Bugs. Whatever.

The album finished up with "Idiot Stare," which encompassed incredible vocals that were both powerful and inspired. I could hear and appreciate the band members's skillful mastery of actual instruments and put the CD back in its case — not in the trash.

If you have a CD player, Perverse is a good investment. This album will only be appreciated by a tiny number of alternative music fans — and this number does not count myself, because new and unusual isn't always better.

Write for the Collegian–
you can enjoy your 15 minutes of fame.*

* We cannot, however, guarantee that it will last the full 15 minutes.

USTRAVEL
at the Campus Center
Your Travel Planning Specialist
Spring Break Packages
CANCUN
Special UMASS Group Rates
Beachfront Hotels
Departure from Boston
Limited Space
Other Destinations Available:
Don't Miss Out On This Awesome
Spring Break Alternative! Stop In Soon
Final Payment Due Feb. 5th
545-1700 • 545-2900
GWV International

THE MERCANTILE
AMHERST: CARRIAGE SHOPS
NORTHAMPTON: 18 CENTER ST.
MON-SAT: 10-6 SUN: 12-5 MC/VISA

"Thank you! for your patronage." The Krupczak Family
4 Seasons
ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-8174
Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE
KEGS • AND ICE
No Keg Permit Required!!
Largest Keg Inventory in Western Mass!
Free Beer Koozie with Keg Purchase

KEGS
MILW, BEST ..... 32.90+dep
Natural LT ..... 32.90+dep
BUSCH ..... 38.99+dep
Lite • M.G.D • M.G.D LT ..... 38.99+dep

BUD DRY 24 Bar Bottles $10.99 +dep
4 Seasons VODKA 1.75L $8.99 +dep
COORS GOLD 24 Bar Bottles $10.99 +dep
M.D. 20/20 All Flavors $2.00 .750ml
PURPLE PASSION 2.0 L $3.50
BUSCH & LIGHT 24/12oz. CANS $9.99 +dep
4 Seasons RUM 1.75L $10.49 +dep
AMERICAN KOCH's GOLDEN NARRAGANSETT 24/12 oz. CANS $7.29 +dep
SOUTHERN COMFORT $7.99 .375ml
$7.99 .750ml
JAGERMEISTER
Tired of Stores with BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons you'll be treated with GRATITUDE!!! And...
WE DELIVER
HADLEY ICE
10 LBS - 50 LBS 10¢ LB
50 LBS - 100 LBS 9¢ LB
100+ LBS 8¢ LB
Cheapest Ice Prices in W. MASS!!!
Prices effective thru 2/3/93 • Not responsible for typo's • VISA/MC Excluded on sale items
HOURS: Mon-Sat 9-11 • Delivery Mon-Sat Late Afternoon/Evenings
Keg Deposits Held Up To 30 Days on VISA/MC/CHECK/CASH

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741
FOUR (4) Bedroom Apartments!
$899 (utilities included! wow!)
Microwave Ovens!!
RENT FREE!!
Move in now - no rent until February 1, 1993!
Move in February '93 and receive it FREE!
1 month free rent with 1 year lease!
*Promotion & prices subject to change without notice
TOP TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD LIVE HERE:
1. Your PARENTS don't!
2. YOU pick your roommates!
3. PRIVACY- Spacious Four (4) Bedrooms!
4. TWO (2) Bathrooms- no waiting in the shower line!
5. UTILITIES included $$$!
6. Directly on BUSLINE- minutes from campus & downtown Amherst!
7. It's FREE public transportation!
8. INCLUDES major appliances & w/w carpeting!
9. QUIET forest setting - for your peace of mind.
Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!
Don't wait another day, call today!
CUT THIS AD & USE IT TO LIVE "RENT FREE!" AT ALPINE COMMONS!
256-0741

$$$ for Child Care

Are you an Amherst resident in need of financial support for child care? The UMASS Off Campus Housing Office has applications for newly available child care scholarship funding. Stop by the office at 428 Student Union or call Robb or Barbara at 545-0865 for information on applying.

WHY PAY FULL PRICE FOR TEXTS?
Shop Atticus first--we have many discounted texts and used paperbacks!

Basic Psychology	3rd ed. by Gleitman	New $39.95
Chemistry	4th ed. by Chang	New $54.95
Cultural and Social Anthropology	by Murphy	Used $21.95
Democracy by Default	by Edie	Used $19.95
Broadcasting in America	6th ed. by Head, Sterling	Used $34.95
Extraordinary Chemistry of Ordinary Things	by Snyder	Used $37.50
Inquiry into Physics	2nd ed. by Ostdiek, Board	New $44.95
In the Shadow of the Sun	by Deere	Used $9.00
Life-The Science of Biology	3rd ed. by Purves, Orians, Heller	New $53.95
Management	3rd ed. by Robbins	Used $38.95
Marketing	3rd ed. by Berkowitz, Kerin, Hartley, Rudelius	Used $42.95
Poor and the Powerless	by Thomas	Used $9.00

Many More Titles in stock--quantaties are limited so shop early!
ATTICUS
A world of reading Since 109 BC
Atticus/Albion Bookshop
8 Main St. Amherst

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

THURSDAY
CHARTREUSE SKI PARTY
Special Drink
- Swampwater -
Register to win a $1,000.00 Ski Package to be drawn Feb. 25

FRIDAY HAPPY HOUR
3 - 6 PM
Bud Dry Bottles $1.50 (All Week)
FREE Pizza Slices
FREE Door Prizes • T-Shirts • Key Chains

FRIDAY NIGHT
FAREWELL TO THE CAGE PARTY
LIVE WHMP REMOTE 8:30 TO 11:30
HMP 93 FM
• FREE BUFFET •
Great Door Prizes From Peter Pan Bus and Coors Light
Coors LIGHT The Silver Bullet
Win Tickets to the Farewell Game
- Farewell T-Shirts -
Watch the Game from Start to Finish
Open til 2:00 AM
• Park and Ride on the RAFTERS Shuttle •

SUPERBOWL SUNDAY
UMASS SUPERBOWL DOUBLEHEADER
4:30 PM UMASS vs. St. Bonaventure
6:18 PM DALLAS vs. BUFFALO
Exclusive Satellite Coverage of the Game!
Give-a-ways Every Hour!
Cover Charge $3.00
• Superbowl Score Pool •
• RAFTERS Sports Trivia •
• Hoop Tournament •
• Pool Tournament •
PRIZES
T-Shirts, Souvenir Glasses, Autograph Pat's Football, Mirrors, Whaler's Tickets, Pool Cue, Gift Certificates, & CASH
• Dinner Buffet at Half Time $5.95 •
• Continuous Round Trip Shuttle Service Between Fleet Bank & RAFTERS •

■ Marshall

continued from page 1

in our lives today." He called Marshall "a man of courage, a man of dignity and a man of strength."

Without Marshall's accomplishments, "he and I wouldn't be standing here next to each other today," said Capt. Eric Young, a judge advocate, gesturing toward Pfc. Robert C. Achoe Jr., a legal clerk.

Marshall's coffin was brought up the Supreme Court's front steps and placed on the black-draped bier that once held the caskets of Presidents Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy and Chief Justice Earl Warren.

The current and retired members of the high court served as honorary pallbearers. Marshall's official court portrait, painted in 1990 by Simmie Knox, was displayed for the first time. Warren who died in 1974, was the only other court member to lie in state at the court building.

■ Ski

continued from page 16

saw UMass come in a distant second to BC. The next closest UMass skier to Shafer was captain John Soglia who finished tenth. UMass found itself having to settle for second.

Racing giant slalom on Sunday the 17th the women saw a repeat of the day before with BC taking first by edging out UMass by only 3 seconds. Despite Tanguay (5th), Sparks (6th), and Dana Breslau (9th) all turning in fine performances for UMass, the Minutewomen couldn't keep up with the Eagles on a faster and longer course.

On the men's side, Shafer mopped up the rest of the competition by placing first and six seconds ahead of the next skier. Sophomore Joel Bradford turned in his best performance of the year by finishing fourth. BC held on again and placed first overall as a team.

Jan. 23-24 at Waterville Valley: Saturday the 23rd, the women's slalom saw BC manage a lead over the rest of the teams and UMass again taking second place. UMass held tough with Braslau (4th), Martin (7th), and Adams (10th) all turning in valuable performances, but a deeper Eagles squad won the meet by almost 15 seconds.

For the men, UMass found itself second best to BC as a team by about two seconds.

UMass was again the runner up to BC by about eight seconds in Sunday's slalom action.

Shafer was again a behemoth on the slopes by getting his fourth first place in as many races. Still, first place was out of the Minutemen's reach and BC again took home the prize.

WINTER CLEARANCE SALE

ZANNA

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413 253 2543
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

BANANARAMA
fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

COLLEGIAN
Don't just read it, eat it

Department of Germanic Languages & Literatures
510 Herter Hall 545-2350
OPEN CLASSES

German 291 A	Berlin to Hollywood Tu 4 - 6:15 pm Hasbrouck 134 Th 4 - 5:15 pm Herter 227
German 341	German Civilization Tu Th 8:00 - 9:15 am Herter 107
German 370	19th Century German Thought Tu Th 11:15 - 12:30 Herter 231
German 379	Contemporary Germany MWF 1:25 Herter 19
Swedish 291A	Sweden Through Film & Literature Tu Th 7:00 pm
Swedish 491	Swedish Children's Literature Tu Th 9:30 - 10:45 am

All Courses TAUGHT IN ENGLISH

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

PREREQUISITE: ADRENALINE

Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again, Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds character, self-confidence and decision-making skills. Again, words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about 4 hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.

For Further Information
Contact Captain John Healy
545-2321

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

CAST OF THOUSANDS By BARRY DEUTSCH

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Carlton fails for the old rubber-scalpel gag.

Quote of the Day

"He has been known to write entire books just so he could write on their flaps."
–Steve Martin on himself

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Learn to cooperate with loved one and you will enjoy a much more satisfying relationship. Money questions hang over a business decision. Get the best advice available.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some of your associates are in an on-again mood, off-again mood. Do what you can on your own. Make the most of any unusual opportunities. Romance begins to intensify.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The people around you today are interested in your ideas. Your efforts will spark new career success. Afternoon hours favor business negotiations. Do not be afraid to take the lead.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Proceed with caution where financial dealings with friends or relatives are concerned. Use more tact when expressing your opinions. Temper criticism with praise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be willing to stay on the sidelines and tend to routine business today. Your patience will be richly rewarded. A promotion or raise is possible. Sprout wings as a social butterfly tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Original ideas receive a warm welcome from those in authority. Keep calm if mate becomes angry. Take advantage of sales if trying to enlarge your wardrobe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It pays to shun the limelight today. Work behind the scenes to improve cash flow. Vague suspicions could hamper your ability to think straight. Reinforce your leadership role by raising funds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can accomplish more than you think today. Something that has eluded you in the past moves within reach. Do not let a scheduling conflict affect a long-term relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Clever ideas can be implemented today. You get off to a flying start after meeting with a person of substance. Your mate's attitude gives you confidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Excess is the only thing that can hold you back now. Spiritual insights help you reach a decision that will eventually improve the financial picture.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your intuition is right on the mark. By following through on a sudden hunch you will walk away a winner. Do not be afraid to reverse your opinion if new data becomes available.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A feeling of uneasiness will soon disappear. It is important you act with confidence. An artistic talent could become a commercial asset. Freelancers will be specially lucky.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

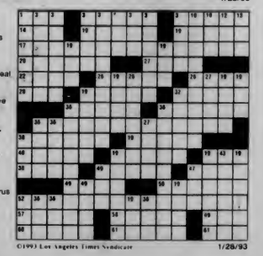
ACROSS
1 Take most
4 Doggone!
9 La — in Milano
14 — matter of fact
15 Eocene, for one
16 Sports
17 Warn
20 Travolta film
21 High flier's org.
22 Swingy trill
23 Show aversion
26 Fridge raider's quest
30 Tee lead-in
31 Fixed apples for baking
32 Time being
33 Sangfroid
34 Calf sincle
35 Warn
38 San Diego team
39 Takes it easy
40 Hundred Years War battle site
41 Tracks, at times
42 Crowd
45 Obi's relative
46 Fragrant oleoresin
47 Garb for Superman
48 Old, to Burns
50 More bumptious
52 Warn
57 Broadway meat ticket
58 Author's representative
59 "2001" computer
60 Thunder egg, e.g.
61 After eta
62 Ding-a-ling

DOWN
1 Quibble
2 Father of Horus
3 Chairs need these
4 Millie and Socks, i.e.
5 Globes
6 Weed
7 Alas, in Bonn
8 Complained childishly
9 Rebukes in the library
10 Philanderers
11 "— live and breathe"
12 Emulate Paul Bunyon
13 Actress Jillian
18 Put away
19 "Sleepy Time —"
24 Once, once
25 Humming place
27 Rara avis
28 Filmy covering
29 With it
31 — Island, Brooklyn pleasure resort
32 McKinley birthplace
33 Brew oneself to
34 Roam
35 Poet Teasdale
36 Dose anagram
37 Colorful cheese tray item
38 Bobbies, e.g.
41 Humdrum
42 "Man of La —"
43 "Lulu" and "Martha"
44 Former ballerina Grey and namesakes
46 High note
47 El —, Spanish hero
49 River in Zaire
51 Architectural pier
52 Duster
53 Actress Sue — Langdon
54 " — on forever," Tennyson
55 Yuck!
56 Shoe width

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

T	A	J	A		M	E	T	E	S	E	R	N
A	L	E	C		E	T	A	S		R	E	E
M	O	S	C	O	W		C	O	W		R	O
I	N	T	E	N	T		O	B	E	A	M	Y
E	A	S	T			S	O	U	T	H	E	R
			S	A	D	I	O	T		W	A	L	K	E	R
C	A	L		P	A	Y	A	N	E		R	A	T	E
R	I	O	T		R	E	P	A	I	R		A	R	S
A	N	N	A		O	N	T	I	V	E	S		K	A	T
B	U	D	D	H	A		R	E	R	U	N
		O	S	T	A	G	E			T	A	L	O	N
A	W	N		M	O	S	E		A	R	R	I	V	E
M	A	D	A	M		W	A	R	S	A	W
O	S	O	L	I	E		I	S	E	E		A	L	T	I	E
S	A	N	E	R		N	E	V	A			E	E	R

1/28/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 1/28/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Mike Carvalho, Sean Ramsey,. Jim Ganley

Menu

Sorry, No Menu Today

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

EXCLUSIVELY FOR STUDENT CARDMEMBERS

We're here for you.

It seems wherever you go, there we are. Offering a helping hand whenever you need one, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Helping you to stretch your budget with special savings when you fly, shop, call long distance, and now, even when you ski.

As the official Card of Killington, home of some of the greatest skiing in the East, we're happy to bring you a free one-day ski pass just for using the American Express® Card to purchase a Killington ExtraCredit card.

The ExtraCredit card allows you to get 40% off the regular price of each additional one-day ski pass when you ski Killington.*

It's just a small part of our commitment to be there for you, all the way. The fact is, we want to do all we can to make Cardmembership as rewarding as possible for you.

So consider the offer below a glimpse of the good things to come. We know you're going places in life. And we hope you'll take us with you.

We'll get you to the top of the mountain with a free ski pass. How you get down is your business.

To get a free one-day ski pass, courtesy of American Express, simply purchase the Killington ExtraCredit card using the American Express Card.*

The ExtraCredit card costs $25 and entitles you to purchase a Killington one-day ski pass, valid on all six interconnected mountains, for only $25 each day, Sunday-Friday (non-holiday), through May 1, 1993. That's a savings of 40% off the regular price!

Call Killington Travel Service toll-free, at 1-800-372-2007, to sign up for the ExtraCredit card today. Have the American Express Card ready. Your voucher, redeemable for the bonus ski pass, will arrive with the ExtraCredit card. Please allow two weeks for delivery.

To get the Killington ExtraCredit card and voucher good for a free one-day ski pass, simply return the coupon below or call now: 1-800-372-2007.

Fill in information below, tear out and mail to:
Killington, RR1 Box 2450, Killington, VT 05751-9975. Attn: ExtraCredit card

Name
Address
City State Zip
Phone Number
School
American Express® Card Number
Expiration Date
Signature

If you're not an American Express Cardmember, call 1-800-942-AMEX today to apply.

* ExtraCredit card restrictions: Offer valid for full-time college students 18-24 years old only. ExtraCredit card is non-transferable, and only one ski pass per day may be purchased. A current college identification card and valid photo ID must be presented at Killington when you purchase your one-day ski pass.

©1993 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc

Cards

AMERICAN EXPRESS IS THE OFFICIAL CARD OF KILLINGTON.

officials

continued from page 16

down from other years.

As a hockey purist, I hope I never see the day when fighting is banned from the NHL. It has been an integral part of the game for years and losing it would mean losing exciting moments in the hame, fan base, and star players.

Having been to arenas such as Boston Garden and Madison Square Garden, I can attest that fans do not want to see fighting banned. Fans like to see when two guys are going at it all night and they settle it with a harmless fight. This by no means endorses the Tie Domi-Bob Probert affair, but it concedes that these skirmishes are unavoidable and attractive.

"When it's premeditated, it detracts from the game because it takes on the quality of a sideshow," says Boston Globe hockey columnist Nancy Marrapese. "Hockey isn't meant to be the WWF and premeditation. . . should be heavily penalized."

If someone can tell me the last time two combatants got booed for a scrap, I'll give them $100. Fighting always draws cheers and can change the momentum of a game.

"I remember when the Minnesota North Stars came into Boston and were all over the Bruins," recalls Marrapese. "Cam Neely and Basil McRae had a spontaneous fight and Boston dominated the rest of the game."

Without these fights, hockey might very well lose the blue collar fan base that has kept it alive. It's these fans that have kept coming to the games in the dark days of John Ziegler's reign and might go away if the physical play and fighting are minimized.

These blue collar fans identify with the Terry O'Reillys, the Stan Jonathans, the Dave Schultzs. Take them away, you leave the die hard fan with nobody. Not to mention that the enforcers tend to be characters; who will ever forget Tie Domi riding his stick through center ice after a goal, or Mike Milbury beating a fan with a shoe. Take fighting away and you lose these players.

Fighting also protects the game's stars. When an opponent takes a run at Wayne Gretzky, he can expect to have Marty McSorley's fists in his face. If the NHL wishes to market its stars more effectively, it has to keep them on the ice. The enforcer provides that insurance.

Mike DiLorenzo is a Collegian correspondent

The Collegian urges you to vote for "BOB"

The Collegian. 113 Campus Ctr. 545-3500

SPRING BREAK '93
CANCUN ..... from $429
BAHAMAS ..... from $439
JAMAICA ..... from $459
DAYTONA (Panama) from $149
FLORIDA (hotel only) from $129
Breakaway Travel 1-800-662-7325

Quorum
Opportunity Knocks
Over 93% of homes, vehicles and people need security. Now it is simple and affordable. Technological breakthrough makes this the opportunity of the 90's. Person to person sales in a dynamic network marketing plan. No inventory requirements. First class marketing and training support.
Call now for details.
Action Marketing
Fred Gohr • 665-7501

Montague Mini Mart
12 to 6 in Montague Ctr
from Amherst: 10 miles North on Rte. 63 toRte. 47N from Northampton: 14 miles 91 North to 116 to 47N
Beer & Wine Sold On SUNDAYS
Bud suitcase cans ..... $13.99 + dep.
Bud 12 pack bottles / warm ..... $13.99 + dep.
Keystone / Busch 12 pack cans ..... $5.90 + dep.
Natural light 12 pack cans ..... $5.59 + dep.
Rolling Rock case, bottles ..... $15.60 + dep.
Rolling Rock 12-pack, bottles ..... $8.39 + dep.
Reasonable cigarette prices
A wonderful selection of Australian & Chilean wines as well as the French & domestic classics 367-9551
Many other specials!
Proper I.D. Required

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street South Amherst

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics BEST Machines BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Exercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

OLYMPIC
世運 麵包
CHINESE BAKERY & CAFE

Grand Opening
Free Drink With Any Purchase
Downtown Amherst
17 Kellogg Ave., Amherst
256-8705
• Pastries • Croissants
• Breads • All Occasion Cakes
• Tarts • Coffee and Teas
• Birthday Cakes • Wedding Cakes
OPEN:
Sun.-Thurs. 7:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 7:30 a.m.-12:00 mid.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Disability Services is in search of volunteer readers for disabled students. The job of reader consists of reading books onto tape and/or reading aloud for students. No experience is necessary. We will train. Please contact Lorie Bell at Disability Services for further information at 545-0892.

Free Hamster and accessories Call Beth or Erin 546-0933

Having trouble with your roomate? Contact OCHO, 428 Student Union, or call us at 545-0865. We can help!

Looking for a place to live off campus? Questions about your commuter living situation? Subletting in May? Come to OCHO, 428 Student Union 545-0865.

3 Credit Recycling class Educ 2 354 Tuesday 2:30 - 5:00 call 545-1153 for more info

ATTENTION PROFESSORS

Have you been putting of painting your home or home office? Phillips Brothers painting provides fast high quality interior & exterior painting at reasonable prices. Free estimates flexible rates fast reliable service. Call Brock 584-5879.

FOR SALE

For Sale: Burton air 6 Snowboard Airwalk boots size 7 $350 call 527-3014

One way plane ticket to Miami Will sell for cheap price or best offer Interested? Call Alexis 549-4720

Yamaha CLP-30 Celvinova keyboard 88 full size, weighted keys with stand, pedals, bench Call Dave 253-9282

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1,000 An Hour!
Each member of your frat, sorority, team club, etc. pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1,000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to eazrn $1,000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation. 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65.

HELP WANTED

Att. Excellent Income for home assembly work. 1-504-646-1700 Dept MA-1307

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with clean water action. $100/wk. +. On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon.-Fri. + Sunday. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Join the Maesping staff and be part of a 20 year history of environmental activism:
The Bottle Bill
Mass. Clean Air Act
Mass toxic use reduction act
Full/Part time positions $40-60/day
Call Carmen 256-6434

U.S. Trecers is currently seeking motivated students in Amherst area for FT and PT independent work (800)866-6919

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor M.A. in Physics Experienced teaching assistant Call 256-0260

MUSIC

Speakers, Raconing + Repair Home, Auto, Pro ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave W. Springfield 1-781-2327

PERSONALS

"Gary Deane"
Happy Birthday As Ever BHD

To the pretty student/waitress I met Monday, January 25th at 10 am at the bursars office. Those lines were so long I practically got to know your whole life history except for a few critical details - like your name. I'd like to see you again. If you would like to see me again please respond here.

ROOMMATES WANTED

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

S. NINTENDO/MT. BIKE

Univega $300 Great condition. Super Nintendo, brand new with original packaging, super mario, super battletank $100, Final fantasy II $50 Romance of the Three Kingdoms II $50. Call Blake at 584-7285 or 545-1864

TRAVEL

"Spring Break '93"
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $169! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

WANTED

Band Members
for new Ska band
all positions!
Leave msg @ 549-0627

Sick of DC Meal Plan?
Meal Plan in exchange for kitchen work if interested call Jim Houston at 253-9015
At 496 North Pleasant St

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass.
Call Young Mi 546-0540 or Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton
Starting in January 548-2296

Sports

The ticketmaster reigns

Thorr Bjorn handling game operations

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

Friday, Jan. 29, 1993. This date marks the end of an era for students at the University of Massachusetts.

Yes, the Curry Hicks Cage will be host to its final game tomorrow evening for the UMass men's basketball team, setting the stage for the grand opening of the William D. Mullins Center, next Thursday, Feb. 4.

But something that many fans do not realize is that there is a man behind the scenes for UMass, someone who makes the operations of the Cage run smoothly. This man is Thorr Bjorn, the ticket manager and director of game operations for the Minutemen.

Bjorn, a UMass graduate of 1990, now has to look ahead to the Mullins Center, but he said he cannot forget the Cage and the two years of work that seemed like a lifetime.

"I've been doing this for two years, and it feels like a lot longer than that. We have come along way, and I think we have a long way to go," Bjorn said.

Over the last three seasons, Bjorn has seen the Minutemen become a huge favorite, thus creating a problem. Tickets which were once tough to give away are becoming priceless. Therefore, the ticket office has had to come up with new and improved ways of getting tickets out to the fans, especially students, safely and effectively.

"Every year we've done something different," said Bjorn. "The first year we started handing tickets out to anyone who wanted one; last year, we checked everybody off when we gave them a ticket.

"The activity cards this year have worked better and are speeding up the process. I think every year we are getting better, but the students may not always think that. They don't realize that we are doing it for them," Bjorn said.

"This season by far has been the hardest because we will have used four buildings [the Cage, Mullins Center, the Centrum in Worcester, and the Springfield Civic Center] as our home court.

Students don't complain about their tickets, because they are just fired up to be in there. But, we have gotten hammered by complaints from season ticket holders, because they are used to the Cage," Bjorn said.

In a span of three years, crowd control became the important factor Bjorn and his office had to worry about. The days of empty seats in the Cage were gone, and people were now pushing and shoving to get a ticket to see UMass basketball.

"People forget what it was like at the Boston University game two years ago. That is just an example of what we are trying to prevent. All we can do is ask the students to relax and wait."

Bjorn's job will be taking a new turn come next year with the Mullins Center hosting the games for the Minutemen.

He will continue to supervise the student workers in the new arena, but he will not be the one hiring the workers, unlike in the past, when he hired students from the school of sports management.

Calipari wants fans ready for Cage finale

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

John Calipari wants to make sure America remembers the Curry Hicks Cage long after the 60-year old gymnasium closes its doors for men's basketball sometime early Saturday morning.

First he brought in a quality opponent — Southwest Louisiana and ESPN, to broadcast at the Cage's favorite hour, midnight. Now he wants the crowd that night to be more than just its usual raucous self. He wants them to appear as a sea of white and give the national television audience something to remember.

Calipari wants every man, woman and child in the Cage that night to be wearing a white, special-edition, Cage finale T-shirt.

"We want a total sea of white to say goodbye to the Cage," Calipari said. "ESPN will be there and when they scan up to the crowd during the game, we want everyone to have the same shirt on.

"People all over the country will say, 'wow those fans in the Cage are unbelievable. It's like Duke or Kentucky.' They will remember the Cage as it should be remembered — a great place to play and watch a basketball game."

The men's basketball office will be selling the special edition T-shirts on the Campus Center Concourse, through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The Cage, one of the smallest but loudest gyms in the country, will host its last men's basketball game on Friday. The Minutemen will move into the 9,493 seat, $51 million Mullins Arena next Thursday, also in front of a national television (ESPN) audience.

The tremendous home court advantage the Minutemen enjoy while playing at the Cage will be missed, but Calipari said he wants the old gym to go out with a bang.

"Everyone needs to be up for the game, and let the nation know what the Cage has meant to UMass," Calipari said. "The T-shirts are just a part of that. We want everyone there to standing and getting wild, showing up with basketballs on their heads and painting their faces."

"It's the last game at the Cage ever and we want it to be a memorable one."

The white shirts will look especially good on television, since ESPN will be scanning the building more often than in a usual game, Calipari said.

"It's an eye catcher," Caliapri said. "The shirts and the enthusiasm of our crowd grabs viewers and more people will watch the game and talk about our great fans and our great old arena."

UM to ruffle feathers vs. St. Joseph's

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

After not winning a conference game for two years, the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team has already won two (of four) Atlantic 10 games this season.

Tonight at 7 p.m. in the Cage, the Minutewomen (6-8) look not only for their third A-10 win, but also for their first win in 20 attempts against nemesis St. Joseph's.

"St. Joe's is one of the most talented teams in the conference," said coach Joanie O'Brien. "What we have to do is try to contain them as best we can and play very well."

"We've been feeling good about ourselves lately after winning five of seven and the girls realize what they can do now — hopefully everyone will step up tonight."

O'Brien will have to get great performances from a few of her players, namely Melissa Gurile (14.6 pts./game, 8.3 rebs.) and Kim Kristofik (13.9, 6.9).

"Melissa hasn't shot well the past few games because she's been a little tired," said O'Brien. "But I look for her to step up and play well."

The return of Maleeka Valentine should also bolster the UMass backcourt as it gives O'Brien the option of starting Valentine at off-guard or bringing freshman sharpshooter Kim Gregory off the bench.

St. Joseph's (10-4), which is having a stellar season thus far, possesses one of the most potent lineups in the league with the likes of power forward Katie Curry (18.1 points) and small forward Amy Mallon (17.1 pts. and 9.6 rebounds).

"Katie Curry is a great player and absolutely shoots the lights out from three-point land," said O'Brien. "With Mallon, at her size she's the second or third leading rebounder in the conference."

Forward Octavia Thomas (11.9 pts./game, 6.9 rebs.) is going to have her hands full with the task of covering and more importantly, boxing out Mallon.

Other thumbnails for the Minutewomen will be Audrey Codner, who's the third leading scorer on the Lady Hawk squad, and India Henderson, who leads the team with 5.1 assists and is second in rebounds/game with 4.9.

"St. Joseph's is tough but we'll have a chance to compete in every game if we keep it close with under five minutes left."

Swim team doesn't skip a beat

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The winter break was very kind to the University of Massachusetts men's swimming team as they compiled a 3-1 record over the month, upping their overall record to 9-1.

The biggest win, by far, was last Saturday's dramatic 12-point win over a strong University of Connecticut squad. The Minutemen won the meet in the last of 13 events as the quartet Aaron Osborne, Chris Barrett, Joe Morris and Adam Reich set a UConn pool record by swimmng a 3:09.54 400 freestyle relay.

"Going into the meet I was a little worried," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth, "but we went down there and we swam very well. We exhibited good depth, which is very important in championship events."

UConn has been benefiting from what can be described as an overinflated ranking. The Huskies entered the meet ranked 33rd nationally, and went up to 27th after the UMass meet. Yarworth doesn't feel that his team is near the top 40 nationally, and with the win over UConn, said that the Huskies must have a friend or two on the voting list for the national poll.

The meet started with the UMass 400 Medley Relay team of Sean Clark, Tim Milbert, Tim Nubar and Reich establishing a UConn pool record of 3:29.65 in an easy win of over four seconds.

UConn won the next three events — 1000, 200, and 50 freestyles — but UMass took second, third and fourth in the 1000 and 200, minimizing the possible damage.

Then it was UMass' turn to go on a streak. Senior Jay Peluso and Milbert took first and second in the 200 Individual Medley. Justin Murphy took the 1 Meter Dive, and Nubar took the 200 Butterfly. With a 74.5-56.5 lead the Minutemen were looking good, but the Huskies wouldn't quit winning the next four events—100 Freestyle, 200 Backstroke, 500 Freestyle, and 3 Meter Diving — with only two events remaining.

Yarworth and the Minutemen knew that to overcome UConn's eight-point lead they would have to take at least first and second in the meet's second to last event, the 200 Breaststroke, and win the final relay. The tandem of Peluso and Milbert took care of the first part, easily outdistancing the nearest UConn swimmer in the 200 Breast, setting up the heroics of the final event and a big UMass victory over one of its fiercest rivals.

MEET NOTES: The Minutemen's only blemish to date is a 169-130 thumping at the hands of the Brown University Bears. Also over the break UMass easily outdistanced Providence College, the host school, and the University of Maine.

UMass skiing finds success

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

With everyone's eyes at the University of Massachusetts left on the state and progress of the men's basketball team, few realize or have time for any other sport. However, the men's and women's ski team have had the most productive seasons of any other winter sport this year.

The Minutemen and Minutewomen have found themselves at the top of their league, posting 6-1 and 7-1 records, respectively.

So in case you had no idea we even had a ski team or just happened to miss their results on the news here's a wrap up of the meets for the first half of the season.

Jan. 16-17 at the Berkshire East Mountain: For the women's slalom, UMass placed second as a team behind Boston College by only six tenths of a second. Senior Jennifer Tanguay led the way for UMass finishising first overall while Captain Debbie Adams (8th), Kyri Sparks (9th), and Jodi Tanguay (10th) carried UMass to a powerful finish.

Despite a superb performance from UMass' Bill Shafer, one of the top collegians in the country, the men's slalom

Turn to SKI, page 12

Officials should let punches roll, allow fists to fly

Question: Which facet of sport do you most often associate with hockey? a) speed, b) athletic grace, c) sportsmanship, d) fighting. If you chose "d", you are absolutely correct.

Mike
DILORENZO

NHL President-elect Gary Bettman might be startled to find this answer if he asked any casual fan what aspect they most often associate with hockey, especially in an era where NHL brass is trying to clean up the sport.

Fighting continues to be both an exciting part of the game and, yes, a crowd draw.

Yet the NHL would have us believe that we, the fans, don't like it and want it removed. They tell us that fighting is marring the game and have taken steps to remove it. Stiffer penalties for instigation have been implemented and fighting majors are

Turn to OFFICIALS, page 15

Friday January 29, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 66

Friday sunny, windy, upper 30s. Saturday sunny, mid-20s. Take our word for it.

Local News:
Amid dorm residents' cries of "letter-napping," housing puts an end to resident assistants' role in intersession mail distribution. See page 3.

Sports:
Minutemen set to take on Southwestern Louisiana in their final Cage appearance. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

IT'S ALL IN THE WRIST-- Rick Currier, a junior history major, prepares to send the puck down the ice in front of the Fine Arts Center.

Lifting military ban

Opposition to Clinton's plan mounts

By ROBERT DVORCHHAK
Associated Press

From the military ranks to mainstream America, a firefight of divided feelings buzzed Thursday over President Clinton's plan to lift the ban on homosexuals serving in the military.

"Quite honestly, the only way to describe the opponents' reaction is hate," said Sam Gallegos, now a reporter for a gay magazine after he was given a general discharge from the Colorado National Guard in 1991.

At the Marine Corps base at Camp Pendleton, Calif., Lance Col. Richard McDowell said a new policy would affect performance.

"I wouldn't feel comfortable with some guy who's gay, in a fighting hole, in the middle of battle," McDowell said. "You wouldn't know if he'd be thinking about fighting or be thinking about, you know, you."

Army Pfc. Paul Rader, stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky., said allowing gays in the military "disgusts me ." He said homosexuals on active duty would be treated roughly by other soldiers.

At Malmstrom Air Force Base in Montana, Sgt. Marty Tucker said the change is "not the image the military should project."

And Capt. Tim Myers, commanding officer of the Chicago Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps, said the close quarters of sea duty would pose problems.

"I think it is very difficult for the heterosexual and gay male to live beside one another for six months on a ship," Myers said. "There is no place to go if someone is uncomfortable."

Fredrick Seltzer, a gay journalist seaman apprentice at the submarine base in Bangor, Wash., says fears are misplaced.

"We are not sexual predators," said Seltzer, whose discharge is pending. "We are basically normal human beings but the one thing in our lives that is different is our sexual orientation."

Capt. Pam Mindt of the Minnesota Army National Guard came forward in July, out of "duty and honor," to tell her superiors she is a lesbian. Her discharge also is pending.

"I was sick and tired of seeing quality people being kicked out because of their orientation." Mindt said. "I've served 16 honorable years, not marred with any type of allegation of inappropriate sexual conduct. Let our records speak for us."

"Social change is never easy," said Joe Steffan, a top student at the Naval Academy in Annapolis who was discharged

Marshall is fondly remembered

Professors respond to the loss of former justice

By DENISE HENRY
Collegian Correspondent

The death of ex-Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall marked the end of a great man and a great legal career, but his achievements in the battle for civil rights in America and his legacy of standing up for what is right live on, said university professors.

"Thurgood Marshall will be missed by all," said Professor of political science Sheldon Goldman.

Goldman described Marshall as a truly great Supreme Court justice who was a pioneer in protecting civil liberties, and the conscience of the Supreme Court in matters of racial and sexual equality.

As a lawyer, Marshall argued a number of civil rights cases including the famous 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education, which put an end to the separate but equal doctrine in public education.

Marshall later became the first Black justice on the Supreme Court, and was known for the time and effort he put into attaining civil rights for African Americans.

Peter Derrico, associate professor of legal studies, said he felt Marshall's death was a great loss, and that now America would have to cling to his memory, because no one since him had made such an impact on the country.

Legal studies lecturer Matthew Chametzky said he was also very saddened by the passing of the legal figure who accomplished so much for civil rights in America.

As a lawyer, Marshall argued a number of civil rights cases including the famous Brown vs. Board of Education, which put an end to the separate but equal doctrine in public education.

Chametzky added he had already been upset by Marshall's departure from the Court due to health problems, and his subsequent replacement by Justice Clarence Thomas.

Chametzky said he felt that despite the death of Marshall, the legacy of his eloquently written, pioneering opinions will live on.

UM reaction to GLB ban

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

President Bill Clinton's promise to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military has drawn mixed reactions across the University of Massachusetts campus.

Senior Army ROTC Cadet and history major David Kobs said he believes the integration of gays in the military is not the job of the president, but of Congress, which drafted the Uniform Code of Military Justice, instituting the ban in the first place.

"I'm personally opposed to it, as I think a lot of people in this country are, but if there must be integration, it should be taken slowly to protect the safety of the soldiers," said Kobs.

Members of the Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance disagreed.

Turn to UM REACTION, page 4

New Mullins Center: something for everyone

By NICOLE DUMAS
Collegian Staff

While the Boston Garden has been a part of Massachusetts history for many years, it has something in common with the brand-new Mullins Center.

Like the Boston Garden, the parquet squares which make up the floor of the basketball court can be removed to reveal an Olympic-sized ice rink. With about 100 employees on the job, the entire transition from basketball court to hockey rink can be completed in five hours.

The "philosophy" of the Mullins Center, according to Executive Director Lee A. Eskilsen is to attract as many people to the center as possible.

"We are going to make as many people conscious of the facility as we can," Eskilsen said. "We are here to provide the safest and most secure facilities that we can."

Eskilsen said the goals for the Mullins Center revolve around programs and facilities for the university. These programs include basketball, hockey, recreational sports, fine arts and student concerts.

Secondary to programs directly related to the university, the Mullins Center will house conferences in the summer and at other times when school is not in session.

The Mullins Center will enact several proposals designed to attract more visitors to the arena, including a no-smoking policy and a "parent's room."

Esckilsen said smoking will not be allowed in any of the three sections of the Mullins Center — the arena, the ice facility and the line, which is the area between the arena and the ice rink.

"We will be a no-smoking facility from day one," Esckilsen said.

The proposed "parent's room" is designed to allow parents to bring their children to the center while attending an event.

Event Manager Edward J. Murphy said he realizes the athletic events at Mullins

Turn to MULLINS, page 8

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Student Operations crews lay out the basketball floor in preparation for the first game at the Mullins Center on February 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor .....

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Unless you go all out for something, you may conclude your life without actually having lived it. It doesn't have to be running, but it should be a quest for excellence, and it need only be for that period of your life that it takes to fully explore it. That's how you find out what you are made of. That's how you find out who you are. To live your life your way, to reach for the goals you have set for yourself, to be the you that you want to be, that is success.

This message brought to you by the Collegian and Ron Daws.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Friday, January 29

Meeting — Muslim Students Association is holding Jumaa Salat at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center Rm. 804-808.

Group — Muslim Students Association: Social hour for new and old students, from 7:00-8:30 p.m., refreshments, in Campus Center Rm. 804-808.

Thursday, February 4

Lecture — Robin Ochs will give a presentation on "Understanding Bisexuality: Beyond Stereotypes," from 4:00-6:00 p.m. in CC174. She will also give a workshop entitled "Lesbian and Bisexual Women: A Dialogue," from 7:30-9:30 p.m. in CC165.

Group — The gay, lesbian and bisexual graduate student group is having an ice cream social from 3:00-5:00 p.m. in the program for GLB Concerns' office, Crampton House, SW.

Friday, February 5

Help Wanted — The Everywoman's Center is seeking interns, volunteers and work-study students to be involved in the Resource/Referral Program. Application deadline is Feb. 5. Call 545-0883 for more information.

Volunteers — Woman shelter/companers needs volunteers to provide services to battered women and their children. Call 538-9717.

The New Students Program not just another summer job

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Most students who come to the University of Massachusetts experience the New Students Program - three days of tours, class scheduling and more information about the university than any new student thought possible.

And although almost all have had the thrill of coming to campus for the first time and getting their first impressions of the university through the program, for the students behind all the information, advice and assistance, New Students is not just an adventure, it's a job.

The New Students Program combines the jobs of both tour guide and student admissions representatives. The position requires a thorough knowledge of the campus and all it has to offer. The new students are informed about residential, social, and academic life.

The new students program summer counselor positions offer a nine-week salary, free room and board, and health coverage. The job runs from May 26 to July 17, and the counselors come in contact with all the incoming first year students.

"The student counselors play a critical role. We strive to hire a diverse group of the best and brightest students," said Jeanne Horrigan, associate director of the New Students Program.

The students who apply should be skilled in planning and leadership, and have an appreciation for the university and a high level of energy because the hours are long and require a substantial time investment, said Horrigan.

Horrigan said The New Students Program has provided many students with close friendships and warm memories, and that the group of students works closely together over the summer weeks to provide incoming students with a friendly first view of the university.

The counselors greet the new students, help them plan their schedules, set them up with advisors, proctor exams, lead tours and provide nighttime entertainment.

The Director of the New Students Program, Sarah Hamilton said, "Students must be enthusiastic about the university and experienced in different aspects of campus life. They must be willing to help people."

According to Hamilton, to be eligible for the program a student must be an undergraduate with a grade point average higher than 2.5. Involvement in campus groups, registered student organizations, and residential staff experience are more than welcome.

Applications for this year's new students summer program counselors are available in the University's Admission Center. The deadline is February 15.

Committee report attacks Weld plan to privatize Northampton hospital

NORTHAMPTON (AP) - A legislative report has sharply criticized attempts by Gov. William Weld and his mental health officials to shift patients at Northampton State Hospital into private mental health facilities.

"We viewed Northampton State as a case study on privatization and felt it contained all the lessons that would be instructive," Richard Connors, director of the Senate Post Audit and Oversight Committee, said Thursday.

"There has got to be some real thinking done about planning," he said. "We are not moving abstract things around the Commonwealth. We are moving bodies. It's almost as if there was an ideological commitment made and only afterward was there any thinking done about how it was to be accomplished."

"That seems a little out of order," Connors said.

The committee found the administration failed to come up with adequate plans on how much space was needed and where to put the patients once the state hospital was closed, and in its floundering "destroyed the nucleus of state-provided mental care in western Massachusetts."

It also questioned the short and long term cost savings and suggested the Mental Health Department provide quarterly reports on finances.

The facility, which then housed 129 patients, was one of nine state hospitals targeted for privatization by the Weld administration in June 1991. It was originally scheduled to close in April 1992, but the date has repeatedly been put off as deals with municipal and private hospitals to take the patients fell through. It is now scheduled to close in May.

Connie Peters, a spokeswoman for the state Mental Health Department, maintained the charges in the proposals had arisen from changing circumstances.

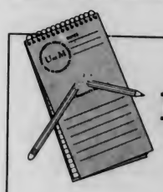
"Planning is an evolving process," she said, contending revisions were "shifts, not entirely new plans."

She maintained that the department's main intent had not been to save money. And she said that while part of the savings was accomplished by simply shifting the cost of the care from the state to the federal government through Medicaid payments to private hospitals, "many states do it and that is the way the Medicaid laws are set up."

She also said the department had prepared a 20-page statement defending its actions and had presented it to the committee Jan. 11. However, she declined to provided the document saying department officials had not yet decided whether they want to make those arguments public.

State Sen. Stanley Rosenberg, D-Amherst, who had requested the committee to look into the closing of the hospital in his district, said the report confirms the fears of many mental health advocates.

Local News



NEWS BRIEFS
compiled by Jason George

Dean Frederick Byron to Step Down

Frederick W. Byron Jr. has announced his resignation as dean of the faculty of natural science and mathematics in the college of arts and sciences at the University of Massachusetts, effective Aug. 31.

In a recent letter to the department heads in the Faculty of Natural Science and Mathematics, Byron, who has been dean since 1979, wrote that he felt it was time for him to move on.

"With the appointment of Michael Hooker as President and appointment of a new chancellor for our campus soon to occur, it is clear that a new era in the history of the University is underway," Byron said. "This is an excellent time for natural science and mathematics to have a new dean who will be part of the new leadership team."

Provost Glen Gordon said he understood Byron's decision to step down, but accepted his resignation with regret.

"He's done a magnificent job as dean over the last 14 years," Gordon said in a statement.

New Registrar

The University of Massachusetts now has a deputy registrar on campus to register voters.

Robb Smith, a 25-year-old graduate student in the labor studies department, was sworn in on Jan. 21. Smith is available to register both new and relocated voters Monday through Friday from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Those wishing to register are advised to call ahead at 545-0865.

Smith is also the assistant to the director of the Off-Campus Housing Office, where he has worked periodically for four years.

AIDS Quilt Reception

An open reception for the Five College "Beyond the Names" AIDS quilt will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 11, at the University of Massachusetts Health Center. Refreshments will be served.

The project was designed to give students, faculty and staff at the Five Colleges a way to express their feelings about the impact of AIDS. So far nearly 800 squares have been collected.

Professor Honored

Robert A. Potash, professor emeritus of history at the University of Massachusetts, has been elected a corresponding member for the non-Spanish world to the Argentine Academy of History.

Potash has been the author of seven books, most of which have been published in Spanish and English. Potash's specialties are 19th-century Mexican economic history and 20th-century Argentine politics.

Although he retired from teaching in 1987, Potash is currently working on the third book in a series of volumes about the role of the military in Argentine politics. Potash received his bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees from Harvard.

UMass Professor Named to Science Council

Associate Professor of Physics and Astronomy Jose Mestre has been appointed to the Experts' Panel of the Federal Coordinating Council for Science, Engineering, and Technology.

Mestre, an alumnus, began teaching at the University in 1981.

Dedicated fans wait overnight for the final Rage in the Cage

By JASON NASH and ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

Basketball fanatics from all walks of student life could be seen Wednesday night, all night, surrounding their beloved Curry Hicks Cage.

Approximately 150 students began their overnight saga at about 10 p.m. The fans waited for tickets in ten-degree weather for tonight's game against Southwestern Louisiana. Although it is not the first time UMass fans have pulled an "all-nighter" for a game, this contest with the Ragin' Cajuns is a special one: tonight's will be the last in the Cage.

With the completion of the new $51 million William D. Mullins Center, the Cage will no longer be the site of home games for the Minutemen. Fans got in line early to ensure their spot in UMass basketball history.

Mike Benoit, a sophomore, said he was determined to be the first in line, and accomplished his goal by arriving at 7 p.m., nearly twelve hours before the tickets were supposed to be handed out. He said it was not the first time he had slept out for a chance to get into a UMass basketball game, and it would not be the last.

"It's the last game in the Cage - Friday night. I'm definitely doing this for the basketball game. I sit right behind the UMass bench every game," said Benoit.

Sophomore Dan Czerwiec said he was a dedicated fan of the Cage, but also realized the need for the bigger arena, which he viewed as a "new beginning" for the Minutemen.

"The Cage is a great atmosphere, but we need the

Turn to CURRY HICKS, page 6

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
The Curry Hicks Cage.

Mail distribution irks students

Some claim letters were being held 'for ransom'

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Methods of mail distribution in the dorms following move-in day have led to a perception among some students that their mail was being withheld in order to get them to come to normally poorly attended floor meetings.

According to housing officials, the practice of sorting the mass of mail that accumulates during January break by floor and giving it to resident assistants (RAs) to distribute to their residents at the floor meetings has been widespread, but was in violation both of housing policy and of federal postal codes.

In addition, some students feel their rights have been violated by RAs who have refused to hand out mail until the floor meeting.

"This is symbolic of the complete lack of respect and sensitivity housing has towards the students," said Aaron Wilson, a resident of Cashin.

Wilson said he asked his RA for his mail, and was told he would have to wait until the floor meeting the following day. He said he then explained there was important tax information in his mail, at which point his RA told him he could have that portion of his mail right away. Wilson said he refused the offer, and chose instead to complain to his cluster office. Five minutes later he said he was called by the assistant residence director in Cashin, who said he could come and get all of his mail if he wanted.

Wilson said he felt the RAs were illegally withholding residents' mail as a tactic to get them to come to the floor meetings, at which interest and attendance is usually low.

Michael Burchell, residence director for Cashin, said this was not the case.

"I think there was a misperception about what the motivation behind having the RAs distribute the mail was," Burchell said. "We thought it was the most expedient way to distribute the mail. Now we see that that was not an appropriate thing to do."

According to Joseph Zannini, director of Housing Services, official housing policy requires that all mail be sorted by employees hired to do so, and that it be distributed through mailboxes rather than in person.

Burchell said he had not been fully aware of this policy, and, as in many other dorms, had been having RAs distribute January mailings themselves. He said this was because staff had not yet been hired to sort the mail, and because much more mail had accumulated over break than would fit into the tiny dorm mailboxes.

He said he understood how students might have felt their mail was being withheld, but it was really just an issue of logistics.

"The mail wasn't held until [the floor meetings], it just wasn't all sorted until then," Burchell said.

After the controversy arose, Burchell said he was made aware that this was a violation of policy, and all mail was returned to the cluster office by the RAs, where

Turn to MAIL, page 4

UMass Board of Governors works to improve Campus Center's food services

By AARON JOHN-RICADELA
Collegian Staff

Don't hold your breath, but the Hatch might be serving better food before the semester is over, according to members of the University's Board of Governors.

The Board of Governors is working with the Hatch to improve the quality of the food there in hopes of drumming up business to reverse the trend which saw the Campus Center and meal plan food services lose $1.2 million last year, said Governor Dan Gordon.

Specials such as a half-pound charbroiled burger "with a real name" and premium items such as cheese fries will likely turn up on the Hatch menu this semester, and will stay if they improve business, he said.

"I haven't met one person who enjoys eating at the Hatch," said Gordon, who heads a committee to revamp the Campus Center's food services, comprised of the Hatch, Bluewall, Graduate Lounge, Coffee Shop, the four Munchy Stores, and the Top of the Campus resturaunt and lounge.

"The main goal is to draw more customers," Gordon said. "The quality of the food at The Hatch and the other venues is not acceptable. It's not someplace where you're going to get great food and hang out."

"The issue is, why should I pay $1.80 [illegible] tuna fish sandwich which isn't any better than one at the D.C.?" said Treasurer Mylie Needle.

Gordon and BOG chairperson Ben Preston said improving business at Food Services is a better alternative to reducing the Campus Center's $866,000 deficit than closing the Munchy Stores or privatizing the University Store, as proposed last semester by Director of Auxiliary Services Ashoke Ganguli.

The University Store itself is highly profitable, making $700,000 a year," Preston said.

When it became clear that the privatization proposal wasn't politically popular with the University community, Auxiliary Services established a task force to come up with other ways to solve the deficit, Preston said.

Gordon said the Board believes food specials and an eventual menu overhaul will increase profits enough to prevent any closings or privatization of the University Store.

Gordon said he believes the changes at the Hatch would occur this semester because its owners are cooperating with the Board.

He encouraged students to participate in the Food Services Committee, because the issues affect the entire campus. Students should contact the Board if they are interested, Gordon said.

■ military ban

continued from page 1

weeks before his graduation in 1987 because he is gay. Steffan, now a law student in Connecticut, is author of "Honor Bound: A Gay American Fights for the Right to Serve His Country."

At the 140-member Alexander Hamilton American Legion Post in San Francisco, World War II veteran Paul Hardman blamed "sanctified ignorance" for opposition to Clinton's order.

"Most gay men in the military, you wouldn't know one from the other," said Hardman, the post's founder.

Most public opinion polls show the American public split.

"The people who are pushing do not realize the possible repercussions against those individuals accepted in the military service who are gay. I think it's putting their lives in jeopardy," said retired Brig. Gen. Dan Bullard, the post adjutant.

David M. Smith, executive director of the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation in Los Angeles, said it is "a bunch of nonsense to think that sexual orientation is going to affect performance. The (new) policy will do one thing: It will allow homosexuals to serve without worrying that their careers will be ruined."

■ UM reaction

continued from page 1

"It's a good thing," said Shawn Cotter, a senior comparative literature and film studies major. "This will be the first step into the acceptance of GLB's and their partners into mainstream society."

Many say they fear lifting the ban will result in a torrent of GLB recruits. Senior women's studies major Sandy Bosselaers rejected this, saying "There won't be a great influx of GLB's in the military because they've already been there. This measure will keep them from losing their jobs and the possibility of being dishonorably discharged."

Kevin Jourdain, president of the UMass Republican Club and a senior political science and economics major said "The military has national interest as its number one priority, it's not an institution designed for social engineering."

"Soldiers have to be concerned with military strategies and battling the enemy, they can't concern themselves with the social climate of the day," said Jourdain.

Jourdain also said Clinton is gambling with the little collateral he has earned since the election, and should be focusing on the economy. He said focusing on social issues right now is bad politics.

The UMass Democrats support the Clinton administration on this political move, claiming it's a good thing, and it's about time.

Zeph Parmenter, a senior history major, said, "The argument for keeping gays out of the military is the same as the reasons used for keeping Black people out in the early fifties. Gays in the military will not lower morale, as anyone can see that Black people haven't lowered the morale."

■ mail

continued from page 3

it will be sorted and put in mailboxes over the next couple of days.

"As of now, RAs will not be distributing mail," Burchell said.

Some RAs admitted, however, that they had been holding on to the mail until the floor meetings, and refusing non-urgent requests for mail prior to the meetings.

An RA in the Northeast residential area, who wished to remain anonymous, said she had used mail to entice her residents to her floor meeting.

"Students don't really want to come [to the meetings], but if their mail is there, they're more likely to. If it were something urgent, though, like a bill or a package or something, I would have given it to them," she said.

Jason Hogue, an RA in John Quincy Adams tower in Southwest, said student demands for their mail before the floor meetings were unreasonable, because it was not the job of RAs to be "slaves" to their residents.

"The residents are kind of picky little snots. They're just sort of spoiled. I'm not at their beck and call. You know, if they come and say 'My food stamps are in there, I need them,' fine, they can get them. But if they say 'My mom sent me a package of cookies,' you know, they can wait," he said.

Hogue posted signs on his floor stating he was holding their mail "for ransom," and they would have to come to the floor meeting to get it.

"If that's a tactic the RA needs to do, there's obviously something wrong with those residents," Hogue said.

According to postal inspectors, however, the problem lies with the tactic, which is a violation of federal law. And according to Zannini, it will no longer be possible for RAs to employ it anyway.

Zannini said from now on all mail will be sorted in the mail rooms and distributed through the mailboxes.

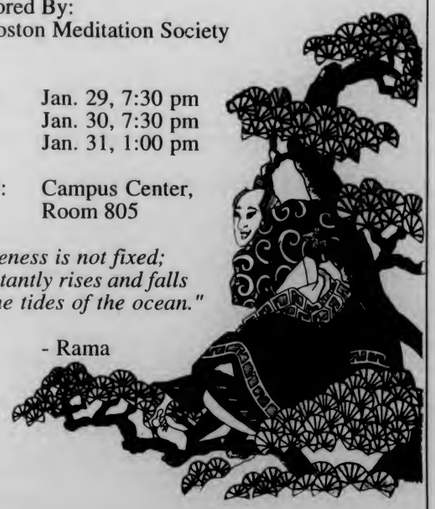
EAT SOME PASTE

Walking Distance
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst • 253-3539
Free Weights Supreme
Best Cardiovascular

20% one item discount with this ad
DISCOUNT SURPLUS
• Couches • Carpets • Beds
• Chairs • Desks • Lamps
(413) 586-7202
206 Russell St. (Rt. 9)
Hadley, MA
We take in consignments
Cash • Personal Checks • Major Credit Cards Accepted

The Collegian is proud to present another semester of witty Collegian filler.
Pure chewing satisfaction?

Learn To Meditate
Master The Ten Thousand States of Mind
Inroductory Seminar
Sponsored By:
The Boston Meditation Society
When: Jan. 29, 7:30 pm
Jan. 30, 7:30 pm
Jan. 31, 1:00 pm
Where: Campus Center, Room 805
"Awareness is not fixed;
It constantly rises and falls
Like the tides of the ocean."
- Rama



ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741
FOUR (4) Bedroom Apartments!
$899 (utilities included! wow!)
Microwave Ovens!!
RENT FREE!!
Move in now - no rent until February 1, 1993!
Move in February '93 and receive it FREE!
1 month free rent with 1 year lease!
*Promotion & prices subject to change without notice
TOP TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD LIVE HERE:
1. Your PARENTS don't!
2. YOU pick your roommates!
3. PRIVACY- Spacious Four (4) Bedrooms!
4. TWO (2) Bathrooms- no waiting in the shower line!
5. UTILITIES included $$$!
6. Directly on BUSLINE- minutes from campus & downtown Amherst!
7. It's FREE public transportation!
8. INCLUDES major appliances & w/w carpeting!
9. QUIET forest setting - for your peace of mind.
Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!
Don't wait another day, call today!
CUT THIS AD & USE IT TO LIVE "RENT FREE!" AT ALPINE COMMONS!
256-0741

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Are Clinton's goals on GLB issues too good to be true?

The buzz of excitement and expectation in the air was almost palpable when I was home in Washington over the holiday. Twelve years of Reagan-Bush finally over! A new president who says all the right things on queer issues and AIDS issues is a dream come true. Thoughts of passing a gay civil rights bill, coupled with viewing the construction of the bleachers for the parade and the massive tents on the Mall, gave me a true feeling of hope, even joy. I found myself smiling for no reason. I almost felt safe.

At first, I didn't want to like Bill Clinton. He has a horrible record in Arkansas: the sodomy law, criminalizing only queer lovemaking, was passed and instituted in 1977 while he served as state attorney general. In 1991, he opposed an attempt to rescind this law. Clinton did not sign an executive order banning discrimination in state employment on the basis of sexual orientation. He never recognized a single gay pride day in Arkansas or national coming out day. The only money earmarked for AIDS came from federal, not state, sources. He even supported the mandatory reporting of names of HIV-positive persons, criminalizing HIV transmission and punitive compulsory testing for HIV.

Wendy
MATAYA

After months of being hounded on the campaign trail by the ACT UP Presidential Project, he began not only to talk about these issues in a national sense, but to say what queers wanted to hear: repeal the military ban, sign a gay civil rights bill, implement the National Commission on AIDS' recommendations. Knowing his less than remarkable record on these issues, we believed him and we worked hard to get him elected. He invites our national leaders to join him at the table, he listens to them, he nods his head, he says he's very concerned — but what will he do?

As a queer activist this is a very trying time for me. I am suspended between wanting to believe Clinton will implement these policies, making this society safer for queers, and dreading the knowledge that his promises will likely come to naught. Clinton is already waffling over repealing the military ban. Even if he does repeal it, what sort of institutional changes will he make in the military to make it a truly safe place for queer soldiers? Probably nothing, and the coming out process will remain just as traumatizing for a lesbian cadet in 1995 as it was in 1947.

National leaders of the gay, lesbian and bisexual movement are enamored of Clinton. After years of fighting and struggling outside of the establishment, they now feel very comfortable being part of the establishment. I fear they may lose sight of our goals in exchange for their place in the sun. How long will this sick honeymoon last? Grassroots queer organizations will once again have to take the lead in fighting for our rights. Clinton has had 18 months of campaigning and two and a half months of transition to develop his policies. Either he implements queer friendly measures immediately, or he never will. We will not let another president make a mockery of who or what we believe. Lives hang in the balance: too many have already died because of inaction, ineptness and indifference in Washington. Should Clinton not follow through on his promises, others in the queer movement and I will fight, protest and heckle Clinton just as mercilessly as we protested Bush.

Wendy Malaya is a UMass graduate student.

Feminism mutates women's rights

Ah, the lovely stench of marijuana, the proliferation of Birkenstocks and "drug rugs," the incessant and unending lines at Whitmore. . . I must be back in Amherst!

I hope you had a long, wonderful break, but quite honestly I don't much care. Most of you young liberals were probably itching to get back to "the country's most politically correct university," as reported in a recent magazine. Pin on your "Ally" buttons and strap on your seatbelts: here we go again.

Michael
MORRISSEY

I have an axe to grind, and it is with the so-called feminists of this country. The recent rescinding of abortion restrictions has made it certain that feminists will be in the public eye for a long time to come, but I hope they heed my advice beforehand.

Beware, young women. Feminism is really a front for militant lesbians who are seeking yet another forum to promote their agendas. If you don't believe me, then listen to this.

Sheila Cronen is one of the many psychos who has occupied a place at the top of feminism. Cronen once said, "Since marriage constitutes slavery for women, it is clear that the women's movement must concentrate on attacking marriage. Freedom for women cannot be without the abolition of marriage."

In the Jan. 1988 National Organization for Women Times, Cronen was quoted as saying, "The simple fact is, every woman must be willing to be recognized as a lesbian to be fully feminine."

You may think that my battle with these fem-bians has no place on a college newspaper, but there are college professors who teach young women this drivel. Luckily, the movement has failed.

Promoting equality of the sexes is not feminism. Many get this confused. Equality is something that everyone, including myself, strives for. America has made great progress during the last century concerning women's rights, and women are now nearly equal with men. This is not to be confused with promoting women over their husbands, over children, over their male co-workers and even over their bosses, which is what feminism attempts. Fem-bianism is one movement disguised as two, trying to destroy America to gain its own end.

Think about it: only by producing, raising and educating children can this country survive and prosper. The primary way for this to occur is through the sacrament of marriage. By denouncing marriage and everything it stands for, feminists want to promote their fantasies at the expense of the world. Their message is, "Screw the world; just give us power."

The double-namers are just one branch of the feminists. Double-namers are women who marry but keep their maiden names. If these women cannot even give their former names to their husbands, can they give their love? By not even sacrificing their name, how can they ever make a sacrifice to their families?

Don't get me wrong, most of the women today do not subscribe to the tenets of fem-bianism. A recent poll in USA TODAY showed that 60 percent of women do not consider themselves feminists, which is certainly an encouraging sign.

Most women simply want to live comfortably, have loving people around them and have money, just like men. All women do not want to work, and in fact many would raise children. Fem-bians try to tell America that all women feel oppressed, want to dissolve their marriages and disown their children, and go into a career while having unlimited abortions on demand.

I must stress my advocacy of women's rights; but I submit that feminism is an uglier, more frightening mutation of women's rights.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

A shelf full of literary snack foods

I'm going to bounce around in topic land today, so put your feet up and raise the white flag. It's literary snack foods installment time.

Snack #1: Twinkies (Because they're cuddly) It looks like the smoking ban in Northampton restaurants will become a reality, and the beret-wearing coalition of camel chainers in the back room of Cafe Pretentiousness is not pleased. They've been reduced to inhaling steam from their cappuccinos and praying for divine intervention.

Lori
O'CONNOR

With its angry factions, the controversy echoes that other dilemma, the Chunky Soup War. Fork! Spoon! Let 'em smoke! Snuff their butts! It's a mighty idea, forcing smokers outside to do their business like the family dog. Someone had better set up a filter redemption center, or people in distant lands will speak in awed, hushed tones about the legendary streets paved with crushed Best Buys.

Even if banished to alleys, smokers won't be left in peace. I can see the "20/20" episode now: "Welcome to Northampton, where an army of exiled smokers has created a new hole in the ozone layer over New England." It's a no-win situation in a world where public puffing is fast becoming synonymous with public urination.

Snack #2: Licorice (Because you can use it to flay your friends) After a hellish eight hours spent in a district court, I now have a sneaking suspicion that jury duty is the government's way of inhibiting criminal impulses in the average citizen. At 8 a.m., 30 of us were herded into a cramped room and forced to watch back-to-back episodes of "The Regis Philbin Show." We were then weeded down to a sullen group of seven, and the judicial circus began. I was handed a sack of red meat as a consolation prize/lunch, and isolated for an hour and a half, facing the moral crisis that only another starving vegetarian could understand. The trial process is fascinating and I was privileged to be allowed to take part in it. (See? I was nice! Please don't get angry and summon me again!)

Snack #3: Whoopie pies (Because Tipper Gore wouldn't approve) It seems someone in Perkins, Illinois, has been practicing surgery on the Barbie dolls in local stores. Experts claim the attacks are too graphic to show the public, and have decided that their severity indicates a sick mind, "obsessed with physical perfection," and poses a definite threat to society. Frankly, my jaw gapes. They're searching for a lumbering oedipal monster, while the perpetrator may well be an educated feminist sickened by the unrealistic physical ideal the doll sets for little girls. For failing to consider anything outside of the obvious, these authorities are the recipients of my "Duh!" forehead slap of the month. It's a mad world that gives rise to a slayer of perky plastic disposables.

Snack #4: Cheez Puffs (Because they're not just a food. They're a lifestyle) Soon to hit the bookstores: Amy Fisher's entry into the self-help manual circuit: "How to Keep Your Man". Congratulations to anyone who hasn't heard of Fisher or her Tweedledum sidekick, Buttafuoco. They're a pair of shameless media whores. Escaping the Fisher phenomenon is impossible; the airwaves are saturated. This isn't a playground squabble, people of the media. Help for those twisted voyeuristic urges is a phone call away.

Good day, and remember: "Snakes aren't cool pets. They just wish you were smaller so they could eat you."

Lori O'Connor is a Collegian columnist.

Holiday reflections

"Welcome home young man," greeted Eustacia Fields with a smile as she threw her canvas backpack on the end table and reclined on a Campus Center couch. "How'd your break go?"

Kent O'Brien folded his newspaper. "Eh, it was pretty dull. I went out with my friends a couple times, but they all left after two weeks. I ended up working in the storeroom stacking boxes for a bankrupt retailer most of January. Hoo-wee," he said, spinning his finger in the air.

Eustacia started running her finger through her hair lazily. "Yeah, 'bout the same here. Except I just sat around the house," she paused, glancing at students walking by. "You know, it was nice for a couple of days. Even Christmas."

Nathan
CRICK

Kent grinned. "What do you mean, driving around aimlessly and walking through malls isn't fun? Boy, I could do that all day. I love wading through Bart Simpson paraphernalia and bad glassware."

Eustacia nodded. You know, I could really get into the spirit a few years ago, getting the tree and seeing my cousins and stuff. But it's just so lame now. All the houses look plain stupid with plastic Santa Clauses and flashing lights. Give me a break. Like everybody's obliged to have goodwill and peace suddenly because it's December. It's enough to make you sick."

"You know, I really missed that chipper attitude of yours Eustacia," he smiled.

"Oh, be quiet," she scolded, punching Kent in the shoulder. "You just don't have the guts to say anything socially conscious. Big wimp!"

"Okay, okay, so I agree with you," he said, waving his hands randomly. "But you don't have to go around making a big angst-filled tale of woe about it. The world is full of things that really bite, but everybody knows that already."

"No, they don't," Eustacia scowled. "Probably up in Maine everybody watches 'It's A Wonderful Life' every winter and thinks how closely that '50s-all-white-actor movie resembles reality. Maybe they know it isn't, but they refuse to accept it."

Kent shook his head. "You don't give people enough credit."

"What reasons do I have to think otherwise?" she cried. "Christmas comes with its good cheer, but if you watch the news, the world's self destructing while we open stupid gifts from the mall. Not that gifts are bad, but it's all we care about anymore."

"You're doing it again," said Kent. "Making assumptions about other people. Most people are as concerned as you, but what can they do about it? Send their kids to Bosnia for the holidays? It's an escape, to pretend for a while that the world can be caring even if just for a day," he paused. "Boy, that's got to be the sappiest thing I ever said."

Eustacia punched him lightly in the shoulder again. "See?" she smiled. "You are sensitive, ya big sap."

"Shouldn't you be going somewhere?" Kent demanded.

Eustacia leapt up quickly. "Yes, I've got to eat lunch. I'm curious if the DC's have been able to resist the powerful Cracklin' Oat Bran lobby. They're planning a takeover of breakfast as we know it."

"Well, I'll see you," waved Kent as he picked up his paper. "May your every day be Christmas Day."

Eustacia shook her head with a smile. "I'm in for one depressing year," she said walking away.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

■ Curry Hicks

continued from page 3

Mullins Center in order to get up to big-time basketball," said Czerwiec.

While most of the people in line said they were there because they were interested in the game itself, a few said it was the chance to see their favorite UMass players that attracted them, aside from basketball.

When asked why she wanted to attend the game, freshman Seema Gupta attributed her wait to one person.

"I'm doing this for Harper [Williams]. He's the best, and that's all I have to say. Harper rules," said Gupta.

As the air got colder, and the night seemed to be getting longer, Head Coach John Calipari supplied the crowd with enough pizza for everyone. Senior Jon Aronson thanked Calipari.

"Cal is God. On the first day, Cal created God," said Aronson.

Even though the wait went smoothly early in the night, ticket manager Thorr Bjorn was awakened at his home at 2 a.m. and called to campus by a report of burning barricades, apparently set on fire by students.

"The whole thing was almost ruined by four jerks running up to the front of the line, chanting 'we want our tickets'," said Bjorn.

However, at around five in the morning, the ticket office decided to hold a lottery for the students that were waiting. Tickets were handed out continuously until 10:30 a.m., when the game sold out.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

The Curry Hicks Cage waits for its final Men's basketball game.

WORK SMARTER. NOT HARDER.

We're working smarter, too. So you don't have to work harder.

For us, it means an ongoing relationship with educators and professors, striving to understand what's needed to help them make math concepts come alive.

It means continually working with students like you, discovering firsthand what you expect from the calculator you select.

The result? Calculators that are highly recommended by your teachers and peers. Calculators that are perfectly matched to your major and your coursework.

The TI-81 is a perfect example. It offers the most comprehensive, easy-to-use graphing features available with extensive programming capabilities.

And there are others. Like the TI-68, an advanced scientific that solves up to five simultaneous equations, performs complex numbers and offers formula programming.

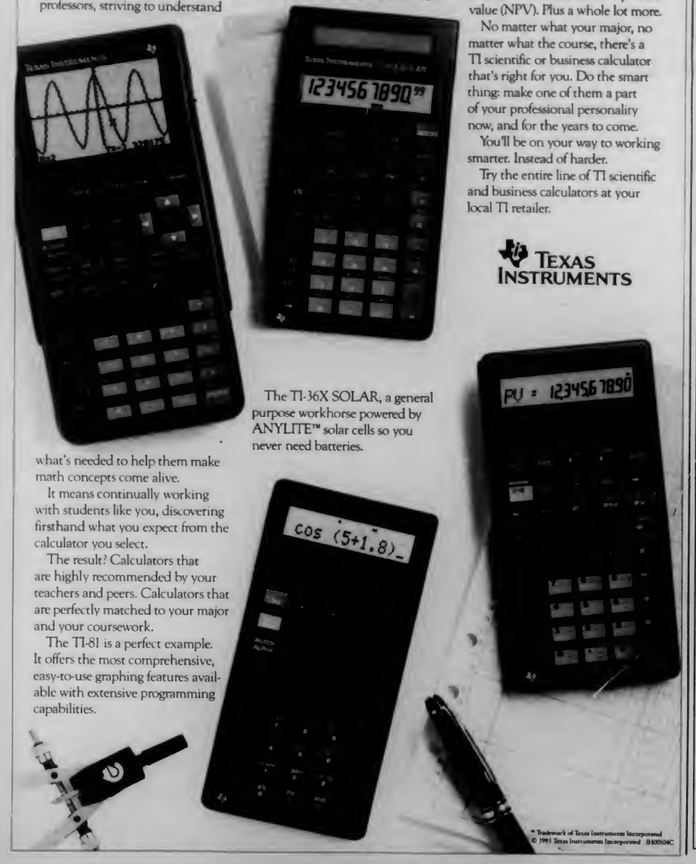
The BA II PLUS.™ For business students, this is the one to get. It handles time-value-of-money and offers cash flow analysis for internal rate of return (IRR) and net present value (NPV). Plus a whole lot more.

No matter what your major, no matter what the course, there's a TI scientific or business calculator that's right for you. Do the smart thing: make one of them a part of your professional personality now, and for the years to come.

You'll be on your way to working smarter. Instead of harder.

Try the entire line of TI scientific and business calculators at your local TI retailer.

TEXAS INSTRUMENTS



The TI-36X SOLAR, a general purpose workhorse powered by ANYLITE™ solar cells so you never need batteries.

™ Trademark of Texas Instruments Incorporated
© 1993 Texas Instruments Incorporated B160104C

THE CURRY HICKS CAGE

Amherst, Mass. (AP) - Here are some memorable moments in the 61-year history of Curry Hicks Cage, one of the smallest arenas in Division 1 college basketball. The men's basketball team of the University of Massachusetts plays its last game there Friday against the University of Southwestern Louisiana:

June 13, 1931 - The $300,000 Cage is dedicated.

Jan. 9, 1932 - The University of Massachusetts plays its first game at the Cage, beating neighboring Amherst College 17-12.

Jan. 1938 - In these days, the wooden basketball court is laid on top of the Cage's dirt floor. If a water bottle spills, a stray basketball can roll into a mud puddle. Two squirrels, dubbed Harry and Harriet, make their home in the Cage.

June 7, 1941 - The Cage is rededicated and named after Curry Starr Hicks, former physical education director and the architect of intercollegiate athletics at this campus.

Jan. 14, 1956 - Bill McLaughlin of the University of New Hampshire scores 44 points, a court record. His team beats the University of Massachusetts 98-90.

Feb. 15, 1964 - The University of Massachusetts, coached by Johnny Orr, who left for Michigan two years later, sets a court record for most points scored in one game, crushing Vermont 120-84. Massachusetts ties this record against Vermont next year.

Feb. 10, 1968 - Billy Tindall scores 41 points as the University of Massachusetts downs Vermont 96-58.

Jan. 30, 1971 - Led by young superstar Julius Erving, the University of Massachusetts defeats Northeastern 61-47 in a 12-1 season. Erving averages a school record 27 points per game this season.

Jan. 22, 1981 - The University of Massachusetts loses 73-63 to Rhode Island in the dog days that follow the departure of Erving. The Minutemen go 3-24 this season.

Jan. 26, 1985 - While popular with many players and fans, the Cage remains the nemesis of journalists because of its din and poor line of sight. Temple radio voice Bill Campbell calls it the "worst place to call a game."

March 12, 1992 - The Minutemen top West Virginia, 97-91, in the tournament finals to win their first Atlantic 10 championship. Decibel levels reach new heights and referees have to periodically stop the game to scrape up paint chips rattling down from the ceiling. In their winningest season Minutemen finish 30-5 (12-1 in the Cage) and reach the third round of the NCAA tournament

Jan. 29, 1993 - The University of Massachusetts plays its last men's basketball game at the Cage against the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

Feb. 4, 1993 - The Minutemen take on West Virginia in the first game in the new Mullins Center.

Former priest sentenced for molesting teenager

By PAM SCHMID
Associated Press

STILLWATER, Minn. — A judge sentenced James Porter to six months in jail Thursday for molesting his children's baby sitter, saying the former priest showed no remorse.

Porter, 57, was convicted last month of six counts of fourth-degree criminal sexual conduct for fondling the teen-age sitter on a living room couch five years ago.

Porter had been accused of molesting dozens of children in three states before he left the Roman Catholic priesthood in 1974, but the baby sitter case was the first allegation against him to go to trial.

Judge Kenneth Maas said he departed from state sentencing guidelines, which recommended only two and a half years probation, because Porter showed "no sign of remorse, only denial."

Porter's attorney said he advised his client, who did not take the stand, against showing emotion.

"If it's anyone's fault, it's our fault," Paul Lucas said. "You tell them not to show their reaction in the courtroom."

Meanwhile, Porter's Bay State attorney, Peter DeGelleke, asked a Bristol County Superior court judge Thursday to dismiss the pending sexual abuse charges against the former priest in Massachusetts.

DeGelleke said it had been too long since Porter left the state to charge him with abuse.

Judge Robert Steadman took no immediate action on the motion, which was opposed by the district attorney's office in a 24-page brief.

Porter has been indicted in Massachusetts on 46 counts of molesting children in the 1960's.

But DeGelleke has raised questions about the constitutionality of a Massachusetts law that stops the clock on the statute of limitations when an accused person leaves the state.

In the Minnesota case, Porter was also sentenced to 10 years on probation, and could receive up to 56 months in state prison if his probation is revoked. Conditions of the probation include no contact with the victim and no unsupervised contact with minors other than his family, unless in a public setting.

He could also get six more months in jail if he fails a treatment program.

The victim, now 21, and members of her family were in the courtroom.

The Collegian is good for your teeth and it gives you nice breath.

LIVE IN SPRINGFIELD
PARAMOUNT PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

EMERSON, LAKE AND PALMER
FEBRUARY 1ST
DAMN YANKEES
JACKYL
MARCH 13TH
BB KING
APRIL 24TH
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874
STRAWBERRY RECORDS, NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686
OR CALL TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE AT 1-800-828-7080

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?
Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.
UMass and You — a winning team!
Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)
UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!
Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)
Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)
Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

THIS SATURDAY!
STAR OF "SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE"

Cajun Man
Opera Man
Iraqi Pete
All Ages
All Shows
ADAM SANDLER
COMING SOON
EMO PHILIPS Feb 6th
RHONDA SHEAR Valentine's Day Special Feb 13
MARC DeCARLO "STUDS" Feb 20
JAMIE FOX "IN LIVING COLOR" Mar 6
DAVID ALAN GRIER Apr 10
comedy CONNECTION AT THE HuKeLau CHICOPEE
CALL 413•593•5222

SLEEP IN CLASS
While Your Car Is Being Repaired
Use the FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE to Campus plus
10% OFF with Student I.D.
Not Valid with Other Discounts. OFFER EXPIRES 2/28/93.
MIDAS
MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS
COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
RTE. 9/HADLEY • 586-9991
NEAR HAMPSHIRE MALL

■ Mullins

continued from page 1

will employ more people than the art events, and that is reflected in the size of the offices of the respective administrators.

The executive offices of the art and entertainment departments are "nothing as extravagant as the athletic offices or as large, since there aren't as many people involved," Murphy said.

When asked about the Metallica concert on Feb. 15, Murphy said he anticipated no problems with security. Murphy said "[Metallica's] management is the best in the business" regarding security.

"We feel we have the experience and the training. . . that we can do any show — no problems," added Murphy.

The general public is invited to the center's grand opening Sunday from 12 to 5 p.m. The purpose of the opening is to showcase the arena, according to Murphy. Events will include women's basketball practice, two jazz ensembles and a light show. Although the event is free, volunteers will be on hand to collect donations for the United Way.

Education reforms considered

House debates abortion, condoms and bilingualism

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press

The House's third day considering an education reform package was marked Thursday by debate over abortion, condom distribution and bilingual education.

Anti-abortion language that surprised lawmakers two days ago was deleted from Rep. Mark Roosevelt's bill. The bill calls for school districts to set up advisory councils on health education, and they would have been barred from discussing abortion with teenagers.

After it was amended, the bill made no mention of what the councils could or could not talk about.

Early debate centered on condom distribution and bilingual education.

Rep. Antonio Cabral. D-New Bedford, offered an amendment allowing students to whom English is a second language to take tests in their native tongue.

"We're not testing students for knowledge of English," said Cabral, D-New Bedford. "We're testing students for knowledge of the subject.'

After arguments from Republicans that, in Rep. William Constantino's words, the proposal would "lead to dual school systems," Roosevelt rewrote the amendment to limit the native language testing to three years.

The amendment was approved.

Constantino, R-Clinton, tried to ban condom distribution in public schools unless it first was approved by local referendum.

He said condom distribution was backed by people "working overtime to disrupt American values."

That move was defeated 130-17.

The House approved a change sponsored by Rep. Philip Travis. D-Rehoboth, that would allow teachers to take courses at state schools for free if the classes go toward "professional development."

"It basically makes the whole process of professional development more efficient," said Steve Wollmen, spokesman for the Massachusetts Teachers Association.

Roosevelt, D-Boston, cochair of the education committee, fought off several attempts by Republicans and Democratic Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, to change the complex funding formula in the legislation.

The proposal would bring funding to an average spending level of about $5,600 per student after seven years.

Roosevelt said the proposed changes would let cities and towns back away from the education and spending requirements laid out in the bill.

The formula seeks to restore equity to the state's financing system, which now relies heavily on the property tax, putting poor communities at a disadvantage.

Support the freedom fighters!
Support Bob!
Send donations to the Collegian, C. C. Basement 105.

Egads.

3 Credit Recycling Class
Educ2-354
Intro To Future Studies
Learn about recycling and other waste mgmt issues from the people who deal with them every day!
WHEN: Tues 2:30 - 5:00
SCHEDULE #211663
CALL 545-1153 FOR MORE INFO.

Want the Boston Globe delivered?
Monday - Friday and Sunday
Call 1-800-858-4275
Then press zero

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Exercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

THIS SPRING BREAK TELL YOUR PARENTS YOU WANT TO STUDY PRIMITIVE CULTURES.

The sun worshiping. The primitive dances. The mating rituals. The primal screams. Only one beach can hold this much culture on its 23-mile sandy stretch. This Spring Break, head for Daytona Beach. For more information, call 1-800-854-1234 for your free Spring Break Planning Kit.

Daytona
BIG BEACH. BIG FUN. BIG BREAK.

Arts & Living

Flawed survival drama Alive just barely survives

Also reviewed: a stirring & emotional Lorenzo's Oil and a recycled Used People

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Alive is not, as a few smart-aleek critics have quipped, the first feel-good movie about cannibalism. It is a flawed, but mostly well-intentioned true-life story of survival. One that is exceedingly well-directed and engrossing.

In 1972, a plane carrying Uruguayan rugby team members and some of their families and friends crashed deep in the Andes mountains. It is this magnificently shot crash sequence that opens Alive, and the horror and foreboding is never quite matched with such ferocity.

A handful of survivors battle the snow, freezing temperatures, an avalanche — and a dwindling supply of food. This, of course, leads to the wrenching decision to live off the flesh of the dead passengers.

What is good about Alive is that, even through its more graphic cannibalism scenes, the film never feels exploitative or cheap. Director Frank Marshall (Pretty Woman) has never done better work; he directs the drama and the despair with equally grim reality.

Religion plays an integral part in this film, and its depiction is both commendable and, regretfully at times, false. The majority of the survivors were deeply religious before the crash, and it's a testament to their faith that the crash becomes a test of their spiritual wills.

On the other hand, its a shame that some of the more obvious religious overtones don't play well with the bulk of today's moviegoers, and some of these interludes came off as just predictable and banal "uplifting moments."

Alive is an engrossing survival drama, but that doesn't make it watchable. The problems with Alive center around John Patrick Shanley's (Moonstruck) flat screenplay and its ensemble of familiar-looking, familiar-acting young actors.

Shanley's script goes around in circles; the drama only develops to bring us to the next natural disaster or cliffhanging. The characters don't form beyond their token attributes (i.e. the crabby one, the whiny one, etc.) and while I felt empathy for their situation, I didn't give a lick about who any of these people were.

The cast, led by Vincent Spano (City of Hope) and Ethan Hawke (A Midnight Clear) — isn't he in every movie with snow in it? — look and act too much like one other, and it was easy to get lost in their facial hair. Especially annoying was Hawke, who actually seemed to relish his situation.

Alive is worth seeing even with the flaws, because the film unconsciously keeps posing questions to the audience; like how far would you go? and could you make it through? Even though Aaron Neville sings "Ave Maria" over the credits (does anybody hate this guy's voice as much as I do?), Alive is, for the most part, an unrelenting, realistic adventure that will keep you thinking long after the house lights go up. B-

Lorenzo's Oil — Where Alive falls short, especially in the acting and writing department, the moving Lorenzo's Oil takes over. Oil tells the true-life story of a young boy who develops ALD, a rare nerve disorder that is typically fatal. Lorenzo's parents, played superbly by Susan Sarandon and Nick Nolte, battle the medical establishment, other parents and a race against time to find a cure for their son.

Oil is neither a drippy melodrama nor an overly-sentimental tearjerker. It is at times joyous, sad, angry and exhausting. Much of the credit goes to director George Miller (Mad Max), a former doctor, who steers Lorenzo's story into a somewhat mystical, but all too real and powerful, real-life drama.

Susan Sarandon balances frustration with the overwhelming love for her son; and Nolte, acting with a thick accent that is annoying at first but soon palatable, is also quite laudable. Lorenzo's Oil succeeds partly because it never feels synthetic or manipulative. And that's reason enough to recommend this film. A-

Used People — More like a used script. Shirly MacLaine, Marcello Mastroianni, Kathy Bates, Jessica Tandy and Marcia Gay Harden turn in a familiar performance in a mostly gooey Moonstruck rip-off. Haven't we had our fill of these genial, sentimental and predictable ethnic (though still white-bread) comedies? Or maybe it's just bored, cynical me.

Used People will probably be a sleeper hit, mainly because it recycles the same feel-good emotions elicited with much more care in Moonstruck and Fried Green Tomatoes — but Used People isn't nearly as good.

It does, however, have a certain "sanitized for your protection" - like charm and is disposably entertaining, but I'm not a fan of assembly-line hokum. C

Carrot Top exposed

Up close with the irreverent comedian

By AMY REYNOLDS
Special to the Collegian

(Generation XPress) — Scott Thompson's friends have come out in droves.

The Comedy Corner in West Palm Beach, Fla., near both the comedian's hometown and the town in which he went to school, is bursting at the seams.

On stage stands a young man with startlingly bright red — actually, orange — hair, wearing an extremely bright '60s-style flower shirt and clashing plaid pants. His huge, genuine smile illuminates the entire club.

"Do you like my shirt?" he asks a cheering crowd. When they applaud loudly, he says, "Hey, you want to know what you can do for fun? You get one of these plastic store censor devices they attach to clothes to prevent you from shoplifting (one is conspicuously hanging from the bottom of his shirt) and walk in and out of stores in the mall setting off everyone's alarm."

As he pretends to walk into a store and set off its alarm, a boyish oops-sorry-no-I'm-not grin crosses his face. He continues to elaborate about the times he's walked through the mall wearing that very same shirt with the censor at the bottom.

Welcome to Carrot Top's wacky world of humor.

In addition to his brilliantly funny stories — told in classic comedic style in rapid-fire succession — Carrot Top brings trunks full of props and inventions to the stage along with an indescribable musical finale complete with strobe lights and "Silly String."

To date, Carrot Top has performed on Fox's "Comic Strip Live," "The Sunday Comics," A&E's "An Evening at the Improv," "Star Search" and MTV's "Half Hour Comedy Hour" and "Spring Break Special," Carrot Top is also one of the most popular comedians on the college circuit, playing more college dates than any comedian currently out on the road.

"College people are what I attract. They're with me on a lot of things. I think I'm a good college act because I'm not like a rebel or something, but I'm like a cult," Thompson says. Although Thompson is only 25, his dedicated following and quick success haven't phased him.

"Comedy has [become very competitive]. I knock on wood, I thank god people bought into this s—. You know what I mean? It's different and people really dig it. I've got so much stuff. Unplugged. That's my next special. Can I do it without electricity?"

Although his comedy career started as Scott Thompson when he attended Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, Fla., Carrot Top was born soon after Thompson's friends talked the marketing major into getting up on the stage at an open mike night.

"Basically, one night I was being goofy and funny like I always am," Thompson says, "And people were saying — somebody said — 'you should go into comedy.' And I was like, aw, no, I've never done it. I don't even know how to tell a joke. So finally, they had

Turn to CARROT TOP, page 11

COURTESY GENERATION X-PRESS
Comedian Carrot Top, a.k.a. Scott Thompson.

School's in for the cool kids of the Class of '96

New Fox drama flunks Reality 101

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

Class of '96
Fox Television
Tuesdays 8 - 9 p.m.

It's the fall of their freshman year. On their own, away from home for the first time. New friends. New Loves. And it's not 90210: Freshman Year... Instead, it's their almost-a-full fledged-Fox Network cousins: The Class of '96. This is Fox's latest teeny-something show that kicks off a new night of programming.

The premiere episode covers the confusion of the first three days at Havenhurst College: Move in day. Roommates. Registration. Welcome to Havenhurst, the oh-so-East Coast college that resembles Amherst College to a T.

First of all, most of this episode isn't all that realistic. Only one student, played by Lisa Dean Ryan, the girl who got deflowered by "Doogie Howser M.D.," raped on "Beverly Hills, 90210," and now attends Havenhurst, brought the appropriate amount of clothes.

Dropped off at Havenhurst by daddy's limo, Ms. Cohen schlepps her MCM luggage by herself in fear of having everyone know that she has a lot of money. Problem A: Are the producers stereotyping Jews or what? Problem B: If she didn't want anyone to know she came from money, she shouldn't have brought MCM luggage in the first place?!

Wait! It gets better. The show has a Hollywood prodigy straight from trendy Greenwich Village. She becomes the Steve Sanders of the show by ranting, "Don't you know who my mother is?" No we don't, because most Hollywood kids that I've met avoid ever mentioning that their mother or father is your favorite film star. Nay on the producers part. Come on, there's no need to create a character obviously modeled after Aaron's beloved daughter Tori "I got the part on my own" Spelling.

This cast is also a member of the "Melrose Place" school of diversity. One African-American student, named Antonio Hopkins makes this all white ensemble "PC." Gee, is this really realistic? Where are the Spanish, Japanese, or Iranian students? Maybe those roles can be filled by guest appearences.

At least "Melrose Place" has a gay character to add some diversity. Although the producers of that show have shyed away from any real gay-themed storylines. How will the "Class of '96" deal with the real diversity that is found at our nation's universities? Stay tuned. . .

"96" is realistic in that they have all floormates and roommates bond at the beginning of their first semester. However, in reality once the first month of classes pass, freshman tend to sever the umbilical cord from the freshman syndrome.

Welcome to Havenhurst, the oh-so-East Coast college that resembles Amherst College to a T.

The show has to prove itself with good story lines and that depends on the show's writing staff. By being aired on Fox Television, "96" will be given time to develop and to find an audience, like its predecessor 90210 did. On any of the "big three" networks this show may have been cancelled after the pilot.

Showing the Sigma Chi Fraternity shows the real life option of going Greek. Also, inserting snazzy pop music helps push the story along, and having good looking actors helps to sell the show to advertisers. But on the unrealistic side, after having met just once, two students quickly hop into the sack together. Sure it does happen, but not on national television. Heck, Brenda and Dylan waited a whole season and a half (in television years).

And how about one frosh saying to another "Let's go to the local pub for some brewskies?" Correct me if I'm wrong, but when you're a freshman you usually can't just stroll into a bar unless you have a pretty good fake I.D. In addition, spacious rooms with fire places? Get real, this isn't MTV's "Real World."

This show even has those "coming up next week" scenes, complete with testimonials from the characters. What is this — a movie campaign? How will "96" deal with real issues that affect freshman, e.g. drugs? And if one of these young star's heads gets too big for being on "96" will the producers threaten to have the student transfer or just get mono so they'll have to go home for good? Maybe we'll even get to see students taking over buildings protesting holidays? We'll see . . .

BACK ON CAMPUS!

4 Days Only

NOBODY'S PERFECT

"Best Of Both Seasons" Sale

Starts Monday Feb. 1 at 8AM

Ladies & Mens clothing from the 5 best known specialty stores in the United States at 40% to 90% off their original prices!

Spring

Denim Jeans $14.99 Comp. $34.00-$42.00

Knit Tops $5.99-9.99 Comp. $10.00-$48.00

SHORTS $9.99-12.99 Comp. $24.00-$38.00

SHIRTS & BLOUSES $9.99-12.99 Comp. $24.00-$60.00

SKIRTS $9.99 Comp. $24.00-$60.00

Fall

SWEATERS $4-$12 Comp. $24.00-$38.00

SHIRTS & BLOUSES $6 Comp. $24.00-$60.00

Knit Tops $6 Comp. $20.00-$40.00

SKIRTS $6 Comp. $28.00-$60.00

PANTS $8 Comp. $28.00-$60.00

1st Quality & Slight Irregulars

Monday Feb. 1 • 8AM - 9PM
Tuesday Feb. 2 • 8AM - 9PM
Wednesday Feb. 3 • 8AM - 9PM
Thursday Feb. 4 • 8AM - 6PM

UMASS Campus Center
Room 165/169 (Lower Level)
We accept VISA, MASTER CARD, AMEX, & CASH!

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

When I first decided to come to Italy, I figured that it would be a wonderful opportunity to study the language and culture of a population with which I could strongly identify, given my Italian roots. Having spent one of 20 weeks here in Siena, I am convinced that I have stepped into a completely different era, if not upon a whole separate planet.

The first thing one notices about Siena is the landscape. Built upon three back-breaking, calf-toning hills, this medieval city is comprised of romantic buildings and churches left virtually unaltered since their creation in the 14th and 15th centuries.

Made completely of cement or bricks, Siena's apartments, churches, homes, and shops are covered by seemingly decaying roofs with what we would consider primitive antennas branching out proudly, creating an ironic contrast. Clotheslines with every color and style of attire blowing in the Mediterranean breeze can be found everywhere.

Narrow streets, just big enough for one car, thread between buildings throughout Siena and the flow of traffic rarely exceeds two tiny cars or mopeds at one time. However, being anywhere near one of these speeds can, while virtually harmless, take years off of one's life.

Not only do the Sienese drive crazily, but they indeed experience a whole different way of life than that which I am accustomed to. Tradition dictates that everything in town closes between the hours of 2 p.m. and 4 p.m., so as to allow citizens and families time for a huge meal and midday nap. Having always appreciated the value of both food and sleep, this is one of my favorite times of the day.

After two more short hours of errands and work, the Sienese call it a day. By 6 p.m., the main street, via di citta, is full of citizens dressed in their finest attire. Wearing some of the most beautiful clothes that I have ever seen, women and men alike strut their stuff in a parade of class and style.

Polished in every aspect, walking arm-in-arm, groups and pairs of men and women represent what it truly means to be fashionable.

Dinner is served in Siena after 8 p.m., and from this time until the morning her streets are virtually bare, except for a few students occasionally scurrying home or some old neighborhood cronies gathered in a small bar, watching the news.

The sun rises over the magnificent hills and mountains to greet a new day of hustle and bustle within the ancient wall that surrounds this tiny city, and voices fill the air with Italy's melodic language.

In terms of actually interacting within this environment, I have more or less had success in light of my limited experience actually speaking Italian as the language is intended.

For example, in three semesters of studying Italian at UMass, I cannot recall one class in which I learned how to tell a rude taxi driver exactly what he can do with my luggage rather than complain about how heavy it is.

I suppose it is simply time to face the fact that I am a long way from Herter Hall, grin and "deal."

As this is sure to be an interesting experience, stay tuned for more scenes from Siena. Until then, Ciao d'italia!

Emily Marino is a Collegian staff member from our Italy bureau.

■ Carrot Top

continued from page 9

an open mike night...and I went up and did it and everyone loved it. And I was like, god, that was really neat, being up in front of people like that. Next thing I knew I was doing comedy."

That first night, Thompson admits that he primarily used material from one of his favorite comedians, George Carlin, and comedian/friend Mike Gallagher, known best for smashing watermelons and other stuff on stage in front of a plastic-covered audience.

Shortly after that first night, Gallagher ordained Thompson's stage persona Carrot Top.

"He came up with the idea for me. He said, you can't be Scott Thompson. You're crazy, wild, eccentric, you need to come up with something people will remember. And I was a marketing major so I knew that, but I didn't put the two together," Thompson says. "Then I decided he was right. It just kind of came about."

Armed with a name, props and inventions, Thompson changed his career plans overnight. The Cocoa Beach, Fla., native who began inventing at an early age, finally had a paying outlet for his creativity.

The invention stuff includes an ice cube tray with a level on it so you don't spill the water, a set of keys attached to a coat hanger for the times you lock yourself out of the car, a dog already attached to a frisbee, a paper cup on a string with call waiting, and a baseball hat with a grandma head attached to the top for driving purposes.

His props include a neighborhood crime watch sign ("Sure, you've got Crime Watch in your neighborhood, but I've got your damn sign," he says on stage), a toy speaker device for use at fast food drive-thru windows so you can sound exactly like them, and Pee Wee Herman's popcorn tub from the infamous adult theater incident — the tub has a hole cut through the bottom.

"I think my very first prop was the crime watch sign. I've had that almost since day one. The other one is the grandma head, and I've always kept it because people still like it," Thompson says. "The props started overnight. I'm actually a big fan of Gallagher's and I used to watch him all the time...so I sort of started watching him and I emulated him, and said 'That's what I want to do — props.' So I started doing the props, but different props."

To round out Carrot Top's act, he tells stories of wacky, zany things he's done that are too absurd and hilarious to not be true. One of the funniest involves Domino's Pizza. It starts in Thompson's college abode where he and his roommate were getting high. He had stolen a Domino's Pizza uniform, ordered a pizza, then waited for the unsuspecting delivery person to arrive at his door.

When he finally arrives, Thompson opens the door and asks the delivery person if he ordered a pizza. The story becomes more involved and continues throughout the show. Although everyone in his audiences finds the story funny enough to bring them to tears, Domino's has not been amused.

"They just called and complained. They said they would [sue me] if I continued to do it with their name," Thompson says. "I haven't heard from them since. They called and said 'We don't thinks it's funny.' I said, 'I think it's hysterical.'"

But whether or not people actually try to recreate Carrot Top's stage antics, Thompson says he doesn't usually know.

"I always love it if they do. I have actually been at a college club, though, where someone said to me they did do it, they did the thing with the condoms where they put it on the counter and go, 'Excuse me, do you have a fitting room?' That's kind of neat."

When discussing "victims" of Carrot Top's pranks, the comedian becomes momentarily serious. "Well, they do think it's funny, but at times they don't. I think we're living in a changing society where people are really uptight about a lot of things. It's hard for people to laugh about a lot of things nowadays that I didn't see years ago. It's strange. It's strange to me because I see it. I feel it in the crowd. Things that they would laugh at before. It's not always that way, it's just the changing times," he says.

But despite the changing times and audiences, Thompson is having nothing but success. He continues to tour the country playing numerous college dates, and he is currently working on developing a television series for Fox, in which he will most likely appear under his namesake if the show is picked up since most everyone knows him only as Carrot Top and there's another actor named Scott Thompson ("Kids in the Hall").

Also, Carrot Top is featured in an upcoming Showtime special with Jonathan Winters called "Jonathan Winters: Spaced Out," scheduled to air in March.

All of this, no doubt, has made his parents extremely proud.

"Oh yeah, they come to the shows. Mom and Dad love it. Totally. Even the pot references," he says and smiles. "Believe it or not, my grandmother came to the show last Friday and I was so worried about doing a lot of the s—, and nothing; she got nothing. Grandma just smiled. (In grandma's voice) 'You were so funny.' And when I went to do the grandma's head joke, I would say, 'Grandma, look, I made this for you.' She loved it. She had no clue."

READ THE COLLEGIAN READ THE COLLEGIAN READ THE COLLEGIAN READ THE COLLEGIAN READ THE COLLEGIAN READ THE COLLEGIAN READ THE COLLEGIAN READ THE COLLEGIAN

A hip injury is preventing you from practicing with the UMass Men's Winter Track Team and the mental anguish of this is almost too much.

Try the Collegian.

We're better than ice.

The GYM at mountain farms mall 584-2175
COMPARE & SAVE
Semester Special ONLY $119.00!!
Membership Good Thru 5-31-93
TANNING AVAILABLE
"On the bus route!"

USTRAVEL at the Campus Center
Your Travel Planning Specialist
Spring Break Packages
CANCUN
Special UMASS Group Rates
Beachfront Hotels
Departure from Boston
Limited Space
Other Destinations Available:
Don't Miss Out On This Awesome Spring Break Alternative! Stop In Soon
Final Payment Due Feb. 5th
545-1700 • 545-2900
GWV International

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Drink Special BUD DRY BOTTLES $1.00
This Friday afternoon Happy Hour brings back Mike's famous smorgasbord. Food served promptly at 5:30pm.
MENU:
Roast Beef, Roast Turkey, Chicken Teriyaki, Veal Parmesan, Macaroni & Meatball, Eggplant Parmesan, Rice Pilaf, Au Gratin Potatoes, Assorted Salads.
• All You Can Eat $3.00 •
Drink Special VODKA DRINKS $1.00
Always Something For Everyone!
Drink Special MILWAUKEE BEST PITCHERS $3.50

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READER'S POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202
Free Parking 北京園 on Route 9, Hadley

Why settle for second best?

There are plenty of other publications in the Happy Valley, but none so needed, irreverent or, dare we say it, narcissistic, as the Largest College Daily in New England. It's the paper to turn to for up to the minute local sports and arts information, editorial pieces and administration building takeovers.

And where would we all be without those?

Where indeed. For with the largest college daily newspaper in New England in your backpack, hidden behind a textbook or openly doing the crossword puzzle while an overbearing professor drones on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on and on...

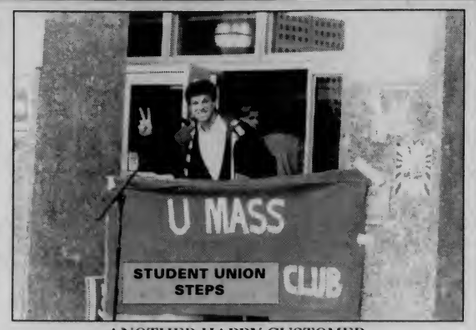
You get the picture.

So don't delay. Get your Collegian before class, read it in the relative comfort of your class or in a D.C. or use it as a pillow.

And don't worry, the ink comes off with soap and water.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN



ANOTHER HAPPY CUSTOMER

MANY MORE HAPPY CUSTOMERS

BANANARAMA
Bananas & Frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian
Recycle this Collegian

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Gallo Chablis - Blush, Rhine, Burgundy 1.5 L	$3.99
Jack Daniels 750 ml	$12.99
Jagermeister 750 ml	$15.99
Mad Dog 20/20 750ml	$1.99
Poland Springs Vodka 1.75 L	$9.99
Tequila Cuervo Gold Max Pack A 750ml of Gold & 1.0 L Margueritа	$13.49
Captain Morgan/Coconut 750 ml	$9.29
Concha Y Toro Sauvignon Blanc 1.5L Sauvignon Blanc or Cabernet/Merlot Blend	$5.79
Wurzburger Octoberfest 6 pk	$5.29 (+dep)
Bud Family 12 pk..$6.99 (+dep)-Case, cans only .$12.99 (+dep)
Miller G.D./G.D. Light 12 pk $6.99 (+dep)-Case, bottles only .$12.99(+dep)

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
Open 9 am - 11 pm
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Our camels are dead, we have no water, and yet we must cross this desert if we are to survive. . . . For the love of Allah, Omar, do you ever cut your nose hairs?"

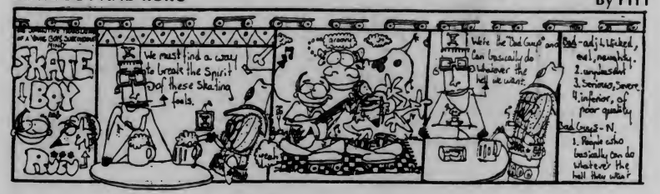
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

CAST OF THOUSANDS By BARRY DEUTSCH

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



Quote of the Day

"Argue for your limitations and sure enough, they're yours."

– Richard Bach

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It pays to be cautious in your dealings with new acquaintances. Someone who feels slighted could give you the cold elbow. A quiet talk sets things right. Make time for happiness!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keeping a low profile will benefit you greatly today. Do everything you can to avoid clashes with higher-ups. Let your work performance speak for itself; be modest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Seize an opportunity to perform a service for someone who is not happy with you. Past mistakes will be forgotten. Avoid aligning yourself with negative thinkers; you must be positive!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The family scene is at first touchy but becomes more and more congenial. Shared tasks and pleasures are featured. You feel new contentment. Talking to co-workers about recent events helps clear the air.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel could be difficult to organize; you may have to change your plans or postpone a visit. Treat people the way you want to be treated. A younger person shares a secret.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The emphasis today is on guarding your reputation. Keep your actions above reproach. Dress up, act confident and avoid complaining.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get down to brass tacks today. You would be wise to turn down any invitations that run counter to your ideals and principles. Avoid people who gossip or try to make trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good fortune stems from your patience and perseverence! Tread carefully if you encounter opposition from your co-workers. Solo projects give you a chance to display your creative talents.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for improving both home security and family finances. Talk with your banker or lawyer. Those in authority may offer you preferential treatment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your efforts to balance the budget produce mixed results. Certain ideas can be improved upon. Place more emphasis on building a sound business base.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The answers which you seek cannot be found in the stars, my friend. But if you haven't the energy to look within yourself for them (which is cool), just get a date this weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Everyone is impressed with your wonderful personality, not only today but everyday. There isn't anyone who knows you that does not enjoy your company.

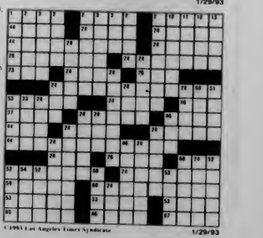
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Semitic deity
5 Temptress
9 Explosive sound
14 Miss Cinders
15 Osiris's wife
16 "Common Sense" author
17 Deteriorates, in a way
19 PGA's "Army" man
20 Useless
21 Soaps, for example
23 Seine
24 Grease monkey Abbr
26 Meadow
27 Gardeners' shacks
32 Drawing room
35 Meticulous
36 Sticky stuff
37 Jog
38 Remote communicator
40 "Eyeless in —": Huxley
41 Sell
42 Upset
43 Sea duck
44 Having a home, thus able to vote, in England once
48 Ruckus
49 Winning margin
50 Hood's weapon
53 Move up
57 Whirlwind
59 "Barbarella" director Roger
60 Trashy novel
62 Coeur d' —, Idaho
63 Notion
64 Drops off
65 Berlin creations
66 Singer Vikki
67 Concerning

DOWN
1 Kick off
2 Solo
3 Near Island native
4 Hang tough
5 "Shrinking" flower
6 Point of view
7 "O sole —"
8 Attention-getters
9 Most thin
10 Outcast
11 Director Wertmüller
12 Indigo
13 Summer shirts
18 "— of Athens": WB
22 "Enigma Variations" composer
25 Be contingent
27 Key word in this puzzle
28 Roseanne Arnold — Barr
29 Crimmy!
30 Drift off
31 Take off
32 Way to the top
33 Jason's craft
34 Booty
38 Flyer
39 Soup to nuts
40 Entertainer's engagement
42 "Aida" role
43 January: in Madrid
45 Flapping in the breeze
46 Author Beatrix
47 Meteorologist's line
50 Festive occasions
51 Proficient
52 Body part
53 Gabor and Barlow
54 "Le Roi d'Ys" composer
55 Perfect place
56 "Ibad," for one
58 Singer Simone
61 Harem room

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

1/29/93



© 1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 1/29/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Mike Webber
Copy Editor	E.C. Thomas
PhotoTechnician	Josh Reynolds, Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor	Alan Blagg
Production	Todd Elliott
	Tony Morse, the Omnipresent Mike & Lisa

Menu

SORRY, NO MENU WAS DELIVERED TO US THIS WEEK, OR MAYBE IT WAS BUT WE'VE JUST FAILED TO FIND IT.

Nevertheless, they're not sure of what it is they're serving either.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ swimmers

continued from page 15

Sheehan and Sarah Baker, resptively. The 1:54.60 time was a season best.

Griffith as usual stifled her competition, landing a lifetime best and a first in the 100-yd. breaststroke. She continued her streak taking first in the 200-yd. breaststroke.

In a close battle with B.C.'s Megan Lammon for 1st place in the 100-yd. butterfly, Julie Veremey was touched out by less than a second. However, Veremey remains the fastest 200-yd. flyer in New England. She proved it once again by placing first in the event with a 2:12.07.

Distance swimmer Kim Broad finished first, long before B.C.'s Melissa Hambls in the 1,000-yd. freestyle, posting a 11:04.05. Co-captain Kari Edwardsen landed a lifetime best and a second place finish in the 200-yd. backstroke with a 2:15.29, and once again Sarah Baker sprinted towards a 1st place touch-out finish in the 50-yd. freestyle with a 25.86. Although everyone was a point contributer, divers Allison White, Dede May and Amanda Moynihan racked up a number of points for the Minutewomen by packing a first, second and third place finish on both the one and three-meter boards. White's 255.20 three-meter score qualified her for the New England Zone diving qualifying meet.

The meet ended with the Minutewomen pulling a first and third place finish in the 400-yd. freestyle relay. The first place finish was swum by Amy Lewis, Stephanie Souto, Broad and Kristen Chapelle, respectively.

"B.C. was expecting a typical UMass meet," said Newcomb. "The intersession helped us get stronger due to intense training and team bonding."

After picking up two wins over intersession the women, now 6-4-0, will swim their final events before New Englands on Saturday in a coed meet against the University of New Hampshire at noon in Boyden pool.

Sports Notice

Any of you who have ever aspired to be a Collegian sports writer and any of you who are lucky enough to already be on the sports staff should seriously think about coming down to the meeting on Monday, February 1 at 7 p.m. We're located in the Campus Center basement for your convenience.

Multicultural Musings

For some time, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst has been committed to the idea of a multicultural campus. Our most recent mission statement states that "our goal is to achieve a multicultural campus where men and women of diverse racial, social and economic groups play major roles and, in a spirit of mutual respect, come to understand and appreciate the variety of perspectives that diversity makes possible. We seek a society where life is to be enjoyed and every person has a chance to achieve his or her potential and thus make the greatest possible contribution to the Commonwealth and to society at large."

I believe that these are noble goals which few would contest. I also believe that despite numerous efforts over the past 15 years, we seem to a be a long way from achieving the mutual respect and appreciation of diversity that multiculturalism is designed to promote. We have had an especially difficulty time addressing these issues during the last four years, during which we lost some one third of our state operating budget, all of our capital funds and have had no salary increases.

Now, as we seem to be emerging from our budgetary morass and having restored some sense of stability in response to our most recent crises, the time is right to discuss multiculturalism in an attempt to arrive at an understanding and a consensus about where we want to go and how to get there.

The Multicultural Campus

There are not many examples in the world "where men and women of diverse racial, social and economic groups play major roles and, in a spirit of mutual respect, come to understand and appreciate the variety of perspectives that diversity makes possible." Even a cursory glance at the nightly news reveals the proclivity of groups to differentiate themselves from other groups and then to act with great hostility and violence towards those who are not members of their groups. Why do we believe that we have a chance of combined pluralism and community in the face of so many negative examples, even in our own society?

For one thing, universities share a foundation of values, civic as well as academic, which can be supportive of the ideal of a multicultural community. In the University we know that we do not have to be alike or agree on everything provided we share certain fundamental scholarly values and principles. The acquisition of truth is thought to be an open process involving the collision of ideas, beliefs and theories. We expect individuals to have different views on the truth and we expect to acquire a clearer sense of the truth as a consequence of debate in the marketplace of ideas. A commitment to the application of reason to human affairs and to judge people and ideas on the basis of merit binds us together as it permits and encourages a multiplicity of ideas and peoples. The outside world may be segregated both as to groups and ideas but the very conception of the university would seem to require pluralism.

Can we reasonably expect the university to be "better" than the society around it? We recognize that a state university, to some extent, is a microcosm of the state. We are frequently admonished to come out of our ivory tower and to grapple with the problems of the real world. But the fact that we are expected to reach out to the real world does not require that we accept the prejudices of that world as a given. We recognize that much of our student body comes to us from segregated communities who have little experience with multiculturalism. This is a shortcoming to be overcome by our educational processes just as surely as we expect our students to learn enough English, History and Math to become functioning members of our society.

Much has been made recently of the University's role as an engine of economic development. I would urge that we also have an obligation to produce students who will make a contribution to civic development. The real world that our students will enter is one whose racial and ethnic profile is changing dramatically. The United States is becoming one of the most pluralistic countries in the world. In addition, we are also developing a greater dependency on other nations of the world for our economic well being. The notion of the "global village" is a rich metaphor for a future that will require our students to compete in a very diverse world, one in which our dominant race is clearly a minority, and a world which requires us to build bridges to cultures that are different from our own. This is the world of the 21st Century that we must prepare our students to understand and relate to.

How best can we create an educational program that will prepare our students for these new challenges?

First, we have to capitalize on our own racial, ethnic and cultural diversity as providing an excellent opportunity for all of us to enter the world of diversity. To accomplish this, we need to increase the participation of those groups who are not adequately represented on our faculty and staff and among our student body. Let it be understood that we do this in part because this is the equitable and just thing to do. We do it in part because in a knowledge based economy we can ill afford to waste the talents of the fastest growing groups in our society because of stereotypical thinking about their potential and capabilities. And we do it in part because it is in our self interest to do so as a state and as a country. If we are to compete in this very diverse global economy, we have to understand, appreciate and learn from the multiplicity of perspectives that are embodied in the very concept of a multicultural world. We can and should begin this process at home by increasing the numbers of and interaction with the cultures that make up the mosaic of American society. This understanding would seem to be a prerequisite to the broader understanding of the world's diversity that all American groups, minority and majority, will have to learn to appreciate.

Pluralism-The Statistical Community

The multicultural campus is one which provides access to a variety of groups at all levels. There is a tendency to judge the quality of a multicultural community by the numbers of these groups. It is common to expect that the size of the groups should be related to their numbers in the community at large. The relevant community is not the same for each category. For students, we measure the appropriate number of particular groups by their percentages in the population at large. Presumably, in a state university, the nature of the population of the state sets some limits on the possibilities. In Massachusetts, we have some 13% minorities in the high school graduation pool. The number of women is about 50%. With regard to students, this university has reached a gender parity and is close to achieving parity for our minority population. We hope to exceed the minority totals and have pledged to get to 20% of the freshmen class over the next several years. To sustain these numbers we need to focus on retention. If we cannot retain the minority students we recruit with great difficulty, we will never be able to achieve our goals. Student retention requires that faculty devote more quality time to activities which may not be high on the priority list - advising, counseling, visiting the dorms, teaching in living and learning environments, making the large university more intimate and hospitable.

The recruiting of faculty is based not upon the population of the state, but upon availability pools by disciplins. We now have some 21% women among the tenure track faculty and 11% minorities. We have a long way to go with regard to women and we are probably forbidden to set a target for minorities which is higher than the availability pools. Nevertheless, during the past five years, we have averaged some 23% of minority hires, half coming through the special opportunity fund. The problem here, too, is retention, and again, the faculty has a crucial role to play. First, it is the faculty who establish the climate in the departments which can help or hurt the development of faculty. Is mentoring a high priority for the senior faculty? What can the faculty do to assist all of the untenured faculty to reach their full potential? Among other things, the senior faculty may have to assume a greater role in the service activities of the department and the campus in order to enable the untenured faculty to devote themselves to research and teaching. This is a particularly important factor for minorities since they are likely to be called upon to serve on numerous committees to achieve balance and they are expected to help the university solve its racial problems.

The creation of the statistical community is a necessary, though not a sufficient condition for the establishment of a multicultural campus. The numbers matter in a variety of ways. There is a body of research that suggests that the quality of life improves for minorities as their proportion increases. Higher percentages influence the degree to which minorities can achieve equal treatment and also contribute to the process by which the majority can overcome stereotypical thinking. People of color clearly feel more secure on campus where they are more than tokens. Their sense of physical security is enhanced when there is a critical mass that they can look to for support. Sufficient numbers also enable the group to organize to come together to celebrate their heritage, and may contribute to self identity and self esteem.

As important as the appropriate numbers are for some purposes, the creation of a multicultural community in all of its aspects requires much more than mere percentages, although student groups have tended to focus upon increased numbers and secure space.

We recognize that many of our students and some of our faculty and staff come from segregated communities and have had limited contact with diversity until they came to the University. Nor have they internalized the shared values and norms of the university which emphasize the tolerance of diverse views and the commitment to civil discourse. Particularly with students in the freshman year, the very diversity that we have tried to promote can lead to a clash of cultures accompanied by misunderstanding, harassment, bigotry and even violence. As a consequence, minority groups feel unsafe and feel the need for sanctuaries that they control. The campus has responded by creating cultural centers and other spaces which enable ethnically diverse groups to celebrate their culture without challenge. While this is understandable, it may make the achievement of a real multicultural community more difficult to attain. If minority groups self segregate, that may contribute to the misunderstandings that fostered racism in the first place. The major problem, then, is how to create community in the face of what may be called "balkanization." We hope that the programs that we create to promote ethnic pride do not deteriorate into forms of ethnic chauvinism which undermine our attempts at community building. The challenge, then, is not simply the successful recruiting and retention of diverse groups, but the building of a community "in which people learn to respect and value one another for their differences, yet, at the same time, are drawn together by certain fundamental values that they share in common as scholars and as citizens." Only in this kind of community can we hope to enjoy the full fruits of multiculturalism and only in this kind of community can we expect the majority as well as the minorities to participate with enthusiasm.

UNH meet looms large for men

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming team carries its 9-1 record and New England's number one ranking into tomorrow's 12 p.m. meet against the University of New Hampshire at Boyden Pool.

It is the team's only home meet of the semester and will double as Parent's Weekend for the swimmers.

"The parents are going to get to see their kids swim, and we have a dinner after the meet, so it will be a nice affair for them," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth.

UMass is coming off last weekend's big win-in-the-last-race-of-the-meet-win over rival UConn, and while the Wildcats aren't in the league of the Minutemen, Yarworth feels that UNH is putting its best team in several years in the water.

"UNH proably has the best butterflyer in New England, besides [UMass' Tim] Nubar, in Michael Dix," he said. "Also, a top recruit of mine that chose to go to UNH is Noah Caruso, who is a top freestyler. Keith McFarland of nearby Wilbraham is also a nice swimmer. Those three make it so there is a nice squad in the water that can give us some good races."

Yarworth is very pleased with the progress the Minutemen have been making all season, as they gear toward what could be their seventh consecutive New England Championship.

"The kids are swimming great," he said, "the attitude is great, and hopefully we'll stay healthy now that all the germs [read: students] have come back. Usually when the students return and classes start a round of the flu starts, but I hope we stay healthy.

"I'm really pleased with Jeff Wicklund. He had a great meet against UConn. As did Chris Barrett. As did Scott Reed. As did Jay Peluso. As did Tim Milbert. As did ad infinitium. I really can't choose anyone who is swimming better than anybody else. They're just swimming great. Everybody's popping. They're all working hard and are confident."

MEET NOTES— As is always the case for the UMass men's swimming team, the whole season is gearing towards the N.E. Championships at UConn in three weeks. Yarworth knows it is not wise to look past an opponent, but it is easy to see that the thought of beating the Huskies again is keeping him up nights.

Women swimmers win again

Swim team beats rival Boston College Eagles

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team made UMass history Wednesday night, prevailing over consecutive six time New England champion Boston College.

This was the first time in UMass swimming history that the Minutewomen were able to successfully sink the Eagles. The team kept a steady lead throughout the meet, enabling them to pull to a solid finish totaling 167 points, and leaving B.C. in their wake with 133.

"This meet was especially great for the upperclassmen who rememember how our meets versus B.C. used to be - they were untouchable," said co-captain Teresa Konieczny.

With only one meet left before the much-awaited New England championships, Head Coach Bob Newcomb and Assistant Coach Ed Melanson feel the team is performing well beyond the expectations they had.

"People talk about the emotional tide. Well the tidal wave is rolling in and should be here by New Englands," said a sopping wet Newcomb after just being thrown in by his team. Wednesday night's meet was a lesson in inner strength and confidence. "We've been telling the women ever since November when we saw their first set of meet results, that they could beat B.C. Now they are starting to believe their potential," said Newcomb.

The meet started with an intense one-tenth of a second touch-out finish in the 200-yd. medley relay, compliments of Kari Edwardson, Jessica Griffith, Lori

Turn to SWIMMERS, page 14

■ NBA

continued from page 16

When the frontline was stacked with Ewing, Charles "I can do nothing but try to rebound and start fights" Oakley, Smith, and Anthony Mason, Campbell was stuck on the end of the bench, wondering if he should have wanted to leave Minnesota. One final note on the new Broadway Bullies: until Ewing realizes he is a center and not a power forward, New York will only be at most second best.

I only have one thing to say about Chicago. The Bulls (I refuse to ever again call them Da Bulls now that Ditka has left the Windy City) seem to be less invincible than the last two championship seasons. O.K., two things.

A huge story so far this season has to be the play of Chuck Daly's New Jersey Nets. I know it sounds biased because I do live twenty minutes from the Meadowlands Arena, but the Nets could possibly be the third best team in the East. Kenny Anderson is filling up the expectations he had coming out of Tech, and Petro belongs in the All-Star Game.

Down in Orlando, Shaq is the most dominating player in the paint that I have ever seen. Well, except the tapes I've seen of myself.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist

There's A New Way to Get to Mt. Tom.

Here's a hint:

Now it's even easier to ski closer to home! And purchasing a combination bus/lift ticket saves you money, too! Take the Peter Pan bus, any day of the week, from any one of these locations and enjoy great skiing day and night at nearby Mt. Tom:

AMHERST/UMASS
NORTHAMPTON
SPRINGFIELD
BRIDGEPORT
HARTFORD
MIDDLETOWN
MERIDEN
NEW HAVEN

Mt. TOM SKI AREA
Peter Pan Trailways

Route 5, Holyoke, MA • Call Peter Pan for Info: 781-2900

Quorum

Opportunity Knocks

Over 93% of homes, vehicles and people need security. Now it is simple and affordable. Technological breakthrough makes this the opportunity of the 90's. Person to person sales in a dynamic network marketing plan. No inventory requirements. First class marketing and training support. Call now for details. Action Marketing Fred Gohr • 665-7501

NORTHAMPTON BOWL

Sunday Night ☆ Special ☆ 99¢ Per Game

From 8:30 til close

525 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 01060 • (413) 584-2491

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Disability Services is in search of volunteer readers for disabled students. The job of reader consists of reading books onto tape and/or reading aloud for students. No experience is necessary. We will train. Please contact Lorie Bell at Disability Services for further information at 545-0892.

Free Hamster and accessories
Call Beth or Erin
546-6933

Having problems with your roomate? Contact OCHO, 428 Student Union, or call us at 545-0865. We can help!

Looking for a place to live off campus? Questions about your commuter living situation? Subletting in May? Come to OCHO, 428 Student Union 545-0865.

3 Credit Recycling class Educ 2 354 Tuesday 2:30 5:00 call 545-1153 for more info

ATTENTION PROFESSORS

Have you been putting of painting your home or home office? Phillips Brothers painting provides fast high quality interior & exterior painting at reasonable prices. Free estimates flexible rates fast reliable service. Call Brock 584-5979.

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Ford Festiva
Black 60k miles
Good condition new tires
$2750 must sell Tomo 549-2635

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

DEBORAH

Happy 24th Birthday
Love
Mom + Dad
30 January 1993

FOR RENT

Room available in Amherst House $260/mo as single, $220/double, $190 if bring own roomate. Housemates are Serious but fun UMass students. 549-7819

FOR SALE

For Sale: Burton air 6 Snowboard Airwalk boots size 7 $350 call 527-3014

One way plane ticket to Miami Will sell for cheap price or best offer
Interested? Call Alexis 549-4720

Yamaha CLP-30 Calvinova keyboard 88 full size, weighted keys with stand, pedals, bench
Call Dave 253-9282

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1,000 An Hour!
Each member of your frat, sorority, team club, etc. pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1,000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1,000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation. 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65.

HELP WANTED

Att. Excellent income for home assembly work. Info 1-504-646-1700 Dept MA-1307

CAMP COUNSELORS WANTED
Magnificent coed weight loss, All sports, crafts, sewing, ceramics, computers, WSIs, theatre, piano, dance, aerobics, weight training, riflry, backpacking, kitchen, office. Camp Shane, Frandale, NY 1234, 212-877-4644.

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with clean water action. $100/wk. + . On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. Fri. + Sunday. Early hours good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Join the Meaping staff and be part of a 20 year history of environmental activism.
The Bottle Bill
Mass. Clean Air Act
Mass toxic use reduction act
Full/Part time positions $40-60/day
Call Carmen 256-6434

"Silver Bullion Coin Program"
$5 Paid weekly
No individual selling or recruiting
83% commissions paid.
Projected income 42-84K
803-964-1676

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives and New Students Program Summer Counselors. Applications available at the Admissions office.

U.S. Tracers is currently seeking motivated students in Amherst area for FT and PT Independent work (800)886-6919

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

Black Laundry hamper with clothing in it. Lost Monday. Please call 546-0404

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

HEY YOU

To the pretty student/waitress I met Monday, January 25th at 10 am at the bursars office. Those lines were so long I practically got to know your whole life history except for a few critical details like your name. I'd like to see you again, if you would like to see me again please respond here.

ROOMMATES WANTED

2 females or couple to share room $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

 SPRING BREAK '93

Spring Break '93 *****
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas. South Padre Island, form $429 per person (7 nights, airfare, transfers, taxes, discount card and more!) Daytona Beach (Howard Johnson, Whitehall) Panama City Beach Marli, Fiesta Inn), Key West from $129 per person (Beachfront Hotel only (7) nights, discount card optional bus available) Spacing is limited! Call Breakaway Travel & Tours 1-800-862-7325.

S. NINTENDO/MT. BIKE

Univega $300 Great condition, Super Nintendo, brand new with original packaging, super mario, super battletank $100. Final fantasy II $50. Romance of the Three Kingdoms II $50. Call Blake at 584-7285 or 545-1864

TRAVEL

Spring Break '93***
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $169! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-428-7710

WANT A TAN LINE?
Cancun, Jamaica, Florida
Merideth 549-6284

WANTED

Band Members
for new Ska band
all positions!
